Always waking me up in the middle of the night to ask for something stupid. What now? My arms fell like day-old asparagus, as I try to raise myself out of the soggy bed. The summer's heat has turned it into a salty swimming pool I reluctantly raise myself into the dark of my small cubicle and bump my toes on the side of the cage. The fact that I have 14 toes has never bothered me. It's just that I have four more to stub. They ache. And I curse. Master calls again. I shuffle out the door, stopping to avoid the spike. The rats charge out of the way. Their schreeching makes the guard roll over, he mumble something about the "fires that rage" Shit, the things you hear at night His fat highness will be getting very mad if I don't show up in about a minute. He's a real yeller If I'm late he'll just about blow the house down shrying, and this is no easy cottage to demolish. The walls are 40 feet high and 3 feet thick (just like Master) The cellar descends 50 feet into the mire And in the Summer it's 45 degrees! That's where my room is, in the cellar Just under the drain pipes where the rats come to mate. My cell is a rock affair with moss covering the walls, it looks like something out of a Bella Lugosi flick, only darker The only light comes from a torch high up on the wall, that always seems to smoking and never lighting The master has high powered desk lamps upstairs but I don't count as human, so I get a torch (it adds to my image) I climb slowly up the swampy stairs (This place leaks more than a Polish rowboat) I slip on a frog going home to mother He falls into the abyss with my best wishes Damn it I hate these stairs! I wish he would carpet these dungeons

I regain my calm and climb on I push against the door and it finally gives I wish he wasn't so hooked on the image And would get some hinges that not only screeched but also opened doors

I begin the long hike to the master bedroom The room is a sadist's delight A huge bed with braces and whip holders all around The brazier stands a glowing evil in the darkness of the room I entered quietly making sure the chamber pot was well out of the way I parted the bed curtains and lifted the covers I searched around till I got hold of a foot, but it wasn't his So I pulled the covers back somemore There he is, curled up at the foot of the bed with his dog It always amazes me the number of odd positions he gets into for one so bulky I tap him on the head, (The lice bite) He rolls over and threatens to break the bed. I jump back out of the way, not wanting to be in range when something that big hits the floor He rolls back onto the bed, his brain programmed to foresee the dangers of, shall we say, extra-normal corpicity. I hit him once again to rouse him. It's always like this; he calls, and then falls asleep again while I climb up. When I wake him he'll yell at me for disturbing his rest Who cares? I got what I want the color t.v. It glows along side of the braziers I wonder what's on now? They always show old westerns at night

The master finally wakes up. He looks at me with fat eyes (how can one have fat eyes), coughs, and asks me what the fuck I want In my best Jeeves voice I say, "You rang" He cuffs me, but smiles "Yes, bring me a corned beef sandwich and a cherry soda I groan at the thought of a perfectly good corned beef sandwich ruined with a, godforbid, cherry soda But off I run to the kitchen I enter and see the new fixtures I haven't been up here in a month The lights come on automatically as I open the door The eerie light of the freezer gives me a death's head face as I steal a popcicle Lime of course I open the frig to look for the corned beef He didn't say hot or cold Cold corned beef at 2 a m. is beyond even him. So I light the stove That's only a figure of speech, I really only turn a dial. The oven heats up while I grab another popcicle The cold tastes good against the heat of the stove, which still glows red from the party last night Watch! The pan begins to burn, and I throw in the meat It sizzles and cracks I'm really glad that he didn't ask for a BLT Bacon is too much at 2 00 a.m. I grab a pickle from the store room. It tastes sour which ain't surprising, it is a sour dill, kosher, too. How the hell can a pickle be kosher? The ends must be cut off, same with the rye The meat starts to burn so I turn it over. I get out the bread. He didn't say what to make it on. Well, rye will do. Good sandwich making is a true art. The mustard goes on next. Not that yellow shit, but the real brown hot stuff. I'll burn that mother's ass! The meat is ready just as I reach the critical point with mustard. (sure creative drive) Off it comes, and I slop it onto the bread. I get him out a pickle and begin the search for the cherry soda. I go down to the cellar after putting the sandwich in the radar range to keep it warm. The damn frog has made the long climb up again. I kick him down again, just for fun The soda is over in the Iron Maiden. It's real neat to bring a guest down for a drink and watch his face as he sees the cooler. The bones in it are real! We seem to be out of cold cherry, so I bring him a pink grapefruit. I grab the sandwich out of the oven, pull out a plate, and run up the hall 10 Minutes and 4000 steps later I have the meal in his room. Coldish, but in the room. He is dead. If I wake him now he'll kill me So I heat the plate over the

---

The editors of the Vermont Summer Cynic express unfettered appreciation for the response to the Summer Cynic Creative Writing Contest. It was high time for a show of local writing talent and thanks goes to those who went for it.

The winner of the short story contest, which was judged by Alan Shepherd, was Seth Judah Lapidow for his "Tyrone Power Was Short, Too." Second prize went to Thomas Hagerstrom for "Everything She Knew."

The essay contest was aimed in a different direction than most contests ever take. The editors made the topic "My First Sexual Experience." The judge's name was Adelaide Murphy. The winner was Mike Breiner's essay. The runnerup was David Latane's piece.

Tinker Greene, the judge for the poetry contest, has written his own remarks about the ranking of the Summer Cynic Poetry Contest winners.

SONY ~ BOSE ~ ESS ~ CROWN ~ SAE ~ AVID

SONY-TEAC-PIONEER-TECHNICS-PICKERING-DUAL-WATTS-DYNACO-SUPERSCOPE-YAMAHA-PHILLIPS

GARRARD-ALTEC-FISHER-ACOUSTIC RESEARCH-TECHNICS-KENWOOD-SCOTCH-SHERWOOD-BSR-ULTRALINEAR

the CREATIVE SOUND OPENING

BECAUSE WE JUST OPENED AUGUST 16, WE WANT TO CELEBRATE A FOUR WEEK LONG CELEBRATION. NOW THROUGH SEPTEMBER 15, DISCOVER OUR NEW WAY OF SELLING AND SHOWING PROFESSIONAL EQUIPMENT AT CREATIVE SOUND, LIKE THE LOWEST PRICES, A STORE FILLED WITH FANTASTIC SELECTIONS OF MUSIC SYSTEMS, STEREO COMPONENTS AND SOUND ACCESSORIES.

ALL BACKED BY A 10 POINT POLICY TO PROTECT YOU THE CUSTOMER.

Our CREATIVE SOUNDS Great Buys

UNBELIEVABLE SELECTION

SONY AM FM Phono System with Sony STR 7025 AM FM Receiver - 17 watts RMS 2 Avid 100 2 way speaker systems and Glenburn 1100 Deluxe Turntable Complete with Base, DC Shure Magnetic Cartridge

$399.00

TEXAS INSTRUMENTS TI-2500 II

Adds, Subtracts, Multiplies Divides, Chains, Constants Floating Decimal AC Batteries with Adapter and re-chargeable Batteries One Year Warranty

$39.00

UN Heard of Policies

KENWOOD Stereo Phono System with Kenwood 1400 Amplifier 17 watts RMS Power 2 SA-1 2 way 8" Speaker and a Glenburn 1100 Deluxe Turntable Base, Dust Cover with Shure Magnetic Cartridge

$199.00

UN BEATABLE PRICES

SHERWOOD AM-FM Phono system featuring watts RMS AM-FM The Sherwood 3060 Receiver - 2 Becker 2 way speaker system Glenburn 1100 deluxe Turntable with Shure Magnetic Cartridge Base, Dust Cover

$250.00

MAXELL 90 MIN CASSETTES No Limit $1.50

8 Track Car Tape PLAYERS $25.00

BASF 90 MIN Chromdioxid CASSETTES $2.00

OUR POLICY

1. THE BIGGEST SELECTION
2. GUARANTEED LOW PRICES
3. UNMATCHED LISTENING
4. DISPLAY AREAS
5. MONEY BACK GUARANTEE
6. 1 YEAR SPEAKER TRIAL
7. 30 DAY EXCHANGE
8. MANY WAYS TO PAY
9. CUSTOM DESIGN and INSTALLATION
10. LIBERAL TRADE-INS.

UN CONDITIONAL GUARANTEES

SONY AM-FM Stereo System with Sony STR-7055 Stereo Receiver 70 Watts Rms Power 2 Bose 501 Speakers - Bose makes the direct reflecting speakers That Take sound out and around and back faster than you know what. Join The Phillips Manual TurnTable with The Audio Technica CarTridge in $750.00 Come in and experience The New Sound of Sony-Bose-Phillips-system.

HOURS:
Mon. Thru Fri. 10:00 AM - 9:00 PM
Sat. 10:00 AM - 5:30 PM

DUAL ~ PHILLIPS ~ WATTS

CREATIVE SOUND
NEXT TO K-MART • S. BURLINGTON, VT.

Cash
Bank Americard
Master Charge
Accepted

PIONEER ~ FISHER ~ BOSE

brazier and very quietly turn on the tube. The sandwich tastes good and there's a Randolph Scott movie on. Sometimes life is good. I ease back into the chair. Tomorrow seems a long way off.

three

LEON AND THE PAINTED LADIES

It was one of those days. I could feel that from the start. It began in the most vile of ways: morning. The watch rat got me up at 5:30 and was bruised rather severly for his pains, but I did get up. The light filtered in from the corridor. It had a greenish tinge from the wall hangings. The spiders and swamp moss add something to a room. I walked up to the kitchen to see if I could scare up some breakfast. No luck. The cook met with a fatal accident after serving the master some chicken a la king, so meals are hard to come by. Shit, I hate it when he kills them. Now I have to make due with instant and day-old raisin bran. The bugs in the box seem upset at being evicted, but who cares. I mix the crud with some gin. It's not nourishing but it's sure interesting. The basics of eating disposed of, I am ready to face the day, more or less. Days around here are really interesting. The sun rises about 3:30 a.m. with much fanfare of cocks crowing, etc. The sun sets by noon. In between there is a period of semi-mist, which does wonders for the muggers. It ain't safe to go to the bathroom then. But other than that this place isn't bad. Who is calling now? Christ, I never get any peace, and this is my day off. Hey, this is my day off. Allah bless me. I get one a year and I forget about it. Well screw them, I'm off. The gate takes about three years to open. The chains creak and groan. All of it fits in with image. It finally opens, and the day is beautiful. About 60 and sort of sunny. And it's only 7:00 a.m. I have a whole day to myself. God bless that rat! I start down the mud packed road, and try to thumb a ride. The traffic is heavier than normal. As I walk I plan my day. The main issue of the day will be to get drunk, and then possibly a woman. (a freebie I hope).

The cars zoom by, leaving me in a cloud of dust and engine shit. They all seem to be in such a hurry. Christ. The sun really decides to make a go of it, peeking out from behind a cloud like a reluctant virgin at an orgy. The monday car assholes cause me to reconsider the distribution of my will. The road stretches out for miles ahead of me. I get the bottle of wine out of my pack. The Ripple tastes good against the back of my throat. It's a little warm, but nothing can make ripple any worse. I truly hate the shit, but it's all that was left after the fifth annual meeting of the Knights of the Holy Revelation. They drank everything that was liquid and raped everything that wasn't. Some good hearted crud stops to give me a ride. I hop into the back of his pickup. Just my luck. The only ride available is with a sheep rancher, and me without my Woolite. We ride into town in relative peace. The sheep like Ripple. At the gates of the town we are stopped and searched. The guard has cold hands, and I find his poking of my hump distressing. We are allowed to pass and good times are about to happen.

It's still only 8:30. The sheep man drops me on the main street. I hop out and head for the nearest bar. The closest one is vaguely reminisant of home, right down to the moss on the walls and the crud on the tables. This is no place to spend a day off. I walk on, the street women accost me and it feels nice. The next bar is a little better. The place has lights and even clean glasses. I order a stout and dream. His flabby highness seems light years away. And the thought of cleaning up after his next party doesn't seem so obscene now. His parties are illegal on four planets, and immoral on a dozen more. But this place is progressive. As long as the mayor and the provincial leader are invited to the festivities, they don't bust his royal fatness. (The mayor drinks pank gin and has a strange taste for virginal dwarves, kinky.) The stout arrives and is properly chilled. The barman hands me the peanut bowl. (I knew this was heaven) I pay the slob. I don't earn much but spending is easier that way. Let's see, I get 50 cents a day, plus one and a half meals, plus what I can steal. It ain't so bad, so to date I have earned, let's see, uh, $35.37 all tax free. My next step is to see if I can find a good steak, and then possibly a woman who is not too ugly.

The city is an odd thing in the early afternoon. The only people around are kids skipping school and the women. A few men but they are all drunk. So I walk on and watch the old people in the park. The pidgeons come and feed them peanuts and popcorn. That beats welfare. The pigeons sit on benches and the old people flock to them. They come off statues and steps. Odd how they remember the ones who feed them. I hobble on past the park. A gang of kids are playing in the alley. The girl looks a little disturbed. The little bastards throw stones at me. One bounces off my back. My thoughts return to the earthly business of food. The drink feels warm in the pit of my stomach, and my feet hurt. What to eat? The possibilities are positively delightful. Seafood, deli, chinese, jap, a little chile would be nice but I always get heartburn from the stuff. We walk and sing, me and the street life. I was born in a small village in the north. You know where the national sport is frostbite. A big evening is going out and huddling for warmth. And only for warmth. I never knew there was a street culture. I always thought that all people sat around at night and read the TV guide. Wow, wrong! I dig the streets now. The noise and violence are sweet music to my country ears.

I pass a pretzel man. Two, no mustard. Walk. The street lights come on for the afternoon. I sniff, the air reeks of Valhalla' Grinders! You know: subs, hoagies, heros, supers, neopolitan nightmares, hell it's only a matter of semantics. (how blind he is, you sigh, there is no such thing as only a matter of semantics. Oh, blush, blush) Man is never so happy as when with his brush in heavy nooky or while eating one of those unearthly wonders. Seek: sex, religon or money. Eating surpasses all. There is no God, only so many positions, and money just doesn't taste right. But a good sandwich is always growing, changing. The simple roast beef of yesterday can be as different as imagination will permit, and the thought of hot Italian sausage brings tears to the true connoisseur's eyes. The horizons of turkey have yet to be explored. The people on the street look at me funny. Perverts. I shuffle off quietly in the direction of that godly smell. One block, two, onward to Nirvana! At last I reach it: A wave of tranquility sweeps over me. The peace experienced by few: Trappist monks with prayer wheels, flashers with new trenchcoats, hedonists who achieve their own particular heaven. I cut loose. Plans for sex, etc are soon forgotten in the wake of food. I eat and eat and eat, spending all my money on beer and sandwiches. I eat them in the park, in the street, anywhere. I am a man possessed by the basest of instincts: overindulgence. Soon time runs out and money too. 85 Bucks gone. Alas, I'm too tired to care.

I push the drunk off the bench and go to sleep. My last thought before closing my eyes is of home. I was supposed to be back three hours ago. But what can he do? Dock me a day's pay and beat me. Ha! the drunk's snoring sings me to my rest. Another day, another what?

—SETH JUDAH LAPIDOW

Everything She Knew

I

The killing part was, I'd taught her everything she knew. Everything worthwhile anyway. Like before I'd taught her how to figure batting averages she couldn't even do long division and used to bring home to her mother (my Aunt Myrna), a steady stream of sub-par math papers pimpled on both sides with bright red Benedictine nun correction marks. Thanks to my tutoring, though, she didn't have to face two consecutive years of fighting her way through Charles E. Merrill's Learning Through Numbers textbook.

I also taught her how to put pennies on the railroad tracks behind the athletic field for the big Lehigh Valley freight trains to mash into tiny misshapen pancakes. "Conversation pieces" we liked to call them. Of course, nobody has to be taught how to put pennies on a railroad track, but someone does have to demonstrate to timid people (which Lydia certainly was), that a penny would not derail a train, killing thousands of people, and that no FBI agents would spring out of the bushes to arrest us for mutilating United States currency.

But whenever I congratulated myself on the knowledge I'd managed to pump into my tall skinny cousin's still basically female (and hence suspect) brain, I gave myself a special pat on the back for the baseball statistics she could rattle off better than most of my friends. I needed merely to mention any year from 1951 to the present and she would tell me at once how many homers Willie Mays had hit that year. It was no mere Pavlovian stunt, either. Lydia had as deep an affection for Willie as I had, once I'd explained to her that he was the greatest baseball player in the world, twice as good as Mantle the whiffer.

One late summer evening just before we started seventh grade, Lydia and I were lying in the middle of the big field that stretched out wide and flat between our two houses. We lie at right angles to each other, our heads almost touching, and from above our bodies must have looked like the hands of a clock, with my own body as the minute hand, but only by virtue of a very small length advantage.

I was staring at the stars, wondering which ones were the farthest away and just how distant they were. Lydia was silent and I assumed she was also marvelling at the vastness of space.

"Ya know it's funny," I said, "some people say the universe goes on forever, but how can anything go on forever, right?"

"Yeah," said Lydia.

"But the universe can't stop either, because if it did, what would be on the other side of where it stopped?"

I thought for awhile. "Maybe the universe just goes on for so long that it's almost the same as going on forever," I postulated uncertainly.

"Yeah," said Lydia thoughtfully, "you must be right."

That Lydia would so readily accept such a half-baked theory on the cosmos – a theory I didn't necessarily believe in myself – made me realize what faith she had in my and my pronouncements. It heightened my sense of responsibility towards her, a not altogether comfortable feeling.

It was this sense of responsibility that made me throw the snowball. I was in an ugly mood that afternoon anyway, even though it was Friday. Sister Francis had caught me drawing a makeshift diagram of Candlestick Park during Religion class ("the class you need the most, mister") and kept me after school nearly half an hour. When she finally looked up from the worn little back-of-the-Church pamphlet she was reading and told me I could leave, it was getting dark out and very cold. I realized there would be no time to play outside by the time I walked the mile to my house and I muttered some less than Christian epithets into the grey winter air. Halfway home, at the busy intersection where the fat lady crossing guard usually stood (she'd left by now, of course), I saw Lydia, her back toward me, standing at the top of a small, snow-covered embankment talking with someone. I was shocked, for if anyone ever took a mother's "come straight home from school" admonitions seriously it was Lydia. A greater shock quickly followed when I realized that her partner at the top of the embankment was none other than Kevin McCarthy, a nemesis of mine since kindergarten. Kevin walked home from school along the same route as Lydia and I, usually on the other side of the street and often, depending on the season, amidst a two-way barrage of stones, snowballs, or dirtbombs. I crouched unseen behind a mailbox about a hundred feet from them. Though I couldn't see Lydia's face, I could see Kevin's, smiling its dumb, big-eared grin. It was now clear. He was holding her captive! Without me there to protect Lydia after school, Kevin had snuck over from his side of the street like a guerrilla crossing the Mekong and had been torturing her for over half an hour. If she tried to run, he would probably wash her face in the crusty snow, or dismember her Speller, or Lord knows what else.

Kevin knew as well as I did that Lydia was helpless in the winter. Despite my best efforts she had never learned how to handle herself in a snowball fight. She could not keep her wits about her long enough to pack a decent snowball. Instead, in the heat of battle, she would grab random handsful of snow, press them together with one hand and throw them wildly into space where they would quickly disintegrate into harmless, slowflying buckshot. And as for the possibility of fleeing her tormentor, Lydia could scarcely step off a curb in winter without falling. Running would have been suicide. Winter was by far her worst season.

I punched a hole in the icy shell of the snow at my feet and scooped out a big gloveful of the soft,

CUSTUM HAIRCUTTERS

Monday-Thursday
9AM-5:30PM
Friday
9AM-7PM
Saturday
9AM-1PM

The Head Shop
hair has no sex

152 Church St.
862-4045

You take care of the inside of your head...
We'll take care of the outside the Ski Rack

Bicycles
Repairs On All Makes
Touring & Racing Expertise

Down Clothing
Rentals & Repairs
Cross Country Ski Equipment

85 Main St., Burlington
658-3313

packable, deep down stuff. I compressed it into a rock hard lump the size of a baseball and then, on an impulse, spit heartily on one side of it – the side I hoped would find one of Kevin's eyeballs.

My sudden springing up from behind the mailbox caught both Kevin and Lydia's attention for they both turned to stare at me as I let the snowball fly. It was right on target, certain to take his head off, but at the last instant Kevin held the hard covered book in his hand up to his face like a catcher's mitt and the snowball exploded harmlessly into it.

Doubling my fists, I started to run towards them, hoping he wouldn't have a chance to punch her around too badly before I got there. As I got closer I saw, to my amazement, they were giving me identical amused looks. They then glanced at each other and shook their heads like the long-suffering parents of a problem child. Then they went on talking.

My galoshes screeched to a halt. I suddenly felt as if my nose were running, although a quick swipe across the nostrils with the back of a glove produced nothing. It also seemed like I was wearing short pants and had knobby, exposed knees, although I saw in reality my woolen cuffs were still dangling to the ground.

I turned around, wishing I could walk down a long, long flight of stairs into the molten center of the earth. Hanging around with Kevin McCarthy. Of her own free will. After I'd taught her everything she knew. That was the killing part.

II

When I arose the next morning at ten o'clock, the winter sunshine was slanting its way across the big field, burning the snow into sogginess. As I sat at the kitchen table eating a forbidden chocolate chip cookie breakfast and wondering if sledding would be at all possible that day, I suddenly saw Lydia's form materialize in a corner of the kitchen window. She was trooping heavily across the field, heading towards our house, leaving deep footprints behind her. She walked through rather than around a series of small bushes and occasionally would stop to kick some snow high into the air, apparently for the fun of it. Her low cut red boots, standing out starkly against the snow, made her feet look about yard long and she gave the overall appearance of a very young swamp monster who still thought life was a lark and was not yet capable of slogging through a bog with the same slow ferocity as her elders.

She began looking very Lydia-ish again, though, when a small slip of white paper fell from her hand and she stooped to pick it up, dropping it once or twice more before she finally got a grip on it. I knew then she was coming to look for me. It wasn't companionship she needed on a trip to the A&P as much as someone to make sure she didn't lose, break or spill all the groceries on the way home.

I put on my coat and gloves, ignoring my hat which hung from a nearby doorknob and ran outside to meet Lydia. I was still a bit upset about the Kevin McCarthy incident, but no longer angry. Long time hostility was never my forte, and for me a good night's sleep will often purge a grudge as effectively as will an outburst of violence. However, it was impossible not to feel a touch of apprehension, the same kind I would feel in later years when encountering a newly-married friend for the first time after his wedding, knowing that a quiet but definite change in our relationship must now go into effect.

Lydia said, "You doin' anything?"

"Nah," I said, "I'll go to the A&P with you."

She looked as amazed as if I'd sprouted a second head.

"I saw the list," I explained, smacking the piece of paper with my finger and wondering if it had really been Lydia I'd seen on top of that embankment.

"1955," I said.

"Fifty one," she said. I was reasonably sure now of whom I was dealing with.

"Hey," she said, pushing me a little on the arm, "I got a riddle. What's the difference between a snowman and a snowwoman?"

"I don't know."

She laughed so loud one would have thought I'd tossed back an answer far funnier than the correct one.

"What's the answer?" I asked.

"I can't tell you." Still giggling.

"Why not? Tell me!"

"No," she said, turning red now. "I can't. I shouldn't have asked you."

"Yeah, cause there's no answer to it."

"Oh yes there is," she said mysteriously.

"You don't know the answer though."

"Yes I do."

This was leading nowhere. I turned and started walking in the general direction of the A&P. I knew Lydia would follow me; or at least I hoped she would, realizing I'd feel pretty foolish standing alone inside the store with no list and no money.

We walked in silence. That stupid riddle was driving me crazy. I, who knew that the Easter Pig was what went hippity-hop through the mud and what was green, six feet long and hung from trees was elephant snot had been stumped by Lydia. I figured she must have read it in an obscure joke book, or else she'd been eavesdropping on the eighth graders.

I spat dark little holes into the snow with the sticky fluid in my chocolate-coated mouth. When I ran dry I made grey dripping snowballs from the slush and bombarded trees, stop signs and those parked cars that appeared to be unwatched. The slush saturated my woolen gloves and seeped through to my hands. By the time we got to the A&P my hands were numb, even though it wasn't cold enough out to see your breath.

We never went directly to the food aisles. There were gum and candy machines at the entrance to be rifled for clogged coins or unclaimed treats, plus there was the big magazine rack by the checkout counters that we always perused. The machines yielded nothing that day, but a couple of new Beatle magazines smiled out at us from amidst the Redbooks and True Love Secrets. I liked the Beatles as much as Lydia did and I watched over her shoulder approvingly as she flipped through page after page of painstakingly posed black and white photographs. John, Paul, George and Ringo would now be standing rigid in old fashioned bathing suits, now staging clumsy wrestling matches, or again unabashedly holding hands. The center page of the magazine featured a closeup of Paul's face, complete with puppy dog eyes, slightly parted lips, and hair which did the impossible – completely covered the top half of his ears. Lydia stared at the picture for a longer time than I felt was necessary. Tired of Paul's face, tired, indeed, of the whole magazine, I grabbed it from her and began putting it back on the rack.

"Hey!" she yelled, I was lookin' at that!" She grabbed the magazine back from me.

"We don't have all day," I told her. We gotta hurry home."

"Like hell we do!" Lydia said.

I was stunned. The only use I thought Lydia had for that word was to answer catechism questions concerning the destination of non-Catholic souls.

She had opened the magazine back to page one. She also held the shopping list and it was this which I now grabbed. I stalked down the nearest aisle looking at the wet blue ink of the list which was laced with a few flat strands of orange wool from Lydia's gloves. "Sour Cream" I kept repeating to myself, although not knowing if I was looking for a bottle, a jar, a carton or a bag.

The groceries filled one package. I carried it home only half maliciously. That is to say, I didn't deliberately knock the side with the eggs in it up against trees, but on the other hand I didn't really care that my tightened arms were squeezing the white bread into a loaf of very unusual geometric shapes. I was still upset with Lydia for "cursing" at me, and I let her know of my displeasure subtly. Just before we had left the store she'd pointed to the long rows of breakfast cereals – more specifically to the smiling faces of lepruchans, tigers, beatnik bears and retarded looking tropical birds that decorated the boxes – and kiddingly suggested we break open the boxes and scoop out some of the decoder rings, puzzles and airplanes inside. I didn't laugh at her suggestion, which obviously was intended to be hilarious, and this proved a sure fire method of stopping her own laughter.

"Let's build a snowman," Lydia said as I rested the groceries on our back steps.

"You better get the food home first," I said.

"Nah, it's not lunchtime yet. C'mon, I'll make the head."

Very ambitious of you I thought as I began rolling the bottom sections of the traditionally three-part snowman's anatomy. Three parts, just like an insect's body, I thought, recalling vaguely a diagram from our science book. As I rolled the big snowballs across the saturated ground they collected not only snow but also dirt and twigs, as well as a few dead leaves, visitors from a long ago autumn. All right, so the snowman's body is going to be brown and filthy. Too bad.

Lydia had gone far back into the field to use the whitest snow she could find for the head, and just as I'd finished lifting the snowman's midsection onto his base, she came running towards me bearing the well-shaped, deliberately elongated head as purposefully as if it were Marie Antoinette's.

She eased it into place and I was a bit disappointed that she didn't object to the dirtiness of the snowman's body. Instead she was arranging some fat twigs into a smiling, slightly open-mouthed grin. Then, excitedly, she reached into her pocket and pulled out two pennies – change from the A&P – and the giant white insect suddenly had two round soulful eyes. Lydia was working almost feverishly now as she ran a few yards to the back of our house and attacked the carcass of our two month old Christmas tree which lay beside the garbage cans. She came back with a handful of half green, half brown branches. After she'd arranged them just so, they gave the snowman a perfect, if slightly brittle, Beatle haircut. Lydia had created Paul McCartney out of slush, garbage and pocket change in my own backyard.

"Are you all through?" I asked as tersely as I knew how.

She was looking at Paul Slushbody Insect McCartney, not me.

"Yeah, I guess so," she said, "Except..."

"Except what?"

"Well, he looks cold."

"He's made out of snow," I tried to reason, "Of course he looks cold!"

But she already had her coat halfway off.

"He looks positively naked without this," she said in her seventh grade Greta Garbo voice, which sounded simply terrible.

Lydia was wrestling with the problem of how to put a coat on someone who had no arms when I happened to look at her torso. It was a reflex action, I'm sure, due mainly to having lived all my life with a mother who could glance at what a person was wearing around their upper body and determine precisely what their chances were of catching pneumonia and/or their death of cold that particular day. In any case, I was amazed to see that Lydia's dark red, tight-fitting blouse was being pushed outward from within in two very clearly defined places. I thought at once of the talk that had been going around my class concerning some of the girls. So and so had "big ones," while so and so's friend was "flat as a board." But those loose fitting parochial school jumpers disguised the shapes of many of the girls and I'd never considered the possibility of Lydia...

A sharp rapping came from the direction of my house. We looked up to see my mother's fingernails and face at the kitchen window. Her rapping at the window could mean anything from don't throw that baseball near the house to stop standing on the hood of the car. This time it meant Lydia, put your coat back on before you catch pneumonia and/or your death of cold. As my mother's face disappeared I stole a last look at Lydia's chest. Like two stubs of blackboard chalk set on end, they looked, and as out of place on her long skinny body as the nubby little horns atop a giraffe's sky high head. I kind of hoped she'd get her coat back on fast, figuring they needed warmth to be kept alive and well in this their bud stage.

Lydia giggled. "Well, I thought he looked cold!"

"How far down were you gonna go?" I asked, referring to Lydia's strip act, and immediately could not believe I'd said it.

A huge guffaw from Lydia. "All the way!"

She looked at the bag of forlorn groceries on the steps and went to pick them up. I stood unmoving.

All the way.

"I'm hungry," she said as she walked past me and headed towards her house. She was still not addressing me, it seemed, but rather the insides of the grocery bag. I followed at her heels as she walked unhurriedly across the field to her house. She did not look back at the snowman.

All the way.

She climbed her back stairs and said she'd be seeing me. I had to say something, but I wasn't sure what.

The difference between a snowman and a snowwoman.

"1962," I said.

She turned around and smiled at me "Forty-nine," she said softly, then was gone into the house.

She had hesitated.

I turned and walked back through the field. It was getting cloudy and colder, I noticed, and I wished I'd worn my hat. Suddenly I felt tiny and the world seemed silent – poising, maybe, for a sudden lurch through space which might knock me off my feet. Looking across the field, I wondered if it was necessary to sneak up on a snowman you were about to kill.

THOMAS HAGERSTROM

Every"Body" Needs Some"Body" Sometime....
NATE'S CONNECTION Carriers the clothes to give you the look your body craves.

Fancy print shirts by Bonttimme, Bullshirt, Devil Shirt and many others, are only the beginning

Broomsticks Eyrofit Slacks bring the end in classic fashion

A variety of leathers to choose from will take the chill out of fall and add just a little extra fashion to that already fashionable outfit.

Don't forget to stock up on jeans & cords in all shades and styles by the hottest of all jean makers LEVI

Nate's Connection
Located At NAT'S INC
Vermont's Largest Men's Clothier

ABRAHAM'S
COSMETICS
PRESCRIPTIONS
GREETING
PIPES • CARDS

Vermont's Largest
CAMERA CENTER

ABRAHAM'S
111 CHURCH STREET, BURLINGTON

THE ESSAY CONTEST:

"MY FIRST SEXUAL EXPERIENCE"

The Summer Cynic took a ribald step forward by making the topic of the Essay Contest "My First Sexual Experience." We came up with some overwhelming contributions. First prize entry comes from the stroke of Mike Breiner's quill. Second shot comes from the [illegible] hand of David Lantane. The judge was Abbie Murphy. But it was our pleasure.

1

You are 10. Or 11. Certainly no more than 12. & alone one afternoon. Not any afternoon. But an afternoon in July. Which makes a difference. Being on holiday, on summer holiday, when summer holiday is still a holiday, you need something to do. Not only because you are expected to be doing something, every waking moment, but because there is a force, a pressure inside you that keeps pushing you out of the room, out of the house, out of the backyard & into the street to do anything. With anyone. Because you know what will happen if you don't get going soon. You'll end up sitting around the house, skipping from reading to working with models, finally ending up in front of the tv with its crummy quiz shows & soap operas. Nothing good comes on until 4:30 when your parents would only make you turn off the set. & when everything else fails you, you end up skulking around the house, going through everyone's secret places. Kathy's collection of illicit comic books & the fudgesicle sticks she is saving for a camera. JoAnne's cache of nickels & dimes which always winds up a quarter short when she counts it. Your mother's place that you never found because you didn't think she'd have anything you'd want, & finally the place where your father kept his magazines, the place you'd check regularly. Looking back, you remember black tops on the girls on the cover. Breasts memorized, buttocks, the shadows of thighs to the carefully secluded pubis. The risk of reading, waiting until later & later in the day, challenging discovery, scooting the magazine under shirts at the sound of footsteps on the porch. The ache between your thighs. But it is summer & you're really not up for any of that. In the summer it is foolish to stay indoors, even if it rains. You leave.

But no one is home this afternoon. Mothers answer the door & explain movies, the beach, baseball. You ask why no one came by & they smile. The frustration you feel is more towards being left to your own devices than being left behind... Starting to sweat from the heat & the nervousness of being left alone, forced back to your own house, you make your way up the street from friend's house to friend's house, which is the nice thing about friends at that age. You can go from house to house, gathering a crowd ending up at the end with enough kids to do something. If anyone's home. Which is not the case this day. When you get to the last house you can visit, no one is with you. Which is all right you suddenly realize. Even if no one's home, it's getting late enough for you to go home. & if Jim or Mike are home, you prefer to keep them to yourself, even if their parents are old enough to be your grandparents & are sometimes hard to talk to. You climb the stairs to the porch & knock. You hear footsteps in the other room & then Mike comes to the door. He is much older than you are, in high school, but he is still a friend to most of Jim's friends. Something about all of his friends living out North Avenue. He plays football & is very strong. You always try to get on his side when you have snowball fights in the winter because he packs his snowballs tight as ice & only has to hit you once to put you out with a stinging bruise. He lifts weights in the cellar & looking back you realize that you may have been only in awe of him rather than ever really a friend of his. But that afternoon he invites you in. The shades are drawn & a fan is running. Sitting down to the tv he tells you Jim has gone for the afternoon with his parents. That he is alone, watching a movie. He offers you a drink, goes to the kitchen. When he comes back, he sits on the couch beside you, & hands you your soda. He is sweaty, & you think he is looking at you like he wants to tell a secret. You realize that like always you feel a little older when you are alone with him. He leans forward & starts telling you about the night before with Carol. He slides closer & you lean back still watching the movie. You know about Carol, even kissed her one night under a street light on Strong Street. (The other day your father talked to you about her husband on workmen's comp who spent the day drinking at the Kozy Nook & you thought of this part.) You even saw her thing one afternoon a couple of years ago after she made you & Doug show her yours. But for now Mike leans closer & starts talking about last night & kissing & what her tits feel like, talking lower & squeezing your shoulder tighter & tighter all the time until it hurts, & he says would you like to feel it. You say what & he's unzipping his pants, & you can see it, him squeezing your shoulder sending pains down to your elbow with his pecker poking through his underwear. You know you really don't want to & tell him to & new pain shooting through your arm. Then he lets go & takes your hand, forcing it to grab hold. You've never even held yourself like this before, only for pissing. Even pissing through a hard on wasn't the same, this being so solid & warm, wrapped tight & stiff. You just sit there holding his cock, not knowing what to do, & he still hasn't let go & starts your hand going up & down on it until he's sure you've got the idea, & then lets go. As you pull him off, you watch him lean back, you watch him lean back, close his eyes & make you disappear, without even a smile. Through it all, the tv, which you watch out of the corner of your eye. You keep pulling, setting your own rhythm, watching, the feel of skin sliding under your hand, the head darkening to brown red as you go. As you pull, his hand goes up behind your head drawing you down toward it. For the first time you fight, pushing back as he steadily takes you nearer to his pecker. & he starts to breath faster & you pull back a little, & the first come shoots past your ear. He pulls you back but you fight him, & the come flows down across your fingers, the first come you have ever seen, the whitest you'll ever see because it's not yours & you've never seen anything like it before so you pull your hand away. Mike telling you not to wipe it on the couch as he gets up & gets a paper towel. You follow him & wash in the kitchen sink. But that night when you go to bed you still think you can smell it on your fingers, that stink you've never smelt before. & looking back you realize that this is where it all started. On a couch. In July. With your hand, the rest of your body left to wait for years before it could share in the knowledge. & nothing will ever change that.

—MIKE BREINER

THE POETRY CONTEST

Deciding the placement of these poems was very difficult. Each reader is invited to set up their own rank-order. Even the poets themselves may be blind to the work of fellow winners, so different are the poetic assumptions. But I did set up an order; it may be the 3rd and 4th place poems were penalized for their ambition, which is somewhat unfair. I take that back. "Eurydice" displays a prodigious ear. The others didn't satisfy the pit of my stomach quite as much. Though I should say that "4 us" is "open", in all senses, to the world, where the others as poems turn back in on themselves. Well, you try it. I suspect it's possible I established the order just because it seemed a good sequence to read them in.

Tinker Greene
8/2/75

1st – "EURYDICE"
2nd – "AURORA"
3rd – "4 US"

EURYDICE

and did he dream of the dark a necklace of your lips and of the riderless shadows of the stars your eyes in your bed was it the sea passing from your mouth to his or the sun drifting even lower lifting your cheerless voice to a land you could almost say with your absent hands

"the sky was on its belly in my arms

birds took off their wings"

—JON TABAKIN

AURORA

Taut, the dog hammer
Nails barks
Across dark lots.
a cross
lots lots lots
across dark lots
Rage, a minor chord
Under an aurora;
Major, final hope:
Arclights on the via dolorosa
For the last dark one to leave,
For the lost.

—HENRY ST. MAURICE

2

Note: Everything in this essay is true, only the details have been changed to make it more interesting.

As Greg Samson awoke one morning, he found he was still a virgin at the age of twenty one. This was much worse than being a giant insect, and the lad was not amused. Not a trifle; not a truffle, that is, in a pigs eye. He lifted the sheet wound round his torso and gazed languidly at his tumescent tool, an unsold stock on his shelf of stomach, an idea whose time is to come. The usual shuffle from his roue roommate's quarters, and the giggling departure of his hetaera left him in profound despair, too melancholy even for Saint Onan to cure. Having his love for easeful sleep dismissed by the tocsin of his Big Ben, the youth stood up, pulled on his shorts, jeans, sneakers, watch, parka, picked up his books, and began the long walk to the main campus.

A light snow drifted on the street and the phony bells of the Ira Allen Chapel chimed eight o'clock as Greg hurried to his class, the first entree in the courses of second semester. When he stayed out of college after graduation from prep school he had blamed his chronic virginity upon the lack of ladies, or the inaccessability of same, or the impossibility of living at home; ah, but with his immanent matriculation at the University of Vermont, and with the Cyprian reputations of all those dimondaine coeds from New York, he felt that all that must change, or so he had conceptualized at the time. Alas, one whole semester had passed, and in his shyness he had never even unzipped a single ski parka, much less the proverbial pantaloons.

His class, "Written Expression" (sic) was soon over. The instructor, an earnest graduate student of the female persuasion, allowed them to go after handing out a syllabus and playing some games at the board. Before the class ended she looked seriously around the room.

"Any Questions?" she asked.

"A rhetorical question indeed." Said Greg, who immediately blushed. He had never said anything smart ass in his life. The instructor was annoyed but let it pass, which was not unusual. She let anything and everybody pass, and thus was surnamed "the popular."

On the way out of the room Greg noticed a particularly little girl, all blond and eighteen, walking beside him. A veritable dwelling-ornament fit for a Spear Dane. Had she been in his class? A lump majicked into his throat. He asked her the question, mumbling. As she replied, she paused to put on her parka. His busy eyes stopped, drawn to metaphysical contemplation on the contents of her sweater, a green and hilly bourne of imaginative contemplation. Could she follow his wayward gaze, read his wanton brainwaves? He wondered if they were soft. On the beach in the summer they always looked so brown, so firm. To his incredible surprise, he asked her if she wanted to go to the Den for a cup of coffee.

"No," she said, "I don't drink coffee." He plummeted from Heaven, falling for days, hurled headlong flaming from the etheral conception of actually drinking java with this blithe lass. "But I like tea," she said, and smiled. Ah, fortunate smile! Greg, his circuitious journey from the one outward into fragmentation then back to reclamation over quicker than Richard Petty can turn a lap at Daytona, felt all faint. Just at this moment, as they were passing the Bailey Social Center, the lux broke through the clouds, and the gentle flakes abstained from pirouetting downward. In the Burlington Zoo, the lion and the wolf ceased, and with the lamb formed a menage a trois. Greg felt as with new wine intoxicated, he swam in mirth, he felt divinity breeding within him wings wherewith to scorn the earth. With rakehellish smile their progress continued past the squat bookstore (like a toad, that is); with lubricious thoughts in front of the ancient pile of Royall Tyler; with goatish finality past each brick of the hircine Old Mill; and with a satyromaniac cornucopia he approached the red Rock of Billings, and came under its shadow! What joys would soon withal!!

O tragic gaiety. Within moments she had introduced him to her boyfriend, who was waiting by the IBM copier. "Try Ours," it said. O irony...

Greg sat in his room, his feet propped on his desk, a reader for his English class in his lap. The Rolling Stones filled the room with music, old sounds of dissatisfaction. His mind, heart, pulse, and groin were mouldering upon that girl: the proper proportions of her equippage, her hoydenous behavior after tea towards her paramour when she playfully stuffed wet snow in his pants, her wonderous smile, once smiled on him. It was after ten o'clock, his eyes sagged, and he wondered whether he would have to do any work in his English class. He decided not, remembering where he was. There was a tremulous tapping at his boudoir door. Tap. Tap. Tap.

"Come in," he said.

"Greg?"

It was Martha, a girl from the floor below whom he knew from a Calculus class the semester before. In fact, he pulled her through by coaching her for the exam. "What's up?" he said.

"Well, I just thought... I was just wondering if you wanted to get high. I've got some of this really good red dope, you know, and I wanted to thank you anyway for helping me with the math. I had to leave for home so fast I didn't get a chance before."

She pulled out a bag of pot nonchalantly and began rolling a joint. Greg looked at her as he put his book away, shut the door, and turned on the TV. She had never appealed to him, though she had an impishly cute smile, mostly because she was about four-eleven, shaped like a pear, and had several annoying habits. However, he was so depressed he was relieved to smoke some marijuana.

They sat on the bed and passed the joint, pungeant in its Columbian patrimony, between them. A rerun of "I Dream of Jeannie" was on the air, and the actress's nubility and her febrile postulations around the uniformed astronaut's erect figure reminded him of his early attack of nympholepsy after his first class. Now nympholepsy is not just a big word that the asshole who is writting this essay (sic) is slipping in, it was a word that Greg had come across in an H.P. Lovecraft story the year before, and it had stuck, the disease of loving unattainable nymphs. As he thought of that encounter, and with the aid of the mildly aphrodisiac qualities of the weed, he felt a strange tingling, a concupiscence which was rare for him (though common enough in postlapsarian man), coming as it did Aloneinaroomonabedwithagirl. Nevertheless, the immanent possibility of devirgination had not yet crossed his mind. He continued to concentrate on the TV with the power of a hierophant gazing upon a Holy of Holies.

Martha, though unselfconsciously, was aware of his arousement, and laid her hand gently upon his thigh. He started, and when he did so his back slippeth off the wall whence he leant, his foot unpluggeth the TV (plunging the room into darkness), the girl's hand migrated to a new nesting place in the vicinity of his sacred omphalos, though lower, and he knocketh himself silly upon ye bedpost. (Which maketh him to lie down upon green bedspread.) At this Martha became perturbed, and she climbed on top of him to see if he could get up right.

Their lips met; Greg was nonplussed; dumbfounded; astounded; amazed. O why did God, Creator-Wise, who peopled highest Heaven with creatures masculine, create at last this novelty on earth? He had never suspected that some people did that when they kissed... (After several interesting moments he was also pleased to discover that they were both soft and firm, both of them! (O pleasurable paradox), but displeased to conceive himself upon the horns of dilemma.)

It has oft been stated that clothes make the man, yet it is equally sooth that no man is made with clothes on, and this was certainly the case with Greg and Martha. Greg's mind now turned, like an erotic waterwheel, upon the inequity of the Levi Strauss Company in placing their product betwixt him and his goal. A blue gaol of denim now imprisoned their private parts, each in solitary confinement. O the feel of not to feel it! He was just recovering from starry befuddlement after his noggin had said it's how-do-you-dos to the bedpost, just being aware of the approaching end of his Virginal millenium, and now he was weighed with the knottiest problem ever to vex the brow of cold philosophy: how to remove one's clothes tactfully. Tentatively, after stating the alternatives to himself, Greg ignored the source of his anxiety, and rubbing his hand over the seat of her jeans, he concentrated on the material sublime. After making sweet means Martha-wise, he leapt lightyears in lucalent logic-chopping, making the subtle distinction between Form and Content; which is to say he grew dissatisfied with the texture of the aforementioned company's product, and he pushed his dexterous palm inside Martha's jeans. Inspired by this, and with practiced motion, Martha rolled to one side, and parting that coppery cunning work which fettered what to her was the objective correlative, the formula for this particular devotion, she piloted his vessel through the straits of his fly, out into the arborial gloom of his dormy harbor, and then proceeded to fill his sails. Unfortunately, not only did his seamen fail to abandon ship on schedule, the rapid disassociation of his sensibilities caused by her Zephyrus ministrations, no matter what touchstones ensued, ended in a state which may only be summed up by a paraphrase of that greatest Romantic ejaculation: "It faints! It fails! It dies!"

At this point, the author of this treatise, realizing the undecorousness of continuing this narrative beyond the natural limits of modesty and moderation, but also with a sense, nay, a positive Kantian imperative of moral duty to tell his readers, thus far so patient with his foibles, that our hero, Greg, despite his anolomous naivete, despite the initial wilting of his critical tool, was still able to secure his thrysus in the capacious hollow of our heroine's hummock, to the mutual benefit of both, and even at the moment of the actual weaving of his woof to her warp was able to compose a passable couplet, product of no placid coupling, and plagiarized from the anima mundi: "This is true bliss, and I confess / There is no other happiness." (this he exclaimed upward after Martha declaimed downward her partiality for pernoctation); but our humble author will say no more, rather leaving further explacatione de texte of Greg's introductory course in lovemaking to the probably disgustingly vivid and vile imaginations, secondard, primary and fanciful, of his readers; except to say that it wasn't until three days later, in the wee morning hours, that Greg first noticed the burning sensation when he commenced to tinkle.

—DAVID LATANE

4 US

1 over beers
nothing has been resolved Bud & i have talked & talked & talked he still doesn't own a tv
& i still read mayakovsky but we still have the diamond yantra the magic of nine & words last stronghold of dreamers

2 coming home
the highway is lost in fog driving by touch
the radio coughs out country music from montpelier a trooper guides me past the accident the car resting on its roof is caught in the headlights before the air current cuts above waterbury indochina or the interstate it's all the same to me

3 all that matters is to learn never to expect respect when poetry is up against an empty beer or a tear as quiet as the recurring dream where you lie in bed every night suffocating under a ton of feathers
& learn the strength of numbers

5 it can't all be rhythm breath
the street is the circulatory system traffic lights its pulse in a bar
you can read
why are you looking up here the joke is in your hands fuck the rhythm
the field of verse
the land is a place to be protected not protracted they are burning children out there & every night to the sound of guitars they sharpen knives dreaming of home
& why are we looking out there the jokes are in our hands.

—MIKE BREINER

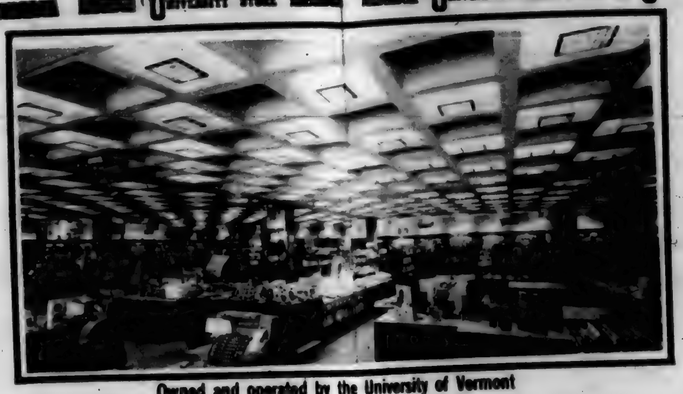
Special Order Books

With a deposit we will order any book in print not currently in our stock. We have available the latest copies of BOOKS IN PRINT, PAPERBOUND BOOKS IN PRINT and SUBJECT GUIDE TO BOOKS IN PRINT, if at any time you would like to look up information regarding price, publisher, title or author of any book published in the United States.

Our special order service also includes glassware, ceramics, T-shirts, sweatshirts, class rings, and other items that are often used by fraternities and sororities for banquet favors and graduation gifts.

Services

Special Order Books
Film Processing
Magazine Subscriptions
Copy Service
Check Cashing
Typewriter Repairs
Fraternity & Sorority Favors
Student Ticket Sales
Imprinting on T-shirts and sweatshirts
Gift Certificates



Owned and operated by the University of Vermont

Refunds

Due to last minute course and section changes, drops, and adds, and schedule conflicts, there are bound to be situations when you find yourself in possession of a textbook you should not have purchased. Unmarked textbooks may be returned for full credit if presented at the Refund Counter with your sales receipt. DO NOT CARRY A BOOK FOR WHICH YOU ARE REQUESTING A REFUND INTO THE SALES AREA. If your book has any markings it can only be re-purchased at the regular used book price.

The University Store will, when possible, accept books for cash refund. To receive 100% refund the following conditions must be observed:

1. Returns must be accompanied by the Register Receipt.
2. Books must be in absolutely new condition.
3. Textbooks may be returned for full refund for the first 21 days of each semester and the first 4 days of summer session ONLY!!
4. Special Order books and general trade books may NOT be returned or exchanged.
5. We are the sole judge in determining whether returned books are in new or soiled condition.
6. Defective books will be replaced at no charge and should be returned at once.

NON-REQUIRED PAPERBACK BOOKS ARE NOT RETURNABLE FOR REFUND.

The UNIVERSITY STORE is almost a totally self-service store with up to thirteen check-outs to provide you with efficient service.

Please leave your personal belongings such as notebooks, books, attache cases, in the book-drops at the entrance, or in the free coin-return lockers which are provided before you enter the sales area.

Items being returned should be brought to the refund counter to the right after you enter the store and before you enter the sales area.

These simple procedures will eliminate embarassment for you and the cashiers when you are ready to leave.

HOURS: Monday through Friday 8:00 - 4:30

Other Merchandise Available At Your University Store :

Notebooks and pencils
Stationary and Greeting Cards
Cosmetics, hair care, etc.
Art & Engineering supplies
Electronic calculators + watches
Desk pads & study lamps
Back packs & ponchos
Candy & Nuts by the pound from our Sweet Shoppe
Records and blank recording tapes
Jewelry, ceramics, glassware, T-shirts, Sweatshirts, Pewter with the University Seal.

Check Cashing

A check cashing service is available at the University Store through most of the hours the store is open. It provides 2 full-time employees who render this no-charge service. A photo I.D. card is required to cash a check. Freshmen may present their temporary I.D. until the permanent card is issued.

Non-textbooks

You will find thousands of books in the University Store you will not be required to buy as textbooks, but which will, nevertheless, become a vital part of your education — if you let them. We readily admit we will encourage, tempt and entice you to discover (if you have not already done so) the wonderful world of books. We believe that every college student should devote considerable time, thought, and at least a portion of his or her allowance in acquiring a carefully-selected personal library. We invite you to begin the selection of your library from the wide choice of great and good books you will find on our shelves.

Shirt Imprinting

The shirts will gladly be imprinted for you while you wait, unless you are ordering more than four shirts, in which case we will try to have them ready for you by the next day. These shirts make excellent gifts for family and friends. Please stop by our soft goods department while in the store.

We have dozens of University of Vermont imprint designs (including the UVM seal and mascot) that we can imprint on T-shirts and sweatshirts of your choice from our wide selection of colors, styles and sizes (youth sizes also available). T-shirts and sweatshirts may be further customized by adding names or other wording using our 2" letters and/or numbers.

MEET THE UNIVERSITY STORE

ON THE CAMPUS

We've got it!

The great new Hewlett-Packard HP-21 Scientific Pocket Calculator. Uncompromising quality at only $125.

- A true scientific calculator with 32 functions and operations, including rectangular/polar conversions, register arithmetic, two trig operating modes.
- Full display formatting. Select fixed-decimal or scientific notation with display rounded to desired number of decimal places.
- HP's error-saving RPN logic system with 4-memory stack.
- Traditional HP quality craftsmanship.
- New, smaller size.
- An unbeatable price/performance ratio.

Test the new HP-21 today right in our store. See for yourself how much performance you can take home for only $125.

Hewlett-Packard's Newest programmable Calculator Features of HP-25

Memory
RPW Logic System and Four Operational Stacks
8 Addressable Storage Registers (with Register Arithmetic)
"Last X" Register

Keyboard Commands:
Display: Fixed, Scientific, Engineering Notation
3 Angular Modes (Degrees, Radians, Grads)
Trigonometric Functions
Rectangular/Polar Coordinate Conversion
Angle (time) Conversions
Logarithms (Natural and Common) Antilogarithms
Mean and Standard Deviation
Positive and Negative Summation giving
Integer (Gives only integer portion of number)
Fraction (Gives only fractional portion of number) Absolute (Gives absolute value of x)
y^x, $\sqrt{x}$, x^2, pi Percent
Data Storage and Positioning Operations

Programming Features:
49 Program Memory Steps
8 Relational Tests (Direct and Conditional Branches)
Merged Codes (each prefixed function takes only one program step)
R/S — User Definable Key (to run and stop program execution)
Program Editing Capability
Single Step — Execution or inspection of a program
Pause — momentarily interrupt (about one second/Pause command) program execution and display contents of x-register.

ONLY $195.00

A Representitive from Hewlett - Packard will be at the University Store Tuesday, September 2nd 10:00 am - 3:00 PM To answer any questions

HEWLETT hp PACKARD

Texas Instruments electronic calculators

TI-1500

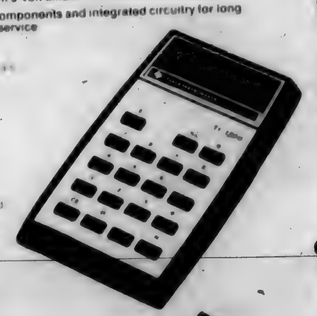
TI-2550

All critical components designed and manufactured by Texas Instruments with quality controlled to exacting Texas Instruments standards every step of the way
Fast-charge batteries can be fully restored in only four hours
Calculators can be operated while charging
Every calculator is tested by a computer which checks all functions and key operations
Every calculator is subjected to jarring impact tests to assure that normal bumps and vibrations do not cause errors
High-strength, injection-molded plastic cases are designed and tested to withstand rugged use
Gold-plated switch contacts and stainless steel key actuators provide long life, positive action
All important structural assemblies are held by machine screws — not glue or plastic "welding" — for sturdy construction
Double injection molding provides durable key symbols — even under heavy use
Positive-action tactile feedback keyboard assures entry registration
Vinyl barrier under keyboard protects components against moisture and dust
All components attached firmly to single epoxy circuit board, providing solidity, strength

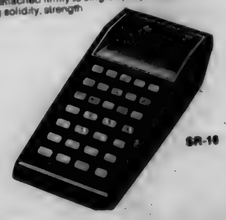
TI-1200

- Adds, subtracts, multiplies and divides — instantly
- Percent key allows easy calculation of taxes, discounts, mark-ups and ratios expressed as percentages
- Automatic constant in all five functions
- Easy-to-read, 8-digit display shows negative sign, all numerals and calculation overflow indication
- Easy-to-operate — press keys in same order as problem is written
- Convenient portable size — just 5.5 x 2.8 x 1.4 inches
- Operates from 9-volt alkaline or carbon-zinc battery
- Solid-state components and integrated circuitry for long dependable service

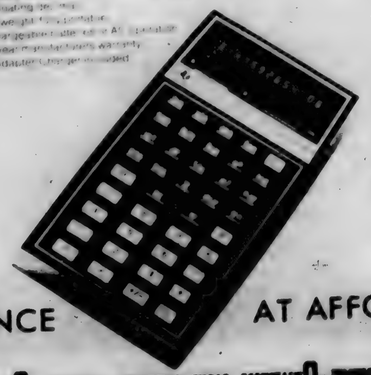
SR-50A



- Performs all classical Slide-rule functions, plus many more functions, at the touch of a key
- Finds sin, cos, tan, log, ln, e^x, y^x, $\sqrt{x}$, x^2, 1/x, pi and degrees/radians conversion
- Most functions, constants and entries displayed on 10-digit display
- Memory retains data even when calculator is turned off
- Computes and displays in scientific notation (with 2-digit exponent) or fixed decimal notation
- Converts a number to its reciprocal, square, square root, or any power or root of a number
- Performs operations in algebraic hierarchy or as entered
- Features bright, 11-digit display with 8-digit mantissa, 2-digit exponent, minus sign, and decimal point
- Displays "overflow" and "error" conditions
- Full floating decimal
- Lightweight, compact
- Rechargeable with AC adapter/charger
- Full one-year manufacturer's warranty
- AC Adapter/charger included



SR-10

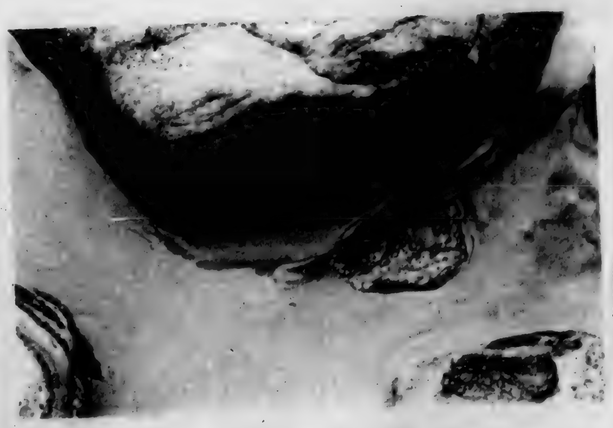


SR-51A

STANDARDS OF EXCELLENCE AT AFFORDABLE PRICES

"Everything the Power of the World does is done in a circle. The sky is round like a ball, and so are all the stars. The wind in its greatest power, whirls. Birds make their nests in circles for theirs is the same religion as ours. The sun comes forth and goes down again in a circle. The moon does the same, and both are round. Even the seasons form a great circle in their changing, and always come back again to where they are. The life of a man is a circle from childhood to childhood, and so it is in everything where power moves."

Black Elk, Oglala Sioux



Photos by Jean O'Brien

MAGRAMS It's an Experience

It's Down The Hill To six fabulous floors of fashion and fun - Plus -
"The Way In", the best
Boutique in Burlington

MAGRAMS
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

THURSDAY'S

THE AMERICAN ACTRESS

106 Cook – 7:30 P.M.
Admission: Free

September 4
SPARROWS (1926) – Mary Pickford, Roy Stewart, Lloyd Whitlock.
Mama Mollie who leaves no stone unturned in caring for nine children on a bogus baby farm is aroused to protect her foster brood against kidnappers in this thrilling old fashioned melodrama of the Twenties.

September 11
PLATINUM BLONDE (1931) – Jean Harlow.
Glamour girl Jean Harlow in this saga of romance shows how blondes have more fun and always get their man – regardless. Hollywood at its best.

September 18
I'M NO ANGEL (1933) – Mae West, Cary Grant, Edward Arnold.
As Tira the lion-tamer, Mae is the star attraction of a carny side show. The film contains the lines "Peel me a grape, Beulah" and "Come up and see me sometime."

September 25
20TH CENTURY (1934) – Carole Lombard, John Barrymore.
John Barrymore, a talented though unbearably egotistical theatrical producer, turns Carole Lombard, a newcomer in acting, into an accomplished actress.

October 2
IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT (1934) – Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert.
Winner of 5 major Academy Awards, this wonderfully warm and funny moving comedy is a story of a fugitive heiress and a rebellious reporter who tames her.

October 9
DEVIL IS A WOMAN (1936) – Marlene Dietrich, Lionel Atwill, Edward Everett Horton.
This film has been hailed by many critics as the most beautiful film ever made. The story tells of a femme fatale and the man who destroy themselves for her in 19th century Spain.

Marlene Dietrich

S.A. FILMS PRESENTS: FALL FILM GUIDE 1975

S.A. Films is back, and with one of the best film lineups ever. It should please many people to know that this year's Film Series will be shown in Cook (B-106), in response to the numerous complaints with Votey 101. There are problems with showing films in Cook, to be sure, but it is hoped that things will run more smoothly and people will be more comfortable than in Votey.

There are four series this fall: British films on Tuesdays; the American Actress (with one film from each of the greatest American actresses) on Thursdays; the Biggie films (with the addition of some great comic strips and shorts) on Fridays; and the Mini-Series (half a semester of Gary Cooper and half of Bette Davis) on Saturday. At present there are two scheduled showings of the Friday night films (at $1) and one of the others. This can be changed, with additional showings scheduled, if attendance warrants it.

To enable every student to have a complete list of the Fall Series, the Vermont Summer Cynic has graciously printed the whole series. Also there are about 750 bright yellow posters of the series being printed which will be available at the beginning of the semester (while the supply lasts) in Billings Center.

This year's coordinators are Jan Carlee and Wendy Rosenberg. They can be found on the Third Balcony (above the main desk) in Billings Center, and their phone number is 656-2029. If you have any questions or comments or suggestions about the Fall Film Series or future series, please call or come by.

FRIDAY'S

THE BIGGIES

106 Cook – 7:30 & 10:00 P.M.
Admission: $1.00

September 5
THE CONVERSATION (1974) – Gene Hackman, Allen Garfield.
This personal story of privacy invaded is another side of Francis Ford Coppola who co-authored and directed "The Godfather." Coppola uses the tale of Harry Caul, "the best bugger on the West Coast", who makes the mistake of getting personally involved in his work, to create a murder mystery and a horror film. "One of the best films of 1974!" – Newsday. "A suspenseful, chilling psychological thriller!" – N.Y. Post.

September 12
SLEUTH (1972) – Michael Caine, Sir Laurence Olivier.
The famous play of two men playing a Russian roulette of games within games which becomes progressively more deadly as each tries through deceit and disguise to humiliate the other. Winner of the New York Critics' Award.

September 19
O' LUCKY MAN (1973) – Malcolm McDowell.
The subject of Lindsay Anderson's most ambitious work to date is the external circle of human experience – the mixture of aspiration, energy, wickedness, fun, humor and folly that is the life of man. "A triumphant film. It stands as a unique creation, one of the finest films of the post-Strangelove decade. I anticipate seeing it again and again." – Judith Crist, N.Y. Magazine.

September 26
Z (1973) – Yves Montand, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Irene Pappas.
A Greek pacifist leader is struck down by a speeding truck while hundreds watch. Despite the official police report of accidental death, a journalist's persistant questioning leads to a full investigation. Academy Award for Best Foreign Film and New York Critics Award for Best Picture of the Year.

October 3
LAST PICTURE SHOW (1972) – Timothy Bottoms, Jeff Bridges, Cybill Shepherd.
This film covers a year in the life of Sonny, Crawford and Anarene, when television was taking hold in the land, when movie theaters were closing down and when life starts to get complicated for a teenager.

October 10
CATCH-22 (1970) – Alan Arkin, Martin Balsam, Jon Voigt, Orson Welles.
The highly unusual adventures of Capt. Yossarian trying to be grounded from the madhouse flying routines of WWII make a barbed anti-war comment cloaked in a veil of comic exercises.

SATURDAY'S

THE MINI SERIES
(GARY COOPER & BETTE DAVIS)

106 Cook – 7:30 P.M.
Admission: Free

September 6
THE PLAINSMAN (1936) – Cary Cooper, Jean Arthur.
Cecil B. DeMille's spectacular epic of the savage West is a story of the legendary fighting fame of "Wild Bill Hickok."

September 13
BEAU GESTE (1939) – Gary Cooper, Robert Preston, Ray Milland, Susan Hayward.
This famous and chilling mystery tells of the three Geste brothers, their confession of a jewel theft to save a lady's honor, their enlistment in the Foreign Legion, and their encounter with the tyrannical Sgt. Markoff.

September 20
MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN (1936) – Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, Lionel Strander.
One of Frank Capra's greatest works. Gary Cooper is Longfellow Deeds in this comedy about a simple country poet who inherits a fortune – but doesn't want it. One of the greatest comedies ever made!

September 27
BALL OF FIRE (1942) – Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Dana Andrews.
An encyclopedist completing an entry on contemporary slang decides to study the vocabulary of nightclub singer Sugerpuss O'Shea.

October 4 – DOUBLE FEATURE
MOROCCO (1930) – Gary Cooper, Marlene Dietrich.
This atmospheric classic tells of a cabaret singer caught between an aristocratic admirer and a footloose Legionaire. Gary Cooper has never been more beautiful, nor Marlene more handsome.

For Whom the Bell Tolls

TUESDAY'S

THE BRITISH CINEMA

106 Cook – 7:30 P.M.
Admission: Free

September 9
LAUGHTER IN PARADISE (1951) – Alastair Sim, Joyce Grenfell.
This film comments in a subtle and ironic way on what seemingly sensible people are willing to do for money.

September 16
DEAD OF NIGHT (1945) – Michael Redgrave, Sally Ann Howes, Mervyn Johns.
"Dead of Night" skillfully combines psychological overtones with the macabre to create one of the finest films on supernatural phenomena ever made.

September 23
KIND HEARTS AND CORONETS (1945) – Alec Guiness, Joan Greenwood.
Alec Guiness plays eight roles in this tour de force of a young lord who is nineth in line to dukedom and decides to shorten the distance by killing off the eight in front of him.

Alec Guinness' incredible skill at impersonation

September 30
ODD MAN OUT (1947) – James Mason, Kathleen Ryan, Robert Newton.
Carol Reed's "Odd Man Out" contrasts the strength of devotion and the weakness of betrayal. A wounded man on the run confronts a host of potential rescuers and traitors ready to sell him to the highest bidder.

October 7
QUEEN OF SPADES (1953) – Anton Walbrook, Dame Edith Evans, Yvonne Mitchell.
One day a poor captain of engineers reads in a strange, rare book the story of an old countess selling her soul to obtain the secret power of the card, Queen of Spades. This is the story of his search for that power. "Eerie" – New Yorker. "Bizarre fantasy" – W. K. Everson.

S.A. Films Guide Continued on Next Page

FALL FILM GUIDE FOR 1975

THURSDAY'S

THE AMERICAN ACTRESS

106 Cook – 7:30 P.M.
Admission: Free

October 16
NINOCHKA (1939) – Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire.
"GARBO LAUGHS!" A literary satire with its impudent mockery of Soviet chauvinism and capitalist conceit, this was Garbo's first comedy and her first teaming with director Ernst Lubitsch.

October 23
RANDOM HARVEST (1942) – Greer Garson, Ronald Coleman, Susan Peters.
A shell-shocked amnesia victim in post WWI England marries a music hall dancer. Later he is struck by a car and forgets his wife.

October 30
MILDRED PIERCE (1945) – Joan Crawford, Jack Carson, Zachary Scott.
Considered to be one of Joan Crawford's finest films, this film deals with the problems of a woman who is deserted by her first husband and suffers the death of her daughter.

November 6
THE MISFITS (1962) – Marilyn Monroe, Clark Gable, Montgomery Clift.
The last film of both Marilyn Monroe and Clark Gable; tells the story of lost people drifting together.

November 13
WHO'S AFRAID OF VIRGINIA WOOLF? (1966) – Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Sandy Dennis, George Segal.
"Virginia Woolf" remains a pivotal picture, a watershed film that changed everything which was to follow. The screen of today cannot be fully assessed without a reckoning of "Virginia Woolf" – for its power, its truth and germinal effect. Winner of 6 Academy Awards.

November 20
BARBARELLA (1968) – Jane Fonda, John Phillip Law, David Hemmings.
In the year 40,000 a girl-type mini-clad astronaut is assigned to locate a missing scientist in this pop film that pokes fun at sex, the bomb, the pill, religion, etc. Based on the French comic strip.

December 4
STERILE COCKOO (1969) – Liza Minnelli, Wendell Burton.
Pookie, unloved at home, tries to make up for her father's lack of affection by snaring the first boy to come her way in college.

December 11
TOUCH OF CLASS (1973) – Glenda Jackson, George Segal.
Ranking as one of the best films of the year, "Touch of Class" proved to be a very funny romantic comedy of a young insurance salesman having a series of chance meetings with a fashion designer.

Harold and Maude

FRIDAY'S

THE BIGGIES

106 Cook – 7:30 & 10:00 P.M.
Admission: $1.00

October 17
SUNDAY BLOODY SUNDAY (1972) – Peter Finch, Glenda Jackson, Murray Head.
This film is not about heroics in life, but is about everyday sorts, people who make compromises in order to end up with something, people who do their best to get along, people who love and lose and sometimes love again. "The movie is instantly recognizable as a classic!" – Pauline Kael; The New Yorker.

October 24
ALFREDO ALFREDO (1973) – Dustin Hoffman, Stefania Sandrelli.
Alfredo, budding young bank executive, is consumed by the hysterical lust of his young wife. Her desire is so burdensome that he runs to the arms of another woman. Whether he can weather the Italian stigma of no divorce and still find happiness is for you to find out.

October 31
(7:30 & 10:30 P.M.)
FACES (1968) – Lynn Carlin, Gena Rowland, John Marley.
SHADOWS – Lelia Goldoni, Ben Carruthers.
Two excellent films made by John Cassavetes, who made "Woman Under the Influence." Winner of 5 Awards at the Venice International Film Festival, "Faces" illuminates the little things, the minor abrasions which create a major abyss within a marriage.

November 7
RULING CLASS (1972) – Peter O'Toole, Alastair Sim.
When Jack Gurney arrives home fresh from the mental institution dressed as a monk and convinced that he is Jesus Christ to claim his inheritance, he faces his scheming relatives who are plotting to get his fortune. This bizarre, bawdy and irreverent satire will do more than tickle your funny bone! "A brilliant film!" – Judith Crist.

November 14
(7:30 & 10:15 P.M.)
EAST OF EDEN (1955) – James Dean, Julie Harris, Jo Van Fleet.
There is violent action and tense drama in this story of family conflict and of a youth's yearning for parental love.
REBEL WITHOUT A CAUSE (1955) – James Dean, Natalie Wood.
James Dean, who during his short career seemed to epitomize the misunderstood – and misunderstanding – rebellious youth of the day, vividly created this image on the screen of a boy caught in the undertow of the 50's juvenile violence.

November 21
HEAT (1972) – Sylvia Miles, Joe Dallesandro, Pat Ast.
Andy Warhol and Paul Morriseys ("Frankenstein") film casts a coldly cynical look at Hollywood comparing its former glories with its current disrepair. "Heat" tells of the affair between a sexually voracious fading star and an ambitious young man she seeks to entrap in her opulent lair.

December 5
CLOWNS (1971) – Pierre Etaix, Annie Fratelli, Anita Ekberg.
Federico Fellini delves into the world of the circus. Fellini directs under his studio made tent and Nino Rota musically orchestrates a ballet of sight gags and pathos.

December 12
HAROLD AND MAUDE (1971) – Ruth Gordon, Bud Cort.
Already considered an underground comedy classic, "Harold and Maude" is one of the most bizarre films you'll ever see. A twenty-year-old boy, who is hung up on death, meets an 80-year old woman, who is hung up on life.

SATURDAY'S

THE MINI SERIES
(GARY COOPER & BETTE DAVIS)

106 Cook – 7:30 P.M.
Admission: Free

October 4
FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS (1943) – Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, Akim Tamiroff.
This adaption of Ernest Hemingway's novel of the Spanish Civil War was one of the most sensational and popular films to come out of wartime Hollywood. The film tells of a soldier of fortune who comes to blow up a Falangist Bridge and Maria, the brutalized peasant girl he falls in love with.

October 11
SERGEANT YORK (1941) – Gary Cooper, Joan Leslie.
The famous story of a Tennessee hillbilly who became a WWI hero and captured over a hundred Germans single-handed. Both the Academy Award and the N.Y. Critics' Award for Best Acting went to Gary Cooper.

October 18
HIGH NOON (1952) – Gary Cooper, Thomas Mitchell, Lloyd Bridges.
In this classic western, Gary Cooper plays a stubborn sheriff in a town of do-nothings and cowards and a desperado with the sheriff's name on a bullet. One of the greatest westerns ever made!

OCTOBER 25
20,000 YEARS IN SING SING (1933) – Bette Davis, Spencer Tracy.
A small time crook who is sent to Sing Sing prison is let out on the honor system and is accused of murder.
WHAT EVER HAPPENED TO BABY JANE? (1963) – Bette Davis, Joan Crawford.
Bette Davis and Joan Crawford present a tour de force as two once idolized and wealthy females, now living as virtual recluses.

November 1
MARKED WOMAN (1937) – Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, Isabell Jewell.
A young Assistant District Attorney uses a B-Girl to indict a gang of racketeers, his czar, and its underlings.
November 8
JEZABEL (1938) – Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, Donald Crisp.
The drama of a stubborn, vain, spoiled Southern belle who loses her fiance, but later proves her great love for him when he becomes the victim of yellow fever.
November 15
ELIZABETH THE QUEEN (1939) – Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Vincent Price, Olivia de Havilland.
The historical drama and romance of Elizabeth and Essex and their violent as well as passionate relationship and maneuvering for political power. Nominated for 5 Academy Awards.
November 22
LITTLE FOXES (1941) – Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall, Dan Duryea.
Bette Davis gives one of her greatest performances as Regina, the greedy and ruthless woman who sacrifices everything – including her husband's life – in order to attain wealth and status.
December 6
ALL ABOUT EVE (1950) – Bette Davis, Anne Baxter, George Sanders.
A self-centered young woman lets nothing or no one interfere with her driving ambition to become an actress on Broadway.
December 13
POCKET FULL OF MIRACLES (1961) – Bette Davis, Glenn Ford.
Frank Capra's last film after thirty-six years as a director is a little fairy tale based on a Damon Runyon story. On the Ten Best List of 1961.

TUESDAY'S

THE BRITISH CINEMA

106 Cook – 7:30 P.M.
Admission: Free

October 14
TASTE OF HONEY (1962) – Rita Tushingham, Dora Bryan.
This highly acclaimed film tells of Jo, an English schoolgirl who is excluded from her mother's life and forced, perhaps prematurely, into finding a life of her own. Winner of four British Academy Awards.

October 21
BRIEF ENCOUNTER (1946) – Stanley Holloway, Trevor Howard.
Selected by the National Board of Review as one of the Ten Best Films of 1946, "Brief Encounter" is the story of two people who fall in love outside their marriages.

October 28
PRIVILEGE (1967) – Paul Jones, Jean Shrimpton, Mark London.
This film is of what would happen if a British government intent on coalescing power were to strong-arm an idolized pop singer into urging his followers to a "Christian Crusade of Conformity."

November 4
HOW I WON THE WAR (1967) – John Lennon, Michael Crawford.
Purposely intended as a surrealistic satiric war film to end all war films, "How I Won the War" recounts the experiences of a platoon of British Army conscripts in WWII as they bumble from one shambles of a project to the next.

November 11
DARLING (1965) – Julie Christie, Lawrence Harvey, Dirk Bogarde.
Joseph E. Levine's award-winning film presents a biting satire of life and love among today's international jet set. Julie Christie won an Academy Award for her brilliant portrayal of a beautiful young model.

November 18
THE SERVANT (1964) – Dirk Bogarde, Sarah Miles.
A gentleman's gentleman working for a young London bachelor starts "helping" his master to his own advantage.

November 25
THE THIRD MAN (1949) – Joseph Cotten, Trevor Howard, Orson Welles.
Arriving in Vienna just in time for a friend's funeral, an American writer discovers that his old friend was involved in several nefarious rackets and attempts to clear his name. Winner of the Academy Award for Best Cinematography.

December 2
I'M ALRIGHT, JACK (1960) – Peter Sellers, Terry Thomas, Richard Attenborough.
"I'm Alright, Jack" is the story of a bumbling innocent cast adrift among modern, civilized institutions. "A comic masterpiece... constantly funny!" – McCalls.

Blow-Up

December 9
BLOW UP (1967) – David Hemmings, Vanessa Redgrave, Verushka.
The fact that "Blow Up" was made nearly a decade ago has nothing to do with the film's greatness. The film is greater than when first released bringing the seemingly weird world of Hemmings' character into focus. A masterpiece to some, a cinematic landmark to most.

New this year — The Exciting
DOWNHILL EDGE
SKI EQUIPMENT • SKI ACCESSORIES
SKI APPAREL

SKIS
Dynastar
Kastle
Kneissl
Olin

BOOTS
Nordica
Scott
Lange
Olin

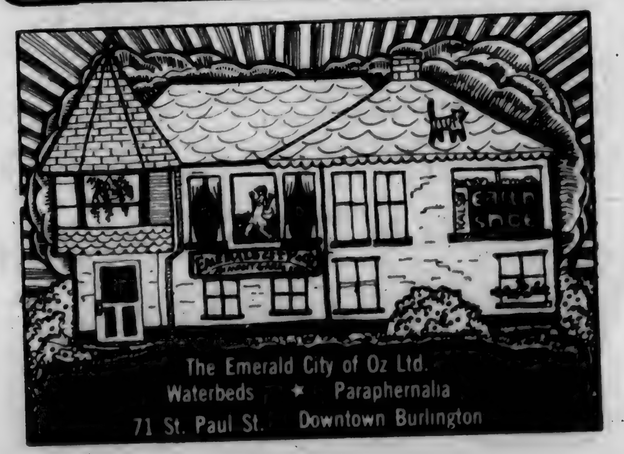
BINDINGS
Salomon
Look
Besser
Burt

APPAREL
C. B. Sport
Alpine Design
Tempco
Edelweiss
Hotgear
and more!

The Downhill Edge

BANKAMERICARD & MASTER CHARGE
• Expert Repairs and Service
• Wet Belt Sanding • Trade-Ins Accepted
• Demonstration Skis Available

81-85 MAIN ST. — 862-2282
Downtown Burlington — Next to the Ski Rack



The Emerald City of Oz Ltd.
Waterbeds ★ Paraphernalia
71 St. Paul St. Downtown Burlington

A Dual Opportunity

ADVENTURE

ROCK CLIMBING
RAPPELLING
RAFTING
WEAPONS
WINTER SURVIVAL
HELICOPTER OPERATIONS
SCUBA
ORIENTEERING

MASTER SERGEANT ERIC ANDERSON
GREEN BERET
PARACHUTIST (938 Jumps)
SCUBA DIVER
MOUNTAINEER

LEADERSHIP & MANAGEMENT FOR MEN & WOMEN

EDUCATION

WAR & SOCIETY
MAOIST STRATEGY
NATIONAL POWER
CURRENT CONFLICTS
DEFENSE AGENCIES
SOVIET CAPABILITIES
MILITARY HISTORY
MILITARY THEORISTS

CAPTAIN GENE JONES
M. Ed.
ARMY AVIATOR
COMMUNITY LEADER
ROTC GRADUATE

UVM ROTC

No Military Obligation

See Us During Freshman Orientation
Williams Hall Main Campus Anytime
Or Call 656-2966

VERMONT CYNIC

It's a Privilege to Live in Vermont

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 16 | FOUNDED IN 1883 | SEPTEMBER 11, 1975

THE LITTLE FRESHMAN

In the library, on the street,
At receptions too, you'll meet
The little freshman
Dimpled hands and baby feet,
Yellow curls and pinkish cheek
The little freshman

Eyes of blue, modest, sweet
At mama's darling, have a peep
The little freshman
From winter's cold, and summer's heat
From flunking too, we'll have to keep.
The little freshman

E. '07

"The Vermont Cynic" Nov. 19, 1904

calendar annoucements

Ariel '76

ARIEL '76 promises to be an outstanding publication. With a diversified student input the book can't possibly miss. ARIEL provides a means for students to express their creative talents. Whether you are a gifted writer, poet, artist, photographer, or journalist, there is a spot for you on the staff of ARIEL '76.

Applications are still being accepted for positions on the editorial board of ARIEL. If you think you might be interested in expressing yourself, why don't you drop in and see us in our office, lower Billings, or call us at 656-2056. Further information can also be obtained by calling Tom Smith at 656-7084 or Wynn Gold at 862-[illegible].

Library Planning Council

Throughout the summer the firm of Burley Associates has been steadily at work with representatives of the Library Planning Council on consideration of varying solutions for the Bailey Library addition.

The Library Planning Council invites interested members of the University community – students, faculty, and staff – to attend an Open House on Tuesday, September 16 at 4:00 p.m. in the All Night Study of Bailey Library. Representatives of the architectural firm and the Library Planning Council will be present to discuss the concepts of design and functional organization of space which are currently being pursued in the planning process.

The architects and the Library Planning Council are eager to have the reactions of the University community and will welcome questions, comments, and suggestions on the planning.

Want To Travel - Try Debate

An organizational meeting of the UVM Debate and Discussion group (the Lawrence Forensic Union) will be held Tuesday, September 16, at 4:00 p.m. in room 306 Pomeroy Hall. The 1975-76 national debate topic deals with land use planning. UVM debaters will travel all over the country to debate the topic with teams from other colleges and universities. Members of the discussion group will travel all over the state to discuss topics of regional and national concern.

For further information contact Dr. Woodrow Leake or John Williams at 656-3214.

Membership in the Lawence Union is open to all undergraduate UVM students. NO EXPERIENCE IS NECESSARY!

Choices Available

Choices, a handbook of educational alternatives, will be available at the Office of Volunteer Programs beginning Tuesday, September 9. This handbook contains detailed listings of alternative educational programs available at UVM and throughout the world. Pick up your free copy at Mansfield House any weekday between the hours of 8:30 and 5:00.

V.A. Benefits

The Veterans Administration is continuing its nationwide program of [illegible] counselors on [illegible] university campuses. During the academic year, the Vet Rep [illegible] UVM will assist [illegible] students with the filing [illegible] and the resolution of [illegible] problems or questions concerning V.A. benefits. If you want to meet the Vet. Rep. he will be at The Admissions Building with hours from 8:00 - 4:30 on Monday and Tuesday of every week. Appointments are not needed and any benefit offered by the Veterans Administration can be discussed.

Telephone Ripoff

The Vermont Consumer Fraud Division is seeking students who have had trouble with the Telephone Company concerning deposits. Several students have been charged excessive deposits to have their telephones installed. The Consumer Fraud Division wants to initiate legal action against the Telephone Company. To do this, they need approximately one hundred students to file complaints against the company. If you have a grievance against the Telephone Company concerning your deposit, leave your name and telephone number at the VPIRG mailbox in Billings, Box 99.

'S.A. Speakers' Needs Help

A great opportunity exists to bring a number of fascinating speaker personalities to UVM for the upcoming semester. Much help is needed, however, in scheduling and programming so that [illegible] series can be established. Any student interested in working on the S.A. Speakers Bureau should contact either Richard Warner at 656-2029, or leave your name with Sally at the S.A. office, 656-2053.

VPIRG Activities

There will be a VPIRG meeting 7:00 Sunday evening at the Robinson Hall lounge concerning the upcoming student referendum. All interested students are invited to attend. For more information, call John King (3084).

There will be a table in the main hall of Billings Center with information concerning the VPIRG activities, funding system, and referendum question.

There will be a dance sponsored by VPIRG at Phi Delta Theta fraternity 8:00 p.m. Saturday September 13. 10 Kegs.

Work-Study Workshop

The Financial Aid Office would like to remind students who have been awarded Work-Study for '75-'76 to arrange their workshop appointment through the office, at 330 Waterman as soon as possible. Two workshops a day are held Monday-Friday, each lasting about an hour.

The Lane Series Office, 234 Waterman Bldg., is accepting ticket orders for this season's attractions which include everything from mime Marcel Marceau to the London Symphony Orchestra. Also available: tickets to their Charlie Chaplin film series. Don't delay – call 656-3418 now!

Current attractions at the Fleming Museum include "Collectors and Collections" and "Traditional Africa." The first show highlights the collections of six donors to the Museum, demonstrating changes in taste and style through the past 100 years, and "Traditional Africa" – drawn from the Museum's permanent collection – focuses upon artifacts from the Congo, Zulu beadwork, and West African art.

Academic notes: courses may be dropped without academic penalty through Sept. 25.

"Vermont Photography '75" is the name of an exhibition of works by Vermont photographers for which the Fleming Museum begins to accept entries on Sept. 15. The juried exhibition will travel throughout Vermont next year. Entries close Sept. 25. Details from the Museum.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 11

Last day for regularly enrolled full-time students to add courses.

SA Films presents "Platinum Blonde," 7:30 p.m., B-106 Cook Bldg.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12

Non-degree students enroll in day courses today; packets available at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg.

SA Films presents 7:30 and 10 p.m. showings of "Sleuth," B-106 Cook Bldg.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13

SA Films presents "Beau Geste," 7:30 p.m., B-106 Cook Bldg.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 14

No calendar events listed.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 15

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center "Career Planning Awareness" program with Bill McNeil, held at the Center, 146 S. Williams St. Open to anyone with questions regarding occupational selection, choice of major, career planning. Stop in!

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16

11:30 a.m. – 12:30 p.m., Henry B. Caswell Credit Union representative is at the Personnel Office, 229 Waterman Bldg. Interested employees welcome.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Study Skills workshop with Alice D. Outwater. Open, and free, to anyone with questions, problems or concerns about study habits. At the Center – 146 S. Williams St.

2–4 p.m., Women of UVM hold a "Garden Party" at Given Courtyard.

4 p.m., organizational meeting for UVM debate and discussion program, 306 Pomeroy Hall. Contact Dr. Woodrow Leake, ext. 3214 for details.

4 p.m., Library Planning Council open house at Bailey Library's all night study room. Meet with the architects, hear about various ways the library might be expanded, ask questions, make suggestions. Story in this issue.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance lecture, Prof. Alfred Andrea, history, on the nature of the Middle Ages, 216 Commons, Living/Learning Center. Open to all.

7 p.m., English Department and S.A. present "Taming of the Shrew," starring Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor, plus Michael York, 101 Votey, admission $1.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Dead of Night," starring Michael Redgrave, Sally Ann Howes, Mervyn Johns, B-106 Cook, admission free.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a free "Relaxation and Meditation" program with Nancy Koch. Visit the Center, 146 S. Williams St., to learn some creative ways of dealing with daily tension and stress.

4:30 p.m., College of Arts and Sciences faculty meeting, 101 Votey Bldg.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

12 noon, Non Academic Employees' Council meeting, open to all interested employees, 107 Rowell Bldg.

12 noon, UVM Women's Caucus meets, Blundell House, Redstone Campus, to plan programs for the coming year. Open to all who are interested.

VYA Openings Available

The Office of Volunteer Programs still has a few openings available in the University Year for Action Program. If you would be interested in working at the Howard Mental Health Center, The Champlain Valley Office on Aging, The Waterbury State Hospital, or The State's Attorney's Office, or if you like working with ceramics or medical planning, one of the UYA programs may be right for you.

UYA requires a full-year commitment to work in an organization serving low-income Vermonters. In return, the student volunteer receives a monthly living allowance, the opportunity to test out possible career options, and the chance to participate in an exciting alternative to the traditional educational program.

For further information, call the Office of Volunteer Programs at 656-2062, or stop in at Mansfield House to talk with one of the staff.

Activities And Services Fair

In an effort to acquaint both old and new students at UVM with the various activities and services available to them during their college experience, Student Association and the Student Activities Office are co-sponsoring an Activities and Services Fair on Wednesday, September 17, from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. This event will allow each organization the opportunity to inform interested students of their program(s) and recruit membership if so desired.

Each organization will be provided with space, including table and chairs. Any additional equipment, i.e. projector, screen, etc. must be provided by your organization. We encourage you to schedule a person(s) knowledgeable of your service at the table at all times to answer questions, pass out information, and operate equipment.

Because time is of the essence, we ask that you phone in a reservation to the Billings Center Information Desk, X2068, no later than Friday, September 12, 5:00 p.m. Reservations will be accepted on a first come, first serve basis. If there are any questions, contact the S.A. Office.

We look forward to seeing you there.

Living/Learning Center

Get It Together With G.Y.S.T.

Introducing a new program at Living/Learning for interested college students willing to work with young adults from South Burlington on a one-to-one basis. Their ages range from 11-15.

Transportation will be provided for them to and from campus every weekday afternoon. The volunteers are to meet with their participants once a week for the entire school year. People are also needed to staff the center.

There is opportunity to receive up to 3 credits with involvement in the program with the approval of your advisor.

We have the use of a van for trips, funds to draw from, and many, many benefits and discounts on and off campus.

So find a new friend and join us a G.Y.S.T.!!

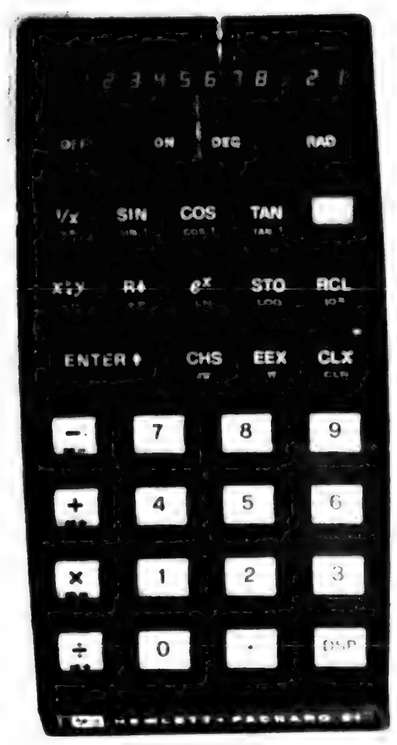
G.Y.S.T. Center 110 Building E
Call 656-4393

Pottery Cooperative

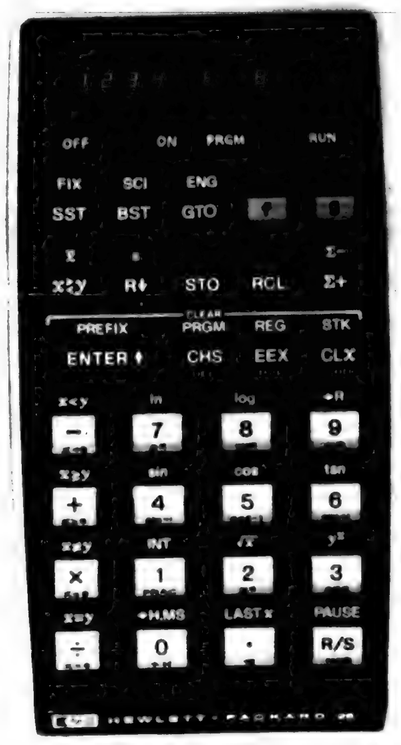
The Living/Learning Center Pottery Cooperative requests that students who have pottery at the Living/Learning Center shop pick up or glaze their pieces. This can be done September 8-12 and September 15-19 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Pottery left in the shop after September 19 will be removed.

The uncompromising ones.



The Hewlett-Packard HP-21 Scientific $125.00*



The Hewlett-Packard HP-25 Scientific Programmable $195.00*

The calculations you face require no less.

Today, even so-called "non-technical" courses (psych, soc, bus ad, to name 3) require a variety of technical calculations—complicated calculations that become a whole lot easier when you have a powerful pocket calculator.

Not surprisingly, there are quite a few such calculators around, but ours stand apart, and ahead. We started it all when we introduced the world's first scientific pocket calculator back in 1972, and we've shown the way ever since.

The calculators you see here are our newest, the first of our second generation. Both offer you technology you probably won't find in competitive calculators for some time to come, if ever.

Our HP-21 performs all arithmetic, log and trig calculations, including rectangular/polar conversions and common antilog evaluations. It's display is fully formatted, so you can choose between fixed decimal and scientific notation.

Our HP-25 does all that—and much, much more. It's programmable, which means it can solve automatically the countless repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces.

With an HP-25, you enter the keystrokes necessary to solve the problem only once. Thereafter, you just enter the variables and press the Run/Stop key for an almost instant answer accurate to 10 digits.

Before you invest in a lesser machine, by all means do two things: ask your instructors about the calculations their courses require; and see for yourself how effortlessly our calculators handle them.

Both the HP-21 and HP-25 are almost certainly on display at your bookstore. If not, call us, toll-free, at 800-538-7922 (in Calif. 800-662-9862) for the name of an HP dealer near you.

HEWLETT hp PACKARD

Sales and service from 172 offices in 65 countries.
Dept. 658B, 19310 Pruneridge Avenue, Cupertino, CA 95014

*Suggested retail price, excluding applicable state and local taxes—Continental U.S., Alaska & Hawaii.

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

The Greek Part

by DAVID LOTT
Greek Coordinating Council

Welcome to Camp Catamount!

Welcome to a unique Greek System! A united system striving to provide the social climate and developmental experiences as much a part of college life.

You've heard about the past, which is passed. What you'll hear about in the next year is a group of 15 fraternities and 5 sororities which will help you grow. Each house offers a different way of living, working, learning and socializing. If one doesn't fit your way of living, try another.

Some of the activities Greeks sponsor are the following: social parties, benefit dances, barbeques, United Fund drive, Lambda's Garbage Catillion, FADC, movies, Greek Games, and many more. They do what you want to do.

All Greek houses at UVM are members of the Greek Coordinating Council, an organization which brings the houses together for common causes. Though the council is entering its second year, the improvements are already evident. The Houses are working and planning together. The system is working! We are growing and becoming a bigger and better part of college life.

Look around, learn what you can. The right house is here for you. It's a good experience.

You'll hear more about each house and the Greek Coordinating Council in future articles. Look for us, it's worth it.

Two medical students – one from Springfield, Vermont and the other from Essex, England, told the Dean and the Financial Planning Committee of the Board of Trustees that if the Trustees continue to raise prices and ask for "recovery of full cost" it may send the cost of a medical college education beyond the means of most.

But with the cost of a medical college education, in these inflationary times, running about $11,000 per student per year, it appears that the University has little choice.

The University can no longer afford to educate medical college students when they lose some $4000 on each one. As it quite understandably is not going to get the full amount from Vermont students, it must turn to the states which want to send their students to the College of Medicine.

The money comes from two sources – student tuition and the compact fees. It is too much, for a college that does not have scholarships for medical students, to expect the students to have to pay these extraordinary costs.

It is in the best interests for the states to have such compact arrangements. It is not much of a sacrifice when one thinks of the overall benefit to the people of the state, in the long run.

Dean Luginbuhl should be commended for his efforts, and those of Dr. Andrews, to raise the compact fees. The only danger is if we have nothing at all by next July 1, when the first compact is formmated.

The Exchange

What's It All About

by Alice D. Outwater
Counseling and Testing

We're the old red brick house on upper Main Street (someone took our sign last Spring), and we would welcome any of you through our doors. First, we think of ourselves as a human resource center, open to all members of the UVM Community – students, faculty and staff from all work situations. It's not difficult to get an appointment; drop in or call! All dealings with us are confidential. People bring many kinds of concerns – work related distress, career planning issues, study problems from concentration difficulties, anxiety in test taking, or difficulty writing papers. Are you having trouble selecting a major? There is information available to help you become more aware of your talents, so you can make a wiser choice. Are you unusually lonely, shy, have sexual concerns, feel uncertain about your personal worth and value to yourself and others? You can come and talk to one of us about it or join one of our Growth Groups, Tension Groups, Assertiveness Groups, etc., which may give you helpful insights. We believe it's important to create and maintain a space in which people can feel safe to explore their feelings, their ideas, their needs and discover more of their own strengths and capabilities. Indeed we on the staff consider this an ongoing process in our own lives. We find human beings fascinating and wonderful with strengths and powers within each person that await discovery.

Are you having hassles with parents, friends, spouses, ones that seem hard to change? Are they getting you down, interfering with your studying or work – come talk about them, see if you can discover alternatives, new happier ways of handling them. There are eleven of us on the Staff: Reed Brown, Sam Dietzel, Richard Does, Janet Forgays, Louise Gulla, Nancy Magnus, William McNeil, Alice Outwater, Joanna Rood and Kay Frances Schmucker, all different types and ages, but we like to think of ourselves as basically together people, ready to listen to whatever you want to share. Make an appointment between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. any weekday or some evenings – call 3340 or 3341 or drop in at 146 South Williams Street. We'll be circulating a list of groups beginning soon and other activities from the Counseling and Testing Center.

THE EXCHANGE also stems from the Counseling and Testing Center. Look for our boxes and eye-catching posters in Billings and the dorm complexes on campus. If you have a suggestion about making life better on campus, complaints – anything – fill out the attached sheet, put it in the box and we will take it from there. We try to answer every missile personally, so leave us your name and extension. We seek to get action where it is suitable by sending on the suggestions directly to the appropriate parties. Or by taking care of it ourselves.

Better lighting was installed in a study area 24 hours after this suggestion came in! However, we did not get Psittions lowered or the winter vacation dates changed; but the committees became aware of your concerns. Write us your amusing observations on what you like about campus life, put down your gripes – think of the community as a whole unit and what would benefit us all. You'll come up with some interesting items!

We'll do our part from this end. UVM is a small campus by today's standards and we want you all to enjoy it as much as we do, so become active and make it a worthwhile place to live.

We'll see you around campus at Counseling and Testing or hear from you through THE EXCHANGE. In any event, have a good semester.

Museum Print Rental

Beginning Wednesday, September 17th, the Fleming Museum will display the framed reproductions, original prints, and posters available for rental to UVM students. Old and modern masters are represented as well as outstanding work by recent UVM art students. Rentals range from $2.00 to $6.00 per year (plus deposits for glass); Fleming Museum Members receiving a 50% discount.

The prints will be displayed around the Museum Balcony for approximately two weeks. First come – first serve.

SAGA's Line-Up

	Phone
Food Service Director: Fred Smith	3155
Operations Director: Ron Beaulieu	4299
Waterman: Al Dwyer	3155
Den: Bob Taft	2058
Given: Sue Vittum	2569
Living/Learning: Walter May	4299
"Waiters": Price Hutchins	4172
Marsh: Price Hutchins	2902
L/L Store: Price Hutchins	–
Harris–Millis: Chip Strong	3867
Simpson: Walt Fulmer	3234
Wright: Gary Jones	2189
Redstone Store & Snackbar: Walt Fulmer & Gary Jones
SAGA at Trinity College: Tom Ryan	864-5291

Meet David Nestar

The University of Vermont will have a new Director of Student Activities this fall, as David Nestor, a graduate of Indiana University, will replace Bill Root, the student activities director the last three years, who has returned to continue studies towards a Ph.D. at Indiana.

Nestor, a radio and television major as an undergraduate at Indiana, began his master's program at his alma mater working as an assistant director of the Volunteer Student Bureau, specifically in the area of community relations.

He continued his internship in 1974-75 with a graduate assistantship in the College of Student Personnel Administration, working as an administrative assistant to the director of student activities.

St. Anselm's Chapel

St. Anselm's Chapel has two full-time chaplains this year, Nancy Allen (Protestant) and Geoffrey Schmitt (Episcopal). The regular worship service is as follows:

SUNDAY
11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal); 6:30 p.m. – Communion (Protestant) – with Supper following.

TUESDAY
10 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

WEDNESDAY
10 p.m. Compline, prayers and songs.

MONDAY through FRIDAY
7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer.

Other scheduled weekly activities include:

MONDAY – 8 p.m. – Prayer 'n' Share – a time for informal worship.

THURSDAY – 4-5:30 p.m. – Wine and Cheese. Stop by and relax. Also, 7:30-9 p.m. – A Time to Share – a group to share and explore feelings and experiences of being new, being a freshman, maybe being lonely.

The St. Anselm's Chapel is open 24 hours a day. The rest of the building is open until midnight – stop by to relax, study, find a friend.

For more details, contact Nancy or Geoff at x3882 or drop by St. Anselm's.

Hillel

Hillel, the Jewish organization on campus, welcomes all students returning or entering UVM. This is the schedule for Yom Kippur services:

At the Ahavas Gerim Synagogue (Orthodox) Archibald St. and at Ohavi Zedek Synagugue (Conservative) – No. Prospect St. – Sunday, September 14, Kol-Nidre, 6:30 p.m. and Monday, September 15, 9:00 a.m. and 7:25 p.m.

At Temple Sinai – Sunday, September 14, Kil-Nidre, 8:00 p.m. and Monday, September 15, 10:00 a.m.... 12 noon Yiskor... 4 p.m.

A break-the-fast meal will be served right after the conclusion of services, approximately 7:45 p.m. This will be held at the Hillel House, 389 College St. If you have any questions, call Professor Kahn, after 5 p.m. at 864-5417.

Social Hour

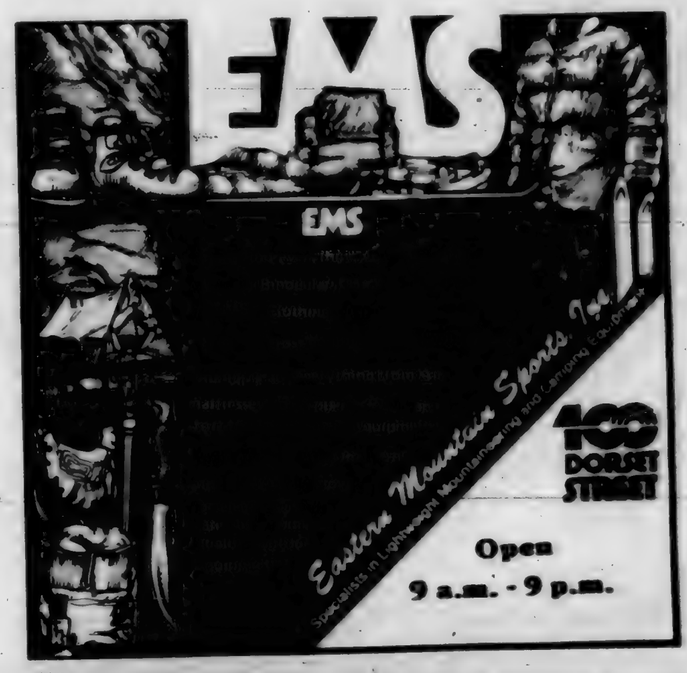
Students majoring in Religion or interested in Religion Studies as a major are invited to a gathering at 481 Main St., (2nd floor) at 4:00 p.m., Tuesday, September 16.

There will be information on plans for the year, refreshments, and the meeting of faculty and old and new acquaintances. All interested students are welcome.

Christian Science College Organization Meetings are to be held every Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Harris Rec Room beginning September 9. This includes sharing of healing experiences. ALL ARE WELCOME.

Oops!

Correction: Dr. Wayne C. Patterson did not graduate from Indiana U. as stated in the Summer Cynic. He graduated from Juniata College in Pennsylvania in 1960.



BOOGIE
YOUR BOARDS OFF and now
LEARN TO SKI
at
SMUGGLER'S NOTCH SKI AREA
Jeffersonville, Vermont

By purchasing a $10.00 BASH BADGE you ski for $5.00 weekdays - reg. $10.00
$8.00 weekends and holidays - reg. $12.00

NEW THIS YEAR "LEARN TO SKI PACKAGE"
½ price lessons - $3.75 - reg. $7.50
½ price equipment - $4.50 - reg. $9.00

ON CAMPUS SELLING SCHEDULE
September 8 & 9, 15 & 16, 22 & 23:
Monday and Tuesday all month, 9 am to 5 pm at Billings Center

September 10, 17, 24:
Wednesday all month, 11 am to 1:30 pm at Given Lounge
4:30 to 6:30 pm at Trinity College Dining Hall

September 11, 18, 25:
Thursday all month, 11 am to 1:30 pm and 4:30 to 6:30 pm at Alliot Hall, St. Michael's College

All reps are authorized to sell the pass. Anyone wishing information about how your group can purchase the pass, call 899-4089.

SMUGGLER'S NOTCH SKI AREA UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT REPRESENTATIVES' NAMES, ADDRESSES, AND TELEPHONE NUMBERS

A. Tom Sherrer - 225 Davis Hall - 656-2516
B. Meredith Niles - 48 South Willard - new number information
C. Hilary Hagnich - L-L 225B - 656-4256
D. Donna Tess - 306A L-L - 656-4246
E. Scott Gibson - 205 Jeanne Mance - 656-2668
F. George Beato - 317 Millis - 656-2025
G. Annalee Ash (Dane) - 122 White St. - new number info
H. Steve Kalloch - 116 Mason Hall - 656-2665
I. Gene Goldberg - 301 Austin Hall - 656-2012
J. Brian MacDonald - SAE-66 Summit St. - 864-9829

yarn cellar
Northern Vermont's foremost headquarters for the needleworker. Experienced or beginner, you'll appreciate our vast, in stock, selection.
Locations: Burlington Plaza, Shelburne, St. Albans

LUMS

LUMS JUST GOT MORE BIGGER.
Good news for everyone who loves good food! There's a great Lums in town-another in the big, growing, family of Lums Restaurants.
LUMS is for your family too. We serve gourmet burgers, steaks, roast beef, shrimp - everything from a snack to a meal. (Beers and wines too. Come out to LUMS for a great treat.)
LUMS® No one else will give you more. more. more.
Williston Road
(NEAR THE AIRPORT)

25% off 25% off
WITH THIS COUPON
RECEIVE A 25% DISCOUNT ON ALL PURCHASES AT LUMS
25% off 25% off

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Randy Jansen – Editor-in-Chief '77
David Ryan – Assistant Editor '77
Mark Valle – Managing Editor '76
John MacDonald – News Editor '78
Sue Perkins – Feature Editor '77
Sari Bodi – Arts & Entertainment Editor '76
Norm Robinson – Sports Editor '77
Amy Weinstock – Copy Editor '78

Congratulations Summer Cynic

For the first time since the founding of the Cynic in 1883, the Vermont Cynic did not close its doors at the end of the academic year. Instead, brains clicked, and ideas flourished – and thus the Vermont Summer Cynic was born.

The Summer Cynic was the brainchild of Elliot Freeman, Stephen Tanner, and Katherine Bowers. Many hours of work were put into the paper, just to get it off the ground. More work, more time, and many worries later, the first edition of the Summer Cynic came off the presses.

Later editions appeared; to the delight of the UVM summer population, visitors, and townspeople. The Summer Cynic had its share of controversy, often with emotions running high. But, that was an indication that the summer editions did not go unnoticed or unread.

Unmeasurable experience was gained by the editors, not only in journalism, but in their relations with other people. Steve Tanner commented that "the summer was "exciting, experience-packed, intense, politically enlightening, loose-fitting, idea and experiment oriented, crazed, people-minded, conscious-raising, unorthodox, undrab, undull..." The summer probably provided the staff of the Summer Cynic with more of an education than they've received in all their classes at UVM.

Finally, we would like to thank the Summer Cynic staff for their eye-opening and unique approach to journalism.

R.J.

The Bookstore Ripoff

Every semester students at UVM are confronted by the same successful fund generating device commonly known as the U.V.M. Bookstore. Students sit by helplessly as the bookstore empties students' pockets of what little money they have left. The bookstore discriminates against no one as all students are caught in the squeeze of a virtual monopoly. It is not enough that the tuition level is among the highest in the country for both in-staters and out-of-staters, but in the time honored tradition of kicking someone when they're down, the bookstore comes in to deliver the knock-out punch.

There can be no plea of ignorance, for the bookstore excuses itself in advance; the sign in the bookstore "Book prices are set by the publisher" shows that the management knows that the prices are high.

Surely it will not be disputed that the bookstore is a money maker. The volume of business done by the Bookstore leaves no other conclusion.

Do these profits go towards increased employee wages, improvement of services, or the owners' pockets?

Why is there not full public disclosure of net profits from all bookstore operations?

Possibly a plan can be developed to reinvest profits back into the bookstore with the purpose of providing student discounts and improved services. It's time to make the bookstore serve the interests of those who support it.

D.R.

The CollegeCatalog As A Contract

(CPS) – A graduate student at Syracuse University (NY), involved in a morass of lawsuits, has encouraged students nationwide to consider suing their universities if school courses don't match up to the catalog description.

Thomas White, graduate student in philosophy, is suing Syracuse for "breach of contract," claiming that the philosophy department has (1) ignored traditional philosophical research in favor of "linguistic" philosophy; (2) admitted students without philosophy background into the Ph.D. program and (3) duplicated courses taught in other departments. White has asked for damages of $3989 – the cost of his education.

For its part Syracuse has filed a countersuit against White for $11,110 for defense costs, lost time of its employees and punitive damages.

White has claimed that linguistic (or "analytic") philosophy demeans traditional philosophical methods by replacing fundamental philosophical thought with philological analysis and threatens the survival of philosophy as an academic subject. Aside from Syracuse, linguistic philosophy also dominates philosophy departments at Harvard, MIT, Tufts and Boston University, according to some observers.

White said he has been harassed by the philosophy department for his outspoken criticism and that he has been subject to "vicious and brutal verbal assaults," manipulation of test grades, cancellation of financial aid and denial of due process appeal rights of test grades.

In one alleged instance of libel, assistant professor Peter Van Inwagen wrote to White in a letter "You present us with a difficult pedagogical problem. Before we can teach you anything, we must first dispel your delusions of philosophical grandeur. But you are so arrogant in your ignorance that I doubt whether this is possible."

White said that the letter could constitute libel because it was "published" on department stationary and was hence not a personal letter.

What is at stake, White has charged, is "academic freedom." He hopes to begin a nationwide campaign that encourages students whose courses differ from the catalog description without their consent to sue the university of breach of contract.

White would also like to see a "bill of rights for students" which could inform them of rights, obligations and duties. In addition, White seeks a "depoliticizing" of comprehensive exams, possibly through the use of outside evaluators, which could make students less dependent on subjective evaluation.

In a similar case last fall, an undergraduate student at the University of Bridgeport (CT) filed suit against the university claiming that she learned "absolutely nothing" from a business education course.

In that case the university vice-president maintained that it had an obligation to offer the course and provide an instructor, but took no responsibility for what is taught in the classroom.

A Review Of The Student Movement

by Montgomery de Totehill

Unlike the rebellious 60's the majority of students today have not experienced revolutionary praxis or organization, not hierarchical organizations, but rather anarchial. Solidarity between all peoples who profess liberalistic ideals is needed, not a resurgent belief in the American Dream, or an acceptence of bureaucratic powers which manipulate propaganda directed to make consumerism and egoism accepted norms.

Hoping to bury the facts of injustice, concealed egalitarialism in antique desks will hardly do, it will only make our total self destruction more unavoidable.

The phenomena of the 60's is open to continual analysis, the lessons and hardships are there for direction. The revolution in the US can and will happen with or without your 4 years of philistein education at UVM.

Therefore, I strongly urge all of you to challenge the relevancy and direction of your education at Vermont's camp for the advantaged.

Eleven million Vermont taxpayer's dollars go into this fine institution to attract from far and wide those students who can afford to pay. This has no doubt changed the economic base of Burlington into a little stinking city all on the planned expansion of the University by the local landlords, bankers, and lawyers who sit on the board of Trustees and set their cohorts up in the administration. The fact that most rents are out of line with what fixed or low-income families can afford helps create the tension between workers and students.

They, the ruling Oligarchy of Vermont and its schools, could care less about providing competent education free from political coercion and news print. The push for growth in local business and industry has been their main concern. The immediate economic exploitation of the area has resulted in more students with cars, high rise parking garages, tunnels, and no doubt more pollution. Thus, the Burlingtonirn's watch as city mentality creeps and then finally walks into their lives.

The toilers, persons, students, and whoever must demand relevant education and purposeful community life aimed at providing answers to personal alienations and problems inherited from the sinking capitalistic system. Change and Revolution in the U.S.A. is possible and will only happen with understanding and praxis.

What has been the role of the professors in all this? They have acted with defensive maneuvers and complacent teaching practices.

Only you can prevent radicalism from becoming an anachronism. Act, and demand continuity with your student predecessors and the reality they stook for.

letters to the editor

Poster In Poor Taste

To the Editor:

A recent newcomer to Burlington, I set out to explore the University's Campus. Although I'm not a student, I was interested in learning about some of the life of UVM. In Billings I was shocked and somewhat saddened by the Rugby team's recruitment poster which is headlined "Rugy players eat their dead." One can only speculate on their motive for using this "catchy phrase"... Humor? An "attention getter"?

The dead women and men of the tragic crash in the Andes would hardly find the poster amusing. Many of those who miraculously survived the horror of eighty trapped days suffer still. I imagine they could experience only horror at UVM's rugby team's lack of sensitivity and compassion.

Yes, rugby players of UVM, you have caught my attention but you have certainly lost my respect.

Sincerely,
Susan M. Getman

Remove Catamount

To the Editor:

This is in regard to the new addition in Marsh Lounge, Billings Center. Tacked above the fireplace is displayed the skin and contorted head of UVM's mascot, the Catamount or cougar. Personally, we feel that the symbol of the Catamount is a vibrant and beautiful one in its living form. However, we find this foul exhibition to be the ultimate in poor taste. It is our opinion that the lifeless carcass of the cougar cannot possibly evoke any spirit of ferocity or strength, which it is supposed to exemplify.

Therefore we propose that the skin be removed from Billings immediately. Others who find this display distasteful are urged to place their responses in any of the EXCHANGE boxes which can be found in Billings, Counseling and Testing or in any of the residence halls. We are assured that enough response in this direction will bring the hanging Catamount off the wall.

Sincerely,
Sally Mattson
John Dillon

D N 'G

by GARY CHOLSON

America, making the world safe for Democracy

Such irony!

Sending refrigerators instead of food, manipulating foreign politics through the CIA's dirty tricks department, selling arms and ammunition, involving ourselves with two bit dictators around the world, and possibly, though it is not conclusive yet, starting the war in Cambodia by aiding the pro-American dictator to oust Prince Norodom Sihanouk causing the people to revolt and to establish Communism. Our efforts backfire for these and for more sinister reasons.

Communism, the 'antithesis' of Democracy (so we're told) and as practised in the world today, the arch enemy of Democracy, is closeted behind walls of secrecy. Since before WW2, our government has maintained an equal policy in the descriptive guise of 'National Security.' It is this policy of Cold War politics which, while 'protecting' the free world from Communist aggression in some obscure political sense, has undermined and now collapsed Democracy. That which was protected has fallen.

Democracy as outlined in the Constitution, though not as intended by our early benefactors, is based on the concept of people making decisions for themselves. While the basic requirements for the vote have been relaxed (seemingly more democratic), allowing Women, Negros, convicts and children to vote, the most important ingredient, indeed the primary basis for a successful Democracy, has been effectively denied the people of America. For the people to make informed decisions, they must be informed.

The average American, while paying lip service to Democracy, doesn't vote, or what is worse, doesn't know what he's voting for. The conscientious voter is as bad off as the average American. For even if he tries to learn the issues and to effectively choose among them, he can not. The government refuses to release all the necessary information. The government refuses to allow Democracy through its policy of secrecy.

The acceleration of executive privilege, the diminution of the people's representative powers, the recent visible cloud of conspiracy in the White House, the spying upon private citizens by their government (both legal and illegal), the extensive computer files maintained on citizens by their required social security number, all indicate a massive truth which has yet to surface upon American consciousness. Not only is America no longer a Democracy, its tail is spinning towards a totalitarian government; and with the people's passive consent! Some few examples have surfaced, though cloaked appropriately by the administration's apologists: Nixon's Enemy List, government control and regulation of firearms, and why the government has carefully maintained the 'Detention Camps', despite their public disgust at themselves for behaving that way.

The political agitation during the sixties, often referred to as the 'Movement', tried to raise the consciousness of America and failed. There must have been something to it to generate so much interest; can we be thankful it failed? The various leaders researched and discovered accounts of the most sinister, possibly fiendish, complicity entanglements involving all manners of respected individuals. US businesspersons (University trustees, politicians, and the otherwise pure military people) actually control US policy both domestic and foreign. Now that reports have made their way into the limelight, we thought we could simply let the people react, but they didn't. They were successfully conditioned (the only appropriate word). Who and what are you working for, dying for, Mr. America? You're not dying for Democracy because there is no such system. The 'what' you're dying for are the fabricated reasons, usually subtley implemented through mass media, developed, polished and broadcast by the businessperson, who happens to be the 'who' you are dying for. War, it should always be remembered, is a profitable business.

It is at this point that Mr. America, poorly educated (probably a college graduate), easily conditioned and violently convinced, rises in righteous indignation and proclaims America the finest country in the world. It is, too, if all you consider is the GNP and the standard of living index. Material wealth, though common man sells his soul for it, is Big Business. It is the payoff to keep the masses content, eating cake. Materialism seems to have overshadowed Idealism. Values once famously America's, like Truth, Justice, Democracy and Freedom have gone to other countries, struggling against the forces of American Businesspersons and their tactics. Material wealth is the devil's bait and America has bought it, hook, line and sinker.

The government controls the public face of America (by not allowing Democracy) and Big Business controls the government. The international cry of American Imperialism stems not from the American people but from their Businesspersons. The war against Communism is a case in point. Is it any wonder that America is against Communism? Who would stand to lose? Everyone, most would say. Because they look at Communism through the eyes of the Great Camera, which is held by the Businessperson, they are bound to think Communism is 'worse' than a Democracy. All opinion in this country is subject to modification through simple but effective conditioning, without the subject being aware of the tampering.

Where are we headed when what we believe is a lie? It is not a question of becoming a Communist, a Socialist or even an American Christian. It is absurd to think of America making the world safe for anything, let alone a political system that would destroy the economic stranglehold business holds on the government. Do we have time, considering the present state of world affairs, to decide? The most crucial years of our species' survival depends, ultimately, on what we do now and for the next few years.

The corporations and all material production and consumption agents have jeopardized our environment for short term profit. If this trend is not stopped, in its tracks, before the 1980's, many authorities in the Environmental Sciences believe it will be too late to avert worldwide catastrophy, possibly serious enough to cause our extinction. If that doesn't get us, the Machiavellian attitude of present day, corporation controlled politics will. Thrown headlong into a third world war the planet itself will be lucky to survive. Continual small 'brush' wars will, in the end, serve the same destructive purpose. They will create hate and distrust which will last for as long as people survive, which wouldn't be long, and would destroy the only chance for world survival.

Beginning with the realization that Democracy has become a hollow word, useful only in inciting our improperly educated masses to paroxysms of patriotism; knowing rationally that a one world government will come eventually if anyone is left to see it and concluding with how near to our extinction we actually are: it is past time for sitting on our hands, wishing the Movement was still here. Travel makes distance shorter; a single step begins a long journey; the time to move was yesterday. One world government is the sole solution to our present plight.

It would be preferable, to any rational person, to live a generation or two under a world dictator, simply to insure the survival of a one world government. A dictator as harsh as Stalin or Hitler would be best, for he would execute all opposing individuals. It sounds atrocious. It is. It is also necessary. But dictators never live forever, and they often handle difficult problems with greater efficiency, if less tact.

If Communism is then decided upon as the most stable government possible, after the dictator has done his job and some sharpshooter his, then so be it. However, it may just be possible that with the enlightened attitude "world government" necessarily implies, Democracy may be viable, if the proper conditions can be promulgated and maintained. But realistically, considering all the possible consequences of the two mentioned systems (with respect to the enviropment, the mental health of society, and the predilection to bribery of government officials), perhaps some new system of political thought will have to be devised.

The lay of the land ahead looks difficult, possibly impossible, but we have the intelligentsia, common folk, morons and optimists to help us through it.

FRANKLY SPEAKING...by phil frank

Ranting, Raving, & Drooling

A Real Prisoner In My Dreams

by LARRY SEIDEN

One overdone late summer's Sunday night, I twisted my way into the first shredding of Monday's morning. While anxiety was building over the arrival of the clock's shattering alarm, I bolted upright. "Where have all my heroes gone?" No wonder I can't sleep, my dreams are walking the hero unemployment line. I have deluded myself into believing there is no more room today to be someone else. My present body is a comfortable place to exist for a while, but I would not need a second chance to jump into Joe Namath's white shoes or Hunter Thompson's leather jacket, though I first might ask for some exterior renovations before I'd inhabit Jerry Ford's physical dwelling, as much a tenement as it is.

But where have you gone Joe Dimaggio, Paul Simon flashed the hook before our gaping mouths. Still Paul has always had the knack to turn a cute phrase. So he qualifies as one of my secondary heroes. But I can't sit tight; I can hardly even lean and in the earliest hours of the morning I kick the covers back and forth in frustration. Are my heroes too high? I can't make a guitar speak and I drop to my knees and pray before overhand curve balls. Besides, I shy away from friendly smiles. I was thinking heroes start at home but I can't train my three diverse schizophrenic selves into one super and two average personalities. There is no spiderman among me.

Maybe the inflationary rise has raised hero expectations and criteria to beyond mortal scales. So on one hand we have TV and in the other a beer, the perfect combination for stationary survival. TV has always been in the forefront, but thanks to the large screen we can see all of Frank Cannon. Why when I was back there in pre-pubescent seminary school, I longed to be Cubby on the Mickey Mouse Club! Then as Cubby grew chubby my yearnings turned towards Timmy and Lassie. Then the color age of superheroes and cartoons blossomed under the peacock's tail. These inkwell characters were so alive to me I spent the afternoons of my sixth year trying to talk Mighty Mouse out of the mouse hole in my parent's dining room. But heroes are hard to find without cheese.

Now I know TV does not look real. I know that drinking Lite Beer will not make me skinny. I'm a skeptic. I don't believe in the stock market. I fall asleep during meditation. I don't even believe what I see in the mirror. Is it the unreality of life or is it life that is unreal? If beauty is the color of the air, the taste of sunshine on a hillside or the taste of water caressing the land at the shoreline, then Mother Nature is my heroine. But she chills me with her rain; her temper is fiery when she's hot and her bugs pour through my screens.

Still tossing, I waited for Monday's dawn to stretch a warming finger through the holes in my shade. It rubs so close to me that I can't touch it as it chases the poets of darkness from my room. The darkness withdraws leaving my brain dizzy with verse that I'll never remember. Another night passed and still not a dream to hold onto. I try to stabilize the face in the mirror and pace through the day searching my friends for their heroes (which they don't have) and a reasonable cure for insomnia. They, too, could not break the bind of TV and apolitical blues. Politics and change were for the sixties thing when the dream was alive. Now the dream is wasted and the heroes whose posters adorned our walls and bathrooms, (home of the philosopher king) = (a man's pot is his throne but the queen spends twice as much time there), have yellowed with time and their (our) once clear vision has turned bloodshot as we await a new day's innocence wrapped in a blanket of empties beneath the light of the neon that attracts us like thirsty moths.

Our hedonism may just be a response to the hard road we're on. Maybe a clearer picture is where our old heroes are going. I used to idolize Muhammed Ali and I still do, for he is a winner. He scored a technical knockout on the Government and its little channels. Very few can claim that title. He came back, the people's champ, the greatest. Now he's an entertainer, a man with a sponsor, not a cause. His revolution has lost its ideal for justice. Now the camera catches him under a commercial banner. I'm not belittling what he's done. I know he's the greatest, but as a fighter not as his own corporate star. Even Joe Dimaggio hasn't gone that far, he's doing commercials for a New York banking and finance establishment. So heroes are not hard to find. They're on Madison Ave and Channel 7.

Last night in the heart of a Saturday night I found a friend who held my hand and said there is a chance. "I wouldn't want to be The Green Lantern or Angela Davis but I'd give a month's supply of foodstamps for a day inside of Bruce Springsteen's head. I've got to know if Crazy Janey and Sandy are real." I smiled thinking maybe we've come full circle and had found the path back. Now Bruce Springsteen is not a household word but neither was supercallifragilisticexpialidocious until Mary Poppened upon us. My friend said it is just a romantic enchantment with a melodic embrace. Hey, that's alright, if it helps us walk a little taller and gets me to sleep.

The Freshman Flood

Reprinted from The Summer Cynic
by Scott MacKay

The University of Vermont's greatest experts have always been brains and talent – but only because anybody who ever had either left.

Anonymous Camp Catamount inmate

••••••••••••

After a long, hot summer spent perusing the delights and depravities of Jaws, the ziplock fuck, the sun on Champlain or Cape Cod and the pennant chances of Boston's amazin' Red Sox, one can only conjecture what Camp Catamount will bring come September. But I believe we have unearthed one event that never really changes, a perennial autumn happening that can be forecasted as accurately as the leaves falling by November, the annual tuition hike or UVM dropping another varsity sport: The Arrival of the Frosh.

Now there are many campus locations from which to observe the Freshman Flood, including the great views from WDW's parking lot and the Redstone Green. This September, Camp Catamounters are also afforded a choice scan of the burgeoning Andrews Memorial Tunnel, better known in local lore as Easy Ed's Hole.

However, the best vantage point this writer has discovered is anywhere in the vicinity of the Harris-Millis, Living/Learning and M.A.T. "residence halls." From here, one can gape at a virtual three-ring circus. You have your choice of the caged-rats about to enter the cinder block elegance of that maze known as Harris-Millis, where any resident who can find the bathrooms by the end of September ought to automatically be elevated to the Dean's list. Perhaps you prefer the austere look of M.A.T., that living testimony to the credo that the same architects who built all those dreadful, decaying Harlem public housing projects in the 1950's always got hired by state universities to design dormitories. And for the upwardly mobile pseudo-Aristocrats, we have Living/Learning, the Garden Apartments sans swimming pool, where the guys who run the place have more degrees than a rectal thermometer, and even possess advanced studies in cocktail party balderdash. Boy, will Suburbia love Living/Learning, for just like the Little League, Concerned Older People are always willing to help one with their "program."

So, after you've found out how everyone's summer was, pick out a good seat, arm yourself with a six of brew and some of that fine Columbian that has been floating around the Queen City of late, and watch the Suburban Arrival Show, brought to you by the Class of '79.

••••••••••••

The sun percolates through the perpetually overcast Northern Vermont sky, glistening down upon New Jersey, New York, and Connecticut license-plated Cadillacs and ersatz wood paneled LTD Country Squire Station Wagons meandering their way up Williston Road towards Camp Catamount. Lots of M.D. letters on those mud-speckled license plates. A few pick-up trucks... Vermonters, naturally.

The parking lot is full now as the Suburban Susies and Johnnies, shadowed by little sister, sternly supervised by Mommy and Daddy, meekly disembark from the overloaded station wagon. The deluge begins.

The doors of the air-conditioned gas guzzler open as the accouterments (effulgents) of life in Larchmont, Long Island, Wellesley, Shaker Heights, Darien, Scarsdale, Short Hills, and Woodstock are unloaded. Out pour electric hair dryers-stylers-curlers that will never suffice to shroud that terminal acne case acquired by a steady McDonald's diet, KLH speakered stereos to drive roommates berserk with, bicycles that have ten speeds but can only be ridden one lousy month of the whole wintry Camp Catamount year, gold-grained Senior Prom/yearbook pictures of that soon to be forgotten high school honey, those new Rossignols that will never see Stowe's slopes because the lift ticket funds went for Tequilla Sunrises at Hannibuls' and Daddy's thoughtful high school graduation present of an electric typewriter... dammit, doesn't Daddy realize that elementary education majors don't need typewriters and that he should have conjured up some practical, utilitarian gift... like a birth-control pill prescription. These Surburban Susies and Johnnies don't want to do what Daddy has done all his life, but from the looks of this avalanche, they sure as hell want him to keep on doing it.

Mommy nervously inhales another Salem into her rapidly aging lungs and readies her make-up for the trek into the Dorm. The society that relishes tossing Forty-second street, two-bit prostitutes in the slammer somehow never caught up with the Suburban Housewife. But, that's only because, in the great American tradition, she doesn't work cheap; split levels, charge accounts, LTD station wagons, country clubs and even Valium prescriptions are all very expensive items, what with the country enmeshed in a recession and all...

Once inside the dorm, inspection of the cinder-block cell immediately becomes secondary to that common arrival apprehension, the tremulous moment, known as Meeting the Roommate. Now Camp Catamount, you'll have to understand, is as adept at creating mis-matches in freshmen roomies as Peter Salzberg is at scheduling basketball opponents... lest we forget Barry Cohen one-on-one versus David Thompson. Housing always seems to put the lithe young Queen of the Prom, right off the high school cheerleading line, in the same room with the bra-less, stoned hipster woman who started attending Anti-War rallies on Boston Common about the same time the cheerleader had her debut rah-rahing at Spaulding High football games. It's a perfect marriage. Chicago meets Jefferson Airplane, those new skirts get hung in the same closet with eight pair of faded Levi's, Rod McKuen says hello to Allen Ginsberg, the Congregational Church harvest supper casts a supercilious stare at the Bar Mitzvah, Summer as an A&W Rootbeer stand waitress meets summer sampling hashish in Amsterdam, the Student Council Social Committee warily eyes the local N.O.W. Coordinator, Virgin naively wonders where boyfriend from B.U. will be sleeping this weekend, nursing manuals get mixed with D.H. Lawrence novels.

Ah, then comes the real cruncher, the guaranteed ire and anxiety creator: Parents meet Parents. Barre's Chamber of Commerce Man of the Year, circa 1968, Dick Mallary's local campaign chairman, cautiously extends his hand to Brandeis's leading Marxist philosopher... the Elks Club greets Aptheker, Machiavelli peers at Kropotin. So much for the melting pot.

Then naturally comes the most anxious occasion in the arrival of any college freshman, oops, freshperson: Boy meets Girl. It usually occurs in some exciting place like the endless line at the bookstore, or at the first Friday Afternoon Drinking Club. (Stop dreaming guys and forget what they told you about co-ed dorms... it never happens in the shower.)

At the F.A.D.C. Boy shuffles over toward Girl target, displaying the artful moves of a Hank Finkel, brandishing all the grace and panache of a fellow with diarreah fumbling for that last dime in front of a pay toilet. Hard to tell he's a freshman.

"eh... whare ya from..."

"oh... Half Hollow Hills... it's in New Jersey."

"Ah... what's yer major."

"French... what's yours?"

"I wanna go to Law School (the inevitable thirty second silence that seems like two years)... eh... well... eh... (lights a Marlboro, after three matches) eh... howse yer summer..."

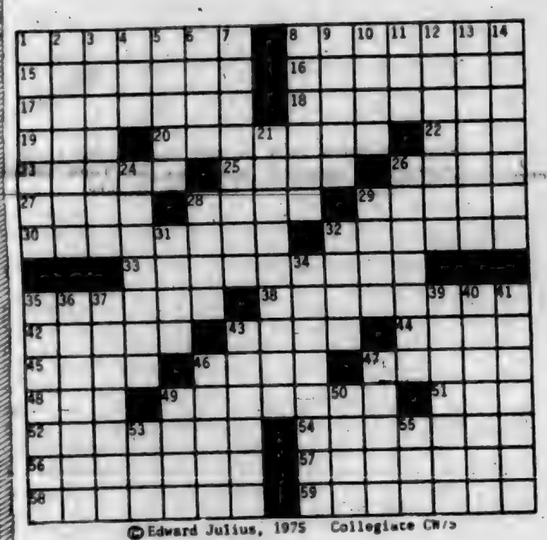
"well... it was alright..."

"eh... well... wouldja like anudder beer?"

Mutual Oral encopresis, the stuff from which great romances are built. Strickly YOUVBEM style.

So much for your frosh arrival. Like your first date, family reunions and Youth for Nixon rallies, one's first arrival at College is something to be dreaded, stoically endured and then quickly forgotten, packed away into the cobwebs of consciousness. Thank Chirst – praying, naturally, that mine is not too closely related to Charlie Colson's – it only happens once.

collegiate crossword



© Edward Julius, 1975 Collegiate CW's

ACROSS

1 Separations
8 Welsh ——
15 Labor
16 Gluttony
17 Opposite
18 Riper
19 Society of doctors
20 Adolescent
22 Turkish measure
23 Spanish dance
25 Opening
26 FBI agent
27 Gushing: State
28 Prick up
29 Actor Edward ——
30 Embryonic layer
32 Hoisting machines
33 Feeling
35 Ground up by rubbing
38 Edible crustacean
42 Kingdom
43 Imitate
44 Of a continent: comb. form
45 Give it ——
46 Gershwin tune
47 Quaking ——
48 In favor of
49 Jim Ryun's specialty
51 Unit of weight
52 Thoughtful 54 Usually
56 Fishing spear
57 West African varmint
58 Burn marks
59 Greek mixing vessels

DOWN

1 Geological layer
2 Reduce to ashes
3 Cuban cigars
4 "—— Got You Under My Skin"
5 Italian painter
6 ——-en-scene
7 Railroad cars
8 Comment
9 Saying
10 Price
11 Old French coin
12 Burt Lancaster role
13 Repeat
14 Despots
21 Reduce to a standard
24 Spiritual
26 Quick looks
28 Await decision
29 Poke
31 Consider
32 Movie: Sp.
34 North American tree
35 Wrestle
36 Reforests
37 Of the High Priest
39 Burst Apart
40 Connective tissue
41 Easter hats
43 Snell and Jazy, e.g.
46 "Unpopular" food
47 Pineapple
49 Incan labor draft
50 East Indian grass
53 Quiet please!
55 Soak

25 Mansfield Ave.
Red Cross Blood Center

Donate Blood
Mon.-Wed.-Fri. 9-11 AM
Tue.-Thur. 12:00 - 2 PM
Call 864-4541
for further information

Women's Caucus

by MARY ELLEN MARTIN

Introduction

This is the first in a series of articles written by women on the University of Vermont Campus. Although many of us, but not all, are members of the UVM Women's Caucus, we do not follow the same philosophies on Women's and life issues. We do, however, join in believing in the worth of women as a vital part in our society, and are striving to attain that goal. The UVM Women's Caucus is made up of undergraduate, graduate and medical students, faculty and staff members, and faculty wives. If you are interested in learning more about us and our activities, contact us at Blundell House, extension 4366.

Sexism in Education

As women in the academic community, we have all been told, one time or another, that we have to work harder, be more aggressive, and, what's more, be more innately intelligent in order to achieve the status that our male counterparts have achieved. So we do just that, bringing in our A's, our Dean's List reports, our superior College Board scores. Where does that put so many of us? If only the precious statistics could be had! How many women graduates of UVM are now in assistant-to-male-manager, underling positions? Does our natural intelligence fade away upon graduation? Are we doomed to be house-cleaners, baby-sitters, or, if our luck is with us, typists, or better yet, teachers, the lowest in the male-dominated hierarchy of the academic world?

Traditionally this does, indeed, seem to have been the fate of the majority of college-educated women. Our social conditioning has forced us all to take subordinate, "supportive" roles. We are now all but invisible.

Let's ignore for the time being the social games we all end up playing and instead, examine our academic posturing. Look carefully at yourselves. You are all young adults, well-programmed, and behaving accordingly. How many times do you, consciously or unconsciously, discount what a female student is saying in class? Are statements only important if they come from male mouths? Are you cruelly disappointed when you walk into a classroom to find you have a female instructor? Do you consider women who play sports at the University (especially those sports without the prestige value of tennis and skiing) social aberrants? Do you call your dorm-floor a "girl's floor" and the one below a "men's floor"? Finally, the big question arises: How much are we ourselves contributing to and perpetuating the social conditioning that has wrought upon us women so much fear and shame?

To deal with the multitudinous and intangible Freudianisms inherent in the family and social situation, and in the resulting estimation of self, would demand much more time and space than what is allotted here. Instead, we can look to some very concrete evidence that will help us understand the basic, underlying shame in our female lives. A feminist media group, calling itself "Women on Words and Images", set out to make a slide show on non-sexist, elementary textbooks. They found none. What they did find were blatant examples

(continued on page eight)

The Narc Wore Basketball Shoes

I knew a Narc that barked,
Sometimes he sneaked and squeaked.
He lived in a hole in a wall of a floor
And never snored.
He purred to his pals that oppressed him
And previously arrested him.
One day when he was walking the street
And acting discreet,
A robber stole his identity.
When superfly heard the word
He approached the sneakered Narc that barked
And said "Pop goes the Narc."
The Narc left life,
But no one missed him.

–JOHN DAVID

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

NEWS: Margo Howland, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Peter Duquette, Steve Wells, Scott Curtis, Charles Kauntze.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Seiden, Mark Seralnick, Jay Williams, Penny Siegel, Barb MacFarlane.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cole, Ken Markovitz, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Sarah Clay, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis, Linda Mansfield, Martha Hess, Louise Beinke.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Taves, Chris Brown.
ADVERTISING: Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Photographer Captures Picturesque Vermont

Wolcott, Vermont 1973

by Judith Gerber

On August 17, John Miller's exhibition of photography opened in the Christian A. Johnson Memorial Gallery at Middlebury College. Miller, a resident of Hinesburg, has enjoyed increased visibility in the past few years. Last year, UVM's Fleming Museum featured a collection of his black and white photos, documenting life in the Northeast kingdom, partly created with the support of a grant from the Vermont Council on the Arts. More recently, this native Vermont photographer was chosen to represent the state, along with the prestigious company of Ivan Albright and Clara Sipprell, at Gallery 641, in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Miller is full time staff photographer for the Shelburne Museum. On the weekends, he photographs "what he likes." A relief, perhaps, from documenting museum artifacts, Miller turns to the exterior world of nature, architecture, and people. And yet, one immediately notices the same meticulous concern with the impeccable renderings required in his professional work.

Formal training in the art consisted of a short apprenticeship with Stephen Gersh, a former assistant to Ansel Adams and instructor at MIT. While Miller does not adhere completely to the famous Adams-invented "zone system" of exposure, his photos certainly reveal the system's concern for achieving each of the gray tones between the extremes of true white and true black. For example, the scene of an old farmhouse with attached barn and horse standing in foreground pasture is enlivened by the minute details of flawed clapboards on the white house and precise depictions of pasture grass in the deepest shadows of the barn. Such passion for rendering detail, and the technical ability to do so, elevates Miller's images above calendar picturesqueness. The viewer is forced to pause, and give his eyes the time it takes to travel the cowpaths back into the well-focused space of the picture, observing each thistle along the way.

The architectural compositions – abstracted shots of Vermont churches, barns, and other public buildings – carry the difficult task of superceding similar statements made by Paul Strand and Alfred Stieglitz. Sometimes Miller fails to be more than studious disciple. However, notable exceptions are apparent. A would-be classical rendering of a white New England church, cropped close to the front door and including a portion of the center window, is animated by the image of a gregarious workman, complete with carpenter's apron, leaning on the door jam, and by the audacious intervention of a glass meter box on the otherwise pure facade.

A more recent preoccupation of Miller's has been the recording of Vermont's infinitely fascinating faces. Immediately, the viewer is struck by the rapport he has with his sitters – unstilted poses of a young girl leaning Rembrandtesquely over a ledge, an adolescent male with the humility of an Evan's sharecropper, the relaxed joking among the old men sitting on the steps of the Davis General Store.

Miller comes into his own when he allows a country woman to beam from behind chicken wire, holding her striped hen close to her faded woolrich shirt. Later she pauses for a pose on the running board of her old junked car, daisies growing sympathetically in its graveyard. The photographer is obviously not a promiscuous weekend shutter clicker, stealing images from unsuspecting old folk. These are his people. If prospective portrait subjects are not already longtime friends, Miller moves in and becomes acquainted with the family before making photographic statements. Henri Cartier-Bresson once reminded documentarians that "the first impression given by a particular face is often the right one; but the photographer should always try to substantiate the first impression by 'living' with the person concerned." Miller feels that following these people around in their daily lives and eating at their tables not only produces empathetic portraits, but lasting friends.

One is reminded of Edward Steichen's statement that "the mission of photography is to explain man to man and each man to himself." On a regional basis, Miller does this exquisitely. He has taken on rural Vermont as Mark Silber in recent photography books (published by David R. Godine) has taken on the state of Maine. He has discovered the ordinary and anonymous life of rural and small town Vermont. He is a photographer of the vernacular, seeking the unvarnished truth of the thing itself, yet bestowing dignity to milkweed pods or cow's hind quarters. With the late Walker Evans, Miller believes there is a deep beauty in the things as they are.

The viewer not only received the obvious information that the man sitting on the wood chunk with stacked wood behind him has taken a break from chopping, but also appreciates the threadbare texture of his denim jacket, the smell of an autumn day, mingled with the aroma of freshly cut maple, and the wagging adoration of his black dog. Such images activate each of the senses.

Occasionally the viewer interprets a winding valley road of mobile homes and TV ariels as social comment. The photographer claims such pregnant silences to have been isolated for compositional reasons. When one sees this print hanging in the company of abstracted tree branches with similar flowing lines, one has to accept such aesthetic motivations.

The artist later offers more complex reasons for his choice of subject matter in a personal statement hung with the show. "Although my response to that area (the Northeast kingdom) was entirely visual, the historical importance of the work soon became apparent. Many unique examples of Vermont architecture have since burned, the landscape ravished by development, and of course, many extraordinary people are no longer living. That is a secondary force which continues to motivate my work in the area."

Whether the viewer approaches this exhibit as kindred image maker or fellow Vermonter, he will find the trip to Middlebury rewarded by a visual feast. The exhibit closes September 20.

Summer Shakespeare

Sarah Brooke, Peter Kirth, John Patton, Lisa Devlon in Doctor.

Those who depart Burlington when UVM's spring session comes to a close may miss one of Burlington's summer cultural events: the Champlain Shakespeare Festival. I worked at the Royall Tyler Theater this summer as an apprentice for the Festival.

The 17th season of the Festival officially opened on June 16, although reconstruction of the set began two weeks prior to that date. Being an apprentice wasn't a very glamorous job, but it was interesting experience working with a professional group of actors and actresses. There were a number of possible jobs depending on your interests and talents. These included: hanging and running lights, publicity, working at the box office, or on costumes or props (on which I worked), set construction, music, or auditioning for parts. The three maior productions were Much Ado About Nothing, Timon of Athens, and Our Town. Our Town was the first non-Shakespearian production to be presented by the Festival in seven years.

A normal day (which was rare) began about 10:00 a.m. and finished at 5:00 p.m. The hours varied depending on whether you were involved in the show playing that night. Many work days extended from 8:30 in the morning till 1:00 that night. Many apprentices were involved in the folk dancing before the shows. The apprentices also produced their own show at the end of the summer. James Wimsatt directed this play, Moliere's The Doctor in Spite of Himself. It was presented at such places as the Essex County Fair, Battery Park, and it ended up in front of the Royall Tyler Theater last week for UVM students to see.

It was a large company this year, larger than it had been in the past. There were problems: finding enough work to keep everyone busy was one. Also, working so closely six days a week for two and a half months can be trying. However, these minor problems were compensated for by the total experience the festival provided in professional theater: the opportunities and insights into the world of theater.

Lysistrata Auditions

There will be open auditions for Aristophanes' Lysistrata on Thursday the 11th at the Royall Tyler Theatre from 6:00 to 9:00 p.m. Anyone who is interested is urged to read for the play and scripts are available in the Royall Tyler Theatre business office.

Lysistrata is an energetic spoof on politics, the military, and sexual relations which spans the comic spectrum from high intellectual humor to low animal farce.

One scholar has written "Though classic Athens may look, from our distance, like the most reasonable of cultures, a working majority of the people in the time of Aristophanes (roughly 448-380) seems to have got drunk on its own intelligence, possessed by a frenzy for taking any idea whatever as far as it could possibly go and farther."

The action of the play begins with the union of the women of Greece under Lysistrata and their pledge to refrain from sex until the men bring the civil war to an end. Inevitably, in the face of such passive resistance, the war effort falls apart, and the men are simultaneously reunited with their women and the rest of Greece.

Lysistrata is a classic comedy that is timeless in its treatment of love and war, and a tribute to the earthiness of the Greeks. It will be directed by UVM student Susan Selig and will run October 16th through 19th.

S.A. CONCERTS PRESENTS

A CONCERT-DANCE

with

JAMES COTTON BAND

and

JAMES MONTGOMERY BAND

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 3rd

8:00 PM

PATRICK GYMNASIUM

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT

SHOES WILL BE CHECKED

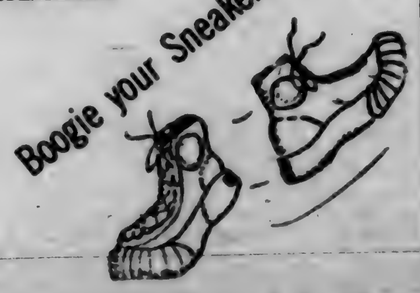
UVM STUDENTS 2.50

GENERAL ADMISSION 3.50

Tickets go on sale Sept. 17th

Students and gen'l admission at UVM Bookscore

General admission at Bailey's Music Rooms and Vermont Book Shop in Middlebury



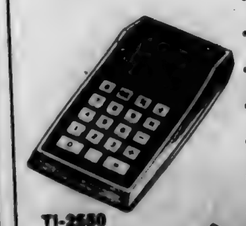
Texas Instruments
electronic calculators

STANDARDS OF EXCELLENCE AT

AFFORDABLE PRICES

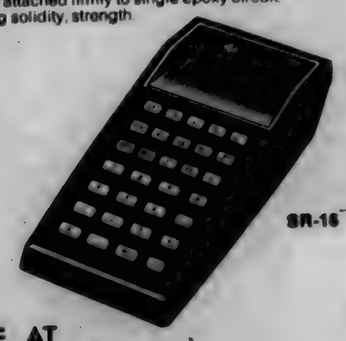
TI-1500

- All critical components designed and manufactured by Texas Instruments with quality controlled to exacting Texas Instruments standards every step of the way.
- Fast-charge batteries can be fully restored in only four hours.
- Calculators can be operated while charging.
- Every calculator is tested by a computer which checks all functions and key operations.
- Every calculator is subjected to jarring impact tests to assure that normal bumps and vibrations do not cause errors.
- High-strength, injection-molded plastic cases are designed and tested to withstand rugged use.
- Gold-plated switch contacts and stainless steel key activators provide long life, positive action.
- All important structural assemblies are held by machine screws—not glue or plastic "welding"—for sturdy construction.
- Double injection molding provides durable key symbols—even under heavy use.
- Positive-action tactile feedback keyboard assures entry registration.
- Vinyl barrier under keyboard protects components against moisture and dust.
- All components attached firmly to single epoxy circuit board, providing solidity, strength.



TI-2550

SR-51A



SR-16

AVAILABLE AT

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

ARE YOU CHEAP???
WE ARE

Stretch your clothes budget by buying from Galandriel Boutique. India Import clothes by special order at 40-50% less than down town prices.

Call 862-7658
any evening after 6 pm
or week-ends after noon.

Lane Series: Coming Attractions

Chick Corea and "Return Forever"

UVM's Lane Series, one of the leading collegiate concert programs in the U.S., opens on September 30 with England's Royal Shakespeare Company in the modern play Pleasure and Repentance. Altogether, twelve world-famous solo artists and group attractions, from England, Russia, France and Germany, as well as the U.S., appear on the series.

Outstanding popular attractions include the jazz ensemble "Return Forever," starring Chick Corea on the keyboards (Nov. 7); pop guitarist and vocalist Leo Kottke (Nov. 13), whose album Ice Water has become a best seller; the Broadway musical Don't Bother Me – I Can't Cope (Oct. 13); pantomimist Marcel Marceau (March 31) hailed as the "greatest since Chaplin;" the Don Cossacks of Rostov (Feb. 12), a folk dance company of 100 from Russia; and the Dance Theatre of Harlem (Oct. 22), a classical ballet group.

Classic concerts include the famed London Symphony Orchestra (March 10), conducted by Andre Previn; Russian pianist Vladimir Ashkenazy (March 26); the Amadeus Quartet (May 8); the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra of Hamburg (Oct. 5), with an orchestra of 45, a chorus of 50, and six soloists; and the Early Music Consort of London (March 16) in a program of baroque and renaissance music.

Several extras round out the season: Preservation Hall Jazz Band from New Orleans, in a benefit concert on Nov. 19; the Hartford Ballet, with the Vermont Symphony Orchestra, in Tchaikovsky's ballet The Nutcracker, on Dec. 6; and the Concord String Quartet for two performances, Dec. 8 and 10, in the six Bartok quartets.

This fall the Lane Film Society will present six evenings of classic films starring the incomparable Charlie Chaplin. The complete program: The Kid and The Idle Class, Oct. 10; The Gold Rush and Pay Day, Oct. 17; City Lights, Oct. 24; Modern Times, Oct. 31; The Great Dictator, Nov. 14; and Limelight, Nov. 21. Highlighted by program notes, the films will be shown in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium on Friday evenings at 7:30 p.m. and 9:40 p.m.

The Harlem Dance Theatre, an internationally acclaimed classical dance company, is headed by its founder and director Arthur Mitchell, formerly premier danseur with the New York City Ballet. The company comes to Burlington for a three-day residency: a work-shop on Oct. 20, a lecture-demonstration on Oct. 21, and a full evening performance on Oct. 22.

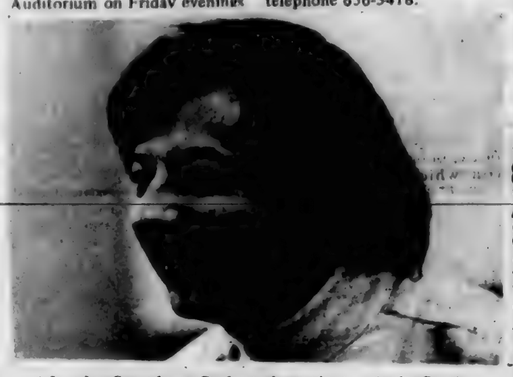
Ticket prices for the twelve events on the series range from six concerts for $18, $24, and $27, nine concerts for $27, $36 and $41, to all twelve concerts for $36, $48 and $54. There is a savings of up to 33 1/3% on the purchase of series tickets over single concert tickets.

Tickets for single concerts, $3.50, $5.50 and $6.50, are now on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, along with series tickets. Tickets for the Charlie Chaplin movie series are $5.00 for a season ticket and $1.00 for each individual showing. Tickets for the benefit Preservation Hall Jazz Band are $5 and $7.50. For information tel. 656-3418.

Tickets for The Nutcracker and the Concord Quartet go on sale in early November.

Applicants for the Harlem Dance Theatre workshop on Oct. 20 (4:00 p.m. in Southwick) should contact Prof. Margaret Hayes of the physical education department (ext. 3240). The lecture-demonstration by the Harlem company will be held in Burlington Auditorium at 4:30 p.m. Tickets for this event are $1.00.

Students wishing to work on the Lane stage crew or serve as ushers should come to the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, or telephone 656-3418.



London Symphony Orchestra's conductor, Andre Previn

Medieval Lectures

The Medieval/Renaissance Program this fall is conducting an interdisciplinary core course numbered English 195, "Problems in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance." Centering on the theme of Individualism in the two time periods, it will be taught by a dozen faculty from varied disciplines.

One of the purposes of this course is to bring together a wide range of faculty and students who are interested in these ages, whether or not they are participants in the Program. Therefore the classes will all be open to any interested persons. They will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4:30 in 216 Commons, Living/Learning Center. Professor James Howe, English, will moderate and oversee the course's continuity.

Guest lectures will be as follows:

September 11 and 16: Prof. Alfred Andrea, History, on the nature of the Middle Ages.

September 18 and 23: Prof. James Overfield, History, on the nature of the Reformation and Renaissance.

September 30: Prof. Richard Sweterlitsch, English, on folk culture and daily peasant life in the Middle Ages.

October 7: Prof. Susan Whitebook, French, on individualism in Provencal lyric poetry of the 12th Century.

October 14: Prof. William Stephany, English, on the theme of individualism in Dante.

October 16: Prof. Susan Sweterlitsch, English, on Chaucer as a transitional figure; emphasis on "The General Prologue."

October 28: Prof. John Engroff, History, on medieval and Renaissance science.

November 5: Prof. Wolfe Schmokel, History, on European overseas expansion, keyed to Portugal and Camoens' Lusiads.

November 11: Prof. Stan Yarian, Religion, on the Platonism of Ficino and Pico.

November 18: Prof. James Howe, English, on Marlowe's Tamburlaine and the exalted Renaissance view of the individual.

December 2: Prof. William Mann, Philosophy, on the mystic's state of union with God and the problems it raises for Christianity. Mainly 16th Century examples, but a study in the continuity of Medieval and Renaissance.

December 4: Prof. Pieter Wesseling, Spanish, on early 17th-century Spanish Literature, especially Lope de Vega's Fuenteovejuna (c. 1619).

In addition, Rev. Dan Daley will deliver two open lectures, on medieval and Renaissance art, on dates yet to be determined.

Anyone wishing to attend any of these classes is welcome.

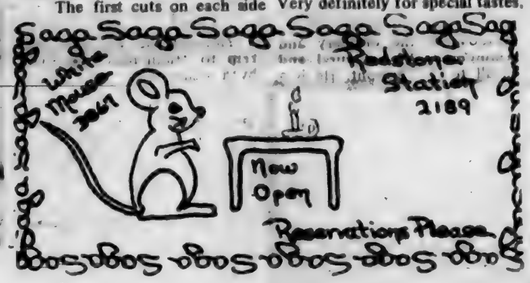
Album Review

HQ, by Roy Harper, Harvest EMI Records SHSP 4046 (English Import)

I first heard of Roy Harper on Led Zeppelin III, where that group dedicated one of their infrequent blues parodies to him. So I bought this out of curiosity. Members of Pink Floyd, Zeppelin, Yes and other English groups are "co-conspirators" on this strange mixture of bad Jethro Tull-like sociology, hard rock and achingly beautiful love songs.

The first cuts on each side are too long and sound as if Harper hadn't spent enough time editing himself and just wanted to play along with these fine musicians. Harper tends to rant, deal in endless apocalyptic visions.

After those two exercises in tedium, however, the album picks up. The two outstanding cuts are "Hallucinating Light," a quiet, tender love song, and "When an Old Cricketer Leaves the Crease," which celebrates the sadness of leaving a team. Very definitely for special tastes.



See JAWS and Never Swim Again

by SARI BODI

This summer a new terror beset the world. Not only were the masses to be panicked by the threat of earthquakes, airplane crashes, ocean liner descents, skyscraper fires, and rat invasions, but could add to the list the most recent crisis: sharks.

Of course sharks and shark attacks have existed long before Peter Benchley and the Universal Studios began their extensive mass media campaign to instill the fear necessary to draw audiences; but never before had shark attacks seemed so real, or at least so frequent. If six people could be consumed by one shark in two hours time, just think how many other sharks were out in the oceans waiting their turn. After the movie, Jaws, hit the summer cinemas, not many people were willing to find out.

The beaches were their usual towel-room only, but the salt water was relatively uncrowded. Mothers would hold their breath until daring juniors returned from waist-high excursions into the shark-infested waters. Hulking beach boys edged towards the shoreline, bravely dove into two feet of water, furtively gazed the ocean's surface, and sheepishly ambled back to secure ground. The lifeguard's major duty altered from lifesaving to reassuring would-be swimmers of the absence of sharks.

Some of the braver ones channeled their fear into the heroic sport of shark hunting. To save humanity from this danger, they manned various vessels equipped with harpoons and other such weapons for shark warfare. Reports of their adventures appeared in glaring headlines in the daily newspapers: 16 Ft. Great White Captured Off Montauk Point, Shark Sighted Near Jones Beach. What wasn't advertised were the many defenseless dog fish and old tires that were plungeoned to death.

Because I didn't want to be a guinea pig to Universal's fear campaign, I brought my raft down to a Long Island Sound Beach. I also brought out a baseball bat and a can of shark repellent. I wasn't afraid. The repellent doubled as suntan lotion and the baseball bat--well, you never knew when a baseball might head your way. I was calmly relaxing on the raft with my eyes wide open when I noticed a shark staring hungrily at me with those cold murderous pupils. I quickly picked up the bat and began deciding whether he'd prefer a line drive or a good bunt, when he piped in, "Will you put that thing down. Don't you know that a weapon can only be turned against you?"

I dropped the bat and stuttered, "I know...but all the newspapers say if you hit a shark squarely on the nose, he'll be stunned and you can escape."

"Oh God...the primitive methods those newspapers expound. Did they advise you to use that aerosol can on me, too?"

I grasped the forgotten can and desperately began spraying. The shark coughed a little and then sneezed which almost blew me out of his reach. He quickly swam over to me.

"Say that stuff's not bad. Could I borrow it? There are some acquaintances I'd like to use it on."

I threw the can at him and tried paddling away when he yelled, "Stop...before I bite your little toe off."

As I had acquired a fondness for it after having it all these years, I did as he suggested.

"Hey wait a minute. What are you doing in the Sound? I thought sharks didn't come in here."

"Well, they don't usually. But I had to escape from all those crazy harpoonists. I wouldn't mind if there was some sport involved but I refuse to fool with amateurs. Hey, maybe you can tell me why all this sudden interest in shark hunting."

"Where have you been? Didn't you know about the movie, Jaws? That's all I've heard about all summer. They not only have the book, Jaws, but about three others describing behind the scenes in making the movie. They even have Jaws' T-shirts and greeting cards. I don't see how you could have missed it all."

"Well, communications have been rather slow lately. The newspaper boys have stopped delivering, my T.V.'s rusted, and I don't know when was the last time I went to a movie."

"Okay. You don't have to get sarcastic."

"So tell me about this movie... Jaws, you called it. That's not bad for a title. Sounds so powerful."

"Alright. Don't get carried away. They didn't even use a relative of yours in the major role. He was mechanical."

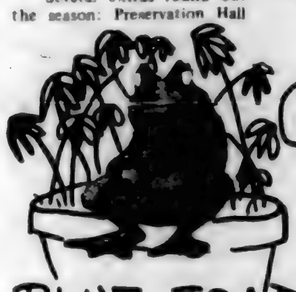
"A mechanical shark! That's terrible. I would have taken the part."

"You may have your chance. I think they're doing a sequel. Hey, look. If I promise to suggest you for the part, will you let me swim back to shore now. I have to go to work. I'm already late."

"Okay. I'll let you go on one condition. You can't tell anyone I let you go. Pretend I bit your foot off or something. They'll never consider me for the sequel if they think I'm a softy."

"Alright, I won't tell them. Goodbye."

I haven't seen him since but I have heard reports that he's en route to the Pacific Coast.



GREEN UP THAT GLOOMY ROOM!
10% OFF ALL PLANTS*
BLUE TOAD HOUSEPLANTS
OLD HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING
ROUTE 100 · WAITSFIELD
*ACCOMPANIED WITH THIS AD AND YOUR STUDENT I.D.

TYPING ERRORS

ERRORITE™ AT YOUR CAMPUS STORE
– OUT OF SIGHT!

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

WELCOME BACK TO BURLINGTON
Great Drinks At Prices You Can Live With Best Selection of Draft Beers in Burlington
Free movies Sunday night
Weeknight Specials
A PLACE TO MEET OLD FRIENDS AND MAKE NEW ONES
147 MAIN ST.
3 DOORS DOWN FROM THE FLYNN THEATRE

Welcome Back Students
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Thru Sat. – Baby Blue
Mon. Sept. 15 – Outrage
Fri. Sept. 19 Sept. 21 – Eros
Sept. 22 Sept. 27 – Davis Bros. Garage
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9 Mon. – Thurs.

DISCOUNTS
SINCE 1967
BOYD'S MUSIC
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
VERMONT'S COMPLETE MUSIC STORE
GUITARS & AMPLIFIERS
PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS SYNTHESIZERS
MUSIC • CLASSICAL & POPULAR
GUITAR - FLUTE - DRUM SET - BANJO INSTRUCTION BY PROFESSIONALS
DANCE BAND BOOKINGS
206 MAIN ST. BURLINGTON
863-4613

SKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVE
THINK
You could buy a discount card and pay every time you go skiing, or you could gradually pay for a SEASON PASS that lets you ski on weekdays all winter long (except from December 25-January 4)
MAD RIVER GLEN'S COLLEGE SEASON PASS
Plan A:
Pay $70.00 by October 3 - become eligible for a FULL CASH REFUND DRAWING PLAN B:
1) Pay $10.00 by October 3.
2) Pay $20.00 by October 20 and become eligible to WIN the rest of the pass.
3) Pay the next installment of $20.00 by November 5 and AGAIN become eligible to WIN the rest of the pass.
4) Pay the last installment of $20.00 by December 5.
THEN
SKI WEEKDAYS AT NO EXTRA CHARGE
ALSO
SKI WEEKENDS FOR ONLY $8.00
ON CAMPUS SALE
Sept. 29 - Oct. 3
Billings Center
MAD RIVER GLEN
WAITSFIELD, VERMONT 05673
802/496-3551
SKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVE

Repeat Performance

The Olympia SEP semi-electric portable
Three automatic repeat keys plus a repeat power space bar are just some of this machine's virtues. Others
- Finger contoured 44-key keyboard
- Vertical half-spacing
- Transparent aligning scales
- 3-position line spacing and ribbon selector
- Power shift
- Push button variable line spacer
- Automatic ribbon reverse
- Durable carrying case
All this, plus the ease and speed of an electric keyboard. See this superb machine perform soon
Larry's Office Machine Service
122 N. Winooski Ave.
Burlinton, Vermont 05401

The Chess Collegian

by LARRY CHRISTIANSEN

Despite Bobby Fisher's prolonged absence from international chess competition, the United States has been strongly moving forward in the development of promising young players. In the 1974 Student Olympics held at Teeside, England, the United States team won second place behind the Soviet Union despite the absence of four or five of its highest rated eligible students. An American team at full strength would pose a real threat to Soviet student hegemony.

One player making news recently is twenty-three year old John Peters of M.I.T. Although only an alternate on the 1974 Student team, Peters has been making rapid progress over the past year. His 5½ - 7½ score in the 1975 U.S. Closed Championship and 100 point gain in USCF rating attest to his strong improvement.

In the recent U.S. Championship, Peters defeated several of our best players in good style. Most prominent was former U.S. Champion and Grandmaster Lubosh Kavalek. Here is their hard fought game.

SICILIAN DEFENSE

J. Peters	L. Kavalek
1 P-K4	P-QB4
2. N-KB3	P-Q3
3. P-Q4	PxP
4. NxP	N-KB3
5. N-QB3	P-K3
6. B-K2	N-B3
7. O-O	B-K2
8. B-K3	O-O
9. P-B4	P-K4

Although this move was successfully employed by former World Champion Boris Spassky against Anotoly Karpov in their 1974 match, Peters convincingly shows up another, darker, side. More common, and solid, are 9...P-QR3 or 9...B-Q2.

10. N-N3 P-QR4
11. P-QR3!...

This is the move that discredits Black's plan for a Queen side attack. Karpov against Spassky played 11 P-QR4 allowing the Knight outpost 11 P-QN5 with good chances. 11 P-QR3 prevents active Q-side play while fixing Black's "holes" Q4 and QN4.

11. .... P-R5

There is no consistent followup.

12. N-B1 PxP
13. RxP B-K3
14. N-Q5...

From this point on Black is totally on the defensive.

14. ....BxN
15. PxB N-K4
16. R-QN4...

Utilizing the Rook to exploit Black's Queen side weakness.

17. N-R3 N/c-Q2
18. P-B4 B-Q1
19. K-R1 R-K1
20. B-Q4 N-B4
21. BxN/B4.....

White takes one of Black's few active pieces with this exchange.

21. ....QxB
22. N-B3 B-R4
23. N-K4 Q-B2
24. RxRP N-Q2
25. P-B5!.....

White returns his extra pawn for a lethal passed Q-pawn.

25..... NxP
26. NxN PxN

Of course if 26..QxN?? then 27 P-QN4 winning a piece.

27. B-N5 KR-Q1
28. P-QN4!.....

If now 28..PxP? then 29 PxP and the pin on the Rook file wins the stranded Black Bishop.

28. .....B-N3
29. RxR RxR
30. P-Q6 Q-Q1
31. PxP BxP
32. P-Q7 Q-K2
33. P-QR4 R-Q1
34. Q-Q5 P-QN3
35. R-KB1 Q-K3

Black cannot allow B-B4

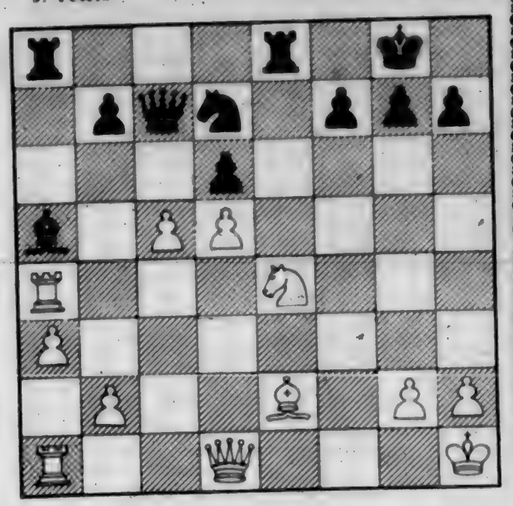
36. QxQ PxQ
37. B-B4 P-R3
38. BxPch K-R2
39. P-N3 B-K2
40. R-QB1 K-N3
41. R-B6 resigns

Black cannot prevent the loss of the NP which will allow a free path for White's QBP. Rather than play on futilely, Kavalek resigned.

(all rights reserved)

Americans Make Good Showing

J. Peters L. Kavalek



Dana Medical Library

Fall Hours

Monday–Thursday	8:00 AM – 12:00 PM
Friday–Saturday	8:00 AM – 11:00 PM
Sunday	10:00 AM – 12:00 PM

Please note exceptions:

November 26 – Thanksgiving Eve	8:00 AM – 5:00 PM
November 27 – Thanksgiving Day	Closed
November 28	8:00 AM – 5:00 PM
December 19	8:00 AM – 5:00 PM
December 20	8:00 AM – 5:00 PM
December 21	10:00 AM – 5:00 PM
December 22-23	8:00 AM – 6:00 PM
December 24 – Christmas Eve	8:00 AM – 5:00 PM
December 25 – Christmas Day	Closed
December 26	8:00 AM – 5:00 PM
December 27	8:00 AM – 5:00 PM
December 28	10:00 AM – 5:00 PM
December 29–30	8:00 AM – 6:00 PM
December 31 – New Year's Eve	8:00 AM – 5:00 PM
January 1, 1976 – New Year's Day	Closed

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 11
PLATINUM BLONDE (1931) – Jean Harlow.
B-106 Cook – 7:30 P.M. – Free

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12
SLEUTH (1972) – Michael Caine, Sir Laurence Olivier.
B-106 Cook – 7:30 & 10:00 – $1.00

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13
BEAU GESTE (1939) – Gary Cooper Robert Preston, Ray Milland, Susan Hayward.
B-106 Cook – 7:30 P.M. – Free

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16
TAMING OF THE SHREW (1966) – Richard Burton, Elizabeth Taylor
101 Votey – 7:00 P.M. – $1.00
DEAD OF NIGHT (1945) – Michael Redgrave, Sally Ann Howes, Mervyn Johns.
B-106 Cook – 7:30 P.M. – Free

. . . Women's Caucus

(continued from page five)

of the passive, unimaginative, and uncreative female child portrayed in nearly every basic reading series. Female children are shown in illustration after illustration standing quietly with their hands clasped behind their backs. ("Almost," says Women on Words and Images, "as though they were physically restraining themselves.")–watching the male figure playing, inventing, working. The most strenuous activity of little girls in these books is rope-skipping; of little boys – well, the world is open-: tree-climbing, wagon-racing, money-earning, horse-riding. Little boys come across abandoned cardboard boxes and create a fantasy world of rockets and astronauts. Little girls come upon the same boxes and play house. Have you caught the gist of the pattern? As children we saw no alternatives. Of course we were to become mothers and schoolteachers. Isn't the boy supposed to be the doctor, the newspaper reporter, the scientist, the professor? Aren't those the rules of the game, as laid down by our first grade readers?

Even more invidious is the portrayal of the adult female in school textbooks. Mothers are dumb. Story A: Six-year-old Dick helps Mother get Tabby out of a tree. Dick gets a ladder, something Mother couldn't think of on her own. Story B: Mother can't find her gloves. She looks everywhere. The whole family looks everywhere. Finally Dick and Jane spy Mother's gloves on her hat. Where is Mother's hat? On Mother's head! Isn't that funny? Poor Mother! Dumb Mother! Poor dumb Mother! No wonder none of us wants to grow up to be a woman. What a thing to look forward to – fifty years of dumbness.

"Ha!" you say, "I don't know of anyone who has been duped by all this propaganda, and certainly not me! Females are all as smart as males." Although that may well be true, we don't seem to believe it. Bem and Bem, in their article "On liberating the female student" (School Psychology Digest 1973 (Sum), vol. 2(3), 10-18.), came to the following conclusion: "Data supports the contention that while most boys are permitted to develop and fulfill their own unique potential, the unique identity of women has been rendered irrelevant to achievement in our society. America's unconscious ideology (is) that women are inferior to men. . . The notion that a young woman is "free" to choose any career she wishes is branded false since our society has carefully controlled, from birth, the very motivation to choose." R.G. Lyell, in "Adolescent and adult self-esteem, as related to cultural values" (Adolescence, 1973 (Spr. vol. 8 (29) 85-92.) reveals evidence that "young adult women do not achieve the social acceptance that males do after emerging from adolescence." (That means you.) And, unfortunately, there are other tales of horror: that teachers prefer male teachers and male students and are reluctant to facilitate sex role behavior change (Ricks and Pyke, "Teacher perceptions and attitudes that foster or maintain sex role differences" Interchange, 1973, vol. 4 (1), 26-33) that intelligence tests are oriented toward masculine cultures and; that girls are "short-changed" by being nurtured in skills that are considered to be of minor importance in the male-dominated society (Kohnstamm, "Sex differences in performance on school progress tests . . ., ad infinitum.

Does it frighten you? It should. Being frightened and horrified is the first step away from the conditioning, but it is not enough. Nor is it enough to realize the sum of the past and feel hopeless and too overwhelmed to do something about it. We can all change the pattern of the past, and quickly, within our lifetimes. The key word is "pride" something women have never been instilled with. Have you ever begun to feel guilty when you talk about your achievements? Ah-ha! That is the lack of pride. Have you ever felt frightened of hurting the male ego? It's not your sensitivity that makes you do that, it's a real lack of the sense of your own worth. Are you uneasy about speaking up in class? Remember the picture of the little girl wanting so badly to join in with the rest of the world, but feeling pulled back by every essence of her spirit. She need no longer be afraid.

introducing:
NECTORS
Tonight – DIMEY'S are back in Burlington from 9-11
TONIGHT AT NECTORS
Sandwiches Served Till 3:00 A.M.
DAY IN – NIGHT OUT
Happy Hour Everyday From 3-6
Check It Out!
NECTORS
188 MAIN STREET, BURLINGTON

royal christy
BURLINGTON'S ONLY SKI EQUIPMENT SPECIALISTS
HEAD KNEISSL TRUCKER hart DYNASTAR LANGE Dolomite The Peoples Boot TECNICA Raichle LOOK-NEVADA SALOMON BESSER MARKER
Recognize these names? This is the equipment that Royal Christy specialists feel will make all the difference in the way you ski this winter. There are so many brands on the market today, we felt it necessary to bring you only the equipment we feel will be best for you! Beginner and expert alike will find the best equipment available at the Royal Christy ... for the kind of skiing you'll do here in Vermont. Demonstrators are available at the Royal Christy, we're specialists ... we know the technology behind ski equipment ... come in and talk to us about your skiing ... we can help you!
within the SKI Shop
388 Shelburne Road
Burlington, Vermont
862-7472
ALL NEW SKIS ARE PRE-TUNED ON OUR SKI TUNER:
EDGES SHARPENED, BOTTOMS FLATTENED, WAX APPLIED . . . FOR TOP PERFORMANCE!
REFINISH YOUR SKIS — NOW!
ski tuner $8.00
AN INCREDIBLE MACHINE THAT REFINISHES SKIS WITH A PRECISION THAT RIVALS ANY FACTORY JOB.
royal christy WITHIN THE SKI SHOP 388 SHELBURNE RD., BURL. 862-7472 royal christy

SIZZLING STEAK
THE BEST STEAKS! GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
Next to Merrill's Show Case I & II
on Williston Rd.
Easy Access to I-89
Comfortable Atmosphere
Leisurely Dining
1216 WILLISTON ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181
10% OFF WITH UVM ID.

ABRAHAM'S
COSMETICS
PRESCRIPTIONS
PIPES • GREETING CARDS
Vermont's Largest
CAMERA CENTER
ABRAHAM'S
111 CHURCH STREET, BURLINGTON

The students car's best friend
TEXACO
CLOVERLEAF TEXACO
COMPLETE CAR CARE
TEL 862 2935
1055 WILLISTON RD
SO BURLINGTON, VT 05401
ROAD SERVICE
862-2935

news

Reprinted from Summ
Cynic.

University of Vermo
President Dr. Wayce
Patterson, who succeeded
Edward C. Andrews Jr.
June 23, had not been in off one whole day before he h brought a change of attitude the Administration regardi
the controversy over sec
UVM salaries.

On his first day in offi
Patterson said he personal wasn't opposed to t disclosure of the Universit presidential and vi presidential salaries.

"I'm not personal thrilled by efforts to k them secret- I really do mind one way or the othe
Patterson said.

While Patterso predecessor, Dr. Edward Andrews Jr., has been quo
as saying his own salary
$43,000 (some have said it $44,000), Patterso statements are a mark contrast to several members the Board of Trustees who pushing to keep the sal increases for Patters
Academic Vice Presid
Alfred B. Rollins Jr. and V
President for Developm
Barbara Snelling secret fr
the public.

Luther F. Hackett, chairman of the Trustee's
Hoc Committee on Finan
Planning, has termed
"prying" attempts to get salaries disclosed.

Patterson, however,
that at the August Board Trustees meeting he present a policy proposal
the question, and he stro indicated he would fa making the salaries public.

"I assume by the Board meeting I'll have recommendations. Once I, to a number of pe involved, at that point I'll some recommendations ten towards a policy of openn
he said.

Patterson has since t

TI-1500
• All critical c
Instruments
Instruments
• Fast-charge
• Calculators
• Every calcul functions ar
• Every calcul assure that
• High-streng and tested t
• Gold-plated provide long
• All importa screws – no
• Double inje everyunder
• Positive-ac registration
• Vinyl barrie moisture ar
• All compon
board, prov
STAN

news

Patterson Against Secret Salaries

Reprinted from Summer Cynic.

University of Vermont President Dr. Wayce C. Patterson, who succeeded Dr Edward C. Andrews Jr. on June 23, had not been in office one whole day before he had brought a change of attitude to the Administration regarding the controversy over secret UVM salaries.

On his first day in office, Patterson said he personally wasn't opposed to the disclosure of the University's presidential and vice presidential salaries.

"I'm not personally thrilled by efforts to keep them secret- I really don't mind one way or the other," Patterson said.

While Patterson's predecessor, Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr., has been quoted as saying his own salary was $43,000 (some have said it was $44,000), Patterson's statements are a marked contrast to several members of the Board of Trustees who are pushing to keep the salary increases for Patterson, Academic Vice President Alfred B. Rollins Jr. and Vice President for Development Barbara Snelling secret from the public.

Luther F. Hackett, the chairman of the Trustee's Ad Hoc Committee on Financial Planning, has termed as "prying" attempts to get the salaries disclosed.

Patterson, however, said that at the August Board of Trustees meeting he will present a policy proposal on the question, and he strongly indicated he would favor making the salaries public.

"I assume by the next Board meeting I'll have some recommendations. Once I talk to a number of people involved, at that point I'll have some recommendations tending towards a policy of openness," he said.

Patterson has since talked to Trustee Chairman Allan O. Eaton, of Winchester, Mass., who has indicated he will ask the Board to review the policy of keeping the salaries secret.

The matter of secret salaries became an issue last month when it was discovered that the Trustees' Executive Committee had increased the salaries of Patterson, Rollins and Snelling, by a reported seven percent. The salaries were not discussed publicly at the trustees' meeting except in the most oblique of terms.

Although the Trustees did not deny the existence of the increases, they refused to comment on them. But recently growing pressure from state legislators, Governor Thomas P. Salmon and Administration Secretary Robert M. Wilson for public disclosure has apparently resulted in the Board of Trustees taking the matter into consideration at their next meeting.

The Vermont State Colleges have pointedly observed that they don't keep their salaries secret, but no one at the University seems to know if the University has a specific policy of non-disclosure, or whether it is merely a "tradition" or "habit" of long-standing.

Patterson said the inclination of the University not to disclose salaries had been ongoing for as long as he has been here.

Senator Esther Sorrell, D-Chittenden, said recently the secrecy was "disgraceful" and hinted this was no way for a state university to act if it's going to be asking the legislature for funding later on.

Patterson said as far as he knew there was nothing preventing a member of the University Administration or any faculty member, from disclosing his own personal salary.

"Anyone who wants to can do that," he said, adding that he had no personal objections to disclosing his own salary, but preferred to wait "till the Board of Trustees could deal with the salary issue in its entirety.

In his first public response to the issue, Patterson said as far as he knew, the chief reason the University did not routinely disclose salary figures was because of the different faculty and administrative groups involved.

"I don't believe we should disclose individual rank and file salaries," Patterson said, saying it would lead to administrative difficulties.

Patterson said he was not aware that any other salaries besides his own were discussed in the executive session.

"I wasn't there, so I don't know," he said, adding that salaries had been "adjusted" up to seven per cent overall by college, but not every position would be included.

Patterson's own salary increase, however, was for his new position as interim president.

"The members of the Board told me, standing out in the hall after the meeting, what they were willing to offer me as interim president," Patterson said.

Patterson said the salary increases for other positions were set by outgoing President Edward C. Andrews Jr. with Patterson's concurrence.

1976 Legislative Intern Program

The Vermont Legislature is offering an opportunity for interested and qualified students to participate in a Legislative Intern Program. Internships will begin in January 1976 and continue through the end of the 1976 legislative session (approximately mid-April).

Students from all disciplines and areas of study are invited to apply. Preference will be given to those who possess unique skills and abilities, and a real interest in government. Candidates must be able to speak and write clearly, to perform research, to work independently, and to work professionally with legislators of all political and philosophical viewpoints.

Responsibilities of student interns will range from research on specific subject areas or bills, to scheduling public hearings, maintaining bill files and copies of testimony, answering legislative inquiries, and preparing status and progress reports on bills in committee.

Students must be able to devote full time to the program. Up to 15 credits will be awarded for participation in the internship, although the academic workload may vary according to the sponsoring college or department. Students will be expected to pay full tuition and living expenses.

Applications are available in the Dean's Office, College of Arts and Sciences, 304 Waterman Building, and at the Legislative Council, State House, Montpelier. If you are interested in the program, the completed application should be mailed to the Legislative Council by no later than October 15. Applicants will be notified of the Council's decisions by November 1.

For further information contact Barbara O'Reilly, Dean's Office, College of Arts and Sciences, or Edward Miller, Legislative Council, State House, Montpelier, Vt. Telephone 828-2231.

New President Expected By January 1

by Margo Howland
Reprinted from Summer Cynic

The University of Vermont may have a new permanent President by January of 1976, one year after Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr. announced his resignation.

The Chairman of the University's Presidential Search Committee, trustee Robert B. Boardman of Burlington, told his colleagues on the Board of Trustees Saturday, June 7, that the committee hopes to come before the Board, possibly as early as October, with a selection of three candidates for consideration.

Boardman reported the progress of the Search Committee to the Trustees Saturday morning and later to the Alumni at the Annual Alumni Reunion Luncheon.

When the twelve-member committee began its work in February, it held eight open meetings, during which various members of the university's administrative, academic, and student community, the media, the state, and business leaders expressed opinions on the role of the President.

Boardman noted that with the beginning of April "not one word has surfaced, and there is some concern in some quarters that we have withered and died. We're alive and well."

The Search Committee has held its meetings in executive session since April 1, Boardman said, "because we're dealing with matters of a great confidential nature. We must not divulge names and personalities."

The Committee placed advertisements in the Chronicle of Higher Education and the New York Times, wrote to 125 persons in other Colleges soliciting nominations, and asked 100 faculty with contacts on other campuses for recommendations from them.

Boardman said the committee received 115 applications, and 186 nominations, of which 84 "have accepted the challenge to be a candidate."

Of the total pool of 199 candidates, the majority have been screened into one of three categories: "highly qualified," "qualified," and "not ideally suited."

"It's a subtle term, but I think you get the inference," Boardman said of the third category.

As of now, there are 12 persons in the "high" category, 19 in the "qualified" category, and 149 categorized as "not ideally suited." Of these last, Boardman said, letters will be sent to 131 informing them they are no longer under consideration, and 18 are in a "hold status" pending further review by the committee. Thirteen applications have yet to be processed.

Boardman said the committee decided it was appropriate to assess candidates on a "three-dimensional basis" and have scheduled interviews in Boston, New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia for the week of July 7. Vermont candidates, he added would be interviewed in a "neutral location" away from the University of Vermont campus.

Boardman said the committee realized "any good candidate will have as many penetrating questions to ask you as you will have to ask them. We, the committee, must indeed do our homework, because we are representing the University of Vermont."

Boardman said that to prepare for receiving questions by candidates, as well as for asking them, the committee conducted a simulated interview with Executive Vice President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson, who will assume the presidency July 1 until a new president is found. Patterson himself is not a candidate for the post on a permanent basis.

"It was a very interesting procedure," Boardman said of the interview. "It showed us our total inadequacies and reaffirmed our fears!"

He said that the committee would be talking with Patterson, Vice President Lawrence McCorey, Dr. Dolores Stocker, Assistant to the Resident for Human Resources, and Secretary of Administration Robert Wilson to further help them with the interview process.

Boardman said the committee plans that by "not later than October 1 we could come back and have about five to seven candidates to invite to this campus with an in-depth interview process."

"We could then come to the Board either in December or October with a selection of three candidates for the Board's consideration," he concluded.

★Be Nifty Go Thrifty★

Nearly new clothes & Household Goods

for the only prices we can afford: THE LOWEST

Shop no further for those extra clothes which are so desparately needed but you can't afford: THEY'RE HERE

Country Manored Thrift Shop
372 Dorset St., So. Burl., Vt.
863-1434
OPEN SIX DAYS 9:30 - 4:00

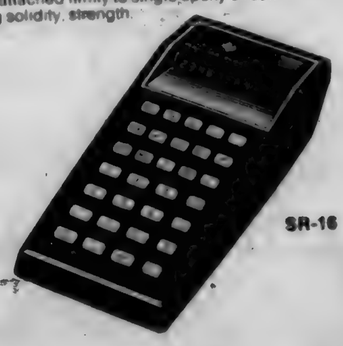
University Store

Texas Instruments
electronic calculators

TI-1500

TI-2550

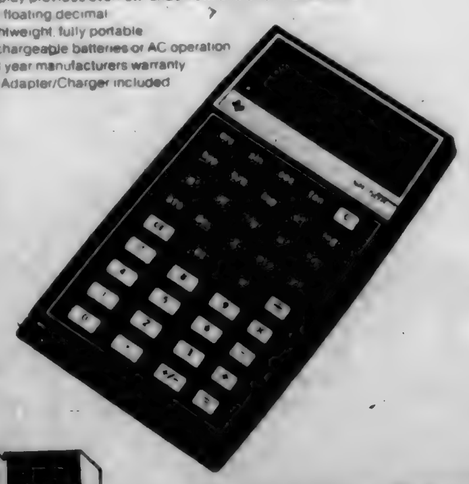
- All critical components designed and manufactured by Texas Instruments with quality controlled to exacting Texas Instruments standards every step of the way
- Fast-charge batteries can be fully restored in only four hours
- Calculators can be operated while charging
- Every calculator is tested by a computer which checks all functions and key operations
- Every calculator is subjected to jarring impact tests to assure that normal bumps and vibrations do not cause errors
- High-strength, injection-molded plastic cases are designed and tested to withstand rugged use
- Gold-plated switch contacts and stainless steel key activators provide long life, positive action
- All important structural assemblies are held by machine screws – not glue or plastic "welding" – for sturdy construction.
- Double injection molding provides durable key symbols – even under heavy use
- Positive-action tactile feedback keyboard assures entry registration
- Vinyl barrier under keyboard protects components against moisture and dust
- All components attached firmly to single epoxy circuit board, providing solidity, strength.



SR-16

SR-50A

- Performs all classical slide rule functions – simple arithmetic, reciprocals, factorials, expotentiation, roots, trigonometric and logarithmic functions, all in free floating decimal point or in scientific notation
- Features an algebraic keyboard with single function keys for easy problem solving
- Most functions process displayed data only – allows separate processing of data before entry in a complex calculation
- Memory allows storage and recall of numbers, features sum key for accumulation to memory
- Calculates answers to 13 significant digits, uses all 13 digits in subsequent calculations for maximum accuracy
- Computes and displays numbers as large as ±9.999999999 x 10^{99} and as small as ±1 x 10^{-99}
- Converts automatically to scientific notation when calculated answer is greater than 10^{10} or less than 10^{-3}
- Performs operations in the order problem is stated
- Features bright 14-character display – 10-digit mantissa, 2-digit exponent, 2 signs
- Display provides overflow, underflow, and error indications
- Full floating decimal
- Lightweight, fully portable
- Rechargeable batteries or AC operation
- Full year manufacturers warranty
- AC Adapter/Charger included



TI-1200

- Adds, subtracts, multiplies and divides – instantly.
- Percent key allows easy calculation of taxes, discounts, mark-ups and ratios expressed as percentages.
- Automatic constant in all five functions.
- Easy-to-read, 8-digit display shows negative sign, all numerals and calculation overflow indication.
- Easy-to-operate – press keys in same order as problem is written.
- Convenient portable size – just 5.5 x 2.8 x 1.4 inches.
- Operates from 9-volt alkaline or carbon-zinc battery.
- Solid-state components and integrated circuitry for long, dependable service.

SR-51A

STANDARDS OF EXCELLENCE

University Store ON THE CAMPUS

AT AFFORDABLE PRICES

Gay Student Union Welcomes New Members

The UVM Gay Student Union is an organization whose purpose is to promote a sense of gay identity and consciousness on our campus. The organization was founded in October, 1974, and sponsored several activities on campus last year which included speaking with classes in psychology and sociology, airing a gay radio show bi-monthly on WRUV-FM, running a counseling and referral center, and hosting three gay dances on campus during the spring semester.

This year we hope to reach out even further in our efforts to educate persons on this campus as to the meaning of gay oppression and liberation and also to provide a more solid community of gay men and women. We heartily welcome new members to the GSU and hope that you will join us in some of the projects planned for this year.

(a) A Gay Speaker's Bureau – Several classes in human sexuality, sociology, psychology, and the medical school invited members of the gay community to speak with them on gay liberation. The sessions were highly informative and exciting. We hope to continue this program during the year and extend it to include also such classes as political science, anthropology, history, health-related services, education, and religion. If either the instructor or students in the class wish to request that a gay man and a gay woman come to speak with the class, please write a note to the Gay Student Union, care of Billings Center, at least two weeks in advance indicating the instructor, class, meeting time and place, and a phone contact. Someone will then get in touch with you to confirm. This is perhaps the most effective way for people to learn about the gay experience, honestly and humanely. We urge you to partake of this service which the GSU provides for the campus.

(b) A Gay Switchboard – It is sometimes difficult in a small city like Burlington to meet gay people, should one need advice, help, or new friends. To this end, the GSU will sponsor a switchboard for counselling, referral, and related inquiries. This semester we shall adhere to the following schedule:

Monday evenings 7–9 p.m. – a gay woman will staff the phone
Wednesday evenings 7-9 p.m. – a gay man will staff the phone

The campus phone number, for the Gay Student Union is 656-4173.

(c) There are several consciousness-raising groups currently meeting in town. Should you want to join a gay male group, a gay women's group, please contact the GSU either by writing a note or phoning during the switchboard hours. Anyone interested in forming a men's and women's group, also let us know.

(d) There will be a radio show on WRUV-FM centering on significant current issues, feminism, and gay-related topics. Listen to WRUV-FM for details.

(e) The GSU will sponsor a Gay Pride Weekend in early May. Planned activities include nationally recognized speakers, workshops, films, a luncheon, a dance, and a gay pride day on campus. We need people who are interested in helping to plan for this weekend.

(f) We hope this will also be of interest to the general student body. Professor Ken Seid, the faculty advisor to the GSU, will be offering a course in the English department this spring entitled Sexuality and Literature. The focus of the course will be works by or about homosexuals. There will be an article in the Cynic before enrollment later on this term telling more about the course.

(g) And finally, there is a collection of over a hundred gay-related books on 3-day reserve at the Bailey Library reserve desk. Books include fiction, poetry, drama, and non-fictional works in biography, essays, criticism, psychology, sociology, and reference works. The titles of these books are catalogued under English 196 in the reserve section. We hope the reading public will take advantage of these books.

If any students have ideas for additional activities, we hope that you will contact us.

Davis' Amendment Challenge Fails

by Margo Howland
Reprinted from Summer Cynic

The first student challenge of academic records under the Buckley amendment at the University of Vermont failed Monday, June 2, when University officials released a ruling that the records of the student involved were not "inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise in violation of his privacy or other rights."

A three-member committee of emeriti faculty, Dean George V. Kidder, Dr. Alexander Gershoy and Dr. Reginald Milbank, who heard the challenge of student Alan Davis, submitted their recommendations Thursday to the Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr.

On Friday, May 30, the University had planned to release the ruling, but the student's attorney, Richard Blum of Burlington, refused to agree, saying "I don't want my client to read about it in the papers, you can release it Monday."

Dr. Rollins has indicated that he will not order the student's record to be deleted or modified.

Davis, a pre-med student from Belle Harbor, New York, had specifically challenged a statement made by Zoology Professor Dr. Robert Keen that appeared in a composite letter of evaluation prepared by the University Pre-Medical Committee. The Buckley amendment, sponsored by Sen. James Buckley, C-New York, permits a student to challenge the content of academic records "to ensure that the records are not inaccurate or misleading, or otherwise in violation of the privacy or other rights of students."

The committee concluded that "complete omission of the substance of the letter would have resulted in an inaccurate and misleading evaluation, whereas the present committee letter should not be misleading for the purposes for which it was intended and read."

Davis had maintained that Keen's statements criticizing him as a laboratory assistant and saying he "procrastinated almost to the point of disaster" were misleading and inaccurate in light of the fact that he had received an A in Keene's course.

The Review Committee acknowledged this fact, and said the statement "could be misleading to one who fails to note that the course grade on the transcript is A. The Committee, as well as Dr. Keen, could well have called attention to the grade in some way."

The Review Committee therefore recommended that Dr. Keene be asked by "an appropriate University official" to review his letter "... to assure that he considers it in each detail a clear and accurate expression of his opinion and to make any revisions he may find desireable."

VPIRG Wants Vote on Fee

The Board of Trustees of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) has called for a campus referendum on the question of student support for the student-run consumer lobby. According to VPIRG Director Whitey Bluestein, the referendum would either reaffirm or end the lobby group's mandate at UVM.

VPIRG was founded in the fall of 1971 by a group of students who petitioned the College's Board of Trustees to allow the University bursar to act as a collecting agent for the organization's funds.

The college administration is also under pressure from a number of conservative legislators who were stung by the lobby group's successful efforts during the 1975 session "We're going to get VPIRG out of there," said Representative Stuart Rouse, D-Hartford.

Part of the reason for the anti-VPIRG sentiment by the conservatives was the passage of a bill that would require legislative approval before any new nuclear power plants can by built in Vermont. Also many of the conservatives are irked by a scoresheet that the group printed and distributed throughout the state. The VPIRG "Roll Call Report" examines 15 important votes in each house of the General Assembly. Part of the report averaged the voting percentages of each legislator on how they voted for or against the VPIRG position.

UVM represents the largest single source of VPIRG's funding. The legislators who oppose VPIRG hope to pressure the University's administration to change the present funding arrangement with the lobby group. By cutting off the bulk of VPIRG's funds, they hope to cut down the group's activities and destroy the effectiveness of the lobbying organization.

At present, VPIRG is funded by the addition of a VPIRG fee on the student's bill. The college acts as a collecting agent for the three dollar ($3.00) per semester fee. Unlike most student fees, however, the student does not have to pay the fee. The lobby group also offers a week long refund period for those students who paid the fee but want their money back.

Acting UVM President Wayne Patterson said that he personally favors a new referendum on the VPIRG fund agreement. Patterson believes that win or lose for VPIRG, such a vote would

(continued on page eleven)

Trustees Report Deficit

by MARGO HOWLAND
Reprinted from Summer Cynic

The University of Vermont Board of Trustees approved a $58 million-dollar budget containing a deficit of $244,000 for the fiscal 1976 year, at their June 6-7 meeting.

"This is as tight as we can get; it's basically a fairly good budget at this point," Executive Vice President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson told the Board.

Patterson, who became Interim President June 23, was warned by the Board that any further budget cuts would be unacceptable. Trustee Luther F. Hackett asked for, and received, a board concensus that the Administration be directed to adopt balanced budgets.

"Our concern now is with the future. It should be understood that we will not operate with deficits in the future. We could not," Hackett emphasized.

The University's red-ink budget is an embarrassing contrast to the $9.59 million-dollar balanced budget of the Vermont State Colleges, adopted the same weekend. The comparison has been likened to two families discussing transportation problems: One family is trying to find the money to trade in both cars; the other is trying to decide whether to take the bus or save money and walk.

The deficit figure of $244,000 is significantly lower than the $683,000 projected deficit the trustees were talking about in March. That figure took into account tuition increases of 20 percent in-state and 17 percent out-of-state students, effective in fiscal year 1976, and a tuition differential of $5000 for the College of Medicine.

By April, the Financial Planning Committee, headed by Hackett, was recommending to the Board adoption of a budget deficit "not to exceed $700,000" but indicated that increased appropriations and careful trimming of administrative costs could lower that figure considerably. The University has also dipped into some reserve funds in their efforts to shrink the deficit.

A slight, inadvertant

(continued on page eleven)

GRAND RE-OPENING

Shepard's Pie (now in the sky!)

our quaint upstairs shop featuring current wanted items at surplus prices!

Cotton TURTLENECKS $4.49 17 colors

V-neck or Crew SHETLAND SWEATERS $9.99 and $10.49

REGISTER FOR FREE GENUINE ARMY SLEEPING BAG!

See our other army items such as: Peacoats, N-1 jackets, Bomber jackets, Fatique pants, Field jackets, Mussette bags, Parkas, Chino shirts, Chino slacks, Work gloves, Knapsacks, Work shoes.

LEE WORKCLOTHES and JEANS from $10.97

FLANNEL SHIRTS from $4.79

Low Prices on HANES UNDERWEAR

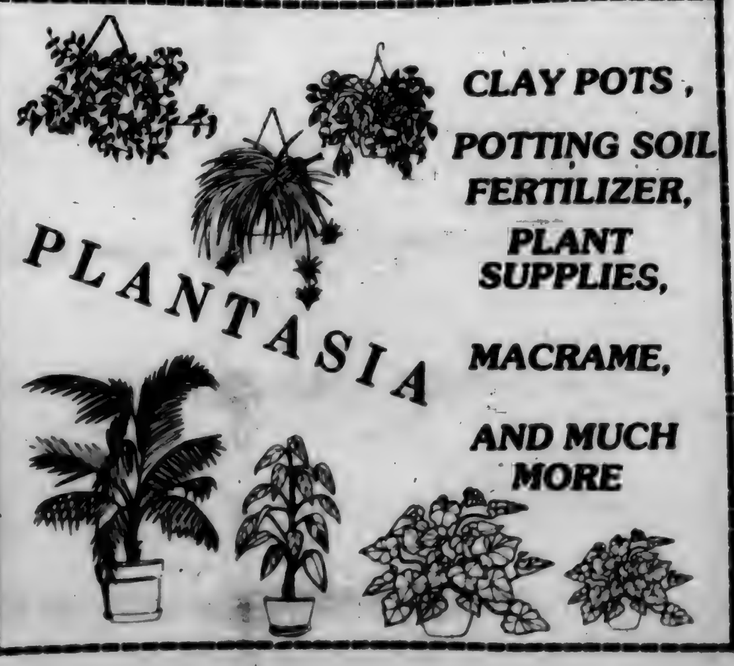
WASHINGTON WORKCLOTHES and JEANS from $7.49

CLOSEOUT ITEMS from Shepard & Hamelle

QUANTITY DISCOUNTS FOR BUSINESSES ON SHOP CLOTHING WORK CLOTHING • UNIFORMS, etc.

SHEPARDS PIE IN THE SKY

"Upstairs Over Shepard & Hamelle"



VPIRG Referendum

The Board of Trustees of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) has called for a campus referendum on the question of student support for the student-run consumer lobby. According to VPIRG Director Whitey Bluestein, the referendum would either reaffirm or end the lobby group's mandate at UVM.

VPIRG was founded in the fall of 1971 by a group of students who petitioned the College's Board of Trustees to allow the University bursar to act as a collecting agent for the organization's funds.

The college administration is also under pressure from a number of conservative legislators who were stung by the lobby group's successful efforts during the 1975 session "We're going to get VPIRG out of there," said Representative Stuart Rouse, D-Hartford.

Part of the reason for the anti-VPIRG sentiment by the conservatives was the passage of a bill that would require legislative approval before any new nuclear power plants can be built in Vermont. Also many of the conservatives are irked by a scoresheet that the group printed and distributed throughout the state. The VPIRG "Roll Call Report" examines 15 important votes in each house of the General Assembly. Part of the report averaged the voting percentages of each legislator on how they voted for or against the VPIRG position.

UVM represents the largest single source of VPIRG's funding. The legislators who oppose VPIRG hope to pressure the University's administration to change the present funding arrangement with the lobby group. By cutting off the bulk of VPIRG's funds, they hope to cut down the group's activities and destroy the effectiveness of the lobbying organization.

At present, VPIRG is funded by the addition of a VPIRG fee on the student's bill. The college acts as a collecting agent for the three dollar ($3.00) per semester fee. Unlike most student fees, however, the student does not have to pay the fee. The lobby group also offers a week long refund period for those students who paid the fee but want their money back.

Acting UVM President Wayne Patterson said that he personally favors a new referendum on the VPIRG fund agreement. Patterson believes that win or loss for VPIRG, such a vote would clear the air over the controversy. He also said that there will be a discussion of the VPIRG question during next October's Trustees' meeting.

During the first three years of existence VPIRG has, in addition to successfully lobbying for the nuclear power bill, issued a report that led to the passage of an important new law which opened up dental care to many low and middle income Vermonters. VPIRG has also issued reports on small claims court, sex discrimination, Vermont's Consumer Fraud Division, highway planning and other issues of public concern.

Be Kind To Your Grass

by BRUCE K. HOLMQUIST

One of the more basic complaints lodged by the youth movements of the 60's against the "establishment's" mentality is their lack of concern for things of aesthetic value. Indeed you could call this attitude a modern display of Romanticism. Some of the more obvious manifestations of this aesthetic orientation were seen in strengthened concerns for our environment (both in terms of its functioning "properly", and in its appearance) such as the natural foods movement, and the idealized return to an aesthetic, communal, and perhaps self-sufficient, existence. So compelling was this new orientation that the champions of man's psychological manipulation – the advertising world – showed a marked change in the way they made a fetish of their products. Everything conceivable became imbued with a new and remarkable quality, it became "natural." No longer was it just a tampon, it made you feel "natural," too. Salem gave you a fresh, "natural" taste. And who can forget that astonishing accomplishment, Quaker's 100 per cent Natural Cereal?

Within our own generation the label 'unnatural' or 'man-made' became the equivalent of 'communist' to those of the 50's. The city became a dreadful place because it was now an "unnatural environment." Conventional housing, pre-fabs and trailers all suffered the blows of ignominy. The log cabin was glorified (I mean after all it had been alive before they chopped the trees down, stripped the bark off them, then stacked them into a "natural" square structure). Previously neutral words took on additional connotations. 'Big business,' 'bureaucracy', 'consumerism', 'preservatives', 'highways', 'power plant', 'Gallo wine', 'TV dinner', 'McDonald's', 'trailer park', 'General Motors', all became symbols of the enemy.

One word is particularly distasteful to many people.

Note for yourselves, dear readers, your immediate reaction to this word, 'Cement'. Yes cement. That ghastly man-made, unnatural construction, that insidious thickly spread disease. Cement. Go ahead. Say to yourself "Cement is beautiful", and mean it. Fat chance, huh?

I have inherited this love of nature. Particularly pleasing to me is grass (of all types but, in this case, that which gets mowed). I like to walk on grass. I like to lie on grass. I like to...ahem; well, you understand. No sense in enjoying it by yourself now, huh?

Some people must not like it though, or so their behavior would seem to indicate. Some people must like cement. Because cement is what you get when you walk on a path so long that the grass is worn permanently away, year after year. We may be luckier though, we may only get gravel.

The pattern is simple. Student "X" wants to go to building "B" from building "A". Student "X" leaves building "A" and walks directly to building "B". There is no cement from "A" to "B". Soon, however, there is a path. Later there is a big path. Finally it grows to the perfect size and, zap, cement gets laid; and grass, poor thing, can only watch.

Anyone who has walked this campus much will notice a rich web of cement walk-ways. They weren't always there, at least to the degree that they are now. More are on the way, though, because the students fail to take note of the long term effect they and others are having on the ground they walk on.

At present there are lots of paths and worn spots around the campus. There is a tidy path from the fountain to Billings. There is a not-so-tidy area cleared in front of the book store, with paths joining the walkways around it. There are so many buildings in front of the library that they might just as well cement the whole thing now. Just last year a gravel path was added between Cook and William Science, along with grass which was transplanted there to conquer the dialectics of students and spring mud. A large area has been worn going around the corner from the theater to the book store, and going from the rear of Billings around the corner to the front of Ira Allen Chapel. Such a large area was cleared going around the corner of William Science to Lafayette that huge wooden rails have been used in front of Waterman where one would have to crush a flower bed to cut the corner.

All of this is very, excuse the pun, pathetic. Just about every conceivable short cut between two points on campus is now either cement or dirt. Well, enough said. The next time you walk across campus think a bit about where you are placing your feet. Take a few extra steps and walk on the cement walks. If you want to walk on the grass, please do. Just don't walk where everyone else does. To see a foot widepath rifled down the middle of a 400 yard wide green speaks ill of those who despise thoughtless conformity. If you like your grass, treat it kindly. Two inch deep cement makes mighty poor mulch. And it decomposes very, very slowly.

Discover The "Only Alley"

Burlington's Only Alley.

Lawson Lane, known as Burlington's "Only Alley," will again be transformed into a pedestrian mall on Saturday, September 13. From 11 until dusk the merchants of the Alley will be doing business in a carnival atmosphere of gaily colored banners, outdoor cafes, open air stalls and strolling musicians. Plants, vegetables, flowers, pottery, antiques, white elephants, yarn goods, jewelry, local crafts and other merchandise will be featured. In addition to children's activities (including wood construction and wall painting), events will be scheduled throughout the day.

Lawson Lane can be entered from Lower College Street, Pine or St Paul Street, with its main entrance just opposite City Hall Park.

"These buildings are beautiful buildings," said Mrs. Russo who, with her husband was the first to begin revitalizing the Alley. After much exploring, digging and sandblasting of bricks beneath their dress making plant, Maternities, Andy and Ginny Russo finally opened the Rathskellar Restaurant in 1969. Since then interest in the Alley has been increasing steadily.

Last year an informal group, calling itself the Alley Association, was formed and consists of all those who work or live in the Alley. Whether for economic, historical or esthetic reasons, they all want to see Lawson Lane preserved and restored as an attractive passageway in Burlington.

The building which now houses Bennington Potters North was once the Wells and Richardson Co., a world famous wholesale drug business with branches in Montreal, London, and Sydney, Australia. The company manufactured paints, oils, varnishes, fluid extracts, brushes, proprietary medicines and chemicals. Perhaps best known were such popular items as Diamond Dyes, Lactated Food for babies, Paine's Celery Compound ("For Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Heart Disease, St. Vitus's Dance, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Hysteria, Epilepsy and all Diseases of the Nerves and Brain"), Improved Butter Color and Kidney-Wort.

The Wells and Richardson building was designed by a man from Barre named Fischer, who also designed the Ethan Allen Firehouse which has been restored and now houses the Church Street Center for Community Education, the Burlington Ecumenical Action Ministry and Senator Leahy's Vermont liason office.

Much of the energy and enthusiasm of the Alley Association is provided by Barbara and Henry Huston who have an industrial design studio in the Alley. They have witnessed urban decay in other cities and hope that by drawing attention to the Alley, residents will take more of an interest in their surroundings. Urban decay, Huston states, occurs when downtown areas are used for commercial purposes during the day and then vacated at night. "We feel that it's extremely important in view of the urban renewal and the urbanization of Burlington in the past few years. The existing inner city spaces should be preserved and utilized whenever possible so the flavor of Burlington can be maintained."

"It's really the people who make the architecture, not the architecture," adds Barbara Huston.

So come to downtown Burlington and "Discover" or "Rediscover the Alley" on Saturday, September 13.

. . . Trustees Report On Budget

(continued from page ten)

changes in the "mix" of in-state and out-of- state students and an increase of about 50 more students has also bolstered the University revenues.

Director Richard Steele announced earlier this year that the University would have about 100 more out-of-state students and 100 fewer Vermont students than expected. There was, however, an increase in the Vermont transfer students.

The adoption of the budget ended a long year of financial woes, culminating in the adoption of what is believed to be the University's first-time-ever deficit.

The most serious blow came when Governor Thomas P. Salmon impounded $300,000 from appropriated funds, resulting in a potential $4 million dollar problem.

After embarking on a program of severe budget cutbacks, including the elimination of some 63 faculty positions, and shortchanging some academic graduate and undergraduate programs, the University shortfall was cut to $1.3 million.

The University phased out the Experimental Program and ended the 76-year reign of football as a competitive, athletic varsity sport.

Attempts to eliminate the two-year nursing program were abandoned after state-wide protests.

Tuition increases, higher than originally planned, were scheduled for both in-state and out-of-state students. In-state tuition, stable for four years, rose from $950 to $1,100, while out-of-state costs rose from $2650 to $2930.

During the past six months, the Financial Planning Committee reviewed University policy on the in-state - out-of-state student ratio, admissions of "all qualified Vermonters," in-state and out-of-state tuition ratio, level enrollment, faculty tenure, and the University's "commitment to quality."

The effect of program cutbacks upon the academic quality of the University raised a great deal of concern among faculty and members of the Administration.

Further academic program cutbacks were ruled out, but indications from the State of no more than level funding in the years ahead prompted Vice President Patterson to say in exasperation, "If the State insists on funding us at a level it thinks it can afford, in about five years we're going to look like a fifth State College."

Patterson at one point broached the topic of reconsidering the University's position as an instrumentality of the state, and reverting to the private-school status UVM had until 1950. That proposal didn't get anywhere.

The University's financial worries are not exactly over. The states of Massachusetts, Maine, and Rhode Island have expressed their intent to drop out of a compact agreement with the University College of Medicine. Under the terms of the agreement, the University admits medical students from these three states and charges them in-state tuition. In addition, the three states pay a $5000 compact fee per student to the University.

Charged by the trustees to "recover the full costs of tuition" the University has been negotiating to raise the compact figure to $8,500. But at the Trustees' meeting, outgoing University President Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr. reported withdrawal symptoms from the three states.

The loss of the compacts would be a severe blow to the University and the Medical College. The state does not subsidize medical college tuition, and inflation has brought projected costs of a medical college education to $11,000 per year. (Tuition for Vermonters and compact students will be $1,600 next year.)

The compacts expired June 30, and Dr. William H. Luginbuhl, Dean of the Medical College, said that the University has informed the three states that they have terminated the compacts in their present form. This means that the states cannot send medical students to the University under the present compact arrangement of a $5000 fee. The compacts will extend for one year for Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and for two years for Maine, so the students will not be affected immediately.

Campus Wide Vote

(continued from page ten)

clear the air over the controversy. He also said that there will be a discussion of the VPIRG question during next October's Trustees' meeting.

During the first three years of existence VPIRG has, in addition to successfully lobbying for the nuclear power bill, issued a report that led to the passage of an important new law which opened up dental care to many low and middle income Vermonters. VPIRG has also issued reports on small claims court, sex discrimination, Vermont's Consumer Fraud Division, highway planning and other issues of public concern.

BRING THIS COUPON FOR one free hour
OF PADDLE TENNIS
up to 4 players - thru Sept. 20th.
TEL.: 863-4278 to Reserve Court
paddles & balls available
PADDLE TENNIS CLUB—next to Cross Court
Behind the Olde Board Restaurant & Grandway.
RT. 7 SHELBURNE RD.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
SPECIALIST IN FOREIGN CAR REPAIR
ENGINE REBUILDING · TIRES · STEAM CLEANING · UNDERCOATING · ALIGNMENT · SPIN BALANCING
FUEL INJECTION ANALIZER
WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
862-7686
878-8607
ROUTE 2 WILLISTON, VT.
DAMAGE FREE WRECKER SERVICE

The All American Hero
163 Main St.
SPECIAL NIGHTS
25 ¢ off all subs with an ID
MON—UVM
TUES—CHAMPLAIN, TRINITY
WED—ST MIKES
FREE DELIVERY $3.00 minimum order
SUNDAY-THURSDAY 8pm-1am

FALL SUPER SALE
September 10, 11, 12, 13
DAKIN'S MOUNTAIN SHOP
227 Main Street Burlington

	DOWN JACKETS	Reg.	Dakins
10	North Face Sierra [1974]	53.50	32.95
15	Ascente Eis Parka [1974]	53.50	32.95
33	Overland Parka	49.95	32.95
52	Snow Lion Greatcoat [1974]	59.00	42.95
13	Snow Lion Expedition	75.00	54.95
20	Tuolumne Sweaters	32.50	23.95
13	C7 Pamir Parka	75.00	57.50
3	C7 Cascade II [2nds]	60.00	49.95
	MISC. JACKETS
26	Snow Lion Polarguard ['74]	59.95	29.95
8	Woolrich 60-40	39.95	35.95
12	Trails West 60-40	35.25	30.95
	Misc. Rain Gear	25% off
	SLEEPING BAGS
15	Snow Lion Polarguard [2nds]	56.00	39.95
22	Snow Lion Super [2nds]	60.00	42.95
6	Overbag 10	67.00	43.95
6	Snow Lion Northstar [1974]	103.00	68.50
1	C7 Camp 7 Reg. [2nd]	117.50	94.00
2	C7 High Camp Lg. [2nd]	142.50	112.50
1	C7 North Col Reg. [2nd]	107.00	82.50
1	North Col Lg. [2nd]	114.50	85.95
3	C7 High Country Reg. [2nd]	84.50	67.50
3	Trails West Bag	75.00	55.00

	CLOTHING	Reg.	Dakins
10	XS C7 Vest [2nds]	27.50	20.50
16	C7 Vest II 60-40 [2nds]	32.50	24.50
60	Long Sleeve Rugby shirts	20.95	16.95
20	Woolrich "Safari" shirt	10.75	8.50
32pr	Sherts	20% off
	MISCELLANEOUS
	Edelweiss Climbing Ropes	15% off
	Freeze Dried Food	10% off
2	Rivendale Packs	45.00	34.95
1	Jansport Scout I	58.00	46.95
	BOOTS & SNEAKERS
28	Fabiano Ria	41.95	33.95
22	Vasque 7584	38.50	28.87
7	Nike "Bruin"	23.00	17.95
8	Nike Senorita Cortez	22.75	17.95
6	Lowa Alpspitz	75.00	49.95
	SNOW SHOES
10pr	Tubbs Green Mt. Bearpaw	73.25	58.95

Open: 9:00 am - 9:00 pm Phone: 864-4122

Proposed Student Association Constitution

PREAMBLE

The undergraduate students of the University of Vermont do hereby establish this association in order to contribute to the cultural, social, educational and recreational welfare of the membership and to represent the collective interests of that membership to the faculty, administration and Board of Trustees of the University.

ARTICLE I
GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 1
The name of this organization shall be the Student Association of the University of Vermont, herein-after known as the S.A.

Section 2
Definition of membership:
A. All undergraduate degree students of UVM shall be members of the S.A.
B. Graduate, Medical, non-degree, part-time or other students of the University may join S.A. through compliance with subsection C of this section.
C. All members shall pay the Student Activity Fee, which is collected semi-annually by the University and budgeted by the S.A.
D. Only full time undergraduate degree students are eligible to hold Student Association Office.

ARTICLE II
THE EXECUTIVE

Section 1
The President:
A. Shall be a member of the Association, eligible under university policy for participation in student activities and duly elected by the membership.
B. Shall act as the chief executive officer of the S.A.
C. Shall chair meetings of the General Assembly and of the Senate.
D. Shall Chair the executive Committee.
E. Shall appoint the Treasurer.
F. May appoint assistants and aides.
G. May veto such action of the Senate, its committees, or the General Assembly.
H. Shall be an ex-officio member of all S.A. organizations.
I. Shall be a non voting member of each senate committee.

Section 2
The Vice-President:
A. Shall act as President in the President's absence.
B. Shall chair the Student Action Committee.
C. Shall act as an assistant to the President.

Section 3
The Treasurer:
A. Shall be appointed by the President with the consent of the senate.
B. Shall be responsible for the financial affairs of the S.A.
C. Shall chair the Finance Committee.

ARTICLE III
THE LEGISLATURE

Section 1
The Legislative power of the S.A. shall be vested in the General Assembly, the Senate and the committees thereof.

Section 2
The General Assembly:
A. All members of the association shall be members of the General Assembly.
B. Shall have the authority to accept or reject such bills, rules and resolutions necessary to achieve the purposes of the S.A. as defined by the preamble or elsewhere in this constitution.
C. Shall have the sole authority to enact an annual budget for the association.
D. Bills, rules, and resolutions shall be passed when recommended by a standing or ad-hoc committee of S.A. or its senate and approved by a simple majority vote of the members present at a meeting of the General Assembly. Approval by a two-thirds vote of the members present at a meeting of the General Assembly shall constitute passage without recommendation.
E. Shall meet on the call of the President or the executive committee, but in any case, not less than three times each semester.
F. Notice of all meetings of the General Assembly shall be publicly posted by the authority issuing the call for the meeting, not less than 48 hours in advance.

Section 3
The Senate
A. Except where otherwise specifically prohibited, shall have the authority to act for the General Assembly on "pressing" matters which cannot wait the next General Assembly Meeting.
B. Shall be composed of 37 members, who shall be elected from three categories: members living in university dormitories, including married student housing; members living in fraternities and sororities; and members living in non-university connected housing.
C. Each election category must have a minimum of five representatives to the senate. With due consideration given this, all other representation shall be directly proportional to the percentage of total membership residing in that category.
D. No person shall act as a senator who is not a member of the S.A., eligible for participation in Student Activities under University Policy and a resident of the election category he or she represents.
E. The Senate shall meet on the call of the President.
F. The Senate shall have the sole authority by a simple majority of the members present to overrule the veto of the S.A. President.
G. The Senate shall have six standing committees. Senators shall be assigned to these committees by the President, with due regard to their own preferences, except that at least one senator from each election category shall serve each committee (excluding the executive committee) The committees shall be:
1. The Finance Committee, which shall:
   a. Consist of the Treasurer and six senators.
   b. Prepare and submit to the General Assembly an annual budget.
   c. Consider and make recommendations to the General Assembly and the senate on all proposed expenditures of S.A. funds on or before April 30.
   d. Consider other matters concerned with S.A. financial affairs.
   e. Monitor and regulate financial policies of all S.A. organizations.
2. The Student Activities Committee, which shall:
   a. Consist of five members.
   b. Consider all requests for S.A. recognition.
   c. Revoke recognition of organizations not in compliance with the requirements of Article V.
   d. Consider other matters concerned with Student Activities.
   e. Consider and make recommendations to the Finance Committee on eligibility for funding.
3. The Special Affairs Committee, which shall:
   a. Consist of nine members.
   b. Consider and make recommendations to the S.A. and Senate on all proposed amendments to this constitution.
   c. Oversee the operation of Presidential and other special elections or referendums.
   d. Consider other matters related to the internal affairs of the S.A.
   e. Organize the Student Activities Coordinating Council to deal with special events.
4. The Communciations Committee, which shall:
   a. Consist of seven senators.
   b. Seek and receive the complaints and suggestions of the membership and bring them to the attention of the proper Senate Committee or other authority.
   c. Act to insure that the membership is informed of the activities of the S.A.
   d. Consider other related matters.
   e. Coordinate all Student Association publicity.
5. The Student Action Committee, which shall:
   a. Consist of the Vice-President and ten senators.
   b. Consider matters concerning students, and student interests, on the state, local, federal, and university levels; and recommend resolutions and actions to the Senate and General Assembly.
   c. Consider and make recommendations on other matters concerning the collective interests of the membership.
6. The Executive Committee, which shall:
   a. Consist of the President and the Chairpersons of the other committees.
   b. Prepare the agenda of meetings of the Senate and General Assembly.
   c. Consider and make recommendations on the rules of procedure of the Senate and the General Assembly.
   d. Direct proposed bills, rules and resolutions to the appropriate committees for consideration.
   e. May establish, for a specific term, such ad-hoc committees as it deems necessary.

ARTICLE IV
ELECTIONS

Section 1
Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections:
A. Rules of procedure for the conduct of S.A. Presidential and Vice-Presidential elections shall be promulgated and published by the Special Events Committee, with the consent of the General Assembly not later than February 20th of each year.
B. The election shall be held no later than April 1 and no earlier than March 1.
C. Votes cast in the election shall be canvassed and the winner certified by the Special Events Committee.
D. The Vice-President and President shall take office on the last day of the academic year.

Section 2
Senatorial Elections
A. Rules of procedure for the conduct of S.A. Senatorial elections shall be promulgated and published under the authority of the President no later than September 10th of each year.
B. The election shall be held no later than October 15 and no earlier than September 20.
C. The votes shall be canvassed and winners certified under the authority of the S.A. President, except that his decision may be appealed to the General Assembly.

ARTICLE V
STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

Section 1
Student Organizations are those groups that the S.A. has granted the authority to:
A. Enroll UVM students and associates as members.
B. Use the name "University of Vermont."
C. Become eligible for funding upon recommendation of the Student Activities Committee.
D. Use space in University Buildings and on University grounds.
E. Place notices on University bulletin boards.

Section 2
In order to be eligible for recognition a group shall:
A. Contribute to the cultural, social, educational or recreational welfare of its membership and support the purposes of the S.A.
B. Enroll only students and associates of the University of Vermont as members.
C. Exercise direction and control over its programming.
D. Select a full time instructional or administrative officer of the University as its advisor.
E. Fulfill reasonable administrative and informative responsibilities imposed by the S.A.
F. Provide an inventory of all equipment acquired with S.A. funds by April 30 of each year. This information shall be kept up to date and subject to verification by the Finance Committee.
G. Provide the Finance Committee with information concerning all financial policies in writing upon request.

Section 3
In order to apply for recognition, a group must submit to the Student Activities Committee a statement of purpose and comply with reasonable requests for other information.

Section 4
The committee shall evaluate this information and if it determines the group is in compliance with the requirements outlined in Section 2 of this article, it will grant recognition and inform the Senate and General Assembly of its action.

Section 5
In cases where the committee does not grant recognition, it shall inform the Senate or General Assembly of its action.

Section 6
The student Activities Committee shall anrually review all Student Organizations for compliance with Section 2 of this article, and with other relevant rules and regulations imposed by the S.A. Where the committee finds that an organization is not in compliance, it shall recind recognition and inform the G.A. and Senate of its action.

(continued on page thirteen)

If you think there's a cassette or cartridge that's better than ours, we'll buy it for you.

Just try a new Columbia tape. If you still like your old tape better, return the Columbia tape to us, and we'll send you the one you prefer. Free.

Our problem
Most people who buy recording tapes are pretty happy with what they're using. So it's hard for someone with a new tape—even someone with all the experience in music and electronics that Columbia has—to get people to try it. Regular advertising just won't work.

We realized we'd have to come up with a really unusual introductory offer. To really challenge people to try our new FAIL-SAFE cassettes and cartridges. To see that they really are better than other tapes.

Our offer
1. Buy a new Columbia cassette or cartridge in any length you like.
2. Try it out. Record on it. Compare it to the tape you've been using. TDK. Memorex. Scotch. Any iron oxide tape.
3. If you're happy with Columbia, fine. You've bought yourself a great new tape. And we hope you'll keep buying Columbia.
4. But, if for any reason you're not satisfied with the Columbia tape, send it back to us. With your receipt, no more than 30 days after you bought it, and include a label from the tape you prefer. Your only cost is 50¢ for postage and handling.
5. We'll send you the tape you prefer. In the same length as the Columbia tape you returned.

Our experience
We don't think we're taking much of a chance with this offer. And we don't think we'll be sending out many TDKs, Memorexes, or Scotches. Because while you may have never seen one of our blank tapes before, we're not exactly newcomers to the recording business.

We've made hundreds of millions of pre-recorded tapes over the years. For our own record label, and even for a lot of our competitors. And through that experience we learned a lot about sound quality and product reliability that helped us develop the best blank tape for home recording. With more highs and lows. Without fuzzing or blurring the sounds. Without jamming in any kind of tape deck in any kind of weather. And with unique features that make recording a pleasure. Like our ConvertaQuad cartridge that works automatically on stereo or 4-channel. And extra adhesive labels to retitle your tapes when you re-record.

Our challenge
If you think there's a tape that's better than ours, it's because you just haven't tried ours. Columbia Magnetics, CBS, Inc., 51 W. 52nd St., N.Y. 10019.

We want to change your mind

BURLINGTON AREA AVAILABLE AT

CREATIVE SOUND
NEXT TO K-MART • S. BURLINGTON, VT.

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
157 Pearl St., Essex Jct.

BURLINGTON PLACE
The Mall
4 Great Shops In One Convenient Location . . .

Smoke Stack
Very low prices on cigarettes. Plus all smoking supplies and accessories!

Ziggy's
Vermont's most complete head shop! Featuring glass, Leather Goods, Jewelry and Candles, Clothing, Gifts.

Fun Land Arcade
Pinball, and all other Arcade Games. Visit Vermont's newest and most complete fun and games place!

Burlington Shoe Repair
Complete shoe repair shop — We fix them fast, and the prices right. We don't charge you an arm and a leg.

THE SUPER STORE

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

. . . S. A. Proposed Constitution

(continued from page twelve)

ARTICLE VI
PETITION, IMPEACHMENT, AND RESIGNATION

Section 1

A formal petition, clearly stating its intended action, and endorsed by at least 5% of the membership shall, when submitted to the President, have the authority to cause any or all of the following:

A. Call a special meeting of the General Assembly on a date specified, but not sooner than five days from the date of submission.

B. Add a specific item to the agenda of a G.A. Meeting.

C. Order reconsideration of an action taken at the most recent General Assembly meeting at the next meeting of that body.

Section 2

Motions to impeach the President or any other officer or senator may be brought in the General Assembly on the grounds of incompetence, ineligibility, dishonesty or action in violation of this Constitution. Such a motion shall be automatically referred to the Special Affairs Committee. This committee will investigate such charges, and a recommendation by this committee that the officer be removed shall constitute impeachment. A two-thirds vote of the General Assembly and the Senate shall be required for conviction and shall cause immediate removal from office.

Section 3

Resignation

A. Executive officers may resign by submitting a written statement of that intent to the President, or in the case of a presidential resignation, to the Vice-President. The officer receiving such a statement shall declare the office vacant and begin procedures to fill the vacancy.

B. Senators may likewise resign by submitting a statement of intent to the President, except that: the Executive Committee may declare a senator's seat vacant if a senator has been absent from 4 senate or committee meetings in any one semester without the permission of the President and committee chairperson respectively. Whenever such action is contemplated, the senator involved must be given an opportunity to explain his/her action. A declaration of vacancy by the Executive Committee may be appealed to the Senate.

ARTICLE VII AMENDMENTS

Section 1

Amendments to or dissolution of this Constitution must be approved by a two-thirds vote of the General Assembly and ratified by a two-thirds vote of the membership in a referendum, participated in by not less than 10% of the membership.

Section 2

Such amendments shall be effective upon approval by the University Trustees.

ARTICLE VIII
ADOPTION

Section 1

This constitution shall be adopted and effective when:

A. Approved by two-thirds vote of the membership in a referendum participated in by not less than 10% of the membership.

B. Approved by the University Trustees.

ARTICLE IX
SCOPE

Section 1

This constitution shall take precedence over all other instruments for the government of the membership or any part thereof.

ARTICLE X
TEMPORARY PROVISION

Section 1

The existing officers of the S.A. shall continue in office until the selection of their successors in accordance with this constitution.

Section 2

For the year 1975-1976, each election category shall be represented by the numbers of senators hereby allocated, Article II, Section 3, Subsection A, notwithstanding:

18 senators shall represent on-campus students.
5 senators shall represent students living in Fraternities and Sororities.
14 Senators shall represent students living in non-University connected housing.

ON THE HEIGHT

The wild god of the canon
  Has left his cave to-night,
And he summons a companion
  To join him on the height.
So the storm-winds raise a wild, wild tune
  And sweep the mountain line
Against the face of the pale, pale moon,
  Rocks the dark mountain pine.

It rocks and moans in the wind-drifts
  As a witch rocks in her pain;
And the water raves at the lea cliffs
  As a maniac at his chain.
And the wild god sings with a strong, wild art,
  And tunes the pine and flood;
"Ho! strange man – child with strong, wild heart Come, we are one in blood."

Williams Lit.
'02 – '04 Cynic

THE SONNET

As fragile as the Taj this palace stands,
  Perfect in form and plan, each minaret
  Aforetime carved in ala aster, set
In later days with gems by regal hands;
Kings of the world of mind, from foreign strands
  Returning, bided here and paid a debt
  For entertainment meet: gleams fairy fret,
Gleams filagree with jewels from those far lands.

And it is mine if I will enter it;
  Before its carven doors I stand afraid,
  Ashamed to bring my homely neements there;
The robes I wove in desert tent are fit
  For no such court – kind gem, lend me aid –
  The mirrors mock my entrance – yet I dare.

–STANFORD SEQUOIA

THE SPIRIT OF NIGHT

The myriad stars and the white moon quake
In the restless mirror of the lake,
  The shore hills rise
  Like ink on the skies,
The ripples kiss the rock where they break.

A night gust mourns where the pines stand thinned
On the hill like sentinels disciplined –
  Each shock of grain
  Like a weather vane
Lends with its shadow along the wind.

Now weirdly wings the spirit of night
Past the flickering flame of the village light,
  Like the dusk-winged owl,
  Over marshes to prowl,
And flit through the limbs with a crooked flight.

The night-hawk knows that he's coming soon –
But he'll cast no shadow across the moon;
  His flight through the tree
  Any wind might be –
He laughs in that lingering bark of the coon.

Those murky wings fan Reason away
And Fancy and Song in the wind array,
  There's a world unreal
  He never may feel
Who knows but the glare and the din of day.

–WILLIAMS LITERARY MONTHLY

welcome freshmen!

Gigantic Pre-Season

SKI SALE

Last Season's Skis — Up To 50% OFF
by Rossignol, K2, Olin, Dynamic, Head, Volkl, Kneissel, Northland, Yamaha.

Last Season's Ski Boots — Up To 60% OFF
by Nordica, Hanson, Dolomite, Caber, Technica, Lange, K2, Henke, Humanic, Koflach, Rieker.

Used Skis — 91 Pair — $5 up

Used Boots — 65 Pair — $8 up

Professional Wet Belt Ski Tune Up — $7.95
Includes edge sharpening, bottom grinding, hot waxing, edge deburring, binding lubrication, etc.

Good Assortment Ski Parkas — Up To 50% OFF
Men's, Ladies', Children's

ALPINE SHOP
Williston Road, So. Burlington — Open Daily 9 A.M. to 9 P.M.

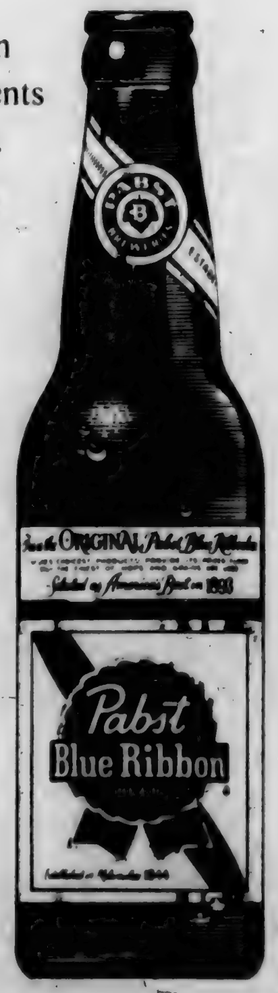
For over 130 years we've been using the word "quality" in our advertising. Once again, we'd like to tell you what we mean by it.

Our brewery in 1844.

Blue Ribbon quality means the best tasting beer you can get. A quality achieved only by using the finest ingredients and by adhering to the most rigid of brewing standards.

In Milwaukee, the beer capital of the world, Pabst Blue Ribbon continues to be the overwhelming best seller year after year. Blue Ribbon outsells its nearest competitor nearly five to one. That's why we feel we've earned the right to challenge any beer.

So here's the Pabst challenge: Taste and compare the flavor of Blue Ribbon with the beer you're drinking and learn what Pabst quality in beer is all about. But don't take our word for it. Taste our word for it.



Pabst. Since 1844.
The quality has always come through.

PABST BREWING COMPANY MILWAUKEE WIS PEORIA HEIGHTS ILL NEWARK N J LOS ANGELES CAL PABST GA

The Horse's Mouth :

by HO VIET MY

PART I — CHRISTMAS EVE IN SAIGON

Honestly, I can't think of any worse way to spend Christmas than to be broke, unemployed and living in Saigon... sure is different from last Christmas up in Cheo Reo (*1) with the Montagnards' (*2) But there have been a lot of changes since that time — hell, that was before the peacefire was signed; there was still a lot of GI's around back then, and those USAID (*3) fellows had the champagne and strawberries and steak flown in on the mail plane — it came daily in those days out of Ban Me Thuot (*4) ... 'Made a fine Christmas breakfast, they did. But now, Saigon here, it was getting to be a fine city for a while there, but now since Charlie (*5) is calling the shots, it's growing into a rough town.

The worst of both worlds: that's what it's getting to be like here in more ways than one. Take a fistful of lack-luster Western one-up-manship, slick it into a threadbare, silky Oriental glove and you've got the nature of government in Saigon. Like the talons of some gigantic vulture, the city's arteries grope out into the countryside, trying to hang on, trying to continue to feed off the villages... The villages have learned to need the benefits of developments in communication, education and market economies... people will fight to keep the highways open, to keep the food flowing into the city, to keep the money flowing in and out of the city, to keep Americans and other foreigners in the country by keeping it a safe place for democracy and the Post Exchange (*6) to operate.

It just isn't possible how this place keeps up with itself: sometimes it seems to be literally running on no gas at all. Over here the energy shortage has real crisis dimensions — especially when you have learned to believe that the bogeyman who will-come out when the lights start dimming are the Cong! I don't know how it is where you are, but it is rather awesome in Saigon after curfew — now back to 9 p.m. — when the lights go out. Like those frozen nervous moments after the snuffing of candles on some huge birthday cake, evenings here are times of hysterical canned laughter. One is tempted to see Charlie lurking in every sidewalk hammock, instead of the usual melancholy ARVN (*7) soldier piping on his reed flute...

It's as if all the electricity, all the air conditioners, all the refrigerators, TV's, Cadillacs and glowing lights of Christmases' past were a symbol, a manifestation of our confidence in the war and the war effort... and now, with these things slowly stopping, with the energy literally running out as a car runs out of gas, with elevators and IBM machinery winding down as well as the war, people — Americans and Vietnamese — are having to read the writing on the wall. And it is so much clearer by the light of kerosene lamps than ever it was when neon was shining. There are oh so many bogeymen here...

Now during the day, even the Americans cannot run their offices and their people as they have been accustomed to; 9 to 5 days — which they had struggled long and hard to get the Vietnamese to adapt to — are no longer possible, and the Vietnamese go happily back to their 3-hour noontime siestas and their four traffic jams per day — four, because everyone now goes home for lunch and limps back by 3 p.m., instead of gulping American-style mess hall food in half-hour breaks. The IBM typewriters can't be run now — by order of the Prime Minister and nodding acknowledgement and encouragement (about all the support he can guarantee now is encouragement) from U.S. Ambassador Martin — and even American officials dare not defy this, this rare agreement of Vietnamese and American minds, and they are beginning to sweat — really sweat because the air conditioners can't run either. Americans are forced by the heat to close their offices early and can't open on Saturday mornings any more. The hectic pace, the Western pace, which in years past had sustained us (it reminded us of the Bronx, downtown Frisco, Chicago's Southside or wherever we remembered was home) has to slow down. All Embassy personnel and humanitarian AID-types, and missionaries trying to pretend they are CIA and know it all, have to take an extra day free for leisure — which they need like a hole in the head — free to have still more time to confront themselves with the pointless absurdity of even now running themselves ragged the rest of the week. They are all still on the American time-clock; they resist the Oriental clock with all their might, as they find comfort and refuse in this resistance; it shields them from culture-shock; as long as they keep time with the rest of their world (Bronx, Southside Chicago, Frisco), they are not really here and none of this is really happening. By keeping closed minds and hearts, they ignore the Vietnamese clock, the biological clock, the clock of the body, the clock of all time, the clock that knows no time... it is inefficient and slow, rarely punctual, never harried... It's a clock that runs on sunlight, a clock that tells you that the time to sleep is when you're tired, the time to eat is when you're hungry, the time to stop fighting is when you clearly stand to win more by losing...

In the village I lived by such a clock for almost a year. I knew it was time to get out of bed because I could hear squeals from the pigs the old man butcher was slaughtering in our backyard, could hear the pig blood spilling into huge cement basins, could hear the voices of the children running past, under my window on their way to school. The path to the school lay exactly 6 inches from the wall, just the other side of my mosquito net; the children were so close I could have reached out and touched them... I would hear my Vietnamese auntie as the padded into the room, feel her disapproval glare through my still-draped mosquito net... I would surely be late for market with the pork. It was time to get up...

In Saigon now it is getting worse than dull for the American population as the lights go out and the sun goes down on their sagging spirits... No longer are their days filled with water-skiing on the Saigon River — there is not enough fuel to run their motor launches. Their familiar and well-loved bars are no longer air-conditioned; because of the high taxes imposed on night clubs who have bands and dancing, many of these have been forced to close, so the Americans stay home.

GIMME SHELTER, a Vietnamese rock group, sold their electronic equipment on the black market to those gambling Indians down on Tu Do street last week and that's about it for the Vietnamese rock scene for a while. Jenny's Soul-Food place up near the airport is shut down — Jesus, that was a place where you could really eat — for cheap — and Jen cooked pretty good grits for a Vietnamese, you'd have to admit... Her old man, a black from Philly, done ten years in this place, packed up and flew the kids out to Laos, paid an Air America pilot a thousand bucks to get them out of the country without their visas... You can't get a pizza delivered from Sam's Place anymore; their phone's disconnected and their driver took off with the jeep. The movie theaters are closed, naturally, and night swims at the Embassy pool are temporarily discontinued... Sure is different from last year; I can still laugh, remembering that memo old Martin (*8) sent out when the cease fire was signed "FROM THIS DATE ONWARD NUDE SWIMMING WILL NOT BE PERMITTED ON U.S. INSTALLATIONS." The party is over...

The energy crisis is also affecting the Vietnamese (you can feel the despair in the streets!); morale goes on and off with the lights. The government now restricts usage of electricity during the day and permits it at night. At night people get more scared and need the lights to keep Charlie away. People in high rises stay home until dusk, rather than walk the 8 flights up and down during the day, and take the elevators out into the night... so at night there is a desperate gaiety... a plea for temporary insanity... people in their best clothes (the holiday cheer) laughing their way to parties and dinners, trying to avoid the hungry looks from impatient waiting cabbies... trying to walk past them, trying to avoid the temptation of getting a ride and paying 3 dollars in order not to show up in sweaty soiled clothes... trying to look proud while walking... The cabbies and cyclo drivers reach out, clutch sleeves, "Di

HARDSCRABBLE FARM

Boarding Training

Lessons Clinics

3 miles to U.V.M.

New barn and indoor arena under construction

Tel. 802-879-7892 Rte. 2 Williston, Vt.

The "Leather Look" for Fall by ARROW

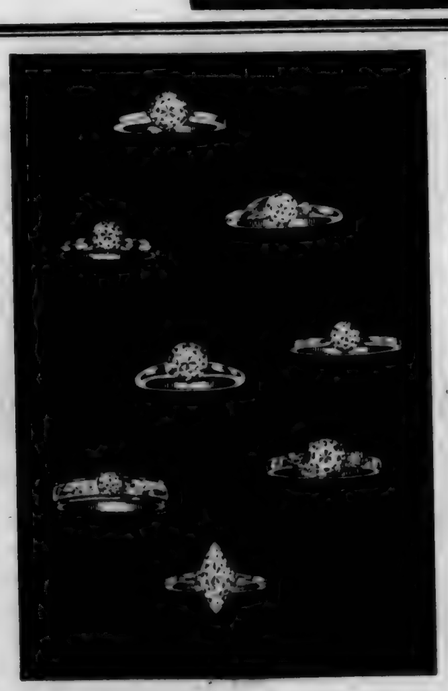
You can't tell it from the real thing. Soft and supple with a glove leather feel, it even wipes clean. This all-man, all-sport shirt jacket is made of long-lasting leather-like synthetic. Fully lined. Available in mallard blue or luggage tan.

S-M-L-XL. $25
Longs $30.

Nate's INC.
Vermont's Largest Men's Clothiers

Burlington
St. Albans • Montpelier • St. Johnsbury

WATCH FOR:
College Student Discount Night Wed., Sept. 17 - one night only



The Best Gift of All

A Diamond Engagement Ring

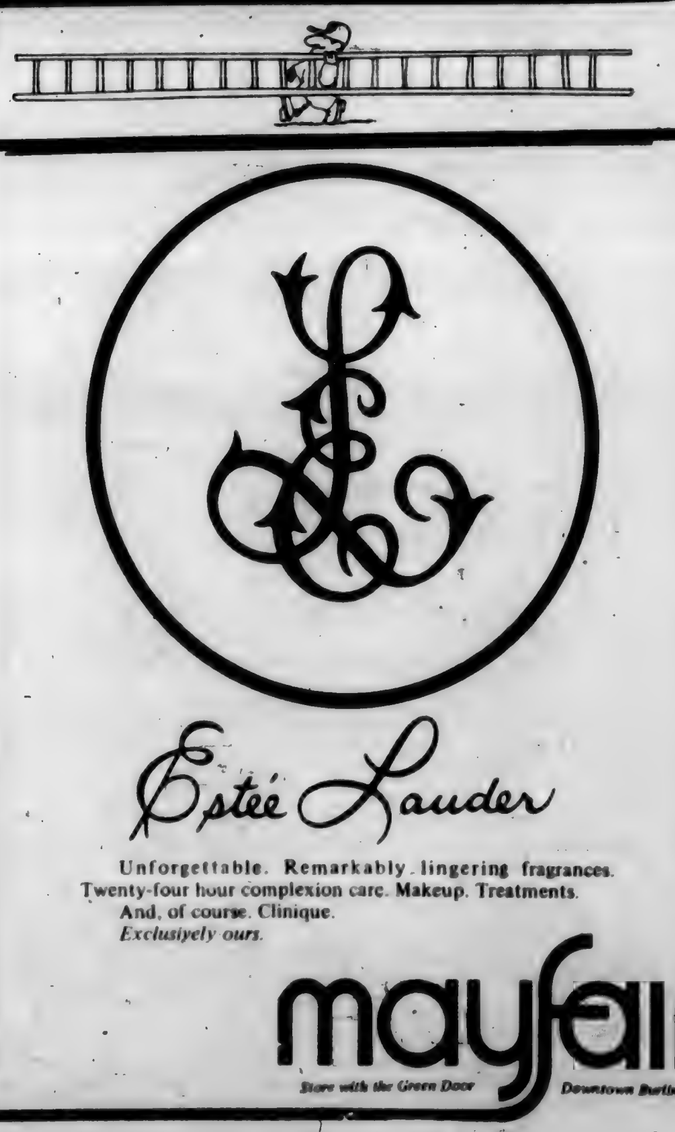
It's the one gift she'll never forget.
Prices start from under $100

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Prestons.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1864

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street

Member American Gem Society



Estée Lauder

Unforgettable. Remarkably lingering fragrances. Twenty-four hour complexion care. Makeup. Treatments. And, of course. Clinique.
Exclusively ours.

mayfair
Store with the Green Door
Downtown Burlington

Letters From Vietnam

[illegible] "Good" Si Quang" ("Go to get" MiE you girl), other servants [illegible] for Americans, for these Vietnamese, was afford. There is still a little furtive purchasing of luxury goods, imported French perfumes, diamonds and Swiss watches, by Paris-costumed upper-class women... School girls in snuggly [illegible] white flowing ao-dai (*6) still dashing in front of shops filled with expensive silks, embroidery and wood [illegible] designing Western wardrobes in their minds for Tet, the Vietnamese New Year, when everyone must have new clothes... Each of us seems to be clinging to our former dreams, as if they too were being released, along with the rice and gasoline and passports.

When the generator pumps get going and the electricity shoots up and the lights turn on then, the Paris of the Orient, set off [illegible] temporarily a little more secure from its own fantastic underground, underclassed, universal, ever-chill, man-over-nature world back for an instant, for an hour, for a dizzying evening... The power, it's like a Peter Pan came from that Never-Never-Land of the Big PX crash the waters... When the electricity and the lights come back on at night, elevators go up and down, [illegible] fans, [illegible] ring, armed Forces Radio once again lights with the cacophony of [illegible]

Vietnamese night voices for equal time and we have again that wall of illusion that the Americans are still here, believe in us and our machines! It is that, our power, our electrical, mechanical power, that protects us and differentiates us from them... and it's AC-DC... But in the mornings now we are pretty much naked, stripped of our power, our believers and our own self-confidence as we venture out cautiously into the streets, walking now where before we used to ride, walking together with the Vietnamese, together in these same streets that they are only slightly less lost in than ourselves.

I guess what with the energy shortage, the rest of the world is pretty much in the same boat, but it sure feels ignoble around here where we got so used to yesterday's [illegible] scenes are destroyed, the PX run out of Xmas tree lights... New Year's promises to be 1984, Brave New World, and the Apocalypse all at the same time, but there won't be hardly anyone left around to celebrate it, except the Vietnamese, who have nothing to divest to it. Gee to see American [illegible] and firms are pulling out, retrenching in Thailand or Taiwan or Formosa, depending upon the extent of their confidence in our system...

Regis
December 24, 1974

FOOTNOTES:

(*1) CHEO RED – provincial capital of Phu Bon Province, popularly known among GI's as "The Armpit of Vietnam" located in north-central South Vietnam. Most recently in the news as the site where a collapsed bridge halted the flow of refugees fleeing the North Vietnamese Army (NVA) towards the coast.

(*2) Montagnards – the highland tribal people of the Chaine Annamite, a mountain range stretching along the upper reaches of the Mekong, into North Vietnam. These people are racially, linguistically and culturally distinct from their sometimes warring compatriots, who until less than 100 years ago were principally confined to coastal and low-lying areas.

(*3) U.S.A.I.D. – United States Agency for International Development – members of this organization are the gamut from blue-eyed missionaries and doctors, determined to save the people from themselves, to special forces intelligence agents determined to save the "facts" from distortion, or worse. All were hindered by their objectives to 'relate' with the natives in local dialect, and their tactical/logistical abilities to have the beer and coke flown in on the chopper before last week's supply ran short.

(*4) Ban Me Thuot (BAN- ME - THUO (T)) traditional capital of central highlands, a former French administrative center now the most "sophisticated" cultural center for Montagnards.

(*5) Charlie – abbreviated form of Victor Charlie, adapted from RADIO CODE, more popularly known to non-military as the Viet-Cong, Vietnamese Communists. Such 'street 'appellations glaringly ignore the finer distinctions apparent on the every-day level, but were considered more economic and efficient.

(*6) most commonly known as the PX (PEE ECHS) – a military supermarket, SEARS, and MONTE CARLO rolled into one. Its gambling/high-ratio aspects were most clear during the hey-day of GI participation in the war and its nuclear con-gen. BLACK MARKET ACTIVITIES. For a time, the PX was the sole source of such items as KLEENEX, McCLEANS, POLIDENT and XL Athletic supporters – after a while, demand for these items on the Vietnamese market economy rose, as people learned to need such commodities; after a while, these products began to appear on the black market before ever reaching the PX stockroom. By this time we had given Vietnam to the Vietnamese and they were running (infiltrating) our stores far us. By the time we figured out how well they had learned our lessons we have to help themselves, Henry the K closed the living-learning classrooms (February 1975).

(*7) ARVN – army of the Republic of Vietnam. A highly motivated, tough bunch, as a rule, of truly dedicated men who unfortunately took their inspiration from, and received instruction on, the descendants of Benedict Arnold.

(*8) U.S. Ambassador Graham Martin, also known as "the Old Man" by the Americans, and "the refrigerator" by the Vietnamese. Possibly the most tragic, single figure to frantically emerge from the American history of the Vietnam war.

(*9) ao-dai (OW - YIGH or OW - ZAIL, pronunciation of this word for the traditional Vietnamese dress varies according to dialectical regions in Vietnam. The style of the dress also varies in longer length floral prints and tie-dyed silks were cut into raglan-sleeves, mini-lengths and above-waist mandarin collars. In Hue, traditional capital of Old Vietnam, solid colors and lower calf-lengths were tolerated among older girls and women. In Buddhist convents, purple, gold or grey were the only possible colors. Women in mourning throughout Vietnam were restricted to white or black only and floor-lengths. Schoolgirls wore white only until they became women with reasons to mourn, or reasons. Note: women workers in the countryside; pati-fields never wore ao-dai; yet they too had their reasons.

CLASSIFIED

House Wanted. Looking for country home to rent within 20 miles of Burlington. Needed as soon as possible. Have pet. Please call 985-8575

Needed: College Campus Representative to sell Brand New Stereo Components to students at lowest prices. Hi Commission. No investment required. Serious Inquiries ONLY! FAR COMPONENTS INC. 20 Passaic Ave. Fairfield, New Jersey 07006. Attn: Diamond 201-227-6834

Help Wanted. Address envelopes at home $800 per month, possible. Offer details, send 50 cents (refundable) to Triple "S" 699-E44 Highway 138, Pinon Hills, CA 92372

Wanted: One cubic-cap model refrigerator in working condition. Please call 656-3259 and leave a message for Melanie or Cat.

For Sale: Lotz Enlarger with 50mm lens, in excellent condition, asking $45.00. Call 482-3329 early mornings or evenings.

For Sale: Chair and Couch - $45.00 or best offer for both. Baby Scale: Weight demand up to 35 pounds. Exc condition - $35.00 or best offer. Gretsch Bermuda Classic with or without case, perfect condition - $275.00. Call Ruth 863-6249

For Sale: Panasonic 10 inch Florescent desk lamp $10. 658-0843

Available: Experienced teacher for tutoring in Math. Call Gordon, 864-4321

For Sale: Waterbed Heater, Chemalex, Brand new. The best one can buy. Only $40. Contact George 862-1376

Art Supplies →
Picture Frames →
Sculpture Supplies →
Drafting Supplies →

Calling All Artists

Come To Vermont's Great Art Store. You'll Find Most Everything You Need And At Fair Prices.

Boutilier's
Art Center
112 Church St.

NOTICIAS DE CUERVO

If a tree falls in the forest and there's no one there, who are you going to drink your Cuervo with?

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

Announcing a Big Money Saving Deal on Mobil Radials

at Spillane's Mobil

Radial Tire Sale

$36	$42	$49
Small Car Sizes	Medium Car Sizes	Large Car Sizes
AR78-13	DR78-14	GR78-14
BR78-13	ER78-14	GR78-15
BR78-15	FR78-14	HR78-15

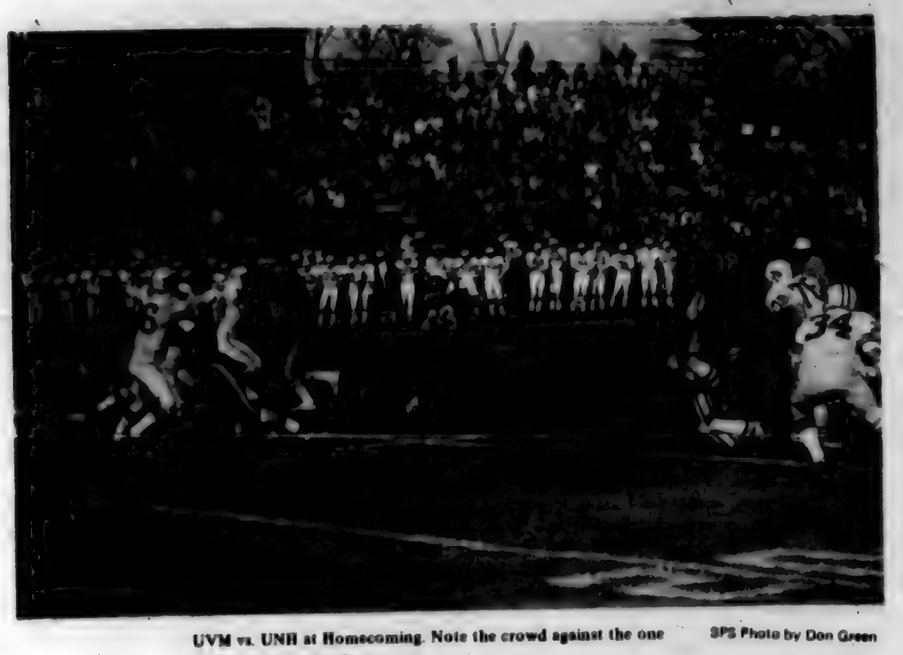
Plus $1.80 to $3.17 Federal Excise Tax*

Mobil Radial
Any Size Listed

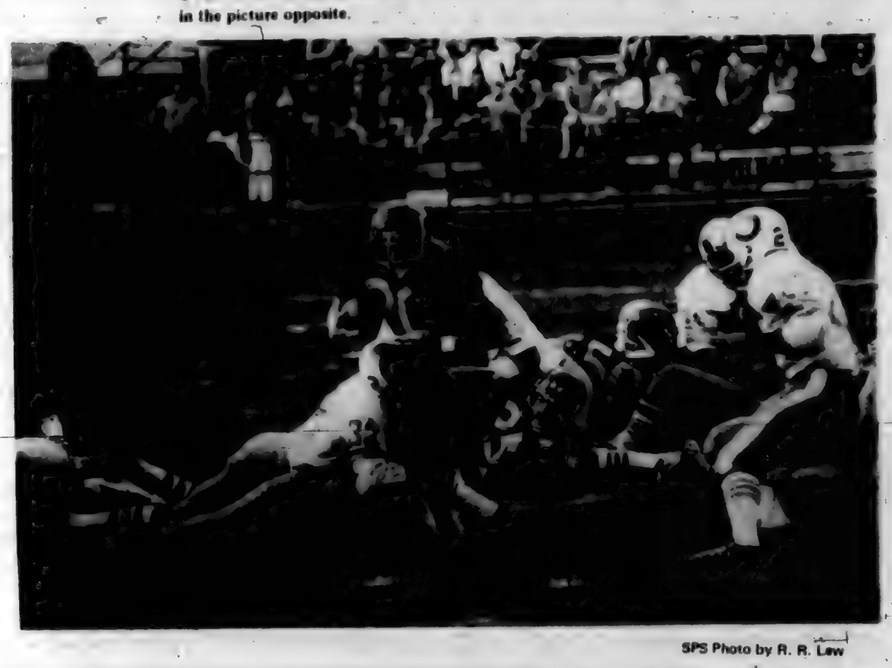
Spillane's Servicenter
A FULL SERVICE MOBIL STATION
863-2896 811 Williston Road
Next to Gowers & 1st National

WELCOME STUDENTS
We're Next Door To Campus.

Vermont Football - Only A Memory



UVM vs. UNH at Homecoming. Note the crowd against the one in the picture opposite. SPS Photo by Don Green



SPS Photo by R. R. Law

Will It Ever Be The Same ?

A UVM runner goes down— So did the football program SPS Photo by Frowen Feld

Soccer Scrimmage

The UVM Booters defeated Plymouth State College Tuesday, by a 3-1 score in a game that was not as tight as the score might indicate. Although Vermont trailed by 1-0 after the first half, they dominated play throughout but couldn't manage a tally.

The Cats finally got on the board in the second half when Mark Stevenson headed the ball in, from a corner kick. The score remained deadlocked for the remainded of regulation time.

Vermont blew it open in overtime as John Koerner and Carl Christensen found the mesh. All three goaltenders found action as both Jim Taft and freshman Peter Nostrand were slightly injured. Taft was cut above the eye and Nostrand was the victim of a monstrous black eye. Senior Jeff Jonas finished up the game in the nets.

Intramural Calendar

These dates are subject to change. However, barring an official change notice, the announced dates will be official.

EVENT	ENTRIES OPEN	ENTRIES CLOSE	SCHEDULE BEGINS
Touch Football	Sept. 4	Sept. 12	Sept. 17
Soccer	Sept. 4	Sept. 12	Sept. 18
Tennis (S) Men	Sept. 8	Sept. 16	Sept. 18
Tennis (S) Women	Sept. 8	Sept. 16	Sept. 18
Faculty-Staff Tennis (S) Men	Sept. 8	Sept. 16	Sept. 18
Faculty-Staff Tennis (S) Women	Sept. 8	Sept. 16	Sept. 18
Coed Tennis	Sept. 10	Sept. 17	Sept. 22
Handball (S) Men	Sept. 15	Sept. 23	Sept. 25
Faculty-Staff Handball (D) Men	Sept. 18	Sept. 25	Sept. 29
Racquetball (S) Men	Sept. 22	Oct. 1	Oct. 6
Racquetball (S) Women	Sept. 22	Oct. 1	Oct. 6
Faculty-Staff Racquetball (S) Men	Oct. 1	Oct. 9	Oct. 15
Faculty-Staff Squash Men	Oct. 1	Oct. 9	Oct. 15
Coed Volleyball	Oct. 1	RECREATION	INFORMAL PLAY
Basketball Men	Oct. 1	Oct. 9	Oct. 15
Basketball Women	Oct. 1	Oct. 9	Oct. 15
Swimming Meet Men	Oct. 2	Oct. 9	Oct. 21, 23
Swimming Meet Women	Oct. 2	Oct. 9	Oct. 21, 23
Handball (D) Men	Oct. 6	Oct. 14	Oct. 16
Ice Hockey Men	Oct. 14	Oct. 22	Oct. 28
Ice Hockey Women	Oct. 14	Oct. 22	Oct. 28
Coed Racquetball	Oct. 15	Oct. 23	Oct. 28

Vermont Linksters Tee Off A New Year

GOLF

Sept. 12 - Plattsburgh Invitational — Plattsburgh, N.Y.
Sept. 18 - Massachusetts Invitational — Amherst, Mass.
Sept. 19 - New Hampshire-Maine — Durham, N.H.
Sept. 22 - Yankee Conference Championships at Stow Acres CC. — Stow, Mass.
Sept. 26-27 - Yale Tournament — New Haven, Conn.
Sept 29-30 - New Englands — Simsbury, Conn.
Oct. 2 - STATE MEET at Burlington — Burlington, Vt.
Oct. 8-9 – ECAC Qualifying — Hickory Ridge C.C. Amherst, Mass.
Oct. 15-16 – ECAC Finals — Doylestown C.C. Doylestown, Pa.

The 1975 Catamount golf season opens Saturday at the Plattsburgh Invitational Golf Tournament. The tournament, hosted by Plattsburgh State University, is the traditional season opener for UVM and has been won by the Cats several times.

This year UVM will be tested by strong teams from Plattsburgh State, U. Conn, Clarkson, St. Michael's and the perennial New York powerhouse, Siena State, who is favored to win the Plattsburgh title.

This year's team, headed by Junior co-captains, Mike Agusta, and Andy Morse, promises to be stronger than last year's team whose tournament record was mediocre. Joining veterans Agusta and Morse will be Sophomore Ted Olson. As a Freshman Olson had a fine season finishing strongly in several tournaments. Olson finished sixth in the Vermont state Amateur this past summer and hopes to continue his good play this fall.

The Catamounts are coached by retired Athletic Director Ed Donnaly. Donnaly has been holding tryouts for the past week. At this point three positions on the first team are up for grabs with several freshmen among the contenders. Among these Freshmen is Jeff Murray who had a brilliant Vermont schoolboy record.

Coach Donnaly hopes to take several Freshmen to Plattsburgh on Saturday to see what they can do under tournament pressure.

From Plattsburgh, UVM goes on to Amherst, Mass, to play a powerful U. Mass team in the Toski Invitational. From mid-September on, the schedule becomes hectic and demanding with UVM playing seven tournaments in five weeks.

NEW!
DOWNHILL EDGE
SKI EQUIPMENT • SKI APPAREL
SKI ACCESSORIES

SKIS: DYNASTAR, KASTLE, KNEISSL, OLIN
BOOTS: NORDICA, SCOTT, LANGE, OLIN
BINDINGS: SALOMON, LOOK, BESSER, BURT, MARKER
APPAREL: C.B. SPORT, ALPINE DESIGN, TEMPCO, EDELWEISS, HOT GEAR, SASKA SPORT

LAST 3 DAYS!
Opening Specials
Famous Brand CHILDRENS PARKAS Reg. $40.00 $25.95
C.B. Sport MENS PARKAS Reg. $65-$85 $44.95 - $59.95
Famous Brand MENS–WOMENS–CHILDRENS SWEATERS up to 50% off as low as $10.95 LAST 3 DAYS!

EXPERT REPAIR and SERVICE
WET BELT REFINISHING

The Downhill Edge
81-85 Main St., Burlington, Vt. 05401 (802) 862-2282

85 Main St.
Burlington (next to Ski Rack)
862-2282
Open Monday thru Wednesday 9:30-6:00
Thursdays & Fridays 9:30-9:00
Saturday 9:30-5:00

WE WELCOME
BANK AMERICARD
& MASTERCHARGE

10% OFF COUPON!
Bring this coupon to the Downhill Edge by Sept. 13th and take 10 percent off all purchases.
Naturally, Sale Merchandise Must Be Excluded!

REGISTER FOR OPENING GIFTS!!
1st. PRIZE — $100 Gift Certificate; 2nd PRIZE — $50 Gift Certificate
Bring in or mail this coupon today — No Purchase Necessary Name _____ Tel. No. _____
Street _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

MACRAMS It's an Experience flannel work shirts are flying
Special $9.90 val 14.00
AMERICAN MADE from our famous New England Manufacturers in fabulous [illegible] Sized to fit 5-13
WAY-IN-SHOP

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
96 Church St.
Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5 P.M.
Fridays 9:30 'til 9 P.M.

SPS Photo by Frowen Feld

SCHEDULE BEGINS
Sept. 17
Sept. 18
Sept. 18
Sept. 18
Sept. 18
Sept. 22
Sept. 25
Sept. 29
Oct. 6
Oct. 6
Oct. 15
Oct. 15
INFORMAL PLAY
Oct. 15
Oct. 15
Oct. 21, 23
Oct. 21, 23
Oct. 16
Oct. 28
Oct. 28
Oct. 28

w Year

house, Siena State, who ured to win the Plattsburgh his year's team, headed unior co-captains, Mike ta, and Andy Morse, nes to be stronger than

-year's team whose rnament record was ocre. Joining veterans ta and Morse will be omore Ted Olson. As a hman Olson had a fine
n finishing strongly in al tournaments. Olson
ed sixth in the Vermont Amateur this past er and hopes to continue od play this fall he Catamounts are hed by retired Athletic tor Ed Donnaly Donnaly een holding tryouts for ast week. At this point positions on the first are up for grabs with al freshmen among the enders. Among these men is Jeff Murray who a brilliant Vermont
lboy record.
oach Donnaly hopes to several Freshmen to burgh on Saturday to see they can do under ament pressure.
From Plattsburgh, UVM
im to Amherst, Mass. to powerful U. Mass team Toski Invitational. From September on, the
ule becomes hectic and nding with UVM playing tournaments in five

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
96 Church St.
Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 to 5 P.M.
Fridays 9:30 to 9 P.M.

Tough Year Ahead For Cross-Country

Cross-country has a job to do recovering from the loss of the top three runners from last year. Mike Berry last year's captain who led the team to a second place in the Yankee Conference graduated and is in medical school. Stan Dunklee, a member of the U.S. Nordic Ski Team, is taking the fall semester off to train for the winter olympic games in Innsbruck. And Bob graves transferred to the University of Rhode Island for a combination of financial and academic reasons.

This year's team captain will be Lynn Capen. Lynn finished twentieth out of 350 runners in the national 10 mile as well as second in the Archie Post race last Saturday averaging 5:06 minutes per mile over the 5 mile course. Lynn also set a training record this summer by running 1,500 miles making it his second year in the 1,000 mile club. Five other names will be going on the Ray W. Allen '59 Trophy for runners who have logged 1,000 miles or more during summer training. Senior Dave Milligan from Windsor will be counted on heavily this year and finished sixth in the Archie Post race where UVM had six in the eleven. Others are Howdy Russel, Bobby Stoehr, Pete Caplan and Carol Degan who is the only woman to make it for the second year.

A Long Hard Climb

Senior Peter Weith who stayed out of the Archie Post race to save his legs will be "awfully important" according to coach Bill Nedde. Sophomore Dave Elliot also has the potential to become a key member of the team.

As to the chances of duplicating last year's Yankee Conference second to U. Mass, coach Nedde commented "I don't know". "We can beat Maine and B.U. anyway. U.Conn., Rhode Island and New Hampshire are the hookers; realistically third to fifth."

"There were some impressive performances in the Archie Post race. These kids have got to do 5:10 to 5:15 per mile to be competitive, depending on the level of competition. In a dual meet you must run 5:20, the Yankee Conferences 5:05 and the leaders will be under a five minute per mile average.

This Saturday the runners will be going against Bates at Bates. "We lost to them last year in an early season meet, then beat them later in the year. They're always strong early. It will be a good test."

Women's Swimming

Co-Captains of the UVM women's swim team this year are Barby Matheson of Wardsboro, Vt., and Jeannie Crane from Guelph, Ontario.

Barby is a junior studying Linguistics. She is an active competitor in synchronized swimming as well as racing. Although Barb's versatility has proven invaluable to the team, her strongest events are the 200 and 400-yard freestyle.

Jeannie, a Human Nutrition major, is also a distance swimmer. Plagued by a shoulder injury last year she looks forward to a more successful season this year, her last at UVM. As one of the representatives of individual team sports, Jeannie is also a member of the Women's Athletic Council.

The co-captains would like to see more emphasis placed on women's sports at UVM, and a greater awareness of the accomplishments of the women's swim team in particular.

There will be a meeting for all women interested in competitive swimming and diving on Thursday, Sept. 11 at 6:30 p.m. in room 117, Patrick Gymnasium. Coach Sandra Farrell encourages inexperienced as well as experienced swimmers to come out for the team.

It Ain't An Easy Game!

Rugby Team Off and Running

by NICK SAN MARTINO, JR.

When Rugby first started at the University of Vermont, the members were Vermonters from all over the state with only a few ruggers originally taking classes at the University. Over the seasons, an estimated turnout of 20-25 players participated. This season, Rugby started with 45 players. Over half returned from last year. Added to this is an extra coach, Dave Williamson, an all New England rugger from Norwich. He will join James Peckman and Dave Scrace, all of whom are referees.

Rugby is by no means a new sport on campus although it has just recently been popularized on the American scene.

The game is played with two teams of fifteen men facing each other on the field. They wear no helmets nor protective padding, and there are no substitutes. The objective of each team is to place the oval ball on the try line defended by the other side, or to kick the ball over the bar and between the posts of the H-shaped goal. The ball can be kicked, carried, or passed back; the player who holds it can be tackled by an opponent who will throw himself through the air to bring him down, grabbing him around the neck, waist or the legs. The only defense against a tackle is to dodge it or use the handoff, a hand pushed at the face or body of the tackling player.

If play stops – say, for instance, when the ball is passed forward – the whistle is blown by the referee and a scrum is formed. The forwards of the two teams lock together like a giant crab. In the front row, a hooker and two props dig their heads and shoulders in to the heads and shoulders of their opposite numbers on the other side. Behind them comes the second line, their heads thrust between the buttocks of the front row. This human battering ram is held together by a "lock" at the back and buttressed by a wing forward on either side.

The scrum half of the team that has the advantage throws the ball into the middle, between the two teams, whereupon the hooker kicks it back or the forwards push their rivals off the ball. The scrum half then retrieves it and throws it to the halfbacks, who run forward, passing the ball back along their line to the wing three-quarters to score a try.

It is a hard game-fine if played with skill, brutal if played clumsily. A broken leg or a broken nose is not uncommon. Every scrum means hacked shins; every tackle leaves a player winded. It demands not only exceptional fitness to play at great speed for an hour and a half (including ten minutes rest at half time), but also self-control and team spirit. The man who places the ball on the touch line is not necessarily the finest player but more often just the last link on the chain.

Unlike other sports, Rugby is also social. There is a traditional beer party with its songs of old and new. There is an old saying in Rugby: "You can lose the game and win the party afterwards." With this, we extend a welcome to all new players. Practice will be Tues., Wed., and Thurs., at 4:30 PM. Games are usually Saturday, starting this week in Montreal. For information, call Nick San Martino (Tyes), Sigma Phi Epsilon; or Tom Novack (V.P.), Delta Psi.

THIS WEEK IN SPORT

SOCCER
September 12 – vs. Dartmouth — Away
September 17 – vs. Keene St. — Away

TENNIS
September 11 – vs. UNH — Home

CROSS COUNTRY
September 13 – vs. Bates — Away

RUGBY
September 13 – vs. Montreal Irish — Away
September 14 – vs. Montreal Seven-A Tournament — Away

Hang Gliders Meet At Stowe

Hang glider pilots from all over the eastern United States will converge on Stowe, Vermont, for the Stowe-World Cup Hang Gliding Meet September 17 through 21. Results of this meet and three others will determine the five pilots to represent the Eastern United States at the World Cup Finals in Europe next spring.

World Cup competition is new to hang gliding, but its goal is the same as in any World Cup series, to find the best pilots in the world, bring them together under standardized rules, and determine the world's best flyer! World Cup rules are quite stringent and call for, among other things, standardized gliders and nearest centimeter measured target landings. Pilots will be judged by the duration of their flights and the accuracy of landing. There will also be a Freestyle event in which pilots accumulate points by performing various aerial maneuvers to the accompaniment of music. Five judges will determine the excellence of execution of each maneuver. The top five flyers from our region (the United States east of the Mississippi) will be sent to Europe next spring to compete for the World title.

Don Post of the Stowe Sky School which provides instruction and oversees all hang gliding activity at Mt. Mansfield said he expected over 150 pilots and ships to be on hand for the competition and following fun flying. Post said the last meet held at Stowe in June was a great success and encouraged spectators to bring cameras, lunches and lawn chairs to the aerial spectacular. He said the World Cup committee had selected Stowe for the competition because of its facilities and vertical descent of 2100'. Spectators can view the competition from the landing site or drive the 4 mile access road to see the launch point.

Flying is scheduled Wednesday, September 17 through Sunday, September 21 from 10 AM to 5 PM at Mt. Mansfield, 6 miles north of Stowe Village. Additional information may be obtained from Stowe Sky School, Box 977, Stowe, VT 05672, (802) 253-7311.

RUGBY SCHEDULE

Sept. 13	Montreal Irish	Away
Sept. 14	Montreal Seven A-side Tournament	Away
Sept. 20	Norwich	Home
Sept. 27	Albany State	Home
Oct. 4	McGill University	Home
Oct. 11	"A" Team, "B" Team vs. Mad River Rugby Club	Home
Oct. 11 & 12	Yankee Conference Rugby Tournament	at Durham
Oct. 25	Sienna	Home

All home games are at 2:00 at Archie Post Field.

Attention!

Wrestling Club

The Wrestling Club has not been an active student club on campus due to lack of organization and interest. There will be another attempt to make wrestling an active sport on campus. Are you interested in seeing Wrestling on campus? Are you willing to put some time and effort into the Wrestling Club? If you are interested, contact Randy at 656-4248 or at 234 B Living/Learning.

Yearbook

The Yearbook is looking for some sports minded people to work on next year's sports section. We need organizers, writers, and photographers, no experience is necessary. Contact Chris Brown 404 College St. 658-0829 evenings or Madeline 864-5402.

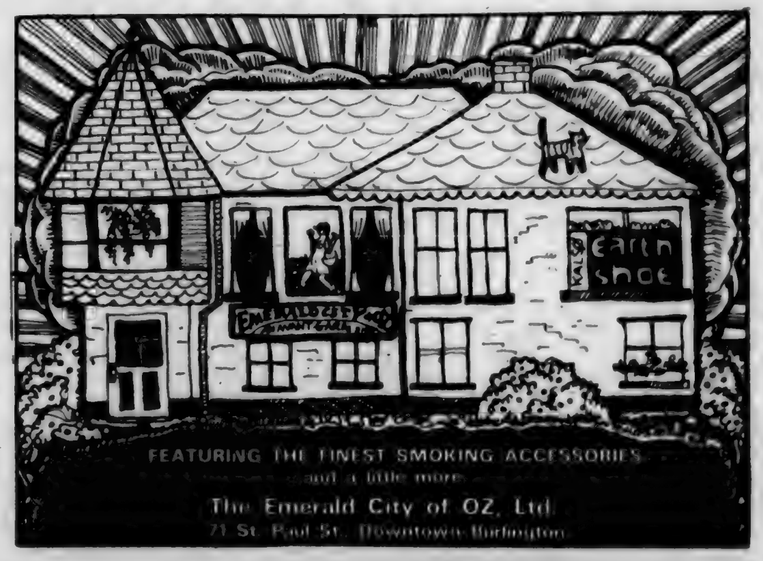
Basketball

Anyone wishing to help the Varsity Basketball Team as a manager, please contact Coach Salzberg at Patrick Gym.

THE FAN SPEAKS OUT

The Vermont Cynic sports department will attempt to run a new section this year entitled "The Fan Speaks Out." Readers and fans are encouraged to write to the Cynic and voice your complaints, views or beliefs, whether it be local, state, national or international sporting events or happenings.

The only way the sports page can get better is if you let us know what is wrong with it. Let your sports editor and writers hear you - write to "The Fan Speaks Out."



WANTED:

Students with imagination, drive, and a capacity to enjoy themselves.

We need writers, poets, cartoonists, etc., who are interested in helping make the "Vermont Cynic" into a vital student paper.

Open House on Thursday night , September 11, from 7-10 PM
We're located in Billings Center opposite of the den.

OPEN HOUSE
THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 11
7-10 PM

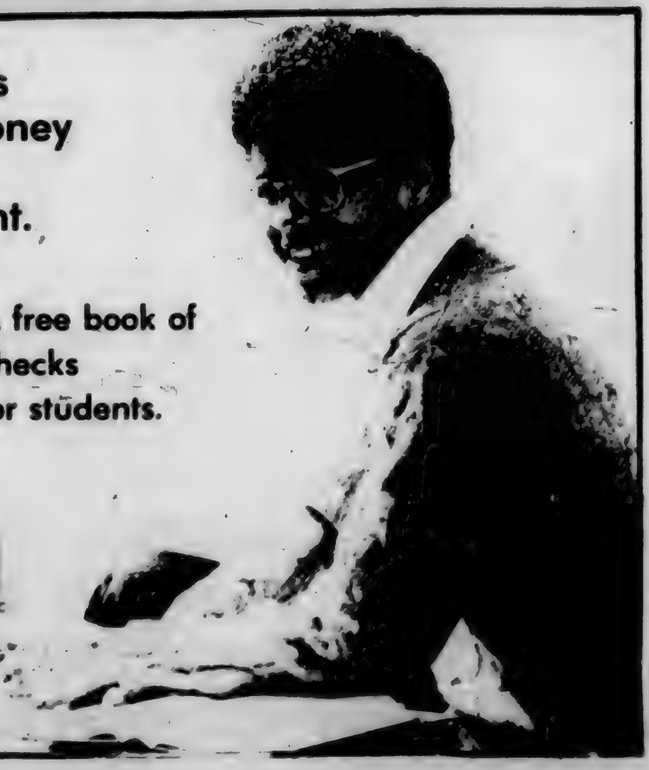
Hope to see you there!

People with goals manage their money with a Howard Checking Account.

A free book of checks for students.

Turn to the Howard Bank
Member FDIC

Main Office: Main and St. Paul Streets, Burlington
Offices at: Church St., North Avenue, South Burlington, Essex Center, Essex Junction, Richmond, Shelburne, Winooski, St. Johnsbury, Brandon, Fair Haven, Rutland, Montpelier, Waterbury, Williston, Berlin



sports

Yankee Conference Champs Begin New Season

Kirk Dice

Tom Lenci

by SCOTT CURTIS

The UVM tennis team will begin the defence of its Yankee Conference crown here against UNH today at three o'clock. Heading the line-up for UVM are co-captains Kirk Dice and Tom Lenci. They will face tough competition from UNH stars Scott Taylor and Andy Harrison.

UVM will miss key players this fall, and UNH will be returning complete and improved. The Catamounts lost Capt. Jay Moorhead to graduation, Dick Hilmer to a leave of absence, and Tim Beal and John Koerner to soccer for the fall. Coach Grieg states, "These losses leave us somewhat decimated." It is crucial that the Catamounts regroup quickly and win today because of the short fall schedule. Hal Grieg needs excellent performances from Dice and Lenci, and also standout play from senior Kevin Delaney and sophomore Scott Turban. Without a win today, UVM cannot expect to keep its title from the always strong U.Mass squad or this surprisingly strong UNH team.

PROBABLE LINEUP

Singles
1. Kirk Dice, capt., Jr.
2. Tom Lenci, capt., Sr.
3. Kevin Delaney, Sr.
4. Scott Turban, Soph.
5. Bill Hansen, Soph.
6. Tim Simon, Soph.

Doubles
1. Dice and Lenci
2. Delaney and Turban
3. Hansen and Simon

REMAINING SCHEDULE

Saturday, Sept. 20 – Cardinal Classic in Plattsburgh at 10 a.m.

Saturday, Sept. 27 – MAINE in Burlington at 1 p.m.

Tuesday, Sept. 30 – UCONN in Storrs, Ct. at 3 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 4 – UMASS in Amherst, Mass. at 2 p.m.

October 10 – 11 – Yankee Conference championships in Durham, N.H.

COLLEGE EXPENSES HIGH?

We will fill your precription at the lowest possible prices and will never be undersold, as we will match or lower any prescription price in the State of Vermont.

Grandway Pharmacy
Grandway Shopping Center
Shelburne Road
864-6869

Soccer Squad Prepairs For Season

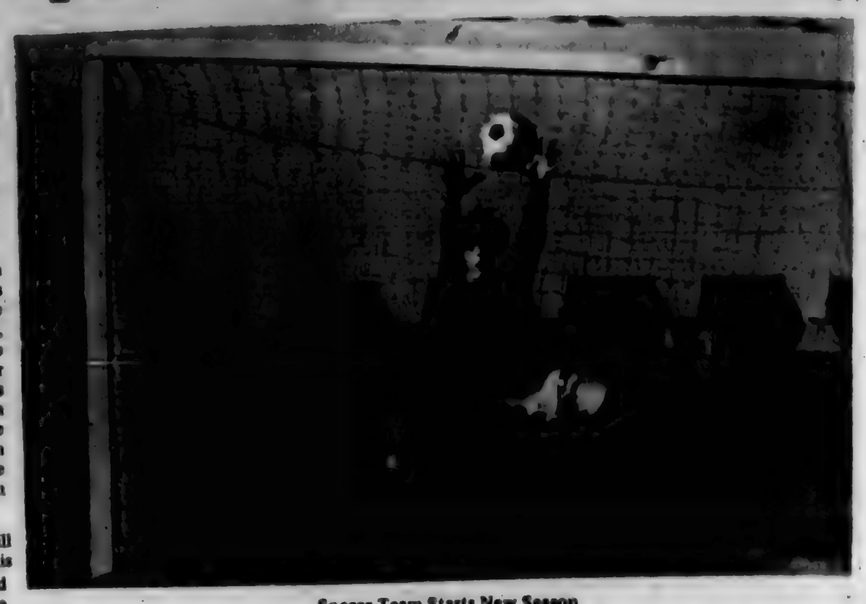
by RANDY BRIGGS

The 1975 edition of the University of Vermont soccer team will feature a young but experienced group of players according to first year head coach Paul Reinhardt. Reinhardt will be inheriting 18 returning lettermen along with a number of excellent incoming freshmen.

Reinhardt plans to use a very simple philosophy in his approach to the game. While stressing fundamentals, he said, "We must master the simple things before we can allow for creativity." When asked what is the most important factor in preparing for a season, he commented, "You must get in the best physical shape possible before beginning to work on fundamentals."

Reinhardt also said he will substitute frequently this season in an attempt to avoid the mistake of leaving in a tiring player. He said if his team hustles all the time it should do very well. Comparing this year's squad with last year's, he said, "We have better overall strength and we are much better defensively." He plans on carrying 25 players on the varsity team. As of this writing, Reinhardt was unsure of what the final roster will be, but after the next few days of practice final cuts would be made. When he said the defense will be much better, he most likely was looking at the goaltending situation. Reinhardt was unsure whether Jeff Jonas, Jim Taft, or incoming freshman Peter Nostrand would start.

When asked who were the team or teams to beat in the conference, he said, "Connecticut must be put in the favorite's role. They are the defending Yankee Conference Champions and are returning many players from last year's squad." Keene State is also one of the top teams in New England and will be very difficult to beat.



Soccer Team Starts New Season.

Coach Reinhardt also stressed the importance of the "B" team. Reinhardt commented that the players are getting valuable experience that they might some time have to exercise on the varsity level.

The increased recruitment of Vermont players will again make UVM a consistent winner. In essence this will be used as a stepping stone in the recruitment of out-of-state players of excellent ability. Reinhardt says that because there is no scholarships offered, you must hope to convince the athlete of the quality education he is offered as well as a chance to participate in the Varsity program.

When I asked Coach Reinhardt whether soccer would attract large crowds, he commented, "It's up to the fans. If we hustle and give 100% we are doing our part." He said we have excellent facilities and there is no reason why soccer cannot do very well here.

Reinhardt also discussed the possibility of having a number of clinics before the start of home games. He hopes to familiarize the game to the fans who are new to soccer.

I was very impressed with the enthusiasm and confidence on the part of Coach Reinhardt. It appears that with his leadership and the fine talent they have, UVM soccer fans will have a lot to look forward to.

1975 VARSITY SOCCER SCHEDULE

DATE	OPPONENT
Sept. 12	Dartmouth (scrimage)
Sept. 13	ALUMNI GAME
Sept. 17	Keene State
Sept. 20	CONNECTICUT
Sept. 24	PLATTSBURGH STATE
Sept. 27	BOSTON UNIVERSITY
Oct. 1	Norwich
Oct. 4	Massachusetts
Oct. 8	ST. MICHAEL'S
Oct. 11	RHODE ISLAND
Oct. 15	St. Lawrence
Oct. 17	New Hampshire
Oct. 22	MIDDLEBURY
Oct. 25	MAINE
Oct. 29	St. Michael's

(Capital Letters – Home games)

A Dual Opportunity

LEADERSHIP & MANAGEMENT FOR MEN & WOMEN

UVM

ADVENTURE

ROCK CLIMBING
RAFTING
WINTER SURVIVAL
SCUBA
RAPPELLING
WEAPONS
HELICOPTER OPERATIONS
ORIENTEERING

MASTER SERGEANT ERIC ANDERSON
GREEN BERET
PARACHUTIST (938 Jumps)
SCUBA DIVER
MOUNTAINEER

EDUCATION

WAR & SOCIETY
NATIONAL POWER
DEFENSE AGENCIES
MILITARY HISTORY
MAOIST STRATEGY
CURRENT CONFLICTS
SOVIET CAPABILITIES
MILITARY THEORISTS

CAPTAIN GENE JONES
M. Ed.
ARMY AVIATOR
COMMUNITY LEADER
ROTC GRADUATE

ROTC

No Military Obligation

Williams Hall Main Campus Anytime

Or Call 656-2966

VERMONT CYNIC

'Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 17 — FOUNDED IN 1883 — SEPTEMBER 18, 1975

VPIRG Funding Under Fire

VPIRG Girds for Fight to Live

BREWERS DISTORT FACTS

VPIRG: Vt. should improve roads, not build new ones

VPIRG Gets Results for Students

Activism Alive in Vermont

calendar annoucements

Museum Hours

This fall, the Robert H[illegible] Fleming Museum, UVM, [illegible] be open to the public eve[illegible] Wednesday evening from 7 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.

On alternate Wednesday evenings, a public lecture series will occur at 8:00 p.m., but the galleries will be open to all visitors.

These fall evening hours reflect the Fleming Museum's continuing efforts to serve the Burlington and UVM community by being open during non-working hours. Other Museum hours are Mondays through Fridays 8:30 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.; Sundays 1:00 p.m. – 5:00 p.m.; closed Saturdays and most holidays.

Cynic Subscription

Students!! Would you like your parents to know what's going on around the campus? Why don't you have them get a CYNIC subscription? Just $5.00 per semester, $10.00 for the year. Think about it!

Comm. Council Luncheon

The Community Council of Greater Burlington will meet Thursday, September 18, at noon in the First Congregational Church, So. Winooski Ave., Burlington. The luncheon cost is $1.75 for members, $2.00 for non-members. For reservations call 862-5010. Subject: "Title 20 – Citizen Concern"

Speaking to this informational meeting covering Title XX of the Social Security Act will be: (1) Robert Fulton, HEW Director District I, New England; (2) Thomas Davis, Secretary, Agency of Human Services; (3) Joseph Handy, Commissioner, Social Rehabilitation Services; (4) Paul Brodeur, Assistant Commissioner, Mental Health Dept.; (5) Beryl Rosenstreich, Chairman of Committee that drew up proposed State Plan 1975-76.

Sr. Elizabeth Candon will moderate.

Life Drawing

The life drawing workshop is meeting Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. It is held in Williams Science Hall, second floor gallery. The fee is $1.00 for the model.

OVP- Expo '75

The Office of Volunteer Programs at U.V.M. is sponsoring EXPO '75 in Billings Student Center on September 23 and 24. The purpose of EXPO '75 is to spearhead a fall recruitment drive for new volunteers from both U.V.M. and the surrounding communities.

Individual project leaders working with environmental issues, social reform, bike safety, mental health, the elderly, children, and education will be present to discuss their work as well as the opportunities available to new volunteers in their specific areas.

All interested persons are invited to visit EXPO '75 to see how they can become involved in reaching the human needs of the community.

Anthropology Club

The Anthropology Club will hold its first meeting Monday, Sept. 22 at 7:00 p.m. in the Seminar Room, 5th floor of Williams Science Hall.

Anthropology majors, perspective majors or merely interested students are all invited. Beer and refreshments will be served.

Go Swimming...

Change in Pool Recreation Schedule – The pool will be open for students from 7 – 10:30 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday and 7 – 9:00 p.m. Mondays.

Single Lane Series Tickets Available

Good seats are now available on a single concert basis for all the Lane Series concerts, but some concerts are in limited supply. Series tickets may also be purchased.

The series opens on Sept. 30 with England's Royal Shakespeare Company in the modern production Pleasure and Repentance, described as a "light-hearted look at love."

The most popular events at press time - with limited tickets - are the London Symphony, conducted by Andre Previn, closely followed by pantomimist Marcel Marceau, Russian pianist Vladimer Ashkenazy, and the Amadeus Quartet. The Harlem Dance Theatre (in a classical ballet program) and the Don Cossacks of Rostov, a folk dance company that will be presented in Patrick Gymnasium are also in great demand.

There are signs also that the Charlie Chaplin film series will be a sell-out. The first movies, a double bill of The Kid and The Idle Class, will be offered on Friday evening, October 10, in two showings, 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., in Marsh Life Sciences Building. Single concert tickets for the six movies are also available now, at $1 each.

Tickets may be purchased in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For information, telephone 656-3418.

The Vermont Cynic wishes to inform all students, student organizations, faculty, and anyone else who might be interested that it will typeset material for publication for a modest fee. A few organizations have used our service in the past. But there are probably many individuals and groups who do not know this service is available. The machines are free for such "outside" jobs on Thursdays and Fridays.

So if you have any material you would like typeset (collection of poems or short stories, dissertations, small magazines or newsletters, play or musical program, etc.) please call 656-2029 anytime on Monday – Wednesday or bring your material to the Third Balcony of Billings Center.

Don't forget that the Lane Series opens its 21st season on Tuesday, September 30, with the Royal Shakespeare Co. performing Pleasure and Repentance;" tickets are available from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, tel. 656-3418. Note, too, the Chaplin film series which begins Oct. 10. Series tickets now on sale.

At Fleming Museum through Spring '76, Collectors and Collections, which highlights the collections of six major donors to the Museum; and Traditional Africa, both in the second floor galleries. All week (Sept. 22-25) the Museum is accepting entries to "Vermont Photography '75."

Monday through Friday this week the Vermont Public Interest Research Group will be offering refunds, 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., at Billings Center for those who do not wish to support VPIRG.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

3:30 p.m., College of Engineering, Mathematics and Business Administration faculty meeting, Votey Reading Room.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance lecture, Prof. James Overfield, history, on the nature of the Reformation and Renaissance, 216 Commons, Living/Learning Center. Open to all.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "I'm No Angel," starring Mae West, Cary Grant and Edward Arnold, admission free at B-106 Cook Bldg.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 19

12 noon, Open Lunch hour with the Counseling and Center Staff. A time for all friends, old and new, to join for informal visiting, exchange of ideas and getting acquainted.

1 – 4 p.m., UVM apples on sale at the Horticulture Research Center off Shelburne Road.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four," a regular weekly program at the Royall Tyler Theatre; admission free. Featured this week will be some readings.

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA Films presents "O Lucky Man," starring Malcolm McDowell, admission $1 at B-106 Cook Bldg.

8 p.m., UVM Folk Dance Club regular meeting, open to all levels, Southwick Ballroom. No experience is necessary, and you don't need to bring a partner. Just "come and have a good time." Details and more information from Ben Bergstein, 863-6686.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20

10 a.m., Patterson estate sale, Underhill Center, limited to members of the UVM community. See story this issue.

1 – 5 p.m., Folk Dance Club square and contra dance workshop with Dudley Laufman, Southwick Ballroom. Admission is free for club members, 50 cents for students, $1 for all others. But you may join the club at the door if you'd like! Details, Ben Bergstein, 863-6686. Dance following at 8 p.m.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," starring Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, Lionel Strander, admission free at B-106 Cook Bldg.

8 p.m., Folk Dance Club presents a square and contra dance, Southwick Ballroom, featuring live music by the Arm and Hammer String Band. Admission is free for club members, 75 cents for students, $1.50 for all others. More information from Ben Bergstein, 863-6686.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 21

7 p.m., Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is holding its large group meeting in L/L A-101. Bible study, prayer, singing and sharing! All are welcome!

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 22

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center "Career Planning Awareness" program with Bill McNeil. Open to anyone with questions regarding occupational selection, choice of major, career planning. Admission free at 146 S. Williams St.

Start of Church Street Center courses in Modern Dance, Yoga for Beginners, Accounting for Non-Profit Organizations, Decoy Carving and Duck Hunting, Masters of the Baroque, Sound-Studio to You. Contact the Center at 135 Church Street, the old firehouse, or call 656-4221 for details.

7:30 p.m., start of a new, free and public, discussion/study group at the Church Street Center: "Planning for Title XX--Does Citizen Participation Count?" led by Margaret Whittlesey. This session will run three Monday nights, and will be a community seminar on the Title XX Social Security Act planning process in Vermont; guidelines for Fiscal '76 and implications and possible strategies for FY '77.

7 p.m., slide/lecture on the Medieval program held this past summer in Assisi, Italy, 216 Commons, Living/Learning. Speakers will be Profs. Alfred Andrea, history and William Stephany, English.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23

Start of Church Street Center mini-courses in Personal Growth, Basic Conversational French, Basic Survival Techniques, Small Business Law, Batik, Buddhist Approach to Meditation, Calligraphy – Six Alphabets, Independent/Experimental Film Making, Oriental Rugs. Contact the Center, Ext. 4221, for details.

8:30 a.m.–5 p.m., The Office of Volunteer Programs (OVP) presents its annual EXPO (volunteer fair) at Billings Center to spearhead a fall recruitment drive for new volunteers. Numerous community agencies will be represented, and all are welcome. EXPO continues Wednesday, Sept. 23.

10:50 a.m., Chemistry Colloquim, Prof A.L. Crumbliss, department of chemistry, Duke University, "Structure-Reactivity Relationships in Bis (dimethylglyoximato) Complexes of Cobalt (III)," B-142 Cook Bldg.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a "Study Skills Workshop" at the Center (146 S. Williams St.) with Alice D. Outwater. Open and free to all with questions, problems or concerns about their study habits.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance program lecture, Prof. James Overfield, history, on the nature of the Reformation and Renaissance, 216 Commons, Living/Learning, open to all who are interested.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization meets at Harris recreation room to share healing experiences, all welcome. Details from Holly Aspden, Ext. 3156.

7 p.m., Tuesday night drawing group featuring figure drawing, meets at the second floor studio, Williams Hall. Open to all who are interested, $1 donation to pay the model.

7:30 p.m., S.A. Films British Cinema series presents "Kind Hearts and Coronets," the 1945 film in which Sir Alec Guiness plays eight roles. Also stars Joan Greenwood. Admission free at B-106 Cook Bldg.

7:30 – 9 p.m., Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is holding a seminar on the Authority of Scripture presented by Rev. Richard Olson, a local pastor. It will be held in L/L A-102. All are welcome!

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24

8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., OVP Fair continues at Billings Center. New volunteers are needed – come see the opportunities.

Start of Church Street Center mini-courses in Fencing, Introductory Car Mechanics, Basic Interviewing Skills, Conversational English for Non-Native English Speaking People, Introduction to Spanish, Developing Study Skills. Contact the Center, 135 Church St., Ext. 4221 for details.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing presents a free relaxation and meditation program with Nancy Koch. Come spend your lunch hour learning some creative ways to deal with daily tension and stress. (At 146 S. Williams St.)

5 – 7 p.m., School of Natural Resources faculty meeting; call Ext. 4280 for location.

8 p.m., "Recycled Industrial Buildings," slide film and panel discussion on a neglected economic resource, by Chester Liebs, lecturer in historic preservation, and guests. Presented at the Museum's Marble Court, with sponsorship of the Museum, and the departments of history and art. Admission free.

(continued on page three)

Teacher Ed Candidates

Any upperclass University of Vermont student who wishes to be accepted in a program in a teaching field in Art, Elementary, Home Economics, Music, Physical, Secondary, or Vocational-Technical Education must pass a written communication test. Proficiency in the use and range of vocabulary, logical expression of ideas, paragraph arrangement, sentence structure and spelling will be judged on the basis of a few paragraphs written on a suggested subject.

The test will be given Monday evening, September 29, and Wednesday evening, October 1, in Room B-106 Cook Building from 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. Students should sign up immediately in Room 306 Waterman for the evening of their choice.

SPS
Student Photo Service will have a meeting for new, old, and interested members
Sept. 18 - 6:00 PM

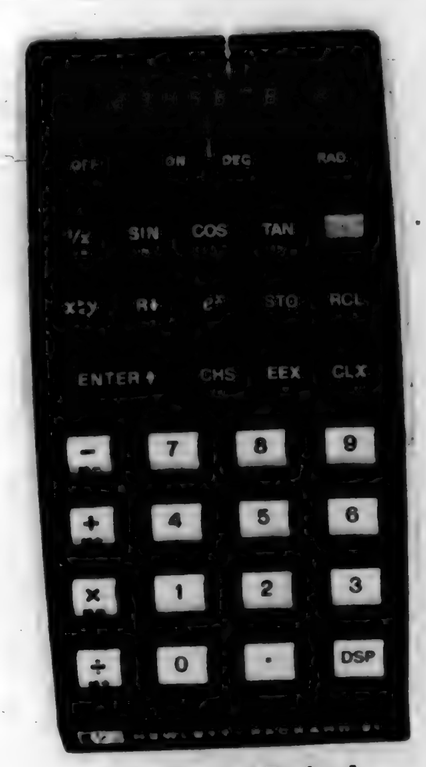
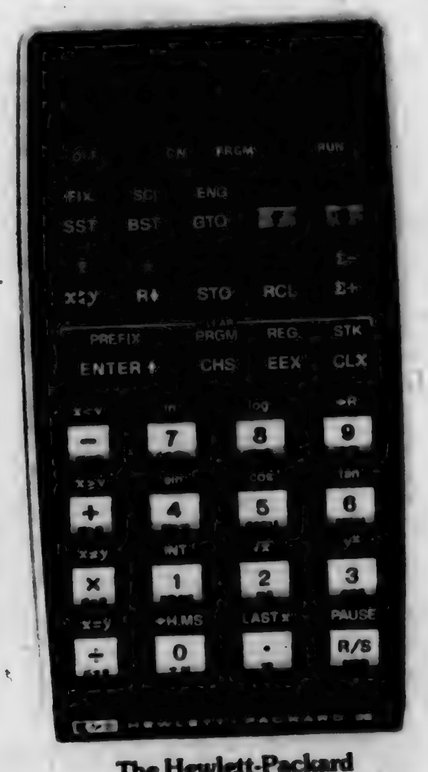
THE UVM HORSE CLUB will hold its weekly meeting in MAT Lounge on Thursday at 8:00

The uncompromising ones.



The Hewlett-Packard HP-21 Scientific $125.00*



The Hewlett-Packard HP-25 Scientific Programmable $195.00*

The calculations you face require no less.

Today, even so-called "non-technical" courses (psych, soc, bus ad, to name 3) require a variety of technical calculations—complicated calculations that become a whole lot easier when you have a powerful pocket calculator.

Not surprisingly, there are quite a few such calculators around, but ours stand apart, and ahead. We started it all when we introduced the world's first scientific pocket calculator back in 1972, and we've shown the way ever since.

The calculators you see here are our newest, the first of our second generation. Both offer you technology you probably won't find in competitive calculators for some time to come, if ever.

Our HP-21 performs all arithmetic, log and trig calculations, including rectangular/polar conversions and common antilog evaluations. It's display is fully formatted, so you can choose between fixed decimal and scientific notation.

Our HP-25 does all that—and much, much more. It's programmable, which means it can solve automatically the countless repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces.

With an HP-25, you enter the keystrokes necessary to solve the problem only once. Thereafter, you just enter the variables and press the Run/Stop key for an almost instant answer accurate to 10 digits.

Before you invest in a lesser machine, by all means do two things: ask your instructors about the calculations their courses require; and see for yourself how effortlessly our calculators handle them.

Both the HP-21 and HP-25 are almost certainly on display at your bookstore. If not, call us, toll-free, at 800-538-7922 (in Calif. 800-662-9862) for the name of an HP dealer near you.

HEWLETT hp PACKARD

Sales and service from 172 offices in 65 countries
Dept. 658B, 19310 Pruneridge Avenue, Cupertino, CA 95014

*Suggested retail price, excluding applicable state and local taxes—Continental U.S., Alaska & Hawaii.

... Calendar

(continued from page two)

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25

Last day for entries to be delivered in person to "Vermont Photography '75" competition at Fleming Museum. Entries will be accepted all day, plus from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Museum's Marble Court.

Last day for changes from credit to audit and for withdrawal from courses without academic penalty

Start of Church Street Center mini-courses in Hatha Yoga, Standard First Aid and Personal Safety, Environmental Interpretation at Green Mt. Audubon Nature Center, Chair Caning, Dance-Movement as a Therapeutic Tool, Real Estate Investment and The New Biomedicine: A Conflict of Reality and Morality? Details from the Center, 135 Church St., or call 656-4221.

12:10 p.m., Mechanical Engineering seminar, Prof. Richard McLay, "Fracture and the Second Law," 101 Votey Bldg. Open to all.

Lend Or Rent Your Room

It's not enough that October 10–12 is UVM's Oktoberfest, Homecoming and Parents' Weekend. It is also a three day weekend for most U.S., and Canadian citizens, since Monday, Oct. 13 is Columbus Day and Canadian Thanksgiving. It is also a big fall foliage weekend which means that half the rest of the country will be in Vermont or passing through. All of which means housing will be at a premium.

Faculty, staff and students living off campus who might be willing to give or rent a room(s) to alumni, parents or other visitors to the community are cordially invited to contact the Lake Champlain Regional Chamber of Commerce, which annually helps coordinate the location of housing for visitors who otherwise might have to sleep in their cars or under the stars.

Call (863–3489) or visit the Chamber at 131 Main St. (first floor of the former Hotel Vermont) in Burlington.

New England Dance

On Sept. 20, Southwick Ballroom at UVM will come alive with traditional New England music and dance, presented by Dudley Laufman, famed caller and musician from Canterbury, N.H., members of the Arm and Hammer String Band, and other Vermont musicians. The activities begin with an afternoon workshop (from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.) exploring some of the different aspects of contra dancing, a traditional form of New England dance, and possibly a session in Morris dance, a very old and lively dance style from England. The program continues at 8 p.m. with an old-time contra dance, including New England contras, squares, and circle dances.

Contra dance is as old as New England itself, and traces its roots back to the country dance forms of the British Isles before Colonization. In the days before radio, TV, and automobiles, monthly dances held an important place in the lives of rural Vermonters as one of their only sources of entertainment and social interaction. During the last few decades, this form of dance was threatened with extinction, but through the expertise and dedication of Dudley Laufman and a handful of others, contra dancing is now in the midst of a revival.

Dudley has been calling dances in New England for almost 30 years. He has traveled to England and Ireland to experience the music and dance of those countries first-hand. He brings with him Bob McQuillen, a schoolteacher whose inimitable style on piano and accordion forms the backbone of Dudley's band, the Canterbury Country Dance Orchestra.

The Arm & Hammer String Band, a well known local group, will play with Dudley and Bob for the evening dance. They can be heard regularly throughout Vermont at concerts and contra dances.

The fees are: UVM students with ID's: .75 for the workshop, $1.00 for the dance.

Card carrying Club members: .50 for the workshop, .50 for the dance.

All others: $1.00 for the workshop, $1.50 for the dance.

The entire event is sponsored by the UVM-Burlington Folk Dance Club. For further information call 863-6686 or Echo 656-4256.

Dowser's Convention

The American Society of Dowsers Convention will be held Sept. 18-21 in Danville, Vermont. All are invited to attend.

St. Anselm's Chapel

The usual worship and activities schedule continues as usual this week:

SUNDAY

11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

6:30 p.m. – Communion (Protestant) – be sure to stay for the supper following.

MONDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 8:00 p.m. – Prayer 'n Share (a time for informal worship).

TUESDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 8:30 p.m. – For Men Only (a chance for men to explore faith issues together – A NEW GROUP); 10:00 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal).

WEDNESDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 10:00 p.m. – Compline (a brief service of prayer and song).

THURSDAY

NO MORNING PRAYER; 4:00-5:30 p.m. – Wine 'n Cheese, drop by, relax, and visit; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; No "A Time to Share" tonight - we'll pick it up again next week.

FRIDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer.

Some other plans in the works – a wood-gathering expedition, an open house over Parents' Weekend, a group to design and make some banners for the Chapel. Interested? Other ideas? Contact Nancy or Geoff, x 3882.

A final note: NEEDED – guitarists and players of other musical instruments who would like to help out at the Sunday 6:30 p.m. Protestant service. Contact Nancy at x 3882.

Fleming Exhibits

by Mark Serainick

This fall's schedule of exhibitions and lectures at the Fleming Museum will be varied, offering something for everyone who has a taste for art.

Currently on exhibit is "The Janus Press 1955-1975." This twentieth anniversary retrospective on the Janus Press, founded by Clare Van Vliet, a noted lithographer, will run through September 14, in the Front Gallery.

Also on view is the exhibit "Collectors and Collections", a visual profile of six donors whose gifts have helped shape the museum collection since its formal founding in 1873.

On Monday, the Burlington Free Press devoted a half page article to the interesting "Traditional Africa" exhibit. Artifacts from the Congo, West Africa, and also Quiee beadwork are shown along with a slide show featuring pictures taken by two Peace Corps volunteers. The exhibit was arranged by Ms. Ann Porter, who is doing graduate work in anthropology at UVM.

On October 3, the "Vermont Photography '75" show will open. Photographers of Vermont will submit their work to a juried panel. This event is co-sponsored by the Vermont Council on the Arts Inc. and the Northern Vermont Artist's Assoc., with a grant in aid from the National Endowment for the Arts. On September 27, the public will be able to view the works submitted and on the following day, juror Nathan Lyons will present a lecture on "Photography and the Picture Experience."

On November 24, the annual "Vermont Crafts ('75)" will open featuring work by outstanding Vermont craftspeople.

In addition to the exhibits, a number of lectures will be presented (free) to place the exhibits in an art historical context. Check the Cynic schedule for the dates. They will usually be presented at 8 p.m. in the Marble Court.

Recycled Industrial Buildings

Wednesday evening, September 24, the Robert Hull Fleming Museum, UVM, is presenting a slide film and panel discussion entitled "Recycling Industrial Buildings".

Chaired by Mr. Chester Liebs, lecturer in Historic Preservation at the University of Vermont, the discussion will deal with the potential reuse of industrial buildings for community purposes. Guest speakers will be Mr. Colin Lindberg, A.I.A. Burlington architect, and Mr. Norton Cushman of the Vermont Department of Economic Development. Unused industrial buildings are a neglected economic resource, and the panel intends to exemplify this through discussion and excellent slides.

Co-sponsored by the Departments of History and Art, the panel will begin at 8:00 p.m. in the Fleming Museum Marble Court. It is open to the public and admission free.

Sat. P.E. Program

Enroll in the University of Vermont Saturday morning Physical Education program.

The program is designed for grades K-3, 7-12, special education students and also adults. The program offers fencing, judo, tennis, gymnastics, skin-diving, track, ice-hockey, archery, slimnastics, golf, plus many other exciting activities. It begins September 27 and runs until November 22. Sessions run from 9:00 – 11:00 a.m. for elementary program, and 9:00 – 12:00 a.m. for secondary and adult program.

Enrollment forms may be obtained by phoning Patrick Gymnasium at 656-3070, or by stopping in at room 208 also in the gym. The form must be accompanied by a nominal fee of $3.00 per family for enrollment in either or both programs.

Buddhist Group To Meet

Burlington – Weekly meditation and study meetings will begin Wednesday, September 17, sponsored by the Burlington Dharmadhatu, a Buddhist meditation and study group.

Organized by Vermont residents who are studying Buddhism as taught by the Ven. Chogyam Trungpa, Rinpoche, the meetings will be held each Wednesday, beginning at 7:30 p.m., in Building B, Room 132 of the Living and Learning Center on the University of Vermont campus.

Burlington Dharmadhatu developed when a core group of Vermonters studying Buddhism realized the need for a central location to discuss the teachings, as well as for space to hold group meditation on a regular basis. The local group is affiliated with Karme-Choling, formerly Tail of the Tiger, a Buddhist Meditation community located in Barnet, Vermont. This center for Buddhist study and practice was established in 1970 by Rinpoche, a Tibetan Meditation Master and Scholar.

The Fall program for this new center will include 40 minutes of sitting meditation weekly, followed by introductory talks and tapes concerning the basic teachings. Talks will be given by Rinpoche's students, including visiting staff from Karme-Choling. Tapes of Rinpoche's past lectures throughout the United States will be mixed with these presentations. After each group meditation and lecture, an open discussion will end the evening's activities.

In addition to this meditation group, Burlington Dharmadhatu is offering a course, titled "Buddhist Approach to Meditation," through the Church Street Center for Community Education. This six-week course will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays beginning September 23. More information can be obtained by calling the Church Street Center at 656–4221. The course will involve lectures, discussion and meditation practice.

Burlington Dharmadhatu joins a large number of Buddhist Centers throughout the United States which have been inspired by Rinpoche, who began his teaching in this country with the establishment of Karme-Choling five years ago. Since then a meditation center has been developed in Colorado, along with the Nalanda Foundation, a non-sectarian educational and social service institution, and Vahradhatu, Inc., an association of Buddhist churches. Rinpoche visits Vermont each year to conduct seminars at Karme-Choling. Two are being held this month at the Barnet community. More information concerning these sessions can be obtained from the Eastern Vermont Meditation Center by calling 633–4444.

First Wilderness Sports Lecture

The Wilderness Sports suites of the Living/Learning Center present the first in a series of lecture-presentations this Friday evening, September 19, at 9:00 p.m. in 115 Commons. The guest speaker will be Rick Wilcox with his slide presentation "Climbing Around the World." He will feature such places as Peru, Chamonix, Mt. Logan, the Canadian Rockies and our own Northeast. Other future presentations will feature whitewater canoeing, kayaking, and hang-gliding as well as more climbing. For more information, call us at extension 4251.

Student Chess Association

The Student Chess Association will hold their weekly meeting every Monday night in A161 Living/Learning at 7:30. These meetings are open to anyone interested in getting together to play chess. All levels of players are welcome.

The club also hopes to play other colleges in match play. Last year the club played Norwich and beat them by a convincing score of 3½ – ½.

The club also sponsors tournaments during the year and will start putting out a small chess magazine.

UVA Project Proposals

The Office of Volunteer Programs is currently seeking University Year for Action project proposals for 1976-77 from community agencies in Vermont. UVM faculty and students are also invited to develop project proposals. Planning forms can be picked up at OVP.

UVA is an off-campus, student volunteer/intern program which primarily serves the needs of low-income Vermonters. It is administered by the Office of Volunteer Programs at UVM and is open to students at UVM and the Vermont State Colleges.

In the past, projects have been developed in such areas as social services, education, corrections, consumer protection, information services, and health. Final proposals are selected on the basis of such criteria as: 1. the learning potential for the student intern; 2. the availability of qualified supervision; 3. the clarity of the job description; and 4. the ability of the agency to cost-share on project support.

For further information, call the Office of Volunteer Programs at 656-2062, or stop in at Mansfield House to talk with one of the staff.

Unclaimed Lane Series Tickets

The Lane Office, 234 Waterman, is holding a number of tickets which have been mailed and returned by the Post Office because of improper address - and also some "hold" tickets.

The following persons should come to the Lane Office and pick up their tickets: James Carroll, Dr. Carleton Peirce, Lawrence Platt, Carol Ellen Keyser, Carol Cassidy, Mark W. Sherwood, Barbara Olinger, Jean McDeritt, Steven Ross, Gregg Forscher, Susan Selig, and Johanna Rothman.

Sororities

All girls attending UVM interested in sororities are invited to a Barbeque sponsored by Panhellenic Council Saturday, September 20. The open rush function will be held on Redstone Green starting at 1:00 p.m. Registration for formal rush will be September 23, 24, and 25 at Waterman and the UVM bookstore from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

Med/ Ren

The Medieval-Renaissance Program (Living/Learning) is sponsoring on Monday evening, Sept 22 at 7:00 in L/L Commons 216 a talk, with slides, by Professors Al Andrea (History) and Bill Stephany (English) concerning this past summer's program of studies and travel in Italy. All persons, especially those interested in joining the program next summer, are warmly invited. Refreshments will be served.

CLASSIFIED

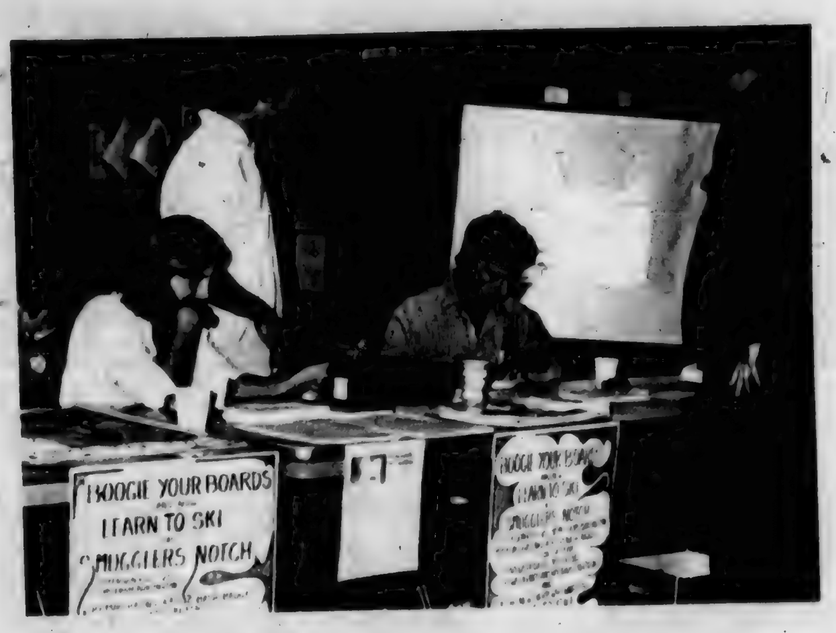
Event Horse or Jumper: 16.1 hands, 11 years old, grey Appaloosa gelding, has competed sucessfully as open jumper, open working hunter, preliminary level combined training. This horse is experienced and talented. Asking $2,000, but make an offer. Call Sue at 864–7162.

For Sale: Ski bindings – Nevada Grand Prix Heels and Toes...$30.00 Marker Rotomat LS...$25.00 (heels and toes) Solomon 505 Heels and Toes ...$30.00. All like new. Queen size box spring and mattress – $30. Call Will after 6:00 p.m., 864-4320.

Jazz 78 RPM Records, Ellington, Goodman, Morton, and others. $1.00 each. Tur-Lang Ren X-Country Skis, 220 cm., Used once – $15.00, call Jay at 862–9172.

2 Males, 1 grad. in Agr. Econ. and 1 Forestry, seeking roommate; nice apt, quiet, fireplace, parking, 3 bdrms., S. Union; Equal Opportunity; come to grad room, 178 S. Prospect or call 864–6002 nights.

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
96 Church St.
Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5 P.M.
Fridays 9:30 'til 9 P.M.



Smugglers' Notch Ski Area representatives Hilary Engisch, Robin Morrison, and George Bento in Billings Center selling the $10.00 BASH BADGE, (last year's Discount Pass). The 1975-76 BASH BADGE PROGRAM is open to the Burlington Community. The pass (a pictured I.D.) enables a person to ski for $5.00 on weekdays (Reg. $10.00) and $8.00 on weekends and holidays (Reg. $12.00), and also new this year, ½ price on ski rental equipment and ski lessons.

Last year Smugglers' Notch led the Vermont Ski Industry in offering a Discount Program for the local skier. The program was a success for two reasons: It enabled the consumer the opportunity to ski at reasonable prices, and it brought people to Smugglers' Notch (remember last April – $2.00 lift ticket and sunshine). This year the local skier receives the same discount and the BASH BADGE PROGRAM reaches out to the person who wants to Learn to Ski at affordable prices. It is the people who make Smugglers' Notch what it is, this program is for you, the people. Dates for purchasing the Badge at Billings Center are 22nd, 23rd and 29th of September, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. All are eligible. Remember – only $10.00. See you skiing.

SMUGGLER'S NOTCH

(Advertisement)

QUARRY HILL GOLF CLUB
9 Holes par 34

SPECIAL FOR STUDENTS
Green Fees only $1.50
Golf Club Rentals $1.00

Club House, Snack Bar and legal Beverages
360 Spear Street S. Burlington
WITH'IN WALKING DISTANCE FROM PATRICK GYM
NEXT TO UVM FARM
ID REQUIRED

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1983

Randy Jansen '77 ..... Editor-in-Chief
David Ryan '77 ..... Assistant Editor
Mark Valle '76 ..... Managing Editor
John MacDonald '78 ..... News Editor
Sue Perkins '78 ..... Feature Editor
Sari Bodi '76 ..... Arts & Entertainment Editor
Norm Robinson '77 ..... Sports Editor
Amy Weinstock '78 ..... Copy Editor
Deborah Powell '76 ..... Advertising Manager

VPIRG Challenged

Students were often criticized during the turbulent 60's and early 70's for their anti-societal stance. "Work within the system," they were urged. One of the consequences was that PIRG (Public Interest Research Groups) were established throughout the country, including Vermont.

VPIRG (Vermont Public Interest Research Group) is a student-controlled, student-financed, lobbying organization. One of the most successful lobbying groups in Montpelier, VPIRG was influential in the passage of the "Tooth Fairy Bill," "The Bottle Bill," and other pro-consumer bills.

Now it seems that the efforts of student lobbyists have proven far too successful for some legislators, as VPIRG has incurred the wrath of certain conservatives who were irked by VPIRG's summer activities.

A score sheet was published in VPIRG, which rated legislators on how they voted on bills supported by VPIRG. Those legislators who received unfavorable ratings are now determined to see VPIRG lose its funding from UVM students.

House Speaker Timothy J. O'Conner and Rep. Louise Swainbank are the legislator-trustees who are reportedly the leaders of the opposition to VPIRG. Insinuating that UVM funds may be cut, these and other legislators are pressuring the administration to cease the student funding of VPIRG. Wisely, the administration has not yielded itself to this political blackmail and strong arm tactics of certain Vermont politicians.

Freedom of speech is endangered by these attempts to muzzle VPIRG. It would be a terrible loss indeed if students who desire to work within the system are denied their chance because of a few disgruntled legislators.

An overwhelming support by students for VPIRG will hopefully convince the majority of trustees that the freedom of expression and action, necessary for a University education, is not worth the soothing of a few ruffled feathers.

R.J.

Vote For S.A. Constitution

Staige Davis, President of the Student Association (SA), and several SA Senators have been hard at work this summer forming a new constitution. A student referendum will be held next week to decide whether this new constitution will be accepted or not.

The inadequacies that were present in the old constitution have been largely eliminated in the revised one. Senators will have greater responsibility and a larger voice in the proposed student government. In the past, Senators were merely observers, where now they are participants.

A fundamental and important change is the formation of a Student Action Committee. This committee will deal with problems that concern students and recommend action that can be taken.

The last SA was dissolved because of the frustration that comes from the feeling that nothing is being accomplished. Student apathy was responsible for our last SA to fold. Enthusiasm, not apathy, should be the student's mood for the new SA constitution.

Whether you are for the acceptance of the new constitution or against it, it is essential that you vote, so that your views are known. It is the student's responsibility that an effective and active student government is maintained. Otherwise, we will no longer have any student voice at all in policy-making at UVM.

R.J.

WE NEED BULLETS LIKE WE NEED A HOLE IN THE HEAD.

• Hand guns account for 75% of all armed violence.
• A new hand gun is sold in the U.S. every 13 seconds.
• 7 out of 10 policemen killed in the U.S. were killed with hand guns.

We want the Consumer Product Safety Commission to ban the sale of bullets for hand guns only. They have the authority to do this if enough people write, or call them.

WRITE TO: CONSUMER PRODUCT SAFETY COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20207.

and tell them you want the sale of bullets for hand guns to be banned. (Except to police, licensed security guards, the military and licensed pistol clubs.)

Donations are needed and welcome. Please send them to: The Committee for Hand Gun Control, Inc., 111 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60601.

BAN BULLETS

Women's Caucus

We would like to remind everyone that the first meeting of the Womens Caucus is this Thursday, September 18, at Noon in Blundell House on Redstone Campus. It is open to everyone, so we hope to see you there!

The following memoir is the second article of this column. It is written by Margaret Edwards, an assistant professor in the English Department and a member of the Womens Caucus.

MEMOIR OF MY MOTHER'S CAREER

My mother began her career as a cell biologist early in my childhood.

"What's your mother writing her thesis on?" a curious neighbor asked me. I was four.

I replied, "On paper, of course."

When I heard my mother typing, typing, typing in the next room, I played more quietly. With my black crayon. I filled several pages with scratch marks. I was writing a thesis too.

On weekends, to give my mother some quiet and more time to work, my father would entertain me and take me away from the house. Sometimes we went to visit his mother. Sometimes we went to his silent, vacant office (he was an architect) and either picked up or left off sheaves of papers. Sometimes we went to cemeteries, though no one we had known was buried there.

"Cemeteries, Griff?" My mother was puzzled.

"Why, yes," he said. "They're perfect places to take a small child. They're better than parks because they're deserted. And full of stones. Nothing she can break and no one she can annoy."

I remember happily the acreage of graves. My father had explained that this was the special city where dead people lived. The tombs were obviously buildings -- long, variegated skylines of them -- all windowless. There was no need for windows because the eyes of the dead were shut.

"Like asleep?" I asked.

"Sort of," said my father, sitting on a slab of marble, smoking a cigarette.

I learned that the tombs of adults bore sculpted wreaths, urns, broken columns, massive crosses. Adorable carved lambs decorated children's graves. Occasionally, over the graves of young women who had died in their prime, full-standing angels presided, wings furled or unfurled. One of these angels had been vandalized. Her hands were gone, and several of her marble fingers lay in the grass at her feet. Her breasts had been painted -- two red circles and two red dots.

"Two nipples, there and there," I told Mother later, pointing to her blouse. She looked up at my father and frowned. He said, "It was a cemetary, Betty. I swear it."

When I was older, my mother would take me with her to her office -- actually to her laboratory where her research was continually in progress. The Anatomy Building of the medical school where she taught and ran experiments was a dank, cavernous, stone structure. Its interior has been completely renovated since, but at that time it looked like a movie set for Frankenstein. We went downstairs into the bowels of the building where we encountered the overpowering stench and screeching of the monkeys. They were caged and restless creatures, hairy forms that loped back and forth behind wire mesh. They moved in futile, repetitive patterns: four steps, cling to the bars, flip down, glance right, four steps back, wheel, glance left, four steps...

"Don't bother them," said my mother. We would pass their room; and I would stand at the door watching them. I was eight years old. I believed that the monkeys had willingly dedicated their lives to science, and realizing that, being primates, they were very much like humans. It would have been awful if little girls like me had had to live in cages and participate in experiments. Therefore, one had to be grateful to monkeys for standing in and lending their services. I stood at the door perplexed. How should one communicate thanks to monkeys? They smelled very bad, and the noise they made -- reverberating from the flanking plaster walls -- was deafening. Occasionally, a tiny, wrinkled, maniacal hand would stretch toward me. I could not watch for long.

The doors of the adjoining rooms were closed. Mother never allowed me to open them, and she refused to tell me what was inside them. Now I realize that these rooms must have contained the cages of dogs (whose barking had been surgically silenced), of cats and rabbits and mice and guinea pigs -- of all the animals whose plight would have made me cry.

"Do you want to help me?" Mother would be unlocking a dark and almost silent lab at the end of the corridor. We stepped into a half-lit room, its long countertops punctuated with Bunsen burners. There was an uninterrupted, soft, humming sound; that was the centrifuge. It was housed in a heavily insulated, plywood structure that had been constructed in one corner of the room. Actually this was a room within the room. Its door was thick and sealed the shelter. The temperature inside had to be regulated precisely, so you had to remember to move quickly, watch your step, and -- at once! -- close the door. Otherwise Mother's experiment might fail.

Inside were just the two of us. The ceiling of the little room was low. Mother's first microscope, the one with the wooden cover, was in a corner on the floor. Her new scope, with its plastic hood, was on the table; and beside it, a strange and very expensive piece of equipment with its own glass cover stood like a Victorian bibelot under a bell jar. Mother wore a starched white coat with her last name printed over its breast pocket. She had with her lots of keys, clipboards, notebooks, and pencils.

"Sit there," she said, pointing to one of the two high stools. "And here is what you can do for me." She handed me a pencil and what looked like a ledger, explaining that she would call out numbers (long numbers with decimals) and that I was to listen carefully and write the numerals in a column. We were measuring the length of root hairs of germinating wheat seedlings.

"Why?" I loved sitting on a high stool with a job to do. Now the centrifuge was silent between us, and Mother had begun to withdraw from it the glass tubes packed with cotton and seedlings.

"Because some day we might learn how to grow more food or better food. Or how to grow food in space."

"In a rocket ship?"

"Exactly."

More than a decade later, I called home from college to ask my mother how she had liked her trip to Cape Canaveral. There a bio-satellite had been lifted free of the earth, carrying in its capsule descendants of the wheat we once had examined together.

Open up to VPIRG

To the Editor:

During orientation here at UVM, as I stumbled in and out of endless lines and administrative buildings, I chanced to walk into one building which wasn't just interested in slapping sticky red tape all over my orientation folder. The building was Billings Student Center located on the main campus. A slight glimmer appeared in the back of my mind of some organization which was "showing its wares," that afternoon. My recollection was vague and muddled. All I could muster from the crowded memory packets of information I'd received in the past week was that the organization was volunteer oriented and it had some absurd name beginning with a "V".

My ignorance soon began to pinken my cheeks with embarrassment as I realized it was an information center for the Vermont Public Interest Research Group, familiarly known as VPIRG. I was given a concise description of VPIRG which intrigued me, so I attended the evening meetings. The next step was to become involved in one of the research projects, but paradoxically, the entire program's funding system is under question by certain UVM trustees, placing the program on a precarious precipice which will crumble if UVM's support is lost.

Briefly, it is a matter of the university students' support of the present funding system. At the end of September, a five day referendum will be held in which students will vote in support of or against this present system (along with the student association's constitution). The present funding system is incorporated into each student's bill. It is not mandatory; it is refundable at any time if the student so desires. The crucial factor here is to get the trustees to support the student vote. If the trustees continue to feel the system has not been sufficiently validated and they vote it down, approximately one half of VPIRG's budget will be lost. One of the optimum features of VPIRG is the very fact that little time has been wasted pasting stamps on money requests or tying up the telephone lines with telephone calls. This means all effort was concentrated on VPIRG and therefore on the Vermont public.

It is easy to just walk by a table, poster, or a person who is trying to tell you something. I almost did myself. All that is necessary is for each student to open up their eyes, ears, and minds to the information and decide for themselves. If the trustees vote the funding system down, students will not only lose an invaluable learning experience, but Vermont will lose the microphone with which the people of Vermont could amplify their concerns to the state.

Sincerely
Thyrza Goodeve

letters to the editor

Honesty Deserves Imitation

To the Editor:

I would like to sincerely thank the student who discovered my missing wallet and turned it into the Geography Office at Old Mill last week.

Your considerate gesture gave the lie to those skeptics who assured me if I ever did see the wallet again it would be sans contents.

I am sorry you didn't leave your name with the Geography secretary so that I might offer you some reward or at least thank you personally. Your honesty made my day and deserves imitation.

Thank You,
Maurice Mahoney

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in -- we are downstairs at Billings Center -- or call 658-4911.

NEWS: Margo Howland, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Peter Duquette, Steve Wells, Scott Curtis, Charles Kountze.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Seiden, Mark Seralnick, Jay Williams, Penny Siegel, Barb MacFarlane.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Ken Markovitz, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
PRODUCTION: Rick Berney, Sarah Clay, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis, Linda Mansfield, Martha Hess, Louisa Beinke.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Taves, Chris Brown.
ADVERTISING: Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.
Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

'Why Support VPIRG'

by Peter Cobb

By now most students know about the VPIRG referendum. The vote of confidence was called by the student group's board of trustees to re-evaluate student support for the environmental, consumer and health lobby and research group. The referendum deals with the present funding arrangement between the student group and the University of Vermont.

Many students, particularly freshmen and transfers, may have questions concerning the organization and funding of VPIRG. Presented below are VPIRG's response to some of the questions most often asked by students:

WHAT IS VPIRG?

VPIRG is a student-run, student-funded, research and lobbying organization dedicated towards working for broad social changes in Vermont.

VPIRG was founded in January 1972 by a group of students who had been challenged by consumer advocate Ralph Nader to channel student idealism into social action.

Following Nader's speech, a petition drive conducted at UVM netted 4,100 signatures (over 63% of the student body) in favor of the refundable VPIRG fee. By the summer of 1972 four other colleges had joined VPIRG and a professional staff responsible to a student board of trustees was operating in Montpelier. There are presently seven colleges and university member schools in VPIRG: UVM, Johnson State, Goddard, Trinity, Marlboro, Windham, and Vermont Technical College.

VPIRG's professional staff provides the continuity necessary for successful action by students. In addition, the staff's legal and scientific expertise makes possible effective work on a number of highly complex social issues.

HOW DOES VPIRG WORK?

VPIRG is run by a student board of trustees. Trustees are elected from each of the member schools with at least 150 paying members. Additional trustees are elected for each thousand paying members.

Trustees make all policy decisions and are responsible for the hiring and firing of staff. The goals of the organization are chosen by the board as is the selection of VPIRG projects.

Policy decisions are made at each monthly trustees' meeting. Members of the board have a responsibility to keep themselves informed of possible projects as well as informed about the issues facing Vermont. Staff members must, through a weekly Inter-PIRG, keep the student board informed on these issues so that intelligent decisions can be made by the board.

HOW IS THE STAFF SELECTED?

The professional staff is selected by the board in consultation with the director. In the event of a staff opening, the director must inform the officers of the board of the opening. The board then has the responsibility to inform the full board about the vacancy and to conduct a search for a new staff person.

FUNDING

Instead of being funded by special interest groups or government funds, VPIRG relies upon small voluntary contributions from thousands of students. The money is raised through a refundable increase in the student fees of $3.00 per semester.

Those students who do not support VPIRG may either waive payment of the fee at the time of the initial billing or may request a full refund. In either case the student cannot be refused registration.

VPIRG VALUE TO STUDENTS

There are a number of reasons why VPIRG is valuable to students at the member colleges. VPIRG gives them a chance to run a highly effective lobby organization and to be an important part in a social movement that is working toward changes in society that will help make Vermont a better place to live. Also many students, working through the student staff coordinators, are able to arrange credit for VPIRG work.

Nearly all of the many VPIRG reports and pamphlets have been researched and designed by students. Working through VPIRG, student activists have produced highly sophisticated research that has resulted in the passage of the nation's first strict nuclear power regulatory bill and a bill guaranteeing dental care for Vermont's children. Three detailed student reports challenging the Vermont Highway Department's road building philosophy have effectively halted a number of expensive and unneeded roads.

VPIRG offers interested students a view of government that they do not normally get from inside a text book. VPIRG volunteers can become intimately involved in the whole decision making process in the state. Unlike most college papers that end up collecting dust, VPIRG student research is used to make social changes in Vermont.

WHAT HAS VPIRG DONE?

In its first three years of operation VPIRG has established itself as the most prominent and effective people's lobby in the state. Student action and student research has initiated many changes in Vermont.

During its first four years VPIRG has:

– issued a dental report that led to the passage of an important new law which opened up dental care to many low and middle income Vermonters.

– issued numerous reports on such topics as employment in the ski industry, sex discrimination, electric utility rate structures, and disclosure of bank interest rates.

– written and distributed consumer guides on prescription drug prices, mobile home owner rights, food prices, and hearing aids.

– fought against rate increases sought by the New England Telephone Company and various electric utilities.

– issued a report criticizing the State Consumer Fraud Department that the new Attorney General called a "blueprint for change".

– issued a report on the State Air Pollution Section which charged that the state air quality monitoring program was in a shambles and that big industrial polluters were not being prosecuted.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON VPIRG'S FUNDING MECHANISM.

How did the present VPIRG funding system originate?

In the fall of 1971, students organized a petition drive to create a student public interest research group in Vermont. The petition provided, in part, as follows:

–VPIRG shall be financed by an increase in student fees of three dollars per semester.

–Any student who does not wish to participate shall be entitled to a full refund during the third week of each semester from an established public office on each campus.

The petition drive netted over 4,100 signatures (over 63% of the student body) in favor of VPIRG and the above funding system. These petitions were presented to Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont. On December 3, 1971, the Educational Policy Committee and the Finance and Budget Committee of the UVM Board of Trustees unanimously passed a resolution establishing VPIRG at UVM and providing for the present funding system. The resolution was as follows:

A $3.00 fee per semester will be added to the regular University invoice for undergraduate, matriculated students, under the title "Vermont Public Interest Research Group Fee." Included with the bill will be a brief description of VPIRG, a statement that the fee can be refunded and the time and place where the refund can be collected. The University will be paid by VPIRG for the collection of the fees.

It will be the policy of the University that the fee will be placed on the invoice with the assumption that all students will pay it. However, the failure of a student to include payment of the VPIRG fee will not prevent that student's enrollment.

If at any time 50% or more of the students request a refund, the University will no longer act as the collecting agent.

The institution of the fee will take place at the passing of this motion and the VPIRG fee will first be included on the invoice for the Spring semester of 1972.

December 3, 1971

The present VPIRG funding system was thus created by the above resolution of the UVM Trustees in response to the student petition drive.

Do all students have to support VPIRG?

No. The present funding system is not a mandatory fee, and safeguards, as described above, protect those not wishing to contribute to VPIRG. Pursuant to the above resolution, the

(continued on page eight)

D N 'G

Society is Coming to an End

by Gary Chilson

I told you that last week, and the Environmentalists and Christians agree. (Not all Christians and Environmentalists, but there are always those who don't believe). Taken together, their arguments are persuasive.

The Christians point to the rising frequency of headlines such as Crime, Vandalism, Perversity, Rampant Immorality, Disrespect, Earthquakes, Floods, Droughts. Christ must surely be coming! It says so in Revelations.

The Environmentalists are more elusive. They use Big Words that common folk can't understand: carrying capacity, exponentcial growth, dissipation (of the ozone protective layer or infra-red radiation), food chain, entrophy, energy shortage, water shortage, and crash curve!

For the devout Christian there is little to fear in the coming Amageddon. This is what True Christians have been waiting for. A shame there are so few of them.

I am not a Christian, and neither are the American Businessman or politicians (though you see them on their knees). But they think they are! They actually believe the applesauce that Christianity has become will save them from their Folly. But what about the rest of us?

There are four billion-plus human beings on this planet. How many do you think are True Christians? There are supposedly eight hundred million Chinese alone! Of course the common Christian might shake his head and shrug his shoulders sadly. We tried to tell them, he might say.

Of all the utter Horrors!

Christians destroy the world, preach their destruction, and praise the Lord for their ultimate salvation.

Ever hear that Communism is similar to True Christianity? That Christ was a Communist? We're not Communists, certainly.

Assuming for the sake of argument that Christ was a Communist, as theoretically described, (and I know of some similarities myself, as I'm sure you could think up a few), what does that make us? What does it imply about why the American Businessman continues to disregard the warnings of saner men?

Christianity over the years has changed from what Christ taught to what men since have said he must have meant. Ever wonder why the Soviet Union has so much trouble convincing its people? Such that they have created what could only be a dictatorship to control its citizens? To remove from their minds the temptation of greed. And why the Chinese seem to have a social system acceptable to the masses of their citizens?

The people of the Soviet Union are in large measure Christian. Their Christianity is not that of Christ, who preached for all practical purposes Communism, but of the Christianity of the post Roman Empire. It is what Christianity could be called in a general sense, since the foundations were laid for what is known as Western Philosophy. The Chinese never suffered our common delusion. Their system is the best thing that has happened to them since their history began.

The American Businessman (read Politician) believes not in Christ but in the lies (in the name of God) people have thought of since. But he thinks he believes, and he thinks the salvation will come to him for his belief, and so what the hell? Why not live as comfortably as possible? While we wait for the End. So Christian Businessmen have steadily increased their material production, convincingly sold the public a bill of goods, raped the earth, and reaped their Profit.

The American Way (aghast!) is that any Christian can become an American Businessman, or politician. Politicians, of course, are not as rich as Businessmen (for employees never are), except for tricky Businessmen-politicians. Almost commonplace as a prerequisite to public office is that the applicant must be crooked or he wouldn't have gotten so far.

Americans are materialists. And they call themselves Christian. Not being a theologian, and having read only the Bible, I can not explain how Americans are Christian. The two are contradictory.

It all began with the Businessman. Somehow, they had to modify the teachings of Christ so that bankers could be Christian. Christ was supposedly rather adament about money and wealthy men.

But Businessmen, it must be remembered, did not come into their prime until relatively recently. For nearly fourteen hundred years the Church controlled much of the wealth - removing temptation. Then the neophyte capitalists, the monarchs and the Protestants (succumbing to greed) sucked the Church's power out from under it. Even so, it took nearly three hundred years to overcome the stagnation of the Old Ways. Wealth now spread through the Arts and blossoming Sciences, finally erupting in what is known as the Industrial Revolution. This was immediately followed in numbers of generations by the Super-Industrial Society.

As the Church knew, Money is Power. Power had shifted from the hands of the Pope to the hands of the Businessman. With the funds available to them, the Businessman amassed enough Power to control the entire Society. Even our Forefathers, wise and foresighted for their historical time, couldn't forsee the nineteenth century Capitalists. The Robber Barons were the pinnacle of an inevitable though a frank and unconscious accumulation of power.

That power manifested itself in the Businessman's control of Society. Who are the "pillars of Society"? They control the schools where the Catholic Church admits that the children are most susceptable to Doctrine; they control the media and what a thought-modifier television is; they control the government. Like the shrewd businessman the Barons were, they realized that they could only milk the cow so hard before it started to kick. They allowed the concerned citizens a few pallatives. And began studying the new pyschology, suggested by Freud, enlarged by Pavlov, and developed by Watson. Behaviorism and the Unconscious Mind.

Is it so difficult to understand how They managed to pervert the meaning of Christ? It was their own salvation and temporal, earthly bliss. And the fools, so long a part of the "Master Plan of Capitalism," have come to believe it themselves! They are caught in man's most susceptable weakness: Greed, the Devil Incarnate.

Those sons of Businessmen! They've lived their parents' lies so long, generation after generation, that they actually believe the pap they've been ladling out. Their parents' decision to become silent manipulators, using psychology and bribery, cast them through the door to Hell. Is it any wonder that their lies are so strongly a part of us?

Or that you don't believe a word I've said.

'The Supine Machinations of Penultimate Grape'

Penultimate Grape knew no fear, no terror, only embarassment. Had he not slain the marshmallow footed kentish grave walkers? Were not his exploits known as far East as West and West as East and hadn't he read Mark Twain? No living creature could frighten penultimate grape, not even the frost-tinged lobe nippers from the hungry North. But once, embarrassment had touched P. Grape. Once when he was mercilessly hacking fern hearts with his rusty sword "Veneered Caliper" he had hacked and slashed, slashed and hacked, slash, hacked, beaten, sweated his way into the densest center of the Infernal woods, he came across the all sucking black void. Dark and drear it loomed like a Westinghouse 212 freezer with no door and the automatic light burned out. Penultimate ceased hacking and slashing, slashing and hacking, and blushed. The void sucked in - SLLLUUUUMMMMPPP!!! Only by accidentally holding his sword crosswhys (as his retarded hero brother Cesura had shown him) did he intentionally keep from being in sucked. Bolstering himself, he immediately burst into heroic lyric, spontaneous verse.

Ein grupen ist meein, (obviously heroic english)
No fearin, mine fleein.
Und sword I'm totein
Und tears verboten
And stole away.

Moral – To a void danger, grape steal.

Dorm Law Fights Resurface

by Cynthia Crossen

(CPS) -- Although rising off-campus rents have filled dormitories across the country to capacity this fall, students at some colleges are still battling mandatory dorm regulations which require them to live on campus.

Students at several universities have taken the issue to court charging that mandatory dorm laws represent a violation of their civil rights but the court decisions have been inconsistent.

The number of schools with mandatory dorm laws has decreased over the past five years, but a survey by the Association of College and University Housing Officers this year found that more than 50% of the public and 76% of the private institutions surveyed still require some students to live on-campus.

Last June a U.S. District Court judge told five Eastern Illinois University (EIU) students who had filed a class action suit that the mandatory dorm regulations were "implemented to achieve a legitimate goal of higher education" and therefore did not violate their civil rights.

But according to EIU student Barry Smith, the requirement that all EIU freshmen and sophomores under the age of 21 must live on campus has resulted in overcrowded dorms where some students are forced to live in the lounges.

Overcrowded dorms are also a big headache for students at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst (U Mass) where university officials require all freshmen, sophomores and juniors to live on campus. Four U Mass students filed a class action suit against the university last winter but the suit is still pending. An attorney for the students contended that the dorm regulations were a violation of the equal protection clause of the Constitution because they exempt married students, seniors and students over 21 years from the rule. Meanwhile 1200 to 1500 U Mass students are living three to a double room.

U Mass officials admitted that the reason for the residency requirement was the necessity to pay the bondholders who have financed the construction of the dorms and dining commons. This was also the conclusion of a trial court in South Dakota last year which ruled against mandatory dorm laws at the University of South Dakota. The court found that the primary purpose of the dormitory rule was to insure sufficient income to pay off the residence hall debt, not to provide an "educationally enriching experience" for students as the administration had claimed.

But early this year, an appeals court overturned the South Dakota trial court's decision, concluding that dormitory living "broadens and enriches the life of the individual student. We cannot agree that the right to choose one's place of residence is necessarily a fundamental right," the court ruled.

The upsurge of popularity in dorm living this year has helped the case against mandatory dorm laws on some campuses. At the University of Alabama, requests for on-campus housing were expected to outnumber vacant rooms by some 30% this fall. As a result, university administrators suspended the mandatory freshman housing rule.

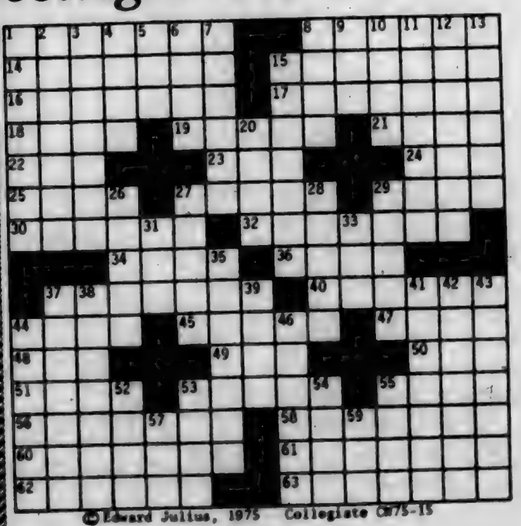
And at the State University of New York at Stony Brook where six students had filed suit last spring against mandatory dorm regulations, the administration voluntarily dropped the dorm law this year before the case reached court.

The rule at Stony Brook required freshmen and first-year transfer students who were under 21 and unmarried to live on campus if adequate housing existed. In past years, this has forced double rooms to become triples. This year, the administration admitted that the housing on the Stony Brook campus was not sufficient and allowed freshmen and transfer students to scramble for off-campus housing.

Students may someday wish for the good old days of mandatory dorm laws as on-campus living becomes more economical and less restrictive. Because of these changes and because most universities stopped building more dormitories when empty rooms became a problem a few years ago, on-campus housing may soon become a reward instead of a punishment.

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank

collegiate crossword



©Edward Julius, 1975 Collegiate CW75-15

ACROSS

1 "Beatles, ——, and Beads"
8 Mountain in Israel
14 California city or shady walk
15 Be necessary or proper
16 Nine-sided figure
17 Person with the Magic Lamp
18 "—— Calling"
19 Intended
21 Beer (slang)
22 Prefix: new 23 Caesar
24 Peggy or Pinky
25 Turpentine resins
27 Comic ——
29 Conried
30 Method
32 Boston, for one
34 Returner
36 Fluid measure
37 Mutilates or disfigures
40 Mr. Howard
44 Rubber ——
45 Russian rulers
47 Judge's garment
48 It's the manner of: Fr.
49 Railroad track part
50 Lawyer's degree
51 Price
53 Tropical fruit
55 Agitate
56 One who waters at the mouth
58 Steal the show from 60 Most unctuous
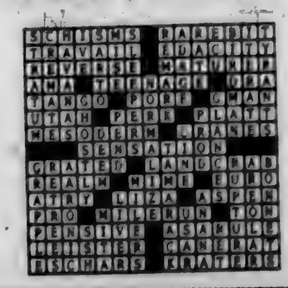
61 Directs
62 Tapeworm
63 Foxlike quality

DOWN

1 Crazy
2 "It's —— Day —— Today"
3 Robert Flaherty exhibs. et al.
4 FBI agent
5 Part of a triangle
6 Biblical country
7 Most sound of mind
8 Welshman
9 Exclamation
10 Sarlieg and Laver
11 Of standardized units
12 Apparent
13 Camera parts
15 Exchanged words
20 Publicizes
26 Booth or stall
27 Small food fish
28 Portions
29 Aaron's specialty
31 Breakfast item
33 Golf term
35 Begin again
37 Disease of chills and fever
38 Nobel Prize author —— France
39 Pitcher Johnny ——
41 Electrical measure
42 Accommodates
43 Reparation
44 Well-known French actress
46 Glues again
52 John: Fr.
53 Level-topped hill
54 A gem
55 Mr. Laurel
57 Hawaiian garland
59 Plank's curve on a ship

Last Week's Answer



ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Give 'Em Hell Harry!

James Whitmore as President Harry S. Truman

When Harry Truman and his brother Vivian were youngsters in Grandview, Missouri, they scored a first with this country's most formidable feminist. On their way to school one day, they happened to see a sizeable pair of buttocks sticking out of a "Chick Sales." Vivian, with the better eyesight of the two, and the fastest slingshot in town, let go at the tantalizing target. There was an ear-piercing scream and the two brothers high-tailed it for school. Not to be denied, the injured and offended woman gave chase. She cornered them outside the schoolyard, escorted them into the schoolhouse and vehemently reprimanded them for not respecting the privacy of an unguarded moment.

In later years, this same dynamic, bold and fearless woman would swing an axe at every barrel of liquor, close every saloon and be the scourge of every bar owner. She was none other than Carrie Nation-the first feminist.

Harry Truman, as portrayed by James Whitmore, tells this little known story in the Bill Sargent Theatrovision production Give 'Em Hell, Harry! written by Samuel Gallu for the stage and which will be presented at Plaza Cinema 1 and 2 on a reserved seat basis September 24-26.(2:00, 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. daily).

The stage attraction of the year becomes the entertainment event of the decade. Now millions of Americans will see it as it has been captured with all of its immediacy before a live audience, intact, unedited, unchanged in any way.

Mr. Whitmore has played the leads in three successful television series. In "The Law and Mr. Jones" he portrayed a lawyer (such as he had hoped to be had he gone to Harvard Law School) and in "My Friend Tony" he was a Professor of Criminology and Private Investigator. Last season he also appeared on the medical comedy series, "Temperatures Rising".

Al Ham and Joseph E. Bluth produced and Bill Sargent and John J. Tennant are executive producers. Steve Binder directed the filming with the use of 9 cameras before live audiences.

Hal Holbrook, who made a classic out of his portrayal of Mark Twain and James Whitmore, who did the same with his one-man impersonation of Will Rogers, are the most durable and exciting personalities in the "solo" performance field.

"Will Rogers' U.S.A.", acclaimed for two seasons on tour, on Broadway and as a network television special, won Whitmore the award for "Best Comedy Performance In A Stage Play". Now, he ascends to the "Presidency" in the most challenging role of his career - that of Harry S. Truman, the warm, human, earthy man from Missouri being hailed these days as one of the greatest Presidents in our country's history.

See Lewd Lysistrata

by Brooke Gladstone

Casting has been completed for Aristophanes' LYSISTRATA scheduled to run from October 16 through 19 at the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Karen Trott will appear in the title role as the "militant pacifist" who unites the women of Greece in a sexual boycott to end the war. Her most vociferous opponent, the Athenian Commissioner, will be played by Paul Ugalde. Also in the cast are Vince Rossano, Gary Nickse, Dave Aune, Darri Johnson, Melanie Donovan, Julie Carmen and others.

The comedy of Athens in the fifth century B.C., though vastly different in many respects, is remarkably "modern" with respect to content. The political and social issues which it spoofs so uninhibitedly are the same which confront us today. Director Susan Selig remarks: "This production of LYSISTRATA is not an attempt to duplicate the original productions. It is rather an attempt to keep intact and translate the humor of Aristophanes for a modern audience, retaining meanwhile the flavor of an older tradition."

The matter of translation is an important one. The one that is to be used in this production is by Donald Sutherland (not the actor), and though it is probably one of the more "lewd" translations, it is also one of the most accurate. The director explains: "It is difficult to approximate Athenian humor in our society, which is only lately removing its Victorian and Puritan attitudes towards sex. The jokes and horseplay and blatant sexuality of LYSISTRATA are often offensive to our ears and sensibility.

I've chosen this translation because it opens our eyes most vividly to the earthiness of the Greeks. While everyone is familiar with Plato, and Socrates and Oedipus the King, few are familiar with the lively bumptious tone of Aristophanes."

The box office will open from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. beginning October 1.

'Bring Out Yer Dead'

by Martha Hess

Monty Python has been described as a "college-age craze," yet it seems to me not enough students at UVM have become acquainted with the delightful inanities of this British comedy troupe. This lack of cultural consciousness can easily be remedied, however, with a short trip to Cinema II for a glimpse of their latest cinematic endeavor, Monty Python and the Holy Grail.

And quite an endeavor it is. In less than two hours these five very talented comedians chronicle the antics of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table in their quest for the Holy Grail. Set in the wilds of the British Isles, the movie is visually very pleasing. The utilization of authentic castles and ruins is a welcome departure from the plaster and paper scenery of Grade-B Hollywood versions of similar period films. The costuming, too, is an aesthetic delight, conforming to the authentic dress of the period.

After this point, however, all pretense to conformity ends. For instance, the characterization is completely unique. King Arthur, usually portrayed as a wise old sage as would befit his position as sovereign of the Britons, is portrayed here as a rather dull-witted character who has difficulty counting the dead in his entourage because of his total inability to count. He is continually being corrected: "Three, Your Highness, not five. One two, three."

Another famous character from the legend, Sir Lancelot, is traditionally considered brave but here he is excessively so. His own "peculiar idiom", his finds dramatic and heroic, but during the course of his bumbling exploits he manages to victimize everyone but his chosen enemy. At the other extreme Sir Robin, titled with apt understatement "the-not-quite-so-brave-as-Lancelot," is a complete coward who "personally wet himself" in battle and was thereafter subjected to commands to change his armor. And Sir Galahad, in a manner quite contrary to his title "the Chaste", pleads to be allowed to "face his peril" when trapped in the Castle Anthrax with a dangerous lot of undersexed nymphomanics.

The use of realism in the film is another innovative technique. As with all their other work, television programs, books, and records, Monty Python reaches into the recesses of human nature to create their own particular brand of bold, blatant humor. Characteristically then, the group doesn't disguise the coarseness of the Middle Ages with the mask of romanticism so reminiscent of Charleton Heston's historic epics. At the beginning of the film the audience is given a stark introduction to life in Medieval England. The scene takes place in a narrow village lane during an attack of the bubonic plague. Above the wailing of potential victims literally wallowing in the mud is heard the monotous cry "Bring out your dead" of the public servant whose unfortunate job it was to load the notorious death cart. Of course, Monty Python lightens the situation with appropriately morbid humor concerning a sick old man who refuses to join the other bodies on the cart, saying weakly, "I'm not sick. I'm feeling better. I think I'll take a walk." Answered with an annoyed "Oh, don't be a baby" he joins his fellow victims by token of a barely disguised blow to the head.

In another scene, peculiarly relevant to the politics of today, King Arthur receives a bout of verbal abuse from a group of Militant peasants who refuse to believe his claim to superiority as sovereign and instead consider themselves an "autonomous collective." In response to the statement by one lowly peasant "Well, oi didn't vote fer ya?" Arthur explains that he was handed Excalibar by the Lady of the Lake and thereby ordained to the position. When yet another peasant argues that "some farcical acquatic ritual" is no basis for kingship, he is set upon by the king himself and cries to his fellows in typical radical rant "I'm bein' repressed. I'm bein' repressed. Now we see the violence inherent in the system!" This from an uneducated man of the fields. Absurd, no?

But absurdity is at the core of Pythonesque humor, and all connoisseurs of the sublimely silly will enjoy the unsuspended amusement and moments of side splitting hilarity provided by these British genius' latest film, Monty Python and the Holy Grail.

Believe It Or Not!

From Guinness Book of World Records

Upside Down Duration Record

The longest period of time for which a modern painting has hung upside down in a public gallery unnoticed is 47 days. This occured to Le Bateau by Henri Emile Benoit Matisse (1869-1954) of France, in the Museum of Modern Art, New York City, between October 18 and December 4, 1961. In this time 116,000 people had passed through the gallery.

Vermont Photo Contest

The Robert Hull Fleming Museum, UVM, is pleased to present a juried exhibition open to all Vermonters entitled "Vermont Photography '75." Cash as well as purchase awards will be made, and some of the final selections will join an exhibition that will travel throughout the state later in the year.

Aided by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, and co- sponsored by the Vermont Council on the Arts, the competition is restricted to residents of Vermont. Entries must be photographic work of the last two years, and will be accepted by mail or in person at the Museum through September 25th. Thursday, September 25th, the Museum will accept entries during the evening from 7-9 pm. On Friday, September 26th, the Museum will be closed to the public in order to display all of the submitted photographs, then, prior to the judging, all entered work will be on public view from 9-5 pm on Saturday, September 27th.

The exhibition will be juried by author/photographer, Nathan Lyons, Director of the Visual Studies Workshop in Rochester, New York. He will give a public lecture entitled "Photography and the Picture Experience" at the Museum on Sunday, September 28th, at 3:00 pm. "Vermont Photography '75" will officially open at the Museum at 8:00 pm on Friday, October 3rd.

For further information, entry blanks, etc., contact the Robert Hull Fleming Museum, University of Vermont, Burlington, VT, 05401; 656-2090.

introducing:
NECTORS
PINE ISLAND STRING BAND
Friday Sept 19
Enjoy the fast service of a Cafeteria -
Buffet . . or for Leisurly dining, let us do the work - table service available and SPECIALS EVERYDAY
NECTORS
188 MAIN STREET, BURLINGTON

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTIONS OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS
145 E. Allen St.
Winooski, Vt.
OPEN 10 to 10 DAILY 12 to 9 Sunday
(At the rear of Frank's Texaco)
655-2620

THE HUES CORPORATION
LIVE - IN CONCERT - WED. OCT. 8:00 PM
WITH THEIR HITS
"ROCK THE BOAT"
"ROCKIN SOUL"
"FREEDOM FOR THE STALLION" AT THE GREAT
FLYNN THEATRE
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON
862-5121
ALSO FEATURING
JIMMY T & THE COBRAS
TICKETS - $5.00 each - Reserve Section - $6.50
FIRST 5 DAYS TICKETS EXCLUSIVE TO U.V.M. Students at 'CYNIC' OFFICE

Welcome Back Students
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Fri. Sept 19-Sept 21 – Eros
Sept 22-Sept 27 – Dixie Bros. Garage
Sept. 29-Oct. 4 - Canyon
Oct. 6-Oct. 12 - Wide Open
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9 Mon. – Thurs.

Hues Corporation To 'Rock The Boat'

The 1,500 seat Flynn Theater in downtown Burlington, built in 1931 as a combination live theater-movie house, is bringing back live entertainment on a regular basis.

For the first concert, The Hues Corporation, one of the country's top concert groups, has been booked for Wednesday, October 8. The concert will include the group's top-of-the-charts "Rock the Boat", "Freedom for the Stallion" and others from its hit albums and singles.

Presently under negotiation are concerts by Fleetwood Mac, top-of-the-charts singer Gloria Gaynor and the incomparable Ray Charles.

Merrill Jarvis, president of Merrill Theater Corporation and owner of the Flynn Theater, says Burlington has a need for top quality live entertainment and feels the Flynn is ideally suited for it.

Built during the art deco period, the theater is one of the finest in New England. It has been used recently by Lyric Theater for several successful stage plays and will be used by that group again for its upcoming production of My Fair Lady.

THE HUES CORPORATION

With three successive hit singles, "Freedom For the Stallion," "Miracle Maker," and their biggest yet, "Rock the Boat," for RCA Records, The Hues Corporation, a three-member soul and pop group, have hit the bigtime. All three singles are contained on their debut RCA album, Freedom For the Stallion (APL1-0323).

Their success is no fluke, for behind their music, The Hues Corporation has spent five years putting together a polished, fast-paced live act that has earned them enthusiastic nightclub and concert acclaim. Among the presitious gigs The Hues have already played are the Circus-Circus in Las Vegas, King's Castle in Lake Tahoe, the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium, the Riviera in Palm Springs, and The Starwood Club in L.A. And in June, 1974 they stormed the East Coast beginning with a weeklong gig at New York's Apollo Theater. The Hues have also been active in other media, having appeared in the horror movie Blacula and on two "Dick Clark" TV shows.

The Hues Corporation members are H. Ann Kelly, St. Clair Lee and Tommy Brown, the latter having recently replaced Fleming Williams, who left to form his own solo act after the completion of the group's first album. Born in Birmingham, Alabama, and brought up in L.A., Ann has a pure bell-like singing style that she developed from years of singing in her church choir. She is also a fashion freak, who makes practically all the clothes she wears on stage. The other members of the group call her "Cool Kelly" because she never seems to get upset or hassled.

St. Clair Lee was born in San Francisco but spent most of his life in Detroit and Los Angeles. He is better known to his friends as "The Dancer" because he would rather dance than do (almost) anything else. St. Clair has been active in show business since he was fifteen.

Tommy Brown, who sings lead on "Rock The Boat," was, like Ann, born in Alabama and brought up in Los Angeles. The two are old friends, having sung for years together in the same church. Before joining the Hues, Tommy sang with an L.A.-based group called Just Us.

On stage and on record, The Hues Corporation deliver something for everyone...liquid soul that dissolves into dynamic funk, followed by a ballad for a change of pace. With their rapidly-growing success, it's a safe bet that The Hues Corporation will be around for a long time to come.

Space Odyssey: An Ozone Change

by Paul Prior

How. High are you? Things are movin' and groovin' on this side of the Ozone layer. Contrary to published reports, the Ozone is not fading away--it is still flourishing, with many happy inhabitants. I've just returned from a lengthy sojourn there, and believe me, more and more people are entering the Zone every second. But enough of the introductary bojive, this column is concerned with music.

Once in a great while an album will float down the pike that makes one flash on it immediately. Last year's Beck release, Blow by Blow, was one such l.p.; it was on my turntable four or five times daily. Well, there's another one that holds the same honor now, a solo effort by former Spooky Tooth leader Gary Wright entitled Dream Weaver. I was exposed to it initially on New York radio, where it was given what is called in the trades "heavy airplay". And so rightfully so...

The album is unique in the fact that it is almost entirely recorded on keyboard instruments. With the exception of one cut featuring Ronnie Montrose on guitar, everything is played on either organ, clavinet, Fender Rhodes piano, and the mighty Arp synthesizer. Andy Newmark and jumpin' Jim Keltner alternate on drums, and that's all folks. All songs except one are written by Gary Wright, who sings lead.

So many albums are released that feature maybe four or five good cuts with the rest being filler material--This record is not among such two bit half wit affairs. Lushly produced by Mr. Wright, it is dominated by keyboard, but not to the point of being overbearing. Rick Wakeman's Six Wives of Henry VIII comes to mind, but only because he was trying to break from Yes and establish a solo career. Wright, American born, spent the bulk of his musical career with British group Spooky Tooth. They broke up and reformed several times, but after an excellent album entitled The Mirror was released, they dissolved for good.

Apparently Wright spent alot of time writing and recording the l.p., and it shows it: Every cut is memorable, with melodies that stay with you for quite some time after the record has ended. Wright has a good voice, and fine taste in arranging. The keyboards are not super-electronic, they don't rely completely on synthesizer as Wakeman, for example. Wright gets around not having a bass player by using what is called a bass keyboard. The drumming is tight, both Newmark and Keltner are sought-after session men--Both have played extensively with George Harrison. I might add that George Harrison once played with Gary Wright on tour several years back, a little known fact until today. As Kreskin would say, "Isn't it Amazing?!"

Several songs stand out, even though all are superb. "Love is Alive," "Can't Find the Judge", and "Dream Weaver" have been running through my head since I've had the album. Interestingly enough, everyone I've played the album for has flashed on it immediately. So this definitely gets the Captain's Seal of Approval. I might even go so far as to recommend it without reservation... So folks, (that means Mom, Pop, and sis too) buzz down to the nearest record store and demand Mr. Wright. Next week we might have some tunes to talk about that might interest the Deadheads in the audience.

Feat Fan Corner---I've heard some very solid rumors about an appearance in fabulous B-Town by Lowell George and Company. Watch this column for further developments. Over and Out.

Play It Again Woody

by Barb MacFarlane

"Making a funny movie provides all the enjoyment of getting your legs caught in a threshing machine. As a matter of fact, it's not even that pleasurable with the threshing machine, the end comes much quicker". Who else but Woody Allen would put dying in the throes of a threshing machine above making a comedy on the pleasure scale? Lucky for us all, seeing Love and Death which is written, directed, and stars Woody, is definitely more enjoyable, though not as consistent, as a threshing machine.

Love and Death is about God, Russia, War, women, God, death, anguish, assassinations, and God: your usual everyday humourous topics. It traces Boris (Woody Allen) through his life as a child Cossack who, when confronted with white-sheeted Death (sheeted, not robed) inquires into the Male/Female ratio in the beyond. The film carries the usual shnook after "femme-fatal". If jokes and sight gags, which with Woody at the helm still are and will always be funny. To see him contorting his face to keep up with a countess' amorous lip signals is not to be missed.

So bungling little Boris grows up into bungling big Boris and goes off to the Napoleonic wars, providing Woody with a chance to show us that a battlefield is a veritable jackpot of amusement. Boris becomes a hero, through no fault of his own, and finally marries the girl next door, Sonja (Diane Keaton).

Sonja is none too pleased about being married to Boris. When he makes amorous advancements in bed, she hisses "Not here Boris!" Finally, through long philosophical discussions that you have to hear to believe, they are brought together by a plot to assassinate Napoleon. They fail miserably, and poor Boris is captured and thrown in jail. His demented father comes to visist and tells Boris all the local gossip, all of which is taken from Dostoyevsky's book titles. Boris eventually is executed even after a promise from God that he'll be saved, the ultimate in dirty tricks.

Love and Death bombards us with a constant flow of Russian orientated funnies, some of which are "la creme de la creme" of Allenistic humor, others which fall flatter than Alyona Ivanovna's head when Raskolnikov gets finished with it. This reminds me: one has got to know Russian literature to fully appreciate this film. Woody uses everything from The Brothers Karamazov to Fiddler on the Roof as the base of his jokes. It seems strained for laughter many times; some jokes are worn down to the funny bone, many of Woody's facial expressions and mannerisms get tedious. It contains the usual frantic to be funny humor seen throughout his movies, from What's New Pussy Cat? to Sleeper. However, Woody's uncanny ability to take a normal phrase and twist it to be outrageously funny, is often the saving grace of his films. Take for example the phrases "Lend me a hand" or "I'm saving a piece of land" let your imagination wander... Another compensation for the film's pitfalls is Diane Keaton, who carries some scenes to success when Woody gets tiresome. In Love and Death she is established as a top comedianne, from blatent slapstick to over worked cliches, which happen to constitute eighty percent of her lines.

Despite its inconsistency, Love and Death is a very funny movie, which keeps Woody at the top of the list in comedy kings. It is a perfect vehicle to show what a bizarre sense of humor can do to serious Russian literature, respected philosophical questions, and fields of wheat. Woody Allen once said his one regret in life was that he is not someone else. Lucky for us all he's not.

The Order Of First Day Let Downs

by Charlie Kountze

"You're so lucky! Christ, how I wish that I was eighteen and starting college again!" With that and a shake of the hand you and your father part company, as you set off, like Telemachus, to see what you can make of the world.

Arriving on campus your stomach knots up - you suddenly realize that you are alone. All of that elan and bravado which you possessed in such abundance at going away parties seems to have evaporated. Steady now. You take a deep breath and press onward.

You think that the first order of business is to get settled in your room. Not so. You discover that the first order of business is to get the key so you can open the door - which you finally do, after an hour's wait in line.

Chittenden Hall. Well, it looks fairly pleasant from the outside, you remark to yourself, even if it isn't the St. Regis. Naturally, you automatically think it follows that your room will be the same. Wrong again. As the door swings open you behold a closet, a very small room, painted in what can only be described as vomit yellow. You mutter something under your breath about not being able to tell a book by its cover. After arranging things as best you can (due to an acute paucity of hangers and closet and bureau space) you leave in search of dinner. Due to the lateness of the hour you soon discover that all of the regular dining halls are closed, and you are directed by various people to a place called "The Den." Famished, you grab a tray and push into line. After perusing the fare you notice a sign hanging overhead, "McDonald's Corner - Hamburgers, Cheeseburgers, and French Fries." Good God, that did it; you've suddenly lost all desire for food.

It's late now and the day's almost through. The last item on the orientation agenda is a movie, shown free courtesy of the Student Association. Now, the Paper Chase is a fine show, but not exactly the type you would want to see on your first night at college. It centers around the life of a sensitive and idealistic first year law student who is verbally berated and viciously snubbed by a professor whom he admires.

The movie ends with the student, nine months older and deciding to chuck the whole rotten system, after seeing the competitive pressure for grades push one of his close friends into an attempt at suicide. You come away from the movie relieved that this isn't Cambridge, Mass., and head back to the dorm.

RESEARCH

Thousands of Topics

Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.

RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11322 IDAHO AVE., # 206
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474

Our research papers are sold for research purposes only.

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18
I'M NO ANGEL (1933) – Mae West, Cary Grant
B-106 Cook – 7:30 P.M. – Free

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 19
O' LUCKY MAN (1973) – Malcolm McDowell
B-106 Cook – 7:30 & 10:00 P.M. – $1

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20
MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN (1936) – Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, Lionel Strander
B-106 Cook – 7:30 P.M. – Free

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23
KIND HEARTS AND CORONETS (1945) – Alec Guiness, Joan Greenwood
B-106 Cook – 7:30 P.M. – Free

SKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLEN SKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENS

Street Vendors Threatened

Looking out over Lake Champlain may be slightly reminiscent of the view from San Francisco over the bay. Then there are the delights on the streets of the San Francisco wharf: the myriads of vendors, musicians, and peddlers and tricksters (of all sorts) attracting clientele, instilling gaiety in them, unifying them and just plain making the streets a lot warmer and friendly. People don't walk by one another with blank faces. They stop, listen, and shop together. People become one in a friendly environment. What could be a similar shopping environment in Burlington is being threatened by Burlington's established businesses.

Previously, Burlington's streets were not dotted with vendors as they are this year. Vendors were unaware that a license could be easily obtained. In many cities, street vending is prohibited. But this year's influx of peddlers has brought a variety of wares as diversified and fascinating as some of the knick-knack and craft items regularly seen in permanent stores featuring crafts. Plants, pottery, wooden toys, jewelry, and even those fun-to-eat hot dogs that were only obtainable in Central Park while visiting the zoo are now purchasable in Burlington.

One of the advantages that street vending offers the browser or shopper is a one-to-one rapport. This was once an integral part of the early American selling tradition. In the hustle and bustle of today's quick paced environment, it's comforting to know that in Burlington individually produced wares can still be bought. Purchasers are not limited to machined merchandise. In addition to this, there are no salesclerks who are uninformed about the product they're selling. Buying on the street provides the purchaser with the opportunity to question the craftsperson directly about product quality. The purchasers can question what they are buying. Unsatisfied buyers can easily return to the purchasing point and demand satisfaction from the "manufacturer," who in other stores is an omnipotent, never-to-be-seen creator.

Because the peddlers depend on increased trade to survive, their products must be of high quality. They have no publicity other than satisfaction of their customers. The items they sell take far more pride in their work than would a factory worker stuck into an 8 to 4 job who never establishes face with the market. Unlike store salespersonnel, managers, or production workers, the peddlers have their egos at stake; their hearts are in each item sold.

But these delightful peddlers are threatened by some of the other Burlington merchants. A few businesses (in particular, Preston Jewelers), feel that the peddlers make Burlington look as though it were a "carnival." As a result, the issue of whether Burlington should permit such trade will come before the Burlington courts.

Whether Burlington looks like a carnival is debatable. But whoever said that a carnival was a bad thing? After all, when the traditional carnivals came once a year, the towns poured out to go and everyone shook hands with the mayor. Maybe the gaiety of a carnival is what Burlington needs in this phase of economic depression. In a state famed for its close rural circles, it's a shame to think that Vermont's major city is falling prey to the unfriendly big city anonymity. The sacrifice of what amounts to small revenue on the part of Burlington's established merchants is a small price to pay to uphold a genial Burlington environment.

SA Film Series Schedule

The SA Film Series is now entering its third week. And with this article begins a weekly series of articles on what's happening with SA Films. First of all – to all those who want a complete list of the films for this semester – all of the big yellow posters are gone. They were expensive to print and only 800 were printed. But a complete list (an exact duplicate of the information on the poster) is printed in the last issue of the Vermont Summer Cynic. This is the large issue with the red and black cover. If you don't have a copy of this, you can get one in the Cynic office in lower Billings. The list is on the last four pages of this paper.

Now – to all those who are interested in working with SA Films, doing odd jobs while you learn a little of the functioning of the Film Bureau – we are looking for people to help. If you are interested, please call 656-2029 (Monday – Wednesday is the best time to call) or come by the Film office which is on the Third Balcony in Billings Center.

The film schedule for this week begins tonight (Thursday) with the Mae West film, I'm No Angel. This film was made in 1933 and also stars Cary Grant and Edward Arnold. It was directed by Wesley Ruggles. As Tira the lion-tamer, Mae is the star attraction of Edward Arnold's carny side show. Her rendition of "Sister Honky Tonk" is one of the high points of her career. The film contains the lines "Peel me a grape, Beulah" and "Come up and see me sometime," as well as a hilarious courtroom plea by Miss West. Show time is 7:30 in B-106 Cook. Admission is free.

On Friday O Lucky Man, with Malcolm McDowell, will be presented. This film, which co-stars Ralph Richardson, Rachel Roberts, and Arthur Lowe, was directed by Lindsay Anderson, who has made only three feature length films. The other two are This Sporting Life, made in 1963, and If, made in 1968. These films have established him as one of the world's most powerful and individual directors. The subject of O Lucky Man, Anderson's most ambitious work to date, is the eternal circle of human experience – the mixture of aspiration, energy, wickedness, fun, humor and folly that is the life of man. It follows the hero on his journey through life – and the Lucky Man in the title symbolizes man's reliance on fate to form his destiny. The star of the film, Malcolm McDowell, previously seen in If and A Clockwork Orange, is one of the most sought after actors around today. O Lucky Man, his most challenging role to date, was developed from an original treatment by McDowell himself, based on his own experiences as a coffee salesman before he became an actor. Rex Reed calls the film "a masterpiece. It leaves the audience shattered. Savagely funny, humor-rich, dextrous and musical." Show times are 7:30 and 10 in B-106 Cook and admission is $1.

The Gary Cooper series continues on Saturday with Mr. Deeds Goes to Town, a 1936 film directed by Frank Capra and also starring Jean Arthur and Lionel Stander. Gary Cooper is Longfellow Deeds in this romantic comedy about a simple country poet who inherits a fortune – but doesn't want it. He is in quiet rebellion against society. The film will be shown at 7:30, also in B-106 Cook.

On Tuesday the British Series continues with Sir Michael Balcon's Kind Hearts and Coronets, starring Alec Guiness, Joan Greenwood, and Valerie Hobson. This is the most perfect in execution and performance of any of the comedies produced by Sir Michael Balcon and may, in fact, be the most polished and sophisticated 'black comedy' ever filmed. It tells the story of the tenth Duke of Chalfont, who is ninth in line for a dukedom and a large inheritance. He decides to shorten the distance by killing off the eight members of the D'Ascoyne family who precede him in line. One of the most striking features of this film is the versatility of Alec Guiness who plays eight roles (all the dukes of the D'Ascoyne family). Show time is 7:30 in B-106 Cook.

Support VPIRG

(continued from page five)

VPIRG Fee is included in all full-time, undergraduate billings. Students not wishing to support VPIRG may either waive payment of the VPIRG fee at the time of initial billing, or may request a refund during the third week of the semester at tables set up in Billings. Although VPIRG is not required to do so, VPIRG will also refund the fee at any time a student requests a refund.

How Many Students Support VPIRG?

At UVM, the refund rate remains below 5%. In addition, between 15% and 18% of the students waive payment of the VPIRG fee. Thus, over 77% of the students at UVM support VPIRG through the $3.00 student fee.

Is the VPIRG fee democratic?

The VPIRG fee expresses the wishes of the majority, who support VPIRG, while protecting the minority, who do not wish to contribute to VPIRG. In this way, not only do the majority of students get what they want, but the minority is adequately protected.

Why Is the Present VPIRG Funding Mechanism Preferable to Other Systems?

First, the most effective PRIG's in the country – those which involve the largest numbers of students in substantive work through a variety of issues – have been funded through similar systems. These include PRIG's in Oregon, Minnesota, New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts. Although all of the schools participating in these PRIG's do not use the refundable fee system, PRIG staff members and students attribute the success of their organizations to the schools that provide funding through this system.

Second, PRIG's which try to operate on other funding systems, the positive checkoff in particular, have not been able to live up to their promises made when organizing. Students have been forced to devote more of their time to fundraising than to substantive work. Their resources have been severely limited and have fluctuated greatly from semester to semester, making it virtually impossible to hire professionals needed to provide continuity to their programs.

Third, other university programs are funded on mandatory fees. Could the university exist if it funded programs on a positive checkoff? Would faculty work at a university which paid them on the basis of the number of students who checked boxes on their tuition bills indicating that they wanted to pay the faculty?

Fourth, when programs are funded through positive checkoffs, substantial amounts of the money collected must be used to raise more money. For example, Common Cause spends at least 60 cents out of every dollar collected for fundraising. By contrast, VPIRG, under the present UVM funding system, spends less than 10 cents out of every dollar for fundraising, allowing much more time to pursue substantive issues.

Fifth, the positive checkoff system does not work for PIRG's any more than for other organizations. Citizens are not consistent in paying for the programs they support and students are no different. That is the reason mandatory taxation was first introduced in this country – the Articles of Confederation just didn't work. Most students would probably agree that HEW programs are worthwhile, and UVM would not be what it is today were it not for federal funding. Yet how many students would actually write out a check to the Federal Government to support these programs if not required to do so. Students have expressed their support for VPIRG. Yet, without the present funding system, that statement of support is meaningless. VPIRG cannot exist without stable funding.

UVM's Role In VPIRG

UVM represents the largest single source of VPIRG's funds. By cutting off or substantially reducing UVM's contribution the bulk of the group's working budget will be eliminated. Student research and idealism will lose its most effective channel into the political system.

VPRIG Needs Your Support

In order to continue fighting for Vermonters, VPIRG needs your support. Vote YES on the Referendum, September 22–26.

Announcement – I.D.'s (Temporary or permanent) WITH VALIDATION STICKER must be presented at the time of voting.

We All Desire Beauty

We all quest beauty whether we are male or female. Vanity is the essence of most of our social interactions, especially those that involve persons with whom we have sexual relationships. The definition of beauty is subjective, though. Some adhere to Vogue magazine's idea of beauty, while others relate to beauty images such as Joni Mitchell, David Bowie, Grace Kelley, or Dustin Hoffman in his Graduate role. Popular is the idea that beauty is non-conformity. Often, people are puzzled over oddly garbed individuals, but actually, these people, through their apparel, are expressing their idea of beauty. However we define beauty, we all desire it.

Why do we desire it? Attractive people are idolized by our society. They are thrust into famous or prestigious positions. Lauren Hutton was a lost, unknown soul prior to her debut in Revlon cosmetic advertisements. Elizabeth Taylor began her extensive acting career in the spreads of Playboy. Playboy's pictorials are noted for placing beauties on pedestals. Marilyn Monroe and Jayne Mansfield among others began there, too. Now, counterparts to Playboy that are geared for women are promoting male beauties. Prior to this, male beauties surfaced through female viewed soap operas and doctor shows. The media's assumption that female sexual psychology preyed upon the young, virile, male doctor was not wrong, stereotying albeit. These programs have been amazingly successful in attracting the female audience that sponsors are appealing to.

But if only beauties made it to fame, not contingent on acting talents, political shrewdness, or other ability to undertake the responsibilities often accompanying a position of fame, society's idea of beauty might be universal, as well as defined by the media.

Those who Playboy or doctor shows might deem unattractive, unsexy, or just downright ugly do become famous. As attractive people are idolized, idols become attractive in the eyes of the beholder. Women have kissed their Jimmy Durante and Chubby Checkers pillows, and Phyllis Diller and Carol Burnett have no less been the subjects of many male pillows.

Thus, there are a variety of famous beauty images. This provides nearly all persons with an image they can identify with. Admittedly, some images are more popular than others.

But still the desire to be beautiful is within all, as much as most would not like to admit this.

There is nothing wrong with striving to be beautiful and attractive. The prevailing philosophy that "naturalness" should be our objective is not the denial of beauty, but rather the support of it. After all, we've created beauty out of naturalness.

J Geils: Raw Energy

by Michael Thurston

Hotline
The J. Geils Band
Atlantic SD 18147

Use of the old Atlantic label on every post Full House-Live J. Geils album serves as two-fold musical symbolism. Atlantic has been associated with the development of R&B into an accepted and revered heritage, while The J. Geils Band consistently updates on the R&B roots so dramatically influential on both individual member and overall group sound. The coalition between company and group is worth noting... The J. Geils Band has the product, Atlantic knows how to deal with and present it.

Hotline is the seventh album for The JGB, and offers substantially more 'meat' than either Ladies Invited or Nightmares, both of which lacked invention and singularly outstanding material, though each represented competent, relentless rock and roll. Hotline explodes with raw energy, then becomes duly restricted through the delicate production of Bill Szymozyk. The entire effort treads a fine line between foot-loose and frenetic. The final mix on the album allows for overlapping specific tracks, bridging traditional and contemporary blues-rock with light, alley-club blues balladry. Hotline is the most cohesive J. Geils Band album to date.

Any faults that beset Hotline are also a product of production. Most noticeable... the lack of grit that lent such honest realism to The Morning After and Bloodshot, though a small price to pay in the face of a major new release. "Easy Way Out," "Think It Over," "Orange Driver," and "Fancy Footwork" highlight an excellent collection of rock and roll from the 'bad boys from Boston'.

HARDSCRABBLE FARM

Boarding Training

Lessons Clinics

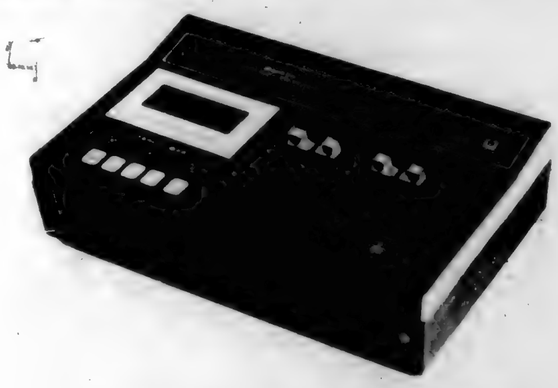
New barn and indoor arena under construction

3 miles to U.V.M.

Tel. 802-879-7892 Rte. 2 Williston, Vt.

Sankyo STD-1510
Stereo Cassette Tape Deck
with Dolby* For Under $200.



This 4-track 2-channel stereo cassette tape deck has the famed Dolby noise reduction system to reduce tape noise, plus Automatic & Manual Bias Switching for top performance, regardless of the type tape you use. Has two heads and a 4-pole hysteresis synchronous motor for low distortion and high frequency response... with less than 0.12% wow/flutter. Features slide rule input and output controls, twin VU meters, function indicator lights, 3-digit tape counter, tape run lamp and Total Automatic Shut-off in any mode... fast forward, rewind, play or record. Has two mike inputs and a headphone jack plus auxiliary input jacks.

*A trademark of Dolby Labs Inc.

Sankyo

Dealers in Burlington Area

LAFAYETTE RADIO - Essex Junction
CREATIVE SOUND- Next to K-Mart

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

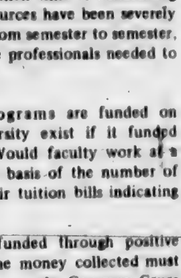
★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

Announcing . . .

EAR-PIERCING CLINIC at LIPPA'S



FRIDAY, SEPT 19
4pm to 9pm

SATURDAY, SEPT 20
10am to 5pm

A registered nurse especially trained in ear piercing and using a precision instrument will be at Lippa's to perform the painless procedure.

FREE EAR PIERCING with the purchase of one pair of earrings at $8.95

JOHN LIPPA'S EARRING CLUB

After your 5th earring purchase, we'll average out the cost of your earrings and give you the 6th pair FREE!

Charge Accounts Welcomed

46 Church Street Burlington, Vermont

news

SA C

by Paul Ajamian

It was just this past sp that a group of frustr
students, deciding that were fed up with organization entrenche trivial matters, voted to abo the old Student Associa and its outdated constitu

In so doing, they the way toward m constructive changes; cha that, with student support upon become a reality.

On September 22 thr
26, SA members will hav opportunity to bec familiar with and vote o
new SA Constitutio product of much work thought on the part of student leaders administrative personnel voting "yes" for ratification, students are only approving constitution, but are back government that will di affect the quality of the at UVM.

To provide background for thos
familiar with the St Association, it is organization of all ful undergraduates, responsi student input into uni affairs, as well as pro
the cultural, social educational aspec university life.

Traditionally, st
have been "represented" rather large senat initiated and voted

Refund

Students have all be notification of the Univ
new tuition refund which is effective w current semester.

"In order for stud
be eligible for Gua Student Loans, we comply with federal gu
as published in Title
Barwin said in explai rationale for the change

"We're really do than the guidelines re to," he added, saying some cases exception made to benefit the even further.

Students with about the policy
contact Mr. Herbert
the Accounting Offic
Charles Howe in the R
Office.

A summary of refund policy follows.

TUITION REFUNDS

Cancellations:
students who not academic dean
Registrar before the begins that they wi attending the Univer semester, will receive
The refund will in monies paid to the
for that semester administrative ch
$100.00

Withdrawal,

King B
V

by John McDo

The student trust
Vermont Public
Research Group
Wednesday night an
John King to the fu presidential post.
earlier been th
president, having f
for Sarah Hutchins presently on a leave
King is concern

Ziggy

Come

news

SA Calls For Support

by Paul Ajamian

It was just this past spring that a group of frustrated students, deciding that they were fed up with an organization entrenched in trivial matters, voted to abolish the old Student Association and its outdated constitution.

In so doing, they paved the way toward many constructive changes; changes that, with student support, will soon become a reality.

On September 22 through 26, SA members will have an opportunity to become familiar with and vote on the new SA Constitution, a product of much work and thought on the part of many student leaders and administrative personnel. By voting "yes" for its ratification, students are not only approving the constitution, but are backing a government that will directly affect the quality of their stay at UVM.

To provide some background for those not familiar with the Student Association, it is the organization of all full-time undergraduates, responsible for student input into university affairs, as well as promoting the cultural, social, and educational aspects of university life.

Traditionally, students have been "represented" by a rather large senate that initiated and voted on all pieces of legislation, with very little input. As a result of its size, efforts were often duplicated. This left little time for involvement with and action on issues directly relating to students, such as the financial cutbacks of last year.

Under the new constitution, situations like those of the past will no longer occur. A senate will still be elected, but will work on a small committee basis rather than as a large group. The function of the six committees (listed below), is basically to research and submit legislation to the General Assembly (G.A.), the voting body to which all SA members belong. The General Assembly will then accept or reject each piece of legislation presented to it at widely publicized town meetings. Thus, each and every student plays a part in the university decision-making process; if legislation is passed against the wishes of a majority, the blame will fall squarely on the shoulders of the G.A. members who did not bother to vote.

Each of the 37 senators (elected proportionally from Residence halls, Greeks, and off-campus) shall serve on one of six committees: Finance, Student Activities, Special Affairs, Communications, Student Action, and Executive. Each committee, after electing a chairmerson, will deal with specific areas formerly handled by the entire senate. For example, financial allocations to SA recognized organizations would be studied and recommended to the G.A. by the Student Activities Committee, rather than by all 37 senators. In this way, many more things can be accomplished at one time and by fewer people.

The effectiveness of the SA as outlined above depends, however, on two important factors. One is the amount of support that the constitution receives during the campus-wide referendum the week of September 22-26. The other is senate elections, which will follow soon after. Senators will be elected on an at-large basis, not from specific dorms, fraternities, or sororities. In this way a greater effort will have to be made to become a senator, which will hopefully attract those who are serious about the position. These senators, and the constitution that they will operate from, will be the backbone of what should prove to be a truly innovative Student Association.

All students interested in serving on either the Senate or any number of university committees are encouraged to visit the SA Office, Right Balcony, Billings Center, and talk with Staige Davis, President, or Paul Ajamian, Vice-President.

New S.A. President Speaks

by Charles Kountze

Staige Davis was elected SA President last year, at a time when the SA Senate no longer existed. He supervised the framing of a new constitution which was worked upon and revised over the summer. The Vermont Cynic conducted an interview with Staige to find out his ideas and thoughts on what he envisions for the SA this coming year.

Cynic: What were your feelings about the dissolution of the SA Senate and do you feel it was a good thing?

Staige Davis: My initial reaction was what are we going to do? There were a whole lot of students and Senators who didn't seem concerned. The ones who were on the constitution-forming committees seemed sincere and concerned.

I think the old SA was very inefficient and didn't define responsibilities well enough. The SA Senate was often bogged down in petty matters.

Yes, I do feel that the dissolution of the SA was a good thing. It was a very productive dissolution because of what has come out of the dissolution, the new government and constitution, etc. It remains to be seen, however, if the new government will succeed where the old SA government failed.

Cynic: For the benefit of those who are new students or who may not know, what exactly is the Student Association, and what does it do?

Staige Davis: The SA, as defined in its constitution is "an association (which) contributes to the cultural, social, educational, and recreational welfare of the membership, and (which) represents the collective interests of that membership to the faculty, administration and Board of Trustees of the University." All full time undergraduates are automatically members, and they are billed $10.75 per semester for this privilege. All other types of students (graduate, medical, non degree or part-time) may join SA by paying this fee. The funds collected by SA go toward financing speakers, concerts, plays, musicals, films, and the many clubs and associations which we have on campus. The SA also conducts some lobbying on behalf of the school with the state legislature in Montpelier.

Cynic:

Cynic: What role do you see the SA playing in the school year 1975-76? Will it be a continuation of the policies of the previous administration or will there be some innovations and changes?

Davis: We do plan some changes in policy as well as financial changes in our organization. There are three main issues with which we will deal this year: first, the high cost of textbooks; second, the rights of off-campus students as tenants in the greater Burlington area; and third, the establishment of a student sex information and health service.

We hope to alleviate the problem of the high costs of textbooks by the creation of a "textbook exchange" on campus. Through this exchange we would be able to match up those who wish to buy used books with those who wish to sell. The exchange would not set standards for the pricing or quality of books, it would simply function as an information clearinghouse for those interested.

The establishment of an organization for those students living in off campus housing is needed. They would deal with problems such as excessive rents, standards of housing, and the like. If and when conflicts or problems arose, a student could come to this "tenants fights" organization, and it would advise him of the proper procedures to follow.

A student sex information and health clinic which would be relatively inexpensive is a must. As of now, there are a few groups in town which deal with the same related problems, but they are very expensive and beyond the financial reach of all but a few.

Cynic: In your campaign speech you remarked that you would be a full time president and give the office your individual attention. Yet you are at present, president not only of the SA but also the Concert Bureau. Do you see any conflict here?

Davis: I see none. As you know, the concert Bureau is concerned with the booking of those groups and people who appear on campus. This is done on the phone, through booking agents, and it must be done well in advance of the school year. I volunteered this summer because time was running out and no one had taken the position. I will, however, turn the responsibility over to two people, Alan Conrad and Sharon Fath, as they acquire the knowledge and experience necessary to perform the proper functions.

Cynic: Is there anything further that you would like to say?

Davis: Yes there is. This September 22 - 27 there will be referendum vote on a new SA constitution. I would like to take this chance to urge everyone to vote in favor of it. This new constitution will provide for the election of 37 student senators on campus - 18 representing those in residence halls or dormitories, 5 representing those living off campus. These new senators would then convene with those presently in position - that is, the president, the vice president, and the treasurer - and help to formulate S.A. policy. It will, needless to say, greatly increase student participation and give students a greater voice in how S.A. is run. Finally, I would like to urge all of those interested students to get involved with their university. Many may not be aware of the fact that there are student seats available on the faculty Senate, the Board of Trustees, the University Finance Committee, and even the Governor's Commission on Higher Education.

Staige Davis — SA President

SPS Photo by Wynn Gold

Refund Policy Disclosed

Students have all been sent notification of the University's new tuition refund policy, which is effective with the current semester.

"In order for students to be eligible for Guaranteed Student Loans, we have to comply with federal guidelines as published in Title 45," Mr. Barwin said in explaining the rationale for the changes.

"We're really doing more than the guidelines require us to," he added, saying that in some cases exceptions will be made to benefit the student even further.

Students with questions about the policy should contact Mr. Herbert Painter in the Accounting Office, or Mr. Charles Howe in the Registrar's Office.

A summary of the new refund policy follows.

TUITION REFUNDS

Cancellations: Returning students who notify their academic dean and the Registrar before the semester begins that they will not be attending the University that semester, will receive a refund. The refund will include all monies paid to the University for that semester less an administrative charge of $100.00

Withdrawal, Medical Withdrawal, Suspension, Dismissal, Changes in Credit Hour Load: A student who withdraws for personal or medical reasons, is suspended, is dismissed or changes enrollment will receive a refund of tuition and fees in accordance with the following schedule:

1) If the action occurs prior to the beginning of classes, the student will receive a 100% refund less a $100.00 administrative charge.

2) If the action occurs after classes begin but prior to the sixteenth day of class, the student will receive a 50% refund.

3) If the action occurs from the sixteenth day of class through mid-semester (as defined in the Schedule of Courses) the student will receive a 25% refund.

4) No refund will be allowed after mid-semester.

NOTE: All Medical Withdrawals must be approved by the University physician.

Death: In the case of death of the student, tuition, room, and fees paid for the semester during which the death occurs will be fully refunded.

Refund of Other Charges: Room & Board payments will be refunded on a pro-rata basis.

Fun And Frolic For Parents Weekend

The Alumni Office and the Family Associates, in a plot joined by several student organizations, are conspiring to share the campus with a flood of parents and alumni the weekend of Oct. 10–12.

That's the weekend the Alumni Office has scheduled the annual fall Homecoming for alumni.

It's also the weekend the Family Associates, the organization open to parents of UVM students, has scheduled its annual Parents Weekend.

The Alumni and Parents' representatives met last spring to plan a joint weekend with a host of student organizations also interested in a gala do some fine fall weekend.

Not coincidentally, it's also the Oktoberfest weekend, when the Redstone Campus green bounded by WDW, MSH, and WCP, will be disguised as a German Beer Garden with knockwurst, oom-pah-pahs, and a variety of crafts booths once again featured in what seems likely to become a fall tradition here.

Represented were the Oktoberfest and Greek Week committees, IRA, and SA.

It was agreed that alumni, parents and students could and should join forces to make a gala fall weekend which would bring all three groups together.

In addition to the Oktoberfest events, scheduled from noon to 5 on Saturday, Oct. 11, features of the weekend will include the annual Athletic Hall of Fame dinner Friday evening; a Family Associates-sponsored buffet and dinner dance Saturday evening, campus tours, an open house at the Miller Animal Science Center on Spear St., and a Saturday morning show put on by students of UVM's Horse Club. There will also be three guest lectures Saturday morning open to alumni, parents and others.

The weekend will also be a working one for a sizable group of alumni, parents and other friends who serve on a variety of volunteer committees, the Alumni Council, Family Associates executive board, and alumni reunion and club organizations.

King Elected VPIRG Head

by John McDonald

The student trustees of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group met last Wednesday night and elected John King to the full VPIRG presidential post. King had earlier been the acting president, having taken over for Sarah Hutchinson who is presently on a leave of absence.

King is concerned about the upcoming student referendum to decide whether or not to continue to fund VPIRG under the present system. As of now, a $3.00 fee is added to the students' bill. A student has the right to get his money back either by not paying it in the initial bill or by asking for a refund.

Presently, UVM students

(continues on page eleven)

Pot And Privacy

(CPS) -- A US District Court judge in Michigan has ruled that students are entitled to the same rights of privacy in dormitories as adults in their homes. The ruling stems from a suit brought by two Grand Valley State College students who were suspended when college officials found marijuana in their dorm room.

yarn cellar

Macrame Supplies

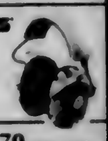
Jute, Cords, Wooden and Stone Beads

Locations: Burlington Shelburne Barre St. Albans

S.D.C

A STUDENT RUN COMPANY!

STANTON PHONO CARTRIDGE 681EEE $37.75 Reg. $2.50



BIKOSS PRO/4AA HEAD PHONES Reg. 65.00 $34.75

BUY BOTH FOR $70 AND SAVE

STUDENT REPS WANTED

EARN BIG COMMISSIONS SELLING STEREO EQUIPMENT, TV'S ETC. AT BIG DISCOUNTS ON YOUR CAMPUS. WRITE FOR MORE INFORMATION!

SEND CHECK OR MONEY ORDER PLUS $1.00 HANDLING DIRECTLY TO:

STUDENT DISCOUNT CORP.

DEPT. 81

P.O. BOX 113

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. 07079

Ziggy's Vermont's most complete head shop

Come in and see our new line of Mexican and Indian clothing and jewelry

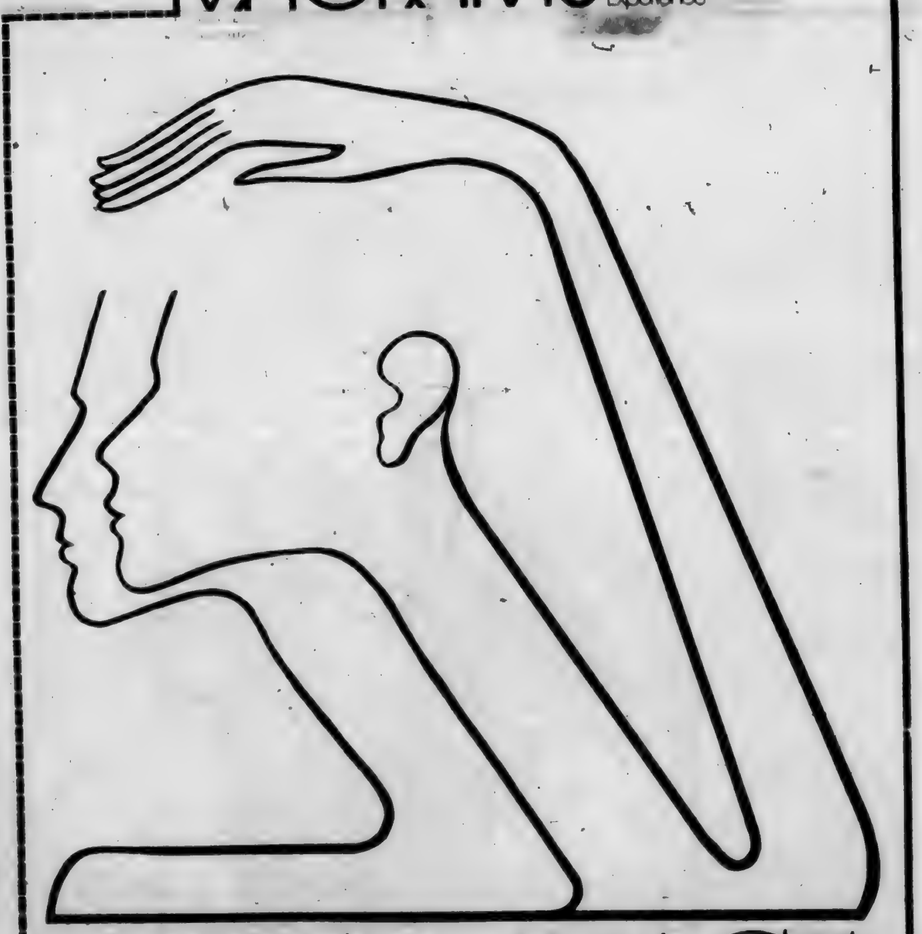
101 Church St.

in the new

'Mini Mall'

MAGRAMS is an Experience



SILVER IMAGE

Creative Jewelry

Designer's Exhibition and Sale

Saturday Sept. 20th

WAY-IN MAIN LEVEL

Administration Reveals Salaries

Special to the Vermont Cynic

Concurring with interim President Wayne C. Patterson's statement that the University had "a moral obligation to do so", the University of Vermont Board of Trustees has approved the release of salary figures for the president, the vice-presidents, and the deans.

The action came at the Trustees' meeting of August 15 and 16. There was no debate on the issue Saturday, August 16, though it had been a topic of controversy since the June meeting.

The figures show that Patterson, as interim president earns $43,000, a figure $1000 lower than the salary of Dr. Edward C. Andrews, his predecessor. The salary is also higher than that of Governor Thomas Salmon, which is in the $30,000 range.

Though various UVM trustees, most notably Luther F. Hackett, fought the idea of salary disclosure, Patterson, from the day he took office, indicated he would pursue a "policy of openness" on the idea.

In a memo to the Trustees explaining his reasons for the disclosure, Patterson said:

"Standards for accountability and the public right to know have changed in recent years and seem to me to be a sufficient reason for the University to change its practice on salary disclosure. I would recommend that the University follow the state government practice of providing salary ranges and averages rather than individual salaries for those employees who might be considered comparable to classified state employees."

"An editorial in the Rutland Herald suggests that some will be shocked by these salaries, and I suppose that is probably true, although the University has nothing to be either ashamed or proud of in its salary levels for administrative and academic staff."

"The University has nothing to hide. It is a first-rate resource for the people of Vermont. Few people realize that less than 20% of UVM's income comes from state taxes and that UVM brings in four dollars of support for every state dollar that is received."

"In these critical times the University must make every effort to build upon its valued partnership with the state of Vermont which dates to the Founding Legislature which chartered this University in 1791."

"That partnership requires certainly that the University be accountable. It also requires that standards for this be reasonable and supportive, and that the base of accountability rest on a public which has the opportunity to be well informed."

POSITION	FY 75 UNIVERSITY SALARY	NATIONAL AVERAGE [1]
President Wayne C. Patterson	$44,000 [3] (Andrews)	$43,359
Vice President for Academic Affairs – Alfred B. Rollins, Jr.	39,000	37,474
Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs H. Lawrence McCorery	29,000	N.A.
Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs Dr. John W. Moore (75)	25,000	N.A.
Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs Dr. William H. Kelly (76)	–	N.A.
Executive Vice President Richard W. Powers	36,000 [4]	38,556
Associate Executive Vice President (Not Filled)	31,000	N.A.
Assistant Executive Vice President Richard O. Barwin	–	N.A.
Vice President for Development and External Affairs Barbara Snelling	31,000	35,746
Dean, College of Agriculture Thomas Dowe	31,500	34,216
Dean, College of Arts & Sciences Abbas Alnastrawi	31,500	33,873
Dean, College of Education & Social Services Dean C. Corrigan	32,500	33,383
Dean, College of Engineering, Mathematics & Business Admin. Elmer Gaden	32,000	35,669
Director, Environmental Program Carl Reidel	28,500	35,218
Director, Extension Service Robert Davison	30,300	32,913
Dean, Graduate College William MacMillian	31,500	33,570
Dean, Division of Health Sciences & College of Medicine William Luginbuhl	36,020	$3,346[5]
Director, School of Nursing Jean B. Milligan	28,500	29,106
Director, School of Allied Health Sciences Louis Izzo	30,750	29,106
Director, School of Home Economics Signe Betsinger	26,500	29,904
Director, University Libraries Paul Kebabian	27,800	28,849
Director, School of Natural Resources – Hugo John	29,000	35,218
Dean, Continuing Education John Bushey	29,250	28,431
Dean of Students Keith M. Miser	24,500	25,168

1 University of Arkansas study of Administrative Salaries in 74 state supported institutions in 47 states.
2 FY 1975 figures increased by 5% for FY 1976 estimates.
3 Does not include $4,000 additional retirement annuity contribution.
4 Does not include $2,000 additional retirement annuity contribution.
5 From Association of American Medical Colleges study. Fiscal Year 1976 average estimated by increasing FY 1975 figures by 5%

David Nestor Named SA Director

by Steve Wells

The new Director of Student Activities this year is David Nestor. A graduate of the University of Indiana, he comes to UVM with much experience in the field of community relations. He knows what the job involves, having worked as an administrative assistant to a director last year.

Nestor likes UVM. He likes, especially, the administration's philosophy of letting the students control most of their own activities. In many big colleges, Nestor points out, a paid professional staff of five or six people will handle the bulk of arranging and planning most activities. For instance, one person might deal exclusively with concerts, negotiating for contracts, hiring people, etc. Another might deal solely with the Greek Coordinating Council, and someone might deal with the newspaper. Here, the responsibility falls on the student, with Nestor acting as an advisor, a person to bounce ideas off of, a person who knows about programming and can serve in a resource function. Student activities, therefore, become an educational experience and Nestor wholeheartedly agrees with this policy.

Nestor enjoys working with many different activities and attempting to bring order to the chaos that can exist with seventy student organizations. He would feel bored, he says, sitting behind a desk for eight hours a day and working with a single, specific task.

In dealing with so many activities, Nestor feels it is essential that the administration be kept aware of student needs. In turn, the students must know the administration's stand on many subjects. The Director of Student Activities, then, serves as a liason between the two groups. But, Nestor emphasizes, "I'm not a spy."

Another facet of the job is to act as a storehouse of information about activities going on around the area, country and the world. Once done, different organizations can keep each other aware of and share in the various activities that each has to offer.

The Billings Student Union is controlled by the Office of SA. Aply describing Billings as "an old shoe, one that you love to put on, comfortable, an old friend," he makes sure that everyone has plenty of space for reading, studying, or general knocking around, and tries to ensure that no damage will come to the building.

While many skills are required of the Director, probably the most important is the ability to work with people. This seems to be Dave Nestor's specialty. One of the most satisfying areas of his background, he says, was the chance to work with people on various projects. He'll have plenty of chances to do that in his new job.

Tunnel

A short walk and an equally short interview last Wednesday afternoon disclosed the "latest" on the progress of the pedestrian tunnel. Murray Construction, the builders of the project, were confident of their accomplishments up to this point and foresee no real time-consuming obstacle in the near future. All seems well, but nonetheless, there are the usual complications inherent in just about any construction project.

For example, when asked if there were any problems with the job, the superintendent replied, "We cannot work any faster than we are now doing. You see, we are working in a very limited area and we cannot increase our manpower. If we did, we'd be bumping into each other."

The traffic has also been a major factor limiting progress. When blasting (in the earlier stages of excavation), traffic had to be held up or rerouted. The pedestrian bridge had to be built to allow walkers easy access to the main campus without the possibility of

(continued on page eleven)

UVM PEDESTRIAN UNDERPASS AND BARRIER SYSTEM

The world's top-selling soft drink is Coca-Cola with over 165,000,000 sold per day in more than 130 countries. "Coke" was invented by Dr. John S. Pemberton of Atlanta, Georgia, in 1886, and the company was formed in 1892.

Needed Blood Donors

Increased scientific knowledge and new medical developments are having a direct effect on Red Cross blood collections from members of the University of Vermont community.

For the coming school year of 1975-76, the Bloodmobile will no longer come to the UVM campus for the traditional four-day visit each Autumn and Spring. Instead, blood donors will be asked to donate at 23 Mansfield Avenue. Drawings are held there daily, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.; and Tuesday and Thursday from noon until 2 p.m. Appointments for these drawings can be made by calling 864-5714.

Modern laboratory procedures now enable Red Cross to separate a pint of blood into its various components, such as red cells, platelet concentrate, fresh frozen plasma, cryoprecipitate, etc. Hospitalized patients can therefore receive only the specific component they need, rather than the whole unit of blood. This also enables blood to be used more efficiently since one unit can be used to treat several people.

Many of these components, however, must be made from blood that reaches the laboratory within an hour or so after being drawn.

Since the main blood laboratories are located at 23 Mansfield Avenue in Burlington, blood that is being used for component production should mainly be drawn in that building. This is the reason for eliminating the visits to the UVM campus and requesting students, faculty, and staff to come to 23 Mansfield Avenue to donate.

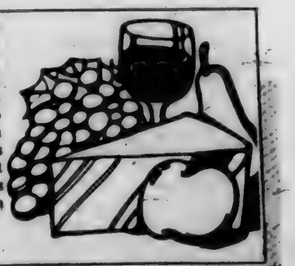
UVM students, faculty and staff are asked to make a note of their affiliation with the University at donor registration. An individual may donate blood every eight weeks. Competition is presently being organized among fraternities and sororities, and among residence halls and floors. Days will be scheduled for these and other interested groups to donate. For further information, contact Debby Maranville at 864-5714.

Grad Students

The Reference Department of Bailey Library welcomes new and returning graduate students to the UVM campus.

Please come in for coffee in Bailey Staff Lounge any of the following days: September 23-25 and September 30–October 2 from 9–10 a.m. At these coffee hours, we hope to discuss your research programs and outline library services available to you.

The highest price ever paid for a bottle of wine is 55,000 francs (about $13,200) for one of the only 4 known Jeroboams of Chateau Mouton... sold by Mario Ruspoli in an auction on November 21, 1972. This bottle contained the equivalent of five normal bottles and was thus equivalent to more than $420 per glass.



Order Your ArtCarved College Ring Now!

GET $22* at our TRADE IN RING DAY

UNIVERSITY STORE

Mon Sept 22
10AM - 3PM
Friday Sept 26
10AM-3PM

Trade your Gold High School Ring and get credit toward the purchase of your permanent ArtCarved College Ring!

ArtCarved College Rings by Jean Roberts

Cowl on Campus

The cowl says it all. A new knit for the newness of fall. Try it. You'll like it. A collection from $9.00. S-M-L in a range of colors. Illustrated — $21.00.

mayfair

the store with the green door

Upper Church St. Burlington

Matched for Matrimony

Three exciting and precisely matched engagement sets from our large and varied selection.

Illustrations slightly enlarged

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1860

E.J. PRESTON & SON INC.

17 Upper Church Street

Member American Gem Society

The student's car best friend

TEXACO

CLOVERLEAF TEXACO
COMPLETE CAR CARE

1055 WILLISTON RD.

SO. BURLINGTON, VT.

ROAD SERVICE
862-2935

Administration Reveals Salaries

Special to the Vermont Cynic

Concurring with interim President Wayne C. Patterson's statement that the University had "a moral obligation to do so", the University of Vermont Board of Trustees has approved the release of salary figures for the president, the vice-presidents, and the deans.

The action came at the Trustees' meeting of August 15 and 16. There was no debate on the issue Saturday, August 16, though it had been a topic of controversy since the June meeting.

The figures show that Patterson, as interim president earns $43,000, a figure $1000 lower than the salary of Dr. Edward C. Andrews, his predecessor. The salary is also higher than that of Governor Thomas Salmon, which is in the $30,000 range.

Though various UVM trustees, most notably Luther F. Hackett, fought the idea of salary disclosure, Patterson, from the day he took office, indicated he would pursue a "policy of openness" on the idea.

In a memo to the Trustees explaining his reasons for the disclosure, Patterson said:

"Standards for accountability and the public right to know have changed in recent years and seem to me to be a sufficient reason for the University to change its practice on salary disclosure. I would recommend that the University follow the state government practice of providing salary ranges and averages rather than individual salaries for those employees who might be considered comparable to classified state employees."

"An editorial in the Rutland Herald suggests that some will be shocked by these salaries, and I suppose that is probably true, although the University has nothing to be either ashamed or proud of in its salary levels for administrative and academic staff."

"The University has nothing to hide. It is a first-rate resource for the people of Vermont. Few people realize that less than 20% of UVM's income comes from state taxes and that UVM brings in four dollars of support for every state dollar that is received."

"In these critical times the University must make every effort to build upon its valued partnership with the state of Vermont which dates to the Founding Legislature which chartered this University in 1791."

"That partnership requires certainly that the University be accountable. It also requires that standards for this be reasonable and supportive, and that the base of accountability rest on a public which has the opportunity to be well informed."

POSITION	FY 75 UNIVERSITY SALARY	NATIONAL AVERAGE [1]
President Wayne C. Patterson	$44,000 [3] (Andrews)	$43,359
Vice President for Academic Affairs – Alfred B. Rollins, Jr.	39,000	37,474
Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs H. Lawrence McCorery	29,000	N.A.
Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs Dr. John W. Moore (75)	25,000	N.A.
Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs Dr. William H. Kelly (76)	–	N.A.
Executive Vice President Richard W. Powers	36,000 [4]	38,556
Associate Executive Vice President (Not Filled)	31,000	N.A.
Assistant Executive Vice President Richard O. Barwin	–	N.A.
Vice President for Development and External Affairs Barbara Snelling	31,000	35,746
Dean, College of Agriculture Thomas Dowe	31,500	34,216
Dean, College of Arts & Sciences Abbas Alnastrawi	31,500	33,873
Dean, College of Education & Social Services Dean C. Corrigan	32,500	33,383
Dean, College of Engineering, Mathematics & Business Admin. Elmer Gaden	32,000	35,669
Director, Environmental Program Carl Reidel	28,500	35,218
Director, Extension Service Robert Davison	30,300	32,913
Dean, Graduate College William MacMillian	31,500	33,570
Dean, Division of Health Sciences & College of Medicine William Luginbuhl	36,020	$3,346 [5]
Director, School of Nursing Jean B. Milligan	28,500	29,106
Director, School of Allied Health Sciences Louis Izzo	30,750	29,106
Director, School of Home Economics Signe Betsinger	26,500	29,904
Director, University Libraries Paul Kebabian	27,800	28,849
Director, School of Natural Resources – Hugo John	29,000	35,218
Dean, Continuing Education John Bushey	29,250	28,431
Dean of Students Keith M. Miser	24,500	25,168

1 University of Arkansas study of Administrative Salaries in 74 state supported institutions in 47 states.
2 FY 1975 figures increased by 5% for FY 1976 estimates.
3 Does not include $4,000 additional retirement annuity contribution.
4 Does not include $2,000 additional retirement annuity contribution.
5 From Association of American Medical Colleges study. Fiscal Year 1976 average estimated by increasing FY 1975 figures by 5%

Tunnel

A short walk and an equally short interview last Wednesday afternoon disclosed the "latest" on the progress of the pedestrian tunnel. Murray Construction, the builders of the project, were confident of their accomplishments up to this point and foresee no real time-consuming obstacle in the near future. All seems well, but nonetheless, there are the usual complications inherent in just about any construction project.

For example, when asked if there were any problems with the job, the superintendent replied, "We cannot work any faster than we are now doing. You see, we are working in a very limited area and we cannot increase our manpower. If we did, we'd be bumping into each other."

The traffic has also been a major factor limiting progress. When blasting (in the earlier stages of excavation), traffic had to be held up or rerouted. The pedestrian bridge had to be built to allow walkers easy access to the main campus without the possibility of

(continued on page eleven)

UVM PEDESTRIAN UNDERPASS AND BARRIER SYSTEM

David Nestor Named SA Director

by Steve Wells

The new Director of Student Activities this year is David Nestor. A graduate of the University of Indiana, he comes to UVM with much experience in the field of community relations. He knows what the job involves, having worked as an administrative assistant to a director last year.

Nestor likes UVM. He likes, especially, the administration's philosophy of letting the students control most of their own activities. In many big colleges, Nestor points out, a paid professional staff of five or six people will handle the bulk of arranging and planning most activities. For instance, one person might deal exclusively with concerts, negotiating for contracts, hiring people, etc. Another might deal solely with the Greek Coordinating Council, and someone might deal with the newspaper. Here, the responsibility falls on the student, with Nestor acting as an advisor, a person to bounce ideas off of, a person who knows about programming and can serve in a resource function. Student activities, therefore, become an educational experience and Nestor wholeheartedly agrees with this policy.

Nestor enjoys working with many different activities and attempting to bring order to the chaos that can exist with seventy student organizations. He would feel bored, he says, sitting behind a desk for eight hours a day and working with a single, specific task.

In dealing with so many activities, Nestor feels it is essential that the administration be kept aware of student needs. In turn, the students must know the administration's stand on many subjects. The Director of Student Activities, then, serves as a liason between the two groups. But, Nestor emphasizes, "I'm not a spy."

Another facet of the job is to act as a storehouse of information about activities going on around the area, country and the world. Once done, different organizations can keep each other aware of and share in the various activities that each has to offer.

The Billings Student Union is controlled by the Office of SA. Aply describing Billings as "an old shoe, one that you love to put on, comfortable, an old friend," he makes sure that everyone has plenty of space for reading, studying, or general knocking around, and tries to ensure that no damage will come to the building.

While many skills are required of the Director, probably the most important is the ability to work with people. This seems to be Dave Nestor's specialty. One of the most satisfying areas of his background, he says, was the chance to work with people on various projects. He'll have plenty of chances to do that in his new job.

Needed Blood Donors

Increased scientific knowledge and new medical developments are having a direct effect on Red Cross blood collections from members of the University of Vermont community.

For the coming school year of 1975-76, the Bloodmobile will no longer come to the UVM campus for the traditional four-day visit each Autumn and Spring. Instead, blood donors will be asked to donate at 23 Mansfield Avenue. Drawings are held there daily, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.; and Tuesday and Thursday from noon until 2 p.m. Appointments for these drawings can be made by calling 864-5714.

Modern laboratory procedures now enable Red Cross to separate a pint of blood into its various components, such as red cells, platelet concentrate, fresh frozen plasma, cryoprecipitate, etc. Hospitalized patients can therefore receive only the specific component they need, rather than the whole unit of blood. This also enables blood to be used more efficiently since one unit can be used to treat several people.

Many of these components, however, must be made from blood that reaches the laboratory within an hour or so after being drawn.

Since the main blood laboratories are located at 23 Mansfield Avenue in Burlington, blood that is being used for component production should mainly be drawn in that building. This is the reason for eliminating the visits to the UVM campus and requesting students, faculty, and staff to come to 23 Mansfield Avenue to donate.

UVM students, faculty and staff are asked to make a note of their affiliation with the University at donor registration. An individual may donate blood every eight weeks. Competition is presently being organized among fraternities and sororities, and among residence halls and floors. Days will be scheduled for these and other interested groups to donate. For further information, contact Debby Maranville at 864-5714.

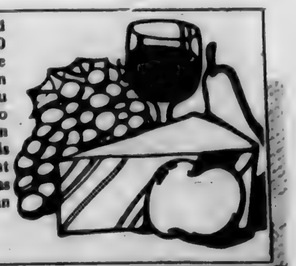
Grad Students

The Reference Department of Bailey Library welcomes new and returning graduate students to the UVM campus.

Please come in for coffee in Bailey Staff Lounge any of the following days: September 23-25 and September 30–October 2 from 9–10 a.m. At these coffee hours, we hope to discuss your research programs and outline library services available to you.

The world's top-selling soft drink is Coca-Cola with over 165,000,000 sold per day in more than 130 countries. "Coke" was invented by Dr. John S. Pemberton of Atlanta, Georgia, in 1886, and the company was formed in 1892.

The highest price ever paid for a bottle of wine is 55,000 francs (about $13,200) for one of the only 4 known Jeroboams of Chateau Mouton... sold by Mario Ruspoli in an auction on November 21, 1972. This bottle contained the equivalent of five normal bottles and was thus equivalent to more than $420 per glass.



Order Your ArtCarved College Ring Now!

GET $22* at our TRADE IN RING DAY

University Store

Mon Sept 22 10AM - 3PM
Friday Sept 26 10AM-3PM

Trade your Gold High School Ring and get credit toward the purchase of your permanent ArtCarved College Ring!

ArtCarved College Rings by Jean Roberts

Cowl on Campus

The cowl says it all. A new knit for the newness of fall. Try it. You'll like it. A collection from $9.00. S-M-L in a range of colors. Illustrated — $21.00.

mayfair

the store with the green door — Upper Church St. Burlington

Matched for Matrimony

Three exciting and precisely matched engagement sets from our large and varied selection.

Illustrations slightly enlarged

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844

E.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street

The students car's best friend

TEXACO

CLOVERLEAF TEXACO
COMPLETE CAR CARE
1055 WILLISTON RD.
SO. BURLINGTON, VT.

ROAD SERVICE
862-2935

How To Improve Your Reading Skills

from Publishers Student Service

Reading is the most important learning skill one can acquire for success and enjoyment throughout life. It is an integral part of our personal and working lives. Consider how much time every day is spent reading newspapers, letters, books, menus, directions or signs! Eighty-five percent of college work, for example, involves reading. The better you read, the more you will succeed in study or work, and enjoy the time you spend with books.

Reading is basically the understanding of words and the association between them. To improve reading skills you must increase your ability to see and understand groupings of words, or ideas, at a speed and in a manner that is comfortable to you. To be a good reader you must concentrate on what you are doing and learn to use your eyes to the best of your ability. Move them at a rate that allows your brain to absorb the main ideas printed on a page.

Most people do not perfect their reading after the fifth grade. High school and college students are often bad readers. They overlook the need to continually use and improve good reading habits. Remember your eyes, like fingers for the piano or legs for skiing, must be trained to be skillful.

If you would like to improve your reading skills these few steps can help:

1. Evaluate your reading habits.
2. Use your eyes efficiently
3. Continue to broaden your vocabulary
4. Adapt your speed so you understand the material
5. Practice on a regular basis

Analyze your present reading habits so that you know where to improve your skills:

Do you use your lips, throat or mind to "vocalize" words? You are probably still using the childhood habit of sounding out each word. This slows you down.

Do strange words constantly stop your progress? -- Your vocabulary needs improving.

Do you read every single word? -- You should train your eyes to span phrases or "thought units" instead of individual words.

Do you go back over what you have read? -- You are not paying attention. Good concentration means good comprehension.

Do you always read at the same speed? -- Speed should vary depending on the material and your purpose for reading, e.g. fiction, newspapers, textbooks.

Has your reading speed and comprehension remained static for a number of years? -- Skillful reading is an art and needs continual practice. The more you read, the more you will enjoy and remember.

USE YOUR EYES EFFICIENTLY

It is the eyes that see printed words and transmit them to the brain. Understand how they work and give them the opportunity to perform well. Eyes perceive words only when they stop moving, or make what is called a "fixation". It is during this pause that the brain records what the eyes see. Depending upon your "eye span" you will perceive one, two or more words in each fixation. The average college student, for example, has a span of 1.1 words and makes four fixations per second.

Vocalizing words impedes reading progress. Poor readers are inclined to whisper, use their lips, enunciate silently in their throat, or visualize the words in their mind. If you have any of these bad habits they should be broken because they slow down understanding. Learn to move your eyes continually forward at a pace that allows the brain to understand.

Train your eyes to increase their span by taking in more than one word at a time. You can make your eye fix on related words, phrases, or short lines in one brief stop.

Don't allow your eyes to go back over words. Think about what you are seeing and keep going at a speed that is fast enough to remember at the end what you read at the beginning. Faster reading, with no retracing, helps comprehension.

Many people need glasses to read well. Blurred words, continual eye fatigue or itching and stinging eyes might mean you need glasses. If you think your eyes need correction, have them examined by an eye doctor. If glasses are prescribed, do not hesitate to buy and wear them. Make sure they are always free of dirt and scratches.

SAT Scores Hit New Low

by Kurt Loehler

(CPS) -- While tuition and the cost of living spiral higher and higher, one traditional statistical marker for students continues to fall: aptitude scores for college-bound seniors.

In the steepest plunge in the last 11 years, average Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores for 1975 graduating high school seniors fell ten points on the verbal part of the test and eight points on the mathematical section below the scores of 1974 graduates. The nosedive continued a downward trend that has seen the average verbal score fall 44 points and the average mathematical score drop 30 points since 1963.

1975 college-bound seniors earned an average 434 verbal score and an average 472 mathematical score. On the SAT's 200-800 scale, 20% fewer of the 1975 graduates had verbal scores at or above 600, while 8% more had scores in the 200-400 range.

The SAT, according to the College Entrance Examination Board, sponsor of the test, is "a standardized measure of developed reasoning abilities important in college courses." Test scores are used by college admission boards and scholarship agencies to compare students from widely differing schools.

While aptitude scores for 1975 graduates fell, however, career goals and self-confidence as recorded in a separate part of the SAT increased.

Roughly 70% of the nearly one million graduates said they plan to complete an undergraduate degree, with some 45% of the men and 35% of the women aiming for postgraduate degrees. While women reported less ambitious degree plans than men, this gap has narrowed over recent years.

About 60% of the seniors reported plans to apply for advanced placement, course credit, or exemption from required courses in college. Also, some 20% rank themselves in the top 11% in ability to get along with others while 10% rank themselves in the top 1% in leadership.

In choosing from some 30 curriculum areas, the students showed marked differences by sex. More than 25% of the men chose career preparation in business and commerce or engineering, while more than 33% of the women chose health and medical services or education.

The College Board also compared scores to family income and reported a correlation of descending parental income to descending scores. Students who scored in the 750-800 range had a parental income of $27,999 while those who scored in the 200-249 range reported a mean parental income of $9583.

In estimating parental contributions towards financing their college education, the College Board reported that approximately 75% of the black and Mexican-American students in these two groups estimating contributions of less than $200. Comparatively, half of the white students estimated their families' contribution at less than $1145.

Based on these figures, the College Board observed that "minority students need significantly larger amounts of financial aid if they are not to have their freedom of college choice severely restricted by their families' financial circumstances."

The Board noted, however, that while minority students face the most severe problems in financing their education, they are by no means alone.

Citing an earlier study by the College Boards which estimated costs of college attendance for 1975-76 ranging from $2100 for public two-year institutions on a commuter basis to $4400 for private four-year institutions on a resident basis, the Board concluded, "about half of the 1975 graduates are not even able to contribute half the money needed for the lower of these two student expense budgets."

Teaching Opportunities In Australia

by Lynda Vanklieeck

This year, the University of New Hampshire Placement Service will be hosting interviews for the Victoria (Australia) Teacher Selection Program. Interviews will be held on Thursday, October 9 and Friday, October 10 for candidates able to depart for Australia between March and May 1976. Appointments will be scheduled on a first come/first served basis. Preceding all interviews there will be a mandatory orientation session. Any interested and qualified persons desiring further information should contact the University of Vermont College of Education and Social Services Office in 237 Waterman, ext. 3477.

INSIDE AUSTRALIA

Recently our office received a letter from a UVM graduate now teaching in Australia, who received his appointment through the Victoria Teacher Selection Program. Here are a few descriptive excerpts about his present situation:

"It's been approximately 9 weeks I've been teaching in Australia -- and I have no complaints so far. I'm teaching 40 4th graders in a suburban school outside Melbourne. The teacher I replaced ran the class like a military drill team. One thing I've got - plenty of freedom. There's no pressure to meet the demands of the administration. As far as classroom materials I have none, so I have improvised on my own. The kids are great (children are the same throughout the world). Australians are very friendly people and very hospitable.

I've had no problems with meeting people -- I've even run into a few other Americans teaching here. The one thing which stands out the most in my mind about teaching here is the feeling you get that you're doing them a favor by being here. Not like the states where they are doing you a favor if you even get an interview. They wanted teachers so bad that our way here was paid for by the Dept. of Education, in Victoria and we don't pay any tax (U.S. either) for the first two years you're here. Also, there are other benefits such as free medical and hospital care (including prescriptive medicine), and travel to all parts of the world for half price. One thing to think about if you are interested in teaching in Australia is "Can you handle the move for at least 18 months?" It's not like going to Alaska, it's like going to the other side of the earth -- where the north is tropical and the south is a San Francisco temperature. Some people would not be able to handle such a move so consider your possibility. May I add if you have any pioneering spirit, frustrated with the present teaching situation in the states and are longing for travel -- this might be just for you. For me, its just the experience I needed -- both travel and teaching. That's enough shop talk, I was hired through Victoria Teacher Selection Program."

If you are intrigued and would like to know more about life in Australia, contact the College of Education and Social Services Office of Career Planning and Placement in 237 Waterman, ext. 3477. We will put you in touch with our student in Australia.

There will be weekly coffee hours of the International Club every Wednesday, from 3:30 to 5:00 in the Center for Area and International Studies, 479 Main Street. The Club welcomes faculty, students and townspeople interested in travel abroad or exposure to different cultures.

UYA Receives Grant

Boston -- A federal renewal grant of $123,200 has been awarded to the University of Vermont to support its University Year for action program through Sept. 18, 1976.

A spokesman for the University says the funds, matched by $59,755 in local monies, will support 44 volunteers in the UYA program during the current academic year.

The announcement of the grant was made by New England Acting Regional Director C. Edward Graydon of ACTION, the federal government's agency for volunteer service.

Graydon said that UYA is a full-time program for students who receive a full year of academic credit while working on poverty related problems. In cooperation with local sponsoring organizations, the University recruits, trains and supervises the student volunteers, he said.

Other ACTION programs include the Peace Corps, Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), Foster Grandparents, Retired Senior Volunteers and Senior Companions.

New VPIRG Head

(continued from page nine)

support the major part of VPIRG through their $3.00 contributions. The organization has acted as a successful lobbying group and it would be a shame to have to discontinue operation on a mere technicality. Conservative state legislators are attempting to crush VPIRG by pushing UVM into changing the funding system.

The UVM Board of Trustees will tackle this question in their October meeting, which is just about two weeks after the student referendum. Apparently, the trustees plan to consider the results of the referendum seriously, with particular interest given to the student turnout.

King, a second semester sophomore UVM student from Baltimore, MD, is calling for your support. "There could be nothing worse to me than to lose to the UVM Board of Trustees because only 30 percent of the kids vote. I'd much rather lose, if we have to lose, by having an 80% turnout and having 50% of the kids vote against VPIRG."

King stressed the importance of making the new students aware of VPIRG and making the older students more concerned. So come out September 22-26 and vote yes for VPIRG!

... Tunnel

(continued from page ten)

injury by crossing at the already crowded traffic passage. Also, there is more to the job than meets the eye. The $550,000 allocated for this project seems to be a lot for a simple tunnel, but there is more than a tunnel to be built.

For example, the elevator alone costs $60,000 for parts and insertion. Also, there is going to be an 1800 square foot Campus Security Building on the campus side of the road. That, in itself, is a major part of the job.

When asked if the weather could prove to be an inhibiting factor, the superintendent replied, "No, it really shouldn't be. We can work through just about any kind of weather. But there again, if it starts to rain like hell and everyone is getting mad and soaked, I can't hit them over the head like slaves and make them work."

Last spring, the tunnel was a very hot issue. Proponents of the project declared that if it could save one life, it was worth it. Anti-tunnel people declared it a waste to devote over a half of a million dollars to such unnecessary precautions. Regardless of the present feeling, the tunnel is now well under way. In fact, a reasonable estimate by the superintendent put the job at 35% complete. As he said, "The tunnel should be ready by mid-December. By the time you guys come back from vacation, the tunnel will be ready for use."

Medical Compacts Cancelled

by MARGO HOWLAND

Last week the Dean of the College of Medicine, Dr. William H. Luginbuhl, announced that the University has terminated its medical compacts with the states of Maine, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island.

Directed by the University Board of Trustees in June to "recover the full cost of a medical college education" the University wants the compact fee paid by each state, currently $5000 per student, negotiated upwards to at least $8,500.

Because of tuition increases going into effect this fall, the student from the compact state, who under the arrangement gets preferred status and in-state tuition rates, will pay the College (either from his own pocket or from the state compact fee) a total of $6600.

The trustees voted a $500 differential for all students in the Medical College so that when one speaks of in-state tuition (meaning Vermonters and compact students) one is referring to tuition that has jumped from $950 to $1600 in one year.

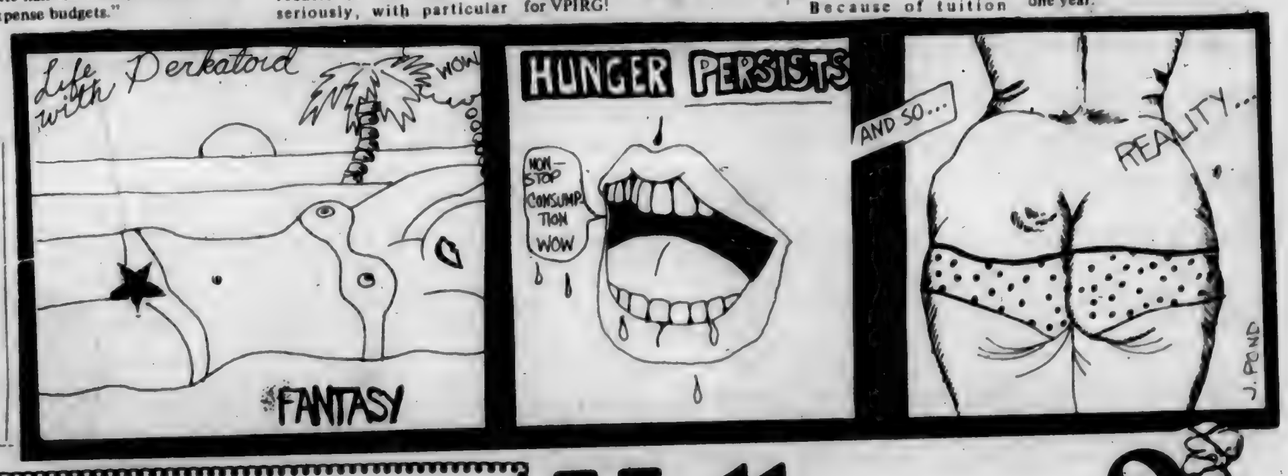
Saga Box Office
Reservations call 4299
Monday - Thursday
Living/Learning Center
Now Open

CAREER IN MINISTRY

...in HOLY CROSS, a religious community of men serving the community of man as teachers, counselors, parish priests, campus ministers, ministers of social concern and overseas missions.

for brochure write:

HOLY CROSS FATHERS
BOX C
835 Clinton Avenue
Bridgeport, Conn. 06604



$1.98
If you think one dollar-ninety-eight looks great, wait 'til you hear how great it sounds.
EVERYDAY BOOK SHOP
106 CHURCH ST.--862-5191
Open Thurs. & Fri. Eve.

BOLTON VALLEY SKI AREA ANNOUNCES
The Bolton Valley Student Club
10.00 DISCOUNT PASS LETS YOU SKI FOR-
5.00 Weekdays 7.50 Weekends 2.50 Night
STUDENT SEASON PASS 125.00
MID-WEEK PASS 75.00
25 MILES EAST OF BURLINGTON
REPS will be on campus soon
For More Information Call 434-2131

Hell
ART PRINT SALE! Over 7,000 Lithos, Etchings, Silk-Screen reproductions and limited editions!
GALLERY 410
214 College St. ... 863-3695

ARE YOU CHEAP??? WE ARE
Stretch your clothes budget by buying from Galandriel Boutique. India Import clothes by special order at 40-50% less than down town prices.
Call 862-7658 any evening after 6 pm or week-ends after noon.

How To Improve Your Reading Skills

from Publishers Student Service

Reading is the most important learning skill one can acquire for success and enjoyment throughout life. It is an integral part of our personal and working lives. Consider how much time every day is spent reading newspapers, letters, books, menus, directions or signs! Eighty-five percent of college work, for example, involves reading. The better you read, the more you will succeed in study or work, and enjoy the time you spend with books.

Reading is basically the understanding of words and the association between them. To improve reading skills you must increase your ability to see and understand groupings of words, or ideas, at speed and in a manner that is comfortable to you. To be a good reader you must concentrate on what you are doing and learn to use your eyes to the best of your ability. Move them at a rate that allows your brain to absorb the main ideas printed on a page.

Most people do not perfect their reading after the fifth grade. High school and college students are often bad readers. They overlook the need to continually use and improve good reading habits. Remember your eyes, like fingers for the piano or legs for skiing, must be trained to be skillful.

If you would like to improve your reading skills these few steps can help:

1. Evaluate your reading habits.
2. Use your eyes efficiently
3. Continue to broaden your vocabulary
4. Adapt your speed so you understand the material
5. Practice on a regular basis

Analyze your present reading habits so that you know where to improve your skills:

Do you use your lips, throat or mind to "vocalize" words?

You are probably still using the childhood habit of sounding out each word. This slows you down.

Do strange words constantly stop your progress? -- Your vocabulary needs improving.

Do you read every single word? -- You should train your eyes to span phrases or "thought units" instead of individual words.

Do you go back over what you have read? -- You are not paying attention. Good concentration means good comprehension.

Do you always read at the same speed? -- Speed should vary depending on the material and your purpose for reading, e.g. fiction, newspapers, textbooks.

Has your reading speed and comprehension remained static for a number of years? -- Skillful reading is an art and needs continual practice. The more you read, the more you will enjoy and remember.

USE YOUR EYES EFFICIENTLY

It is the eyes that see printed words and transmit them to the brain. Understand how they work and give them the opportunity to perform well. Eyes perceive words only when they stop moving, or make what is called a "fixation". It is during this pause that the brain records what the eyes see. Depending upon your "eye span" you will perceive one, two or more words in each fixation. The average college student, for example, has a span of 1.1 words and makes four fixations per second.

Vocalizing words impedes reading progress. Poor readers are inclined to whisper, use their lips, enunciate silently in their throat, or visualize the words in their mind. If you have any of these bad habits they should be broken because they slow down understanding. Learn to move your eyes continually forward at a pace that allows the brain to understand.

Train your eyes to increase their span by taking in more than one word at a time. You can make your eye fix on related words, phrases, or short lines in one brief stop.

Don't allow your eyes to go back over words. Think about what you are seeing and keep going at a speed that is fast enough to remember at the end what you read at the beginning. Faster reading, with no retracing, helps comprehension.

Many people need glasses to read well. Blurred words, continual eye fatigue or itching and stinging eyes might mean you need glasses. If you think your eyes need correction, have them examined by an eye doctor. If glasses are prescribed, do not hesitate to buy and wear them. Make sure they are always free of dirt and scratches.

SAT Scores Hit New Low

by Kurt Loehler

(CPS) -- While tuition and the cost of living spiral higher and higher, one traditional statistical marker for students continues to fall: aptitude scores for college-bound seniors.

In the steepest plunge in the last 11 years, average Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores for 1975 graduating high school seniors fell ten points on the verbal part of the test and eight points on the mathematical section below the scores of 1974 graduates. The nosedive continued a downward trend that has seen the average verbal score fall 44 points and the average mathematical score drop 30 points since 1963.

1975 college-bound seniors earned an average 434 verbal score and an average 472 mathematical score. On the SAT's 200-800 scale, 20% fewer of the 1975 graduates had verbal scores at or above 600, while 8% more had scores in the 200-400 range.

The SAT, according to the College Entrance Examination Board, sponsor of the test, is "a standardized measure of developed reasoning abilities important in college courses." Test scores are used by college admission boards and scholarship agencies to compare students from widely differing schools.

While aptitude scores for 1975 graduates fell, however, career goals and self-confidence as recorded in a separate part of the SAT increased.

Roughly 70% of the nearly one million graduates said they plan to complete an undergraduate degree, with some 45% of the men and 35% of the women aiming for postgraduate degrees. While women reported less ambitious degree plans than men, this gap has narrowed over recent years.

About 60% of the seniors reported plans to apply for advanced placement, course credit, or exemption from required courses in college. Also, some 20% rank themselves in the top 11% in ability to get along with others while 10% rank themselves in the top 1% in leadership.

In choosing from some 30 curriculum areas, the students showed marked differences by sex. More than 25% of the men chose career preparation in business and commerce or engineering, while more than 33% of the women chose health and medical services or education.

The College Board also compared scores to family income and reported a correlation of descending parental income to descending scores. Students who scored in the 750-800 range had a parental income of $27,999 while those who scored in the 200-249 range reported a mean parental income of $9583.

In estimating parental contributions towards financing their college education, the College Board reported that approximately 75% of the black and Mexican-American students in these two groups estimating contributions of less than $200. Comparatively, half of the white students estimated their families' contribution at less than $1145.

Based on these figures, the College Board observed that "minority students need significantly larger amounts of financial aid if they are not to have their freedom of college choice severely restricted by their families' financial circumstances."

The Board noted, however, that while minority students face the most severe problems in financing their education, they are by no means alone.

Citing an earlier study by the College Boards which estimated costs of college attendance for 1975-76 ranging from $2100 for public two-year institutions on a commuter basis to $4400 for private four-year institutions on a resident basis, the Board concluded, "about half of the 1975 graduates are not even able to contribute half the money needed for the lower of these two student expense budgets."

Teaching Opportunities In Australia

by Lynda Vankleeck

This year, the University of New Hampshire Placement Service will be hosting interviews for the Victoria (Australia) Teacher Selection Program. Interviews will be held on Thursday, October 9 and Friday, October 10 for candidates able to depart for Australia between March and May 1976. Appointments will be scheduled on a first come/first served basis. Preceding all interviews there will be a mandatory orientation session. Any interested and qualified persons desiring further information should contact the University of Vermont College of Education and Social Services Office in 237 Waterman, ext. 3477.

INSIDE AUSTRALIA

Recently our office received a letter from a UVM graduate now teaching in Australia, who received his appointment through the Victoria Teacher Selection Program. Here are a few descriptive excerpts about his present situation:

"It's been approximately 9 weeks I've been teaching in Australia -- and I have no complaints so far. I'm teaching 40 4th graders in a suburban school outside Melbourne. The teacher I replaced ran the class like a military drill team. One thing I've got -- plenty of freedom. There's no pressure to meet the demands of the administration. As far as classroom materials I have none, so I have improvised on my own. The kids are great (children are the same throughout the world). Australians are very friendly people and very hospitable.

I've had no problems with meeting people -- I've even run into a few other Americans teaching here. The one thing which stands out the most in my mind about teaching here is the feeling you get that you're doing them a favor by being here. Not like the states where they are doing you a favor if you even get an interview. They wanted teachers so bad that our way here was paid for by the Dept. of Education, in Victoria and we don't pay any tax (U.S. either) for the first two years you're here. Also, there are other benefits such as -- free medical and hospital care (including prescriptive medicine), and travel to all parts of the world for half price. One thing to think about if you are interested in teaching in Australia is "Can you handle the move for at least 18 months?" It's not like going to Alaska, it's like going to the other side of the earth -- where the north is tropical and the south is a San Francisco temperature. Some people would not be able to handle such a move so consider your possibility. May I add -- if you have any pioneering spirit, frustrated with the present teaching situation in the states and are longing for travel -- this might be just for you. For me, its just the experience I needed -- both travel and teaching. That's enough shop talk, I was hired through Victoria Teacher Selection Program."

If you are intrigued and would like to know more about life in Australia, contact the College of Education and Social Services Office of Career Planning and Placement in 237 Waterman, ext. 3477. We will put you in touch with our student in Australia.

There will be weekly coffee hours of the International Club every Wednesday, from 3:30 to 5:00 in the Center for Area and International Studies, 479 Main Street. The Club welcomes faculty, students and townspeople interested in travel abroad or exposure to different cultures.

UYA Receives Grant

Boston -- A federal renewal grant of $123,200 has been awarded to the University of Vermont to support its University Year for action program through Sept. 18, 1976.

A spokesman for the University says the funds, matched by $59,755 in local monies, will support 44 volunteers in the UYA program during the current academic year.

The announcement of the grant was made by New England Acting Regional Director C. Edward Graydon of ACTION, the federal government's agency for volunteer service.

Graydon said that UYA is a full-time program for students who receive a full year of academic credit while working on poverty related problems. In cooperation with local sponsoring organizations, the University recruits, trains and supervises the student volunteers, he said.

Other ACTION programs include the Peace Corps, Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), Foster Grandparents, Retired Senior Volunteers and Senior Companions.

New VPIRG Head

(continued from page nine)

support the major part of VPIRG through their $3.00 contributions. The organization has acted as a successful lobbying group and it would be a shame to have to discontinue operation on a mere technicality. Conservative state legislators are attempting to crush VPIRG by pushing UVM into changing the funding system.

The UVM Board of Trustees will tackle this question in their October meeting, which is just about two weeks after the student referendum. Apparently, the trustees plan to consider the results of the referendum seriously, with particular interest given to the student turnout.

King, a second semester sophomore UVM student from Baltimore, MD, is calling for your support: "There could be nothing worse to me than to lose to the UVM Board of Trustees because only 30 percent of the kids vote. I'd much rather lose, if we have to lose, by having an 80% turnout and having 50% of the kids vote against VPIRG."

King stressed the importance of making the new students aware of VPIRG and making the older students more concerned. So come out September 22-26 and vote yes for VPIRG!

... Tunnel

(continued from page ten)

injury by crossing at the already crowded traffic passage. Also, there is more to the job than meets the eye. The $550,000 allocated for this project seems to be a lot for a simple tunnel, but there is more than a tunnel to be built.

For example, the elevator alone costs $60,000 for parts and insertion. Also, there is going to be an 1800 square foot Campus Security Building on the campus side of the road. That, in itself, is a major part of the job.

When asked if the weather could prove to be an inhibiting factor, the superintendent replied, "No, it really shouldn't be. We can work through just about any kind of weather. But there again, if it starts to rain like hell and everyone is getting mad and soaked, I can't hit them over the head like slaves and make them work."

Last spring, the tunnel was a very hot issue. Proponents of the project declared that if it could save one life, it was worth it. Anti-tunnel people declared it a waste to devote over a half of a million dollars to such unnecessary precautions. Regardless of the present feeling, the tunnel is now well under way. In fact, a reasonable estimate by the superintendent put the job at 35% complete. As he said, "The tunnel should be ready by mid-December. By the time you guys come back from vacation, the tunnel will be ready for use."

Medical Compacts Cancelled

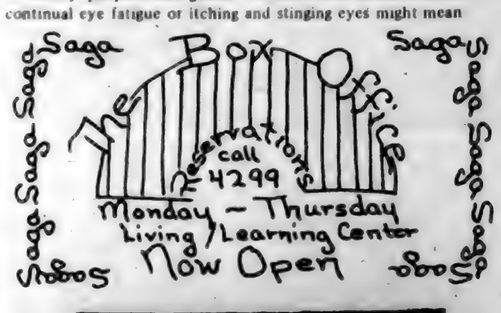
by MARGO HOWLAND

Last week the Dean of the College of Medicine, Dr. William H. Luginbuhl, announced that the University has terminated its medical compacts with the states of Maine, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island.

Directed by the University Board of Trustees in June to "recover the full cost of a medical college education" the University wants the compact fee paid by each state, currently $5000 per student, negotiated upwards to at least $8,500.

Because of tuition increases going into effect this fall, the student from the compact state, who under the arrangement gets preferred status and in-state tuition rates, will pay the College (either from his own pocket or from the state compact fee) a total of $6600.

The trustees voted a $500 differential for all students in the Medical College so that when one speaks of in-state tuition (meaning Vermonters and compact students) one is referring to tuition that has jumped from $950 to $1600 in one year.



CAREER IN MINISTRY

...in HOLY CROSS, a religious community of men serving the community of man as teachers, counselors, parish priests, campus ministers, ministers of social concern and oversees missions.

for brochure write:

HOLY CROSS FATHERS
BOX C
835 Clinton Avenue
Bridgeport, Conn. 06604

$1.98

If you think one dollar-ninety-eight looks great, wait 'til you hear how great it sounds.

EVERYDAY BOOK SHOP
106 CHURCH ST.-862-5191
Open Thurs. & Fri. Eve.

BOLTON VALLEY SKI AREA ANNOUNCES

The Bolton Valley Student Club
10.00 DISCOUNT PASS LETS YOU SKI FOR-
5.00 Weekdays 7.50 Weekends 2.50 Night
STUDENT SEASON PASS 125.00
MID-WEEK PASS 75.00
25 MILES EAST OF BURLINGTON
REPS will be on campus soon
For More Information Call 434-2131

Hell
ART PRINT SALE!
over 7,000 Lithos, Etchings, Silk-Screen reproductions and limited editions!
GALERY 410
214 College St 863-3695

ARE YOU CHEAP???
WE ARE
Stretch your clothes budget by buying from Galandriel Boutique.
India Import clothes by special order at 40-50% less than down town prices.
Call 862-7658
any evening after 6 pm
or week-ends after noon.

Vietnam: A Look

THE CHILD

I, Ho Viet My, do solemnly testify that I was born in the city of Can Tho, Phong-dinh District, on or about May 10, 1973, of unknown parentage, and that I am the holder of document C1590, court record issued in lieu of birth certificate, attesting to the following: that on May 10, 1973, in Can Tho city, district of Phong-dinh, a male child was born of unknown parentage... and that on May 12, 1973, I was brought by an unidentified adult Vietnamese male to the Holy Providence of Our Lady Orphanage, where I was abandoned. I do testify that in said orphanage I was well-received and well-treated – in spite of my color, in spite of my obvious, though unknown, parentage. I was well-loved by the Catholic sisters there in spite of the fact that I was heir to the enemy, then disguised as Saviour. During my four month stay at Providence Orphanage, I do acknowledge that I received special treatment and considerations, my own private wet nurse and frequent personal cuddling by the Mother Superior, Sister Mary Eugenia, in spite of the fact that she and her children and her children's children had been at times erroneously considered the lovers or the enemies of my father.

I, Ho Viet My, do recognize that it was Sister Eugenia who bestowed this name upon my infant self, "HO" for Ho Chi Minh, on whose birthday I was (perhaps) born, "VIET" for Southern Vietnamese, land of my mother (in all probability), and "MY" meaning beautiful and American, nationality and color of my father (this undoubtedly).

I, Ho Viet My, a Black Eurasian child, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true and accurate to the best of my knowledge and I do hereby affirm my belief in it, in spite of my unknown but not wholly unimaginable parentage... (signed) Ho Viet My.

••••••••••

THE STRANGER: Spring 1973

3/30/73 (from a letter to a fellow anthropologist in Malaysia)

...It is hard for me to tell if the on-going war is a hindrance, a help, or a significant, wildly independent variable in "doing" fieldwork in Vietnam. I mean, ought I to just ignore it, as many Vietnamese seem to do, or do I adopt an oriental passivity and accept it as a "constant"? War has, after all, been part of Vietnamese life for over a generation... or do I just assume it is relevant, as my American compatriots here do?

What a mixed blessing it is to be an American anthropologist in a place where everybody's business is to "run out and win us some hearts and minds...!" How I envy even old Malinowski the seclusion of his Tribriand Islands! Lucky Margaret Mead, to be able to study puberty in Samoa, without the intrusion of (a) war, (b) modern technology, (c) olive-drab toothbrushes and (d) all of the above.

I must, for the sake of science, for the sake of objective record, for the sake of my examining committee, confine myself to the tedious gathering of geneologies, kinship terminology, notes on reciprocity and exchange and the market economy... surely, from the point of view of my doctoral committee, it is only these ethnographica that are relevant; the existential situation here must be a figment of the Pentagon's collective mind...

••••••••••••

4/6/73

Do you recall my telling you about Baby-san, the skinny little orphan girl who picked me up near Tan Son Nhut Air Base here six years ago; It was before my marriage to Paul – he was in the Army then and stationed at Long Binh, about 20 miles outside of Saigon... He sent me a series of cables, to Manila, to Hong Kong, to Singapore, pleaded with me everywhere to come and join him in Saigon. He'd found us an apartment on Truong-minh Giang Street, gotten me a motorcycle and a tape recorder and a Vietnamese-English dictionary... He convinced me that the Vietnamese were at least as worthy of study as any New Guinea tribe...

Well, it was lucky for me that Baby-san picked me up, because Paul was transferred up north to Danang and I saw him only about once a month... I would've spent all my time crying if it hadn't been for Baby-san and Sandy...

I had hopes of finding her again, as I told you, but as life would have it, she found me, again, instead. It was last week, eve of Passover; I was waiting at the bar of the Continental for Peter Shelley, from the Times bureau here. We were enroute to a seder – if you can believe that... Shel had just dismissed the waiter with a handful of piasters and embarrassing high school French gratuities. He waved to his driver and the car pulled out of the lot in front of the National Assembly Building and stopped just at the door. I rose to take Shel's arm – and that was a good thing, or I might have fallen over – for just then, out of nowhere, out of the past, out of that depressing tenement of years ago, came her voice, calling my name... I remember everything of this encounter, it is so vivid in my mind, like a movie run in slow motion, each frame held and waiting...

—It was to my shock that I did not recognize her. "I am Lien, you know me? You, you my mama-san, you 'member? Long time now, I stay you – up Truong-minh Giang Street... I you baby-san, long time now."

For a few minutes I thought it was Peter she was addressing – must be some girl he met at a party or a bar... or somebody's wife I met at a lecture... some girl from the English class I tutored? But no, with the truth came my reluctant bow to the strange machinations of destiny. Vietnam will make a believer out of me yet!

My little girl of the streets is a full-fledged woman-child, from the wide hem of her denim bell bottoms to the imitation Navajo headband around her waist-length hair... a massive Greek Orthodox crucifix hangs from a hippy's rosary around her neck, her hands clutch alternatively a carton of Salem and a lit cigarette...

Shel and I went on to a Passover dinner that was some cruel, cosmic joke that did not register. We Americans sat around the table and cracked jokes and matzoh that were almost as stale... I vaguely recall the rabbi-chaplain explaining to the Vietnamese guests the bitterness, the pain and the tragedy symbolized by the items on the menu. We all thanked God for the matzoh and the Manischewitz, which He had seen fit to provide from the Embassy stores in Bangkok... Shel sat in goyishe stupefaction and kept trying to divert my attention from grown-up Baby-san, who was left at the Continental bar... I am remembering everything of the day we met, the clothes she wore, the time...

••••••••••••

It was in 1967, during the height of the war and American participation in it, that I first met her. I was still a girl, not yet a women, still sorting myself out in the context of that western adolescent phonomenon, the Identity Crisis... and she – why, she was still a child – she said she was 11, but looked only about 8 or 9. The inscrutable Oriental in her gave no hint of her age nor of the fact of her womanhood; girlhood was a luxury denied to her by time and circumstance. Small wonder that she was attracted to me, that morning of my first day in Saigon: a naivete such as mine was considerably appealing to Vietnamese, and it was this quality, vying with my "exotic" American-ness, my whiteness, my smallness, my girlishness, which endeared me to them. Vietnamese are fond of strangers, of cultural oddities, and of the uncommon.

Baby-san, as I came to call her, was no exception to this. Situations in which Vietnamese legitimately held the upper hand when dealing with Americans were so uncommon as to result in a kind of mutual "culture shock" when they did occur. An instance would be in the marketplace, when some hapless GI would occasionally wander in, to attempt to "bargain" away a wad of piaster notes for a cheap doll or kimono. Such circumstances, where Vietnamese were permitted to rule and direct Americans, or where Americans were at the mercy of Vietnamese, occurred more frequently in the jungles; in the streets, it was not supposed to occur at all, and Vietnamese were especially appreciative when they did. To serve an American was highly regarded; to be able to help him was a distinct honor; to have him depend on you, be at your mercy, this was a privilege accorded to only a few. It was thus my initial helplessness that attracted her. Baby-san – we Americans resorted to the appelation WWII GI's had used in Japan – accosted me on the street just outside my room, on the morning of my first day in Saigon, Sept. 1, 1967.

She had been following me for some time – it was impossible to deny that, for as I blundered through the crowded market traffic, her figure darted and reappeared, behind bolts of textiles, and squawking chickens, behind faces of joyless infants clinging uncertainly to overburdened shoulders... I would turn and see her jostling for position, her small jaw set in grim determination not to lose sight of something... something she had clearly staked out as "hers."

In my faded blue jeans and shapeless T shirt, I was clearly the best item to be "had" that day. She ignored the panoplay of cheap bracelets, steaming bowls of noodles and fish, glittering earrings and impossibly expensive make-up, ignored the allure of a gaggle of American military tossing coins into a crowd of urchins, wriggled past tthe cries of market women hawking fruits, French pastries, fried bananas, and dried cuttlefish... I was an easy mark, because I had to stop and stare at every item, every face, every delicacy, for it was all new to me. But, I could not sample any of it, I was too frightened of the sounds and the strangeness of it all, too embarrassed to venture speech when I knew it would not be understood, too unsure of the value of the money in my pockets and too overcome to do anything but try and take it all in.

I was thirsty and noticed the sidewalks burgeoning with small fruit drink stands. I walked past a dozen before I thought to venture and get something and stood stock-still in the middle of the thoroughfare, hesitating between my thirst and my fear, my thirst and my inhibitions, a thirst that was becoming compelling enough to overcome uncertainly... As I stopped, she bumped right into me and we were face to face. She smiled – the best way to disguise our mutual pique – and I had an idea. I could risk it, with her, I thought. So I took the great leap of faith and said loudly "Toy kaht!" – by which I meant to say, "I am thirsty." Now, what I should have said, to be understood, is written in Vietnamese as "Toi khat" and pronounced in a tone very different from mine. She looked at me, still smiling. I hunted feverishly in my handy-dandy Vietnamese-English phrase book, for Lesson II, Food and Drink, and repeated "Toy kaht... Toy kaht..." She tore the book from my hands. Hopeless, I pointed and gestured and repeated all the while, "toy kaht, Toy kaht..." She followed my finger, glanced at the words and said in an accented yet clear, American-English, "Oh, you like drink, huh?"

I was, quite literally, wordless. Handing her some bills and some coin, not knowing which was which, I stood by while she ran to the nearest stand and came back with a delightful concoction. It proved to be inadequate for my thirst, so she went again, each time returning with change which she quickly handed back to me. "You sit down," she commanded, and I followed her to a cluster of tiny stools, set somewhat dubiously off the street. It finally occurred to me to offer her a drink; she took some money again, and came back with a glass of an odd-looking green gelatin – not at all what she had gotten for me. We sat and drank and thought about each other, and when we had finished, we got up at the same time and continued on together down the street.

She did not leave my side from that day on for six months. She proceeded to make herself indispensable – calling to me from the street in the morning, rushing in with a bowl of soup, small loaves of French bread, glasses burning with hot coffee, a bunch of bananas hanging over her thin arms. The sheets, the towels, and my clothes, disappeared while I showered and drank my coffee; she brought them back in the late afternoon, after we both awoke from the naps I learned to take. I would find my toothbrush, comb, mirror, hairbrush and nail file all neatly set out and replaced for me, my clothes folded over a chair or hung up in the closet in places she thought they should be. The jar of Skippy Peanut Butter we acquired was ceremoniously positioned in the middle of the table that served alternatively as desk, dinette and make-up stand; the jar was flanked by a ceramic toothpick holder shaped like an elephant (almost every American who had any dealings with Vietnamese at all came into possession of at least one of these) and an array of plastic flowers sticking out of a vase of similar manufacture.

(continued on page thirteen)

Vermont's Largest
CAMERA CENTER
ABRAHAM'S
111 CHURCH STREET, BURLINGTON

DOWNHILL EDGE
SKI EQUIPMENT
SKI APPAREL
SKI ACCESSORIES
SKIS
DYNASTAR
KASTLE
KNEISSL
OLIN
BOOTS
NORDICA
LANGE
SCOTT
OLIN
BINDINGS
SALOMON
LOOK
BESSER
BURT
MARKER
APPAREL
C. B. SPORT
ALPINE DESIGN
TEMPCO
EDELWEISS
HOT GEAR
SASKA SPORT
BANKAMERICARD
DOWNHILL EDGE
81-85 MAIN ST.
BURLINGTON
NEXT TO THE SKI RACK
OPEN MON.-WED. 9:30-6 PM
THURS.-FRI. TILL 9, SAT. TILL 5 PM
10% STUDENT DISCOUNT
For all area high school and college students!

BAILEY'S
MUSIC ROOMS
Serving You For Over a Century
88 CHURCH ST.
BURLINGTON, VT.
863-3210
EVERYTHING IN MUSIC!
BAND INSTRUMENTS
• BAND INSTRUMENT REPAIR
• BAND INSTRUMENT RENTAL
Complete Selection of Sheet Music & Methods
Complete Line of Accessories
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
from leading Manufacturers
STEREO • Consoles & Portables
PHONOGRAPH RECORDS
Classical - Popular - Children's
One Of The Largest Collections Of Albums And Records That You'll Ever See!

At Its Soul

(continued from page twelve)

She really liked Peanut Butter, but found Welch's grape jelly too sweet. It amazed me that she could eat bread and rice at the same meal and she doggedly continued to serve them to me, in spite of my repeated remonstrations to the contrary. Uneaten loaves of French bread would pile up behind the elephant for days at a time, and then, suddenly, the whole lot would disappear. I did not at first understand this, but eventually saw her in the act of allocating pieces of our old loaves to waiting children in the alley behind our house. She never gave them any fresh bread, however, but always waited a day or two before giving it away.

I made tapes of her, in an effort to learn Vietnamese. Our taping sessions usually ended with her in fits of laughter and begging to sing a song into the recorder. I always gave in to her appeals, and I watched as she would sing and listen to her own voice for hours on end. She was entranced as much by the miracle of the machine as I was by her manipulation of those words and tones that I could never master.

She took me to the market to buy material and have suitable clothing made, and wisely took them only to shops owned or managed by her relatives. I got some good "deals", but Baby-san got better ones; I later learned that she got a percentage of whatever price I eventually paid.

She rode together with me on my motorcycle, sitting in front of me, straddling the gas tank. We went everywhere, all over the city, through dusty streets where we both coughed and couldn't see through the red clouds and smoke fumes, in and out of muddy streets in the monsoon season, through streets so swollen with water that we couldn't see the holes – huge gaping ponds they became – and we would ride through the rain, tiny hard pellets stinging our arms and our faces, mud washing up over our legs... we'd hit too big a hole or too high a bump and fall over and be surrounded by laughing crowds of kids, staring crowds of adults... We'd get lost – frequently and I'd shout out to her over the traffic noise, "Left or right?" and she'd holler, "Okay!" and off we'd go, spinning in the wrong direction into a one-way street that should have gone the other way... forced up onto the sidewalk by oncoming traffic, we'd join the other hundreds of bicyclists and Honda-riders who were unperturbed by streetsigns...

We went to Vietnamese movie-theaters – neither of us could get on to the American base to see the American ones – and she would get embarrassed as I laughed too loudly over the hopeless English of the subtitles... we invaded posh restaurants where Baby-san clearly felt the indignity of her cotton pajamas and my sandaled feet... we were out after curfew and herded along to an orphanage together by a solemn, chiding policeman. I cautioned Baby-san with my hands not to say anything, and quietly obeyed his directions, resolutely towing my "little sister" along until he left us outside the gate at Tu Xuong Street Girls' Home, where we both curled up to sleep.

I found that she had an older sister – at first I thought the woman must be her mother, she was so old -- she was old enough to have been my mother, in fact – and learned that here was the place that my laundry was done. The house was located some blocks away from us, it was a dingy, barren cement stall, unfortunately not atypical of dwellings in this slum area. Her family were Catholics, refugees from Hanoi in North Vietnam who had been persuaded to leave in 1954, fearing religious persecution. They settled mainly in this area just outside of the airbase which rapidly joined the ranks of Saigon's many thriving slums, the sons became soldiers in the South Vietnamese army and came to be considered by Americans as their most dependable allies because their loyalty was assured and so it was these men who were systematically chosen to be in the Special Forces, to fight and to die beside the Americans, while other Vietnamese, the cowardly, happy-go-lucky South Vietnamese, were kept in miserable clerical positions... the daughters of these northern refugees got first chance at the jobs around American bases, first chance at the secretarial training schools, first chance at the waitress jobs, first chance at the bar girl jobs, first chance to meet and mate with the conquering heroes...

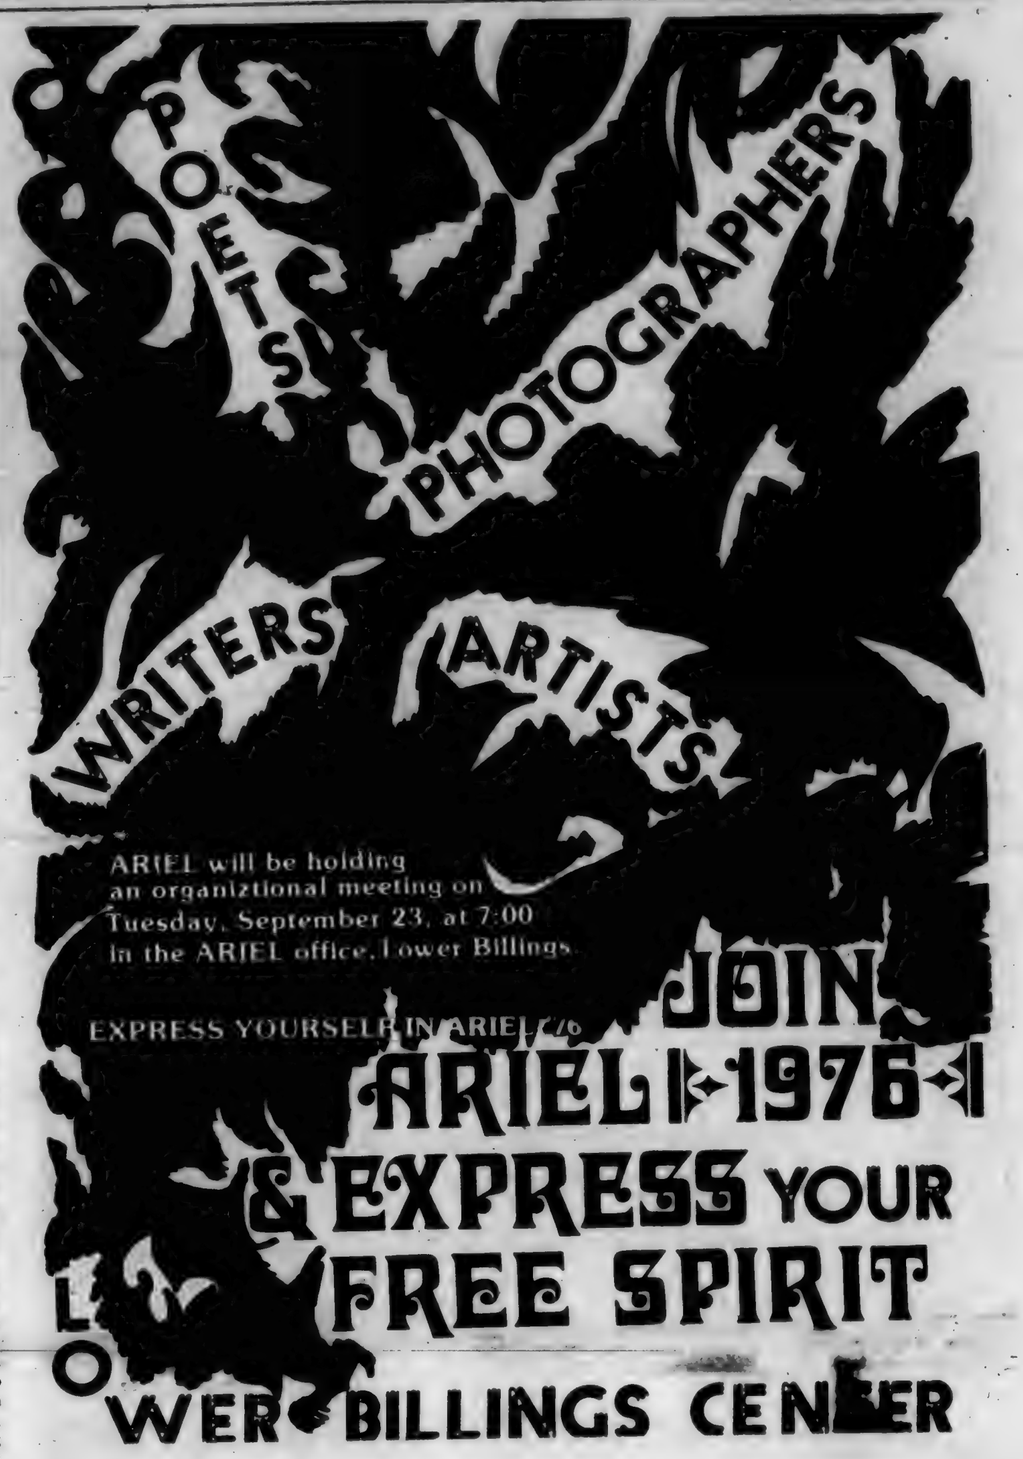
Baby-san and I lived together for six months. I did not, at that time, make any progress in learning the Vietnamese language, but I did learn not to run in my ao-dai, to eat my bread without butter, to eat my rice with chopsticks, and to squat on the floor for a variety of activities. I learned to sleep without the ceiling fan on those nights when there was no electricity, and I learned how to sleep with the sounds of a Vietnamese rock band on those nights when there was one. To our left, separated by a wall made from the tin of rolled-out coca-cola cans, was the rock band's room, and whenever the electricity was available, they never missed a chance for a jam session. The rooms to our right were occupied by two prostitutes, Sandy and Anh, of whom Sandy was clearly the more interesting, if the less attractive. She was fat – huge – especially for a Vietnamese – and dark. Baby-san intimated that Sandy was a Montagnard. Sandy would not tolerate Baby-san's presence in her room, and told me again and again, "That girl no-damn-good." Sandy's boyfriend was a black GI stationed out in Long Binh, about 30 klicks or 20 miles away. He'd only be around on the weekends, but I used to pray that it'd be those nights when we'd have the rock band and the loud music – I found the latter easier to get used to than the sounds of Sandy and Bill (and sometimes Anh) wrestling in the night. Baby-san religiously tried to listen to it all, even through the din of the electric guitars, and would graphically relate to me the action, as she tried to learn from me the English equivalents for Vietnamese obscenities. "How you call that, huh? What you say that?" Her vocabulary grew at an amazing rate and her ability was second only to her obsession with it all.



AUDIO DEN

GREAT BARGAINS NOW OFFERED BY AUDIO DEN.

PIONEER PROJECT 300 RECIEVER

This versatile and well-made receiver is the perfect way to get started in real high fidelity. While the dial with tuning meter and smooth-as-silk control knob, plus sensitive and selective FET circuitry provides crisp, clear reception of all broadcast signals. It also has jacks for just about everything — turntable, tape deck, headphones, two pairs of speakers and an auxiliary. And for extra flexibility, there's a balance control and bass and treble controls. Handsome walnut cabinet included.

GARRARD 42M CHANGER
Includes Base, Dust Cover and Cartridge

AUDIO I SPEAKER SYSTEM

Manufacturers List $415
If Purchased Separate $334

NOW ON SALE... $239

MARANTZ 1030 STEREO CONSOLE AMPLIFIER

The little giant. Little refers to price. Giant refers to quality. Because while the Model 1030 is the least expensive console amplifier Marantz makes — it's still assembled with all the same precision craftsmanship and meticulous construction as the costlier units. So, what we're really saying is you're not paying extra for extras you don't need. What you do get is 15 Watts minimum RMS power per channel, at 8 Ohms, from 40 Hz to 20 kHz, with no more than 0.5% Total Harmonic Distortion. There's a tape monitoring facility and front panel microphone input. The main and remote speakers have convenient quick-connect terminals. Plus, stepped tone controls for easily repeatable settings.

GARRARD 42 M CHANGER
Includes Base, Dust Cover and Cartridge.

HARMON KARDON 20 SPEAKER SYSTEM

Manufacturers List $385
If Purchased Separate $320

NOW ON SALE... $259

DEMO and OVERSTOCK SALE . . .

TURNTABLES			SPEAKERS
Dual 1229Q (2 in Stock) (Includes base and dust cover)	List $292.85	$199.95	EPI MTII (4 in Stock)	$120	$79.95
Connoisseur (3 in Stock) (Includes base and dust cover)	$140	$119.95	EPI 110 (4 in Stock)	$120	$89.95
CASSETTE DECKS			EPI 180 (2 in Stock)	$200	$149.95
Pioneer CT-171 (1 in Stock)	$360	$279.95	EPI 60 (2 in Stock)	$70	$49.95
Teac 360S (1 in Stock)	$390	$319.95	Audioanalyst A200 (2 in Stock)	$250	$169.95
Teac 450 (2 in Stock)	$450	$379.95	2 AR3a $125 each (Used)
REEL-TO-REEL			AMPS
Sony 280 (1 in Stock)	$280	$199.95	Pioneer SA5200 (2 in Stock)	$140	$99.95

DORSET STREET
SOUTH BURLINGTON
863-4398

OPEN DAILY
9 AM 'til 9 PM
Closed Sunday

Six Week Winter Break

by Penny Siegel

This winter, unlike last, students at UVM will hopefully enjoy a Christmas vacation of six weeks. The 1975-76 recess will extend from December 20, the last day of classes, until January 27, registration. Last winter's break was only four weeks, beginning on December 19 and going to January 13.

As everyone knows, the reason for the two week extension is an effort to save fuel. In the period of time that is usually the coldest of winter, the faculty senate (responsible for making many important academic decisions) have decided that closing down dorms and other campus buildings at that time, will save up to 20% of the fuel normally consumed in the month of January. This fuel is used not only for indoor heating, but for UVM's hot water supply as well. Obviously, this is thought by many to be of benefit However, Dr. Roth, chairman of the faculty senate, seems cautious. Dr. Roth feels that some educational programs, possibly in effect during the winter recess, would require the opening of some buildings which would consume fuel anyway. He also notes that all heating equipment could not be turned off completely, because pipes would then freeze. Also, as happened last winter, those few weeks could be "not so cold weeks" in which case would be a waste of time for students and for faculty

What could students do for this time? In the way of jobs, not much. To many employers, 6 weeks is too short a period to hire students. It is difficult enough to be hired for the summer. So rather than earning money students will be spending it skiing, traveling, trying to fill the month-and-a-half. More than that, as much as our parents "love us," 6 weeks of us might be a little long. For many students, this time will break the continuity of school.

Of course, time has its advantages. Six weeks leaves time to travel to areas that can be more appreciated during the winter. It would also add two weeks to the end of school – which would give "first time Vermonters" a taste of spring in Vermont. If given enough thought, a six week vacation could be a very meaningful one.

Book Review

Welcome Back, Sherlock

by Eloise M. Boyle

The Seven-Per-Cent Solution
Edited by Nicholas Meyer
Copyright 1974, Ballantine Books

Sherlock Holmes is experiencing a revival of interest these days. new books, plays, and films are reliving his adventures. This book, which is supposedly drawn from the memoirs of John H. Watson, MD, brings together two of the greatest minds of all time: Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud, and involves them in political intrique.

Nicholas Meyer had edited a manuscript he claims Watson dictated while in an old folk's home. In these memoirs, Holmes is addicted to cocaine and it is destroying his brilliant mind. Watson realizes the turn his mind has taken when he insists that oysters will rise from the sea and take over the world. The reader learns startling things about Holmes' past and Dr. Moriarity is well involved with the story. With the aid of Mrycroft Holmes, Sherlock's brother, Watson dupes Holmes into going to Vienna to see Dr. Freud, who has a cure for cocaine addiction. This is the first time Mycroft appears in one of Sherlock's adventures. We learn how truly brilliant Sherlock Holmes is as he attempts to solve yet another case: this time one which involves a conspiracy among all the crownheads of Europe.

Sherlock is a genius, Dr. Freud is magnificient, and Watson is as faithful as ever. This book is full of adventure and suspense. It is fast moving and will keep the reader interested for hours. The Seven-Per-Cent Solution is a one-hundred-per-cent hit.

Catamount 1 Novice Rally

WHAT IS A RALLY?

A rally, or more properly, a Time-Speed-Distance rally is a precise driving competition between cars on a public road following a route at below legal speed.

Before the event, you are given GENERAL instructions that set forth the rules governing the rally. These rules define roads used, types of signs, notations used and scoring information. You get a set of ROUTE instructions which tell you turns to make, landmarks to pass, and the average speeds to set.

After the start you follow the course at the average speeds given. At various points on the road, unknown to you beforehand, you are timed. Since the time it takes to travel a given distance at a given speed can be calculated, your time is compared to the desired result, and the amount of time early or late determines your score.

WHAT DO I NEED?

Basically, just a car, a partner and a watch with a sweep hand. A sports car is not a necessity, since we have had vehicles such as pick-up trucks and Cadillics compete. However, more maneuverable cars, such as small sedans are more enjoyable driving over the type of roads used in the rallys.

Each car has a team of driver and navigator. The driver keeps the car on course, following the route instructions. The navigator calculates to keep the car on time. However, since staying on course is most important the navigators often help spot landmarks and signs. Most beginning teams use both team members to follow the course.

As a beginner, you would be wise to bring to the rally event only a large clipboard, lots of sharpened pencils, and a pad of paper. Your regular watch, if it has a second hand, will be adequate.

DATE: Sunday September 21
START: Zayre's Parking Lot
TIME: Registration - noon First car off at 1:01
LENGTH: @75 miles and @3 hours
INFORMATION: Dan Way 893-7544 evenings.

Martial Arts Master

The Creamery Educational Foundation of Shelburne, Vermont, is proud to announce the appearance of Al Chung-liang Huang, T'ai Chi master and performing artist, on Sunday, September 28, and Monday, September 29, 1975.

Al Huang has taught and concertized throughout North America and the Far East. He is a specialist in Oriental Theatre, a calligrapher, and master of many Asian fine and martial arts. Faculty member at Esalen Institute and frequent guest teacher for major universities and growth centers, he is the Director of the Lan T'ing Institute at the Alan Watts' Society for Comparative Philosophy in Sausalita, California.

The schedule of Al Huang's appearances is as follows: Sunday, September 28, 7:30 p.m., there will be a Multi-Media Presentation in the Auditorium, Mann Hall, Trinity College in Burlington.

This presentation will be a participatory introduction to T'ai Chi. Al Huang will dance, demonstrate T'ai Chi, talk, and show films of himself and Alan Watts. The cost will be $2.50.

On Monday, September 29, there will be a series of three 3-hour workshops also at Trinity College, at 9:00 a.m., 2:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. These workshops will provide more intensive time to learn and practice T'ai Chi.

T'ai Chi is an ancient Chinese exercise discipline practiced for health, meditation, energy flow and self-defense. The slow, flowing movements comprise the oldest and subtlest form of the Asian martial arts. When one experiences the wonders of the Universe within one's body, it is obvious the mind (heart)-body (movement) entity transcends all intellectual speculations and flows through all thinking blockage. T'ai Chi exemplifies the most subtle principle of Taoism; to move in accordance with the flow of nature's course, a watercourse way, fluid, clean, refreshing and inexhaustibly alive. To practice T'ai Chi is to experience the wisdom of nature directly. An explanation of Al Huang's approach to T'ai Chi can be found in his book Embrace Tiger, Return to Mountain, as well as the book Tao: The Watercourse Way by Alan W. Watts and Al Chung-liang Huang.

More information can be obtained by calling The Creamery Educational Foundation, 802-985-3315.

THE FAN SPEAKS OUT

The Cynic Sports department encourages letters for all interested fans on any sports oriented subject that is on your mind. Either mail or drop them off at the Cynic office in Lower Billings.

Women's sports activities are making headway at colleges and universities across the country, since title IX of the Education Amendments Act set the ball rolling in 1972 by enforcing equal opportunity for both men's and women's sports. New accomplishment in women's sports are being generated year by year. Recruiting top female athletes has started at many universities as well as scholarship availability for women. The growth rate of women participating in sports has noticeably increased at the college level also. Funding has become available for new collegiate sports activities such as track and field, ice hockey, golf, badmitton and volleyball. In the coming 1975-76 collegiate sports season we can hope to see continued progress for college women athletes.

The Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) has one major problem to work out in the near future. The NCAA, the governing body for men's collegiate athletics, now wants to control women's athletics. AIAW members and national women's sports figures have voiced strong sentiments against the NCAA plans to control and lead women's sports on the college level.

The main reason that women's athletics should be separately controlled from men lies in the basic idealogy that differentiates the two organizations. Men's athletic activities often develop into business enterprises, with big money spent for recruiting, scholarships and travel plans. Women's collegiate athletics have always been a more educationally-minded enterprise. Women's collegiate athletics do not require large funds, but only sufficient funding for their needs. Without meaning to sound derogatory towards the NCAA, I believe women's collegiate sports will progress best by remaining consistent with their present philosophy, which is "sport for sport's sake, not money." The AIAW must come up with another plan for leadership for women's athletics before the NCAA determines the future of women's athletics without women's consent.

Debi Bloom

UVM Tennis Team Beats UNH

by Scott Curtis

The doubles team of Scott Turban and Kevin DeLaney came from a 3-5 deficit in the final set to give UVM a 5½–3½ victory in its opening match with UNH last Thursday. The entire match was tense and exciting, as an improved UNH squad tested the strength of the Yankee Conference champs. Each match that UVM won was close, except for Kirk Dice's matches. The final doubles contest was called after two sets due to the long match, hence the 5½–3½ score.

Kirk Dice was outstanding as he skillfully mastered UNH's secret weapon, transfer Mark Weber. Dice whipped Weber 6–1, 6–1 in the first singles. Later, Dice teamed with fellow captain Tom Lenci to take UNH's first doubles team, 7–5, 6–2.

Scott Turban was also a double winner, as he came from behind to beat Steve Krause in the third singles contest. Turban and Kevin DeLaney played to the tightest score possible, 7–6, 6–7, 7–6, with 5–4 overtime scores. In another nail-biter Jeff DeLuca took the final singles match 7-5, 2-6, 6-4. At match point, Jeff caught up to a lob, twirled, and fired a cross court forehand that passed an amazed Sam Richards. The shot, described as "unbelievable, no way, amazing", brought an ovation from UNH's Richards.

Despite the heart palpatations, Coach Greig was pleased with the Fall Squad's performance. The team regrouped well in this early contest, and it should be prepared for Saturday's Cardinal Classic in Plattsburgh.

SCORES

Kirk Dice – Mark Weber 6-1, 6-1
Tom Lenci – Andy Harrison 7–6, 6–2
Scott Turban – Steve Krause 4–6, 7–6, 6–4
Kevin DeLaney – Scott Taylor 6–3, 6–3.
Jeff DeLuca – Sam Richards 7–5, 2–6, 6–4
Dice–Lenci – Weber–Harrison 7–5, 6–2
Turban – DeLaney Noyes–Krause 7–6, 6–7, 7–6
Weber-Hansen – Richards-Taylor 6-7, 6-4, called

The Last Of The Real Ball Parks

by Norm Robinson

As you walk down, through the turnstiles and up the runway that travels the length of Fenway Park, sounds of vendors and excited youths ring out everywhere. "Will Freddy hit another one today?" "How about Dewey's throw the other night, wasn't that something!" These are but a few of the thoughts and questions one hears.

The adrenaline builds as you near the entrance - daylight breaks through the doorway ahead and suddenly you're there. Fenway Park, Boston - Home of the Boston Red Sox. You are through the doorway now and there it is the Green Monster - the huge wall that excites hitters and instills fear in pitchers, the wall stands 37 feet tall and is only 315 feet from the plate at the foul line.

The Monster is not the only rarity at Fenway however. The fence zig zags along the outfield grass (yes grass, not the artifical stuff that now inhabits 1/3 of the major league parks). In center, one can roam 420 feet before running into the bleacher wall. The right fielder may have to reach back into the bullpens in right, (some 380 feet away) to snare a shot off an opposing player's bat, or trot to the foul pole to snare a lazy fly ball that would otherwise fall into the stands, a mere 302 feet down the line.

Built in 1912 and rebuilt in 1934, Fenway is the last of the single deck parks. With a seating capacity of 33,379 it is the smallest stadium in the American League, and only second behind Montreal's Jarry Park in the majors.

Many a left handed pitcher has "died" in Fenway, as the opposing team loads its line up with righthanders, anxious to take a shot at the Green Monster. But many a hitter has been ruined by the temptation to pull every pitch, attempting to reach or clear the wall.

For years Fenway has been labeled a righthand hitters ball park and leftie pitcher's grave, but although few southpaws have made it big (Bill Lee is an exception), the right handed sluggers have had nightmares. Joe Dimaggio and Jimmie Foxx (to name a couple), swear that Fenway is better suited to the lefthanded swinger because of the sheer height of the Monster. A right handed line drive hitter will often be robbed of would be homeruns when it carons off the structure and into the waiting glove of the left fielder, often holding the runner to a single. Evidence seems to prove Dimaggio and Foxx correct as all Red Sox batting champions have been left handed, (ie. Carl Yastremski and Ted Williams).

But enough of the physical aspects of Fenway Park, what really makes it so unique are the fans. Rivaled only perhaps by the old Brooklyn Dodger fan in Ebbets Field, the Bostonian is insistent on good quality ball playing. Whether it be the "bleacher bum" stationed high in the sun drenched stands or a season ticket holder behind the dugout, each demands the most out of a ball player.

At one point a player may be booed for striking out with the bases loaded and then be given a standing ovation for a sensational play. Many call the Boston fan a "front-runner", but to many Bostonians the game of baseball is a serious business, not to be taken lightly. Thus, "no ball player has the right to lose our game." Baseball is part of life in Boston.

Tom Yawkey bought the club in 1933 and is "Mr. Red Sox" to this day. It is estimated that he has paid well over $25 million in these four decades of ownership which have seen only two pennants, in 1946 and in 1967. Where would Fenway Park be without him?

As the last days of September roll around, and the Sox battle to hang on in the

(continued on page fifteen)

IT'S YOUR HAIR

YOU'VE TRIED THE REST
NOW TRY THE BEST BECAUSE
IT'S YOUR HAIR
Bring in this ad on the 17th and save $3.00 on a haircut!
863-6908
194 COLLEGE STREET

People with goals manage their money with a Howard Checking Account.

A free book of checks for students.

Turn to the Howard Bank

Member FDIC

Booters

There is a mystique about Ivy League athletics. The Vermont soccer staff talked about it on the sidelines of the Dartmouth College soccer field in the rain last Friday afternoon in Hanover. It was said that this mystique is responsible for a good part of Ivy League school's victories over non-Ivy League schools. That mystique has been broken by several Vermont teams in the past and it was broken again last Friday when Vermont rolled over Dartmouth in a scrimmage lasting three forty-five minute periods. In fairness to Dartmouth it should be mentioned that they started fall practice after Vermont and they haven't looked at the freshmen yet. However they have alot of work to do before they will overcome their problems and face such soccer powers on their schedule as Brown University.

The Vermont team played well exhibiting the benefits of their early season training.

short four minutes into the first period Jim Carter put Vermont's first score as by Mark Stevenson. Then eighteen minutes left Jonas, the starting goalie down for a rolling sho pulled his hamstring and be taken out of the gam was replaced by co-capta Taft, still recovering fr injury in the Plym scrimmags. Three minute John Korner assiste Carter in his second goal afternoon. Shortly afte Korner put one off th bars in one of Ver several unconverted opportunities. Continuin pressure Vermont force Dartmouth defense into errors, one of which resu a penalty kick. John "Ho Korner belted that one make it three no Vermont. Co-captai

Ski Racers Meeting

Ski Racers

There will be a m all ski racers who varsity candidates on September 22, in Roc Patrick Gym at 7:00 training will be gone well as some organi details. All students in in racing this winter a to attend. If you ha questions or are un attend, call Chris H 656-3074 or 658-0829.

Booters Crush Dartmouth

There is a mystique about Ivy League athletics. The Vermont soccer staff talked about it on the sidelines of the Dartmouth College soccer field in the rain last Friday afternoon in Hanover. It was said that this mystique is responsible for a good part of Ivy League school's victories over non-Ivy League schools. That mystique has been broken by several Vermont teams in the past and it was broken again last Friday when Vermont rolled over Dartmouth in a scrimmage lasting three forty-five minute periods. In fairness to Dartmouth it should be mentioned that they started fall practice after Vermont and they haven't looked at their freshmen yet. However they have alot of work to do before they will overcome their problems and face such soccer powers on their schedule as Brown University.

The Vermont team played well exhibiting the benefits of their early season training. A short four minutes into the first period Jim Carter put in Vermont's first score assisted by Mark Stevenson. Then with eighteen minutes left Jeff Jonas, the starting goalie, went down for a rolling shot and pulled his hamstring and had to be taken out of the game. He was replaced by co-captain Jim Taft, still recovering from an injury in the Plymouth scrimmage. Three minutes later John Korner assisted Jim Carter in his second goal of the afternoon. Shortly after that Korner put one off the cross bars in one of Vermont's several unconverted scoring opportunities. Continuing the pressure Vermont forced the Dartmouth defense into several errors, one of which resulted in a penalty kick. John "Howard" Korner belted that one in to make it three nothing Vermont. Co-captain Bob Cleverdon put a free kick off the crossbar from about forty yards out before the end of the first forty-five minute period.

In the first period Vermont had taken nineteen shots and taken seven corner kicks, clearly dominating the play. The second forty-five minute period was much the same with Dave Allen assisting on two goals. Mark Hindrich put in the first one of the second period followed by Bruce Norton.

Jim Taft who went in for Jonas in the goal in the first period came out with a slight strain. Head coach Paul Reinhardt replaced him with Peter Nostrand saving Jim for the regular season. Peter was still recovering from getting nailed in the right eye in the Plymouth State scrimmage. Not wanting to leave Peter in too long with his right eye swollen almost shut Coach Reinhardt searched the bench for someone who could play goalie. Someone said Max Martin played goalie in High School. Max was taken off the fullback line and put in our goal where he continued to shut out Dartmouth through the end of the second period, the length of a normal game.

The third period was played in a cold fall rain. Before it, the Vermont team was instructed to remember that there was to be an alumni game coming up and a long season following. Dartmouth got their only goal of the game in that period on a penalty kick. UVM got their sixth goal from freshman Mark Socinski assisted by Mark Heindrich.

In the locker room after the game everyone was wet, tired, slightly bruised and happy. All players had seen alot of playing time. Coach Reinhardt said the motto for the season would be as it was against Dartmouth, "everyone plays". Indeed, every ten to fifteen minutes the entire team was changed. This philosophy worked well illustrating the depth on the team in other spots besides the goal. The changes that took place in the goal were indicative of the flexibility demonstrated by the entire team.

In some ways it is tough to write an article about this team because it is a team. Although I have mentioned the players who scored and assisted and discussed the goal keeper situation I do not mean to exclude other members of the team from getting the recognition they deserve. Certainly the score would have been different without the total team effort. Players like the full backs who don't poke too many goals in the other net but are responsible for keeping a lot out of ours and the halfbacks who get the ball moved up the field and control the center of the field, and with the linemen set up alot of scoring situations should in such a team effort all be mentioned. Being part of a real team effort is more important and so when good things are said about the team the members in total are responsible. If the team plays together like they did at Dartmouth this Saturday at Centennial Field, there will be more good things written about them.

The game of soccer – a fast moving game.

Dick Myers- Racing Is A Part Of Him

by Norm Robinson

Dick Myers is a UVM student, but not an ordinary student. This twenty-year-old Mechanical Engineering major is also a race driver. Myers races in the mini-stock division at several local area race tracks, which include "Thunder Road" in Barre, Vermont, and "Catamount Stadium" in nearby Milton.

The mini-stocks are 1955-68 foreign or American sedans with only 97 cubic inches under the hood. The area division is a part of the National Mini-Stock Division but is modified somewhat for expense purposes.

Dick was born and raised in Burlington, and has always been interested in racing. Growing up, he was known to say, "I can do that!" and soon he was working for the Bobby Dragon crew. He worked with the Dragon crew for 1 to 1½ years and finally decided that he was destined to be on the track, and not in the pits.

Myers didn't jump into things however. After much discussion with friends like Tom Tiller and Bob Dragon, he bought a Volkswagen, "a good car at a decent price." The next step was to get the car set up to his specifications.

Needing a sponsor, he walked into Tamarack Auto Repair and simply asked, "How would you like to sponsor a mini-stock?" To his surprise and joy, they said, "yes," and the young driver was on his way.

"Team Two," as Myers and his pit crew are called, started off fast. His green and yellow painted machine rolled to fourth, fifth, and second places in his first races and led the division at one point in the season. "An accident can set you back a long way," said Myers when asked about his drop to a still-respectable tenth position in the standings. A spin off the back stretch at Catamount, followed by a meeting with the wall at Thunder Road left his "number two" in tough shape.

Dick Myers displays the checkered flag after winning at Thunder Road

Myers has a very competent crew behind him. Frank Gariepy, an accounting major here at UVM, Patrick Church, a business administration major, and Ted Horton, an electrical engineering student, worked along with Dick five nights a week for as many as eight or nine hours a night.

"When we first started, all we knew was that the engine was in the back," recalls Myers. "What works on paper doesn't always work on the track." "Team Two" found this out over the course of the season. They have rolled it over, been in a head-on crash, and hit the wall at Thunder Road. "It's gymnastics on wheels," they said.

When asked what the hardest thing to master is in this rookie season, Myers said, "Traffic, definitely traffic. Dodging other people and doing it cleanly is terribly difficult."

"The second most difficult thing to master is learning to get everything you can out of a car. I was once told to run so hard that they'd have to go out with a dustpan and broom after the race!"

Having a good car is only half of the combination needed to win. The driver is the other necessary ingredient. What makes a young man race automobiles? "It's a bug you get bitten by. I love the competition and it's a challenge."

What is necessary for car and driver to go 15 laps at an average speed of 60 miles per hour and up to 80 miles per hour on the straights, and through and around a field of 25 cars? "One thing is: you've got to be a good athlete. In one race, it was 40 degrees out, but by the time the race was done, I was totally exhausted and soaked to the skin in sweat. Secondly, your level of concentration must be tremendous. Probably the level is as high as a good chess game. One must think well ahead to avoid the other cars. Thirdly, experience is a tremendous asset. If you start 25th, and you've got 15 laps, you've got to go by something like 1.4 cars a lap to get ahead. You've also got cars starting three abreast. It makes for exciting racing, but I'd advocate that NASCAR go to two wide. It'd be much safer."

Accidents are a part of racing and many fans wonder what goes through a driver's mind. "Things happen too fast to think much. What is really difficult is coming back afterwards. When you hit the wall, it's not fear that goes through your mind. You've got confidence in your car and just hope it stays together."

Many odd things happen to a driver at a race track. "When you're around for half the night, working with the cars, you get kind of punchy. One night we had a rubberband fight! Another time I went into the first corner and when I turned I tried to put on the blinker. It wasn't there, of course!"

One hope of Myer's is to someday put a program through a computer to work out a new suspension system. "Eight-tenths of the race is handling. Your engine only gets you to the corner."

Racing is not the only extra-curricular activity for Dick. He participates in the UVM band, was a member of the track team and also speed skates with Dave Raneri, another track member.

Catamount Stadium will host the New England 200 on Sunday, September 21st. Myers will be in competition with over 20 mini-stocks. In the main event nearly 30 late-model stock cars will compete in the 200 lap feature event.

When asked about the race, Myers commented, "It's funny, the engine ran lousy last Saturday, and then was great on Sunday at Thunder Road. If it runs good, I hope to finish in the top five. The competition is very close this year. Jerry Parentoni is the man to beat."

Sunday is only the immediate future however. "This is just a start. Next year, we're going to build our own chasis from scratch. After that, we want to go to newer and better things."

Dick Myers is a very sincere and serious man, very interested in racing. It is a part of him, a tremendously important part of him. I suggest you go out to Catamount Sunday and watch and cheer on one of your fellow students. There is a $2.00 discount for college students with I.D. What better way is there to spend a Sunday afternoon?

Look for the little green and yellow number "2" Volkswagen "bug" motoring around the race track. It will be Dick Myers, trying a little but harder than everyone else.

... Fenway Park

(continued from page fourteen)

American League East, one thing is certain: there isn't a man alive who wants to see a championship banner fly over Fenway more than Tom Yawkey, nor does one deserve it more.

If the Sox fail this year, there will be future games and seasons ahead. But the dreams of many fans, and one in particular, is for the championship flag to fly over this elegant and beautiful park before it too joins the Ebbets Fields' and Polo grounds and enters into the fake world of Astro Turf and domed stadiums.

If these styled parks are progress, then maybe we ought to reverse time and take a good look at what baseball was, and is, in Fenway Park, Boston.

Women's Sport Schedules

FIELD HOCKEY

September 19 – Johnson	(H) – 4:00
September 26 – Middlebury	(H) – 4:30
September 29 – Green Mtn.	(A) – 4:00
September 30 – Castleton	(H) – 3:30
October 3-4 – Bridgewater (with South East. Mass. Univ.)	(A)
October 7 – Plymouth State	(A) – 3:15
October 10 – Plattsburgh	(H) – 3:00
October 15 – Dartmouth	(H) – 3:30
October 18 – Middlebury	(A) – 9:45
October 21 – Colby-Sawyer	(H) – 3:30
October 23 – Lyndon	(A) – 3:30
October 31, Nov 1-2 – Tourney – URI	(A)

TENNIS

September 23 – Middlebury	(A) – 3:30
September 27 – Albany	(A) – 10:30
September 30 – Castleton S.C.	(H) – 3:30
October 4 – Green Mtn.	(A) – 10:00
October 7 – Plymouth State C.	(A) – 3:15
October 15 – Dartmouth	(H) – 3:30
October 16 – Middlebury	(H) – 3:30
October 21 – Colby-Sawyer	(H) – 3:30
October 24,25,26, – Northeast Regional Tournament, UMass.

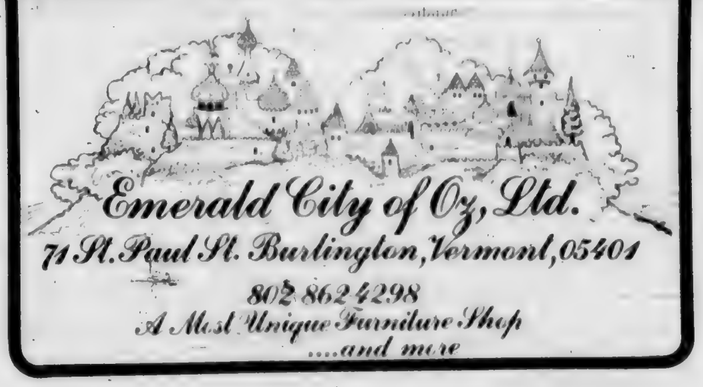
SOCCER

September 23 – Champlain Regional College (Quebec)	(A) – 4:30
September 30 – Castleton	(H) – 4:00
October 3 – Keene State	(A) – 4:00
October 16 – Champlain Regional College	(H) – 4:30
October 18 – Emma Willard Soccer Tourney	(A) – TBA
October 22 – Castleton State C. (to be scheduled, Lyndon and Smith or Brown)	(A) – 3:30

Ski Racers Meeting

Ski Racers

There will be a meeting of all ski racers who are not varsity candidates on Monday, September 22, in Room 117, Patrick Gym at 7:00 pm. Fall training will be gone over as well as some organizational details. All students interested in racing this winter are urged to attend. If you have any questions or are unable to attend, call Chris Brown at 656-3074 or 658-0829.



Art Supplies
Picture Frames
Sculpture Supplies
Drafting Supplies

Calling All Artists

Come To Vermont's Great Art Store. You'll Find Most Everything You Need And At Fair Prices.

Boutilier's
Art Center
112 Church St.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
SPECIALIST IN FOREIGN CAR REPAIR
ENGINE REBUILDING · TIRES · STEAM CLEANING · UNDERCOATING · ALIGNMENT · SPIN BALANCING

FUEL INJECTION ANALYZER
WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES

862-7686
878-8607
ROUTE 2 WILLISTON, VT.
TOWING FREE WRECKER SERVICE

PLANTASIA
INDOOR PLANT SPECIALISTS
107 ST PAUL STREET, BURLINGTON VERMONT 05401 (802) 863-4455

CLAY POTS, POTTING SOIL FERTILIZER, PLANT SUPPLIES, MACRAME, AND MUCH MORE

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St Burlington
Essex Jct Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

sports

Rugby Teams Win , Lose

The UVM Rugby Team opened the 1975 season against the Montreal Irish with the A team losing to the Irish first team and the B team winning the match.

UVM was a decided underdog in its first game as it was playing one of the best teams in Quebec as its first match of the year, and came out suffering a 28 to 3 loss. The score at half time was 22 to 3, UVM's only score coming on a 3-point penalty kick by Jeff Thomas. When asked to comment on the loss, coach David Scrase pointed out that the basic problem was the inexperience of this year's backfield which in years previous had been UVM's strong point. "This was obvious," related Scrase, "as the Irish backs scored 4 out of the 5 tries scored against UVM. The backfield is in a process of rebuilding, as UVM lost Marcel Bergeron and Jack Long, last year's team captains, to graduation. Also, the Irish backfield executed their plays better because they had already played 4 games previous to Saturday's match. One bright point in the defeat was the play of the forwards, who generally outplayed the opposition forwards."

The Rugby Team in action.

The second team also playing their first game of the season upset a much more experienced Montreal Irish side by a score of 8 to 4. UVM was not expected to win this match, as 7 members of the team were playing their first game. Down 4 to 0 in the first half, UVM tied the game with 30 seconds left in the half when the UVM forwards worked the ball from 40 yards out, with forward Dave Yukezniak breaking the last 15 yards to score a 4-point try.

The second half saw UVM score the winning try when Jim Peckman took a pass from Dave Clark and scored from 3 yards out.

UVM will play its first home game against state rival and New England Rugby power, Norwich U., this Saturday. Kickoff will be at 2 pm at the Archie Field next to the Gutterson Field House.

Yan Con To Go To Europe

The Yankee Conference exhibition series of football games in Europe next year will become a reality, according to University of Rhode Island Director of Athletics Maurice Zarchen, who is the official designated by the Conference to negotiate on behalf of the six member institutions which play the sport.

Approval has been given by university officials representing Boston University and the Universities of Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island to enter into a firm agreement with the Intercontinental Football League to introduce American college football to Western Europe in June, 1976.

"The tour represents a great opportunity for the universities and players involved to travel overseas on a three-week cultural exchange program, while at the same time, demonstrating the skills of American football to the continent of Europe," Mr. Zarchen said. "We are especially pleased to note that this tour will be conducted at no cost to the institutions or the players themselves," he added.

The entire program will be sponsored by the Intercontinental Football League, whose commissioner Robert Kap of Dallas said he is seeking to introduce American football to the continent of Europe. Cities included in the tour include Milano and Rome, Italy; Barcelona and Madrid, Spain; Munich and West Berlin, Germany; and Vienna, Austria.

Discussion began last January (1975), with the intention of scheduling the tour for this past June, but because of insufficient time for planning, and for finalizing the European football schedule, it was agreed to postpone the tour until next June.

Mr Kap and Conference officials have formally signed agreements which call for a three week tour including the six teams, starting on or about June 1, 1976. Each team will play one game per week on a three game round-robin tour, and against a different Conference opponent in a different city.

The project is receiving guidance from Nicholas Rodis, formerly of the U.S. State Department and currently Director of Athletics at Brandeis University. The tour has received approval from the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) as a sanctioned activity.

The series of games, tabbed as a "European Football Cultural Exchange program" is the brainchild of Kap, a native of Yugoslavia, who was the first coach of the Dallas Tornado of the North American Soccer League. He's been working on the project for more than two years.

Mr Zarchen, who spearheaded Rhode Island's historic trip to Frankfurt, Germany, in 1973 to meet the US Air Force as the first American collegiate football team ever to play on European soil, said that the terms of the agreement have been worked out to everyone's satisfaction. He added that all school officials involved are extremely pleased with the prospect of having the Conference represent the nation in Europe next June.

Editor's Note: The University of Vermont will not be represented in this tremendous venture due to the cancellation of the football program because of financial difficulties. It seems to me that football is a learning experience and more than just a game. It's too bad that UVM members cannot participate in such a worthwhile program because of poor planning by University officials.

New Depth On UVM Women,s Tennis Team

by Debi Bloom

Sixty-four candidates showed up this Fall to try out for the UVM women's varsity tennis team. This has been the largest group of women showing such an interest in competing on the Vermont team in many years, which expresses the recent interest growth in all women's sports on the college level. Only sixteen women make up the tennis squad, so competition for a spot on the team is keen. The team line-up will be announced by Thursday, Sept. 18.

Marilyn Chase is the new coach for the women's tennis team this year, taking over the position of Sally Guerette who did a fine job coaching the team for the past six years. Miss Chase is a strong tennis player herself and hopes to lend her coaching skills towards the tennis team's improvement.

Six veteran tennis team members have returned this Fall, hoping to maintain their positions on the team. With the variety of talented Freshmen on the courts, the old timers will have to prove their worth on the courts. Freshman Kelly McCutchen, from Woodstock, Vermont, previously Vermont's Junior State Champion, along with other top quality tennis players Becky Rich, Alex Palmer and Melaney Cordon are strong contenders for top positions on the women's team.

The Fall tennis season is only 6 weeks long, which forces the team to play hard, competitive tennis at the outset to prepare for their first match against Middlebury on Sept. 23. Close neighbors and rivals, Middlebury College is Vermont's major competition.

The climax of the tennis season is a trip to Amherst, Mass. for the Northeast Collegiate Tourpament at U. Mass. on October 25 through October 27. UVM sends their top six players down to this tournament, where they compete against top players from such schools as Yale, Radcliffe, Brown, Southern Conn., and Trinity.

Coming up soon in the Cynic will be profiles of some of last year's tennis team members, as well as the outstanding new freshman team members. The Fall schedule is as follows:

Sept. 23 - Middlebury (A)
Sept. 27 - Albany (A)
Sept. 30 - Castleton (H)
Oct. 3 - Green Mt. (A)
Oct. 16 - Middlebury (H)
Oct. 22 - Colby Sawyer (H)
Oct. 25 - Northeast Tournament

Plattsburgh, Siena Edge UVM Golfers

by Jack Parr

The University of Vermont golfers were defeated by a fractional two stroke margin by Plattsburgh State University and Siena State, who tied for first place honors in the Cardinal Invitational Golf Tournament held at the Bluff Point Country in Plattsburgh last Saturday.

The Catamounts' 322 total was bettered only by Plattsburgh's and Siena's 320. The other teams including St. Michaels, Middlebury, Clarkson and St. Lawrence finished well back of the top three teams.

The Cats had a rough day over the windy Bluff Point layout which runs along a rocky point on Lake Champlain. Low man for UVM was Scott Webb whose 79 was good enough for a third place tie (Webb lost the playoff). Next for the Cats was Co-captain Andy Morse who finished with a disappointing 80.

"I had it going well," explained Morse, "but ran into trouble on the 18th. I double bogeyed it and lost the tournament right there. If I had parred that hole we would have won. But if's don't count in this game."

Mike Agusta and Ted Olson had equally lousy days turning in scores of 81 and 82 respectively. Agusta, who started his round like a ball of fire playing one under par golf for the first six holes, explained; "I started thinking of my final score and lost my concentration. I couldn't putt those greens."

The Bluff Point course, the third oldest in the nation, is modeled after English courses with small hilly greens making putting hazardous.

Ted Olson merely said he didn't want to talk about it, but said he would do much better in the Cat's next match in Amherst.

Coach Donnally was disappointed in his team's finish but was pleased in Scott Webb's play.

"Scotty played some fine golf considering the conditions. He will have a fine season."

UVM played in the Toski Invitational yesterday and will travel to Simsbury Conn. on Thursday to prepare for the New Englands held in Simsbury in October.

Cross-Country Falls To Bates

Behind the record-breaking performance of Bruce Merrill, Bates College defeated the University of Vermont cross-crountry team 24-31 in the opener for both squads.

Merrill devasted the five-mile course of 25 minutes, 37 seconds. Finishing second was Vermont's Lin Capen with a time of 25:52, also breaking the old record.

Paul Oparowski finished third for Bates while UVM's Dave Milligan finished fourth. Other Vermont finishes were Howdy Russell, seventh; Bob Stoehr, eighth; and Dave Elliot, tenth.

Although Bates beat Vermont last year in the opener as well, Vermont defeated them in the ICAAAA's later in the year. Perhaps it will be a repeat this year.

THIS WEEK IN SPORT

Men's

SOCCER
Sept. 20 – Connecticut (Home)
Sept. 24 – Plattsburgh St. (Home)

TENNIS
Sept. 20 – Cardinal Classic (Away)

CROSS COUNTRY
Sept. 20 – Connecticut (Home)

RUGBY
Sept. 20 – Norwich (Home)

BASEBALL
Sept. 21 – Siena (Away)

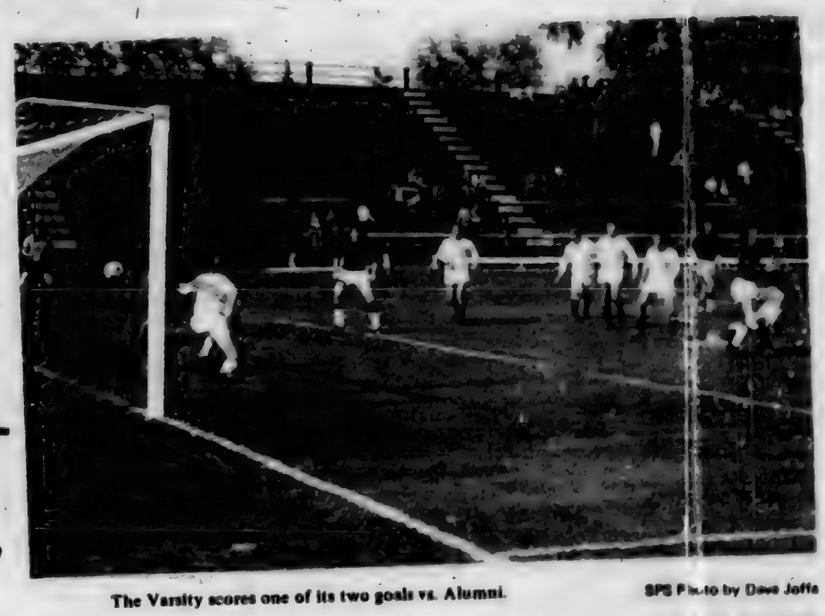
Women's

FIELD HOCKEY
Sept. 19 – Johnson State (Home)

TENNIS
Sept. 23 – Middlebury (Away)

SOCCER
Sept. 23 – Champlain Regional (Away)

Varsity Soccer Squad Tripped By Alumni, Meet UConn Saturday



The Varsity scores one of its two goals vs. Alumni. SPS Photo by Dave Joffe

The University of Vermont varsity soccer squad, coming off 3-1 and 6-1 victories over Plymouth State and Dartmouth respectively, in preseason scrimmages, ran agound Saturday; as the Alumni posted a 3-2 victory over the varsity at Centennial Field.

Jim Kiely showed why he was Vermont's goaltender in the early '70's as he turned back 14 shots for the Alumni.

Although the varsity outshot the Alumni 24-9, Kiely and Bob Schroeder were able to turn back most of the varsity's chances.

Peter Bernhardt's free kick set up the first score of the game for the Alumni. His shot hit the left post and Jeff Taft picked up the rebound and slammed it into the far right corner, giving the Alumni a 1-0 lead.

The varsity tied the score on a perfect play by Dave Verrier and Mark Heidrich. Verrier moved down the left side and found Heidrich with a perfect pass just inside the penalty area. Mark's shot cleared the outstretched hands of Kiely and sailed into the right corner of the net.

Bill Willey was denied three times in succession late in the first half, but on the last try Bob Green picked off the rebound and slammed it past varsity goaltender Max Martin.

The Alumni put the game out of reach late in the second half when Peter Bernhardt kicked in a penalty shot after a hard ball in the penalty area.

Although it was too little, too late, John Koerner made it 3-2 on a penalty shot with three-and-a-half minutes left. The varsity managed three more shots on goal but the Alumni defense held on.

The varsity had an 11-7 edge in shots on goal in the first half and a 13-2 edge in the second period. Kiely had seven saves and Martin, normally a halfback, had four. Martin was in the nets due to injuries to Jim Taft and Jeff Jones.

Although the varsity squad came up on the short end, it was very impressive offensively and appears to be in excellent shape for the upcoming season and this Saturday's game with Connecticut at Centennial Field. The Huskies are second ranked in New England and it should be an exciting game.

INDIAN BROOK STABLE

Indian Brook Stables is proud to announce Kelly Roberts and Holly Begins as qualified instructors in Hunt Seat – Equitation – Jumpers – Boarding – Training – Lessons
40 Box Stalls – Prices $60.00 and up
1/2 mile training track. 80 x 180 Indoor arena, heated barn, hunt course and stadium course.

"Ride with the Champions!"

Creek Road, Colchester, Vermont.
878-4913
864-5116

adidas MILLS & GREER

We Have CANVAS CONVERSE BASKETBALL SHOES & JACK PURCELL SNEAKERS good for basketball , tennis, handball and racketball

Wilson PUMA

Selection of Rackets For-TENNIS, SQUASH AND RACKETBALL
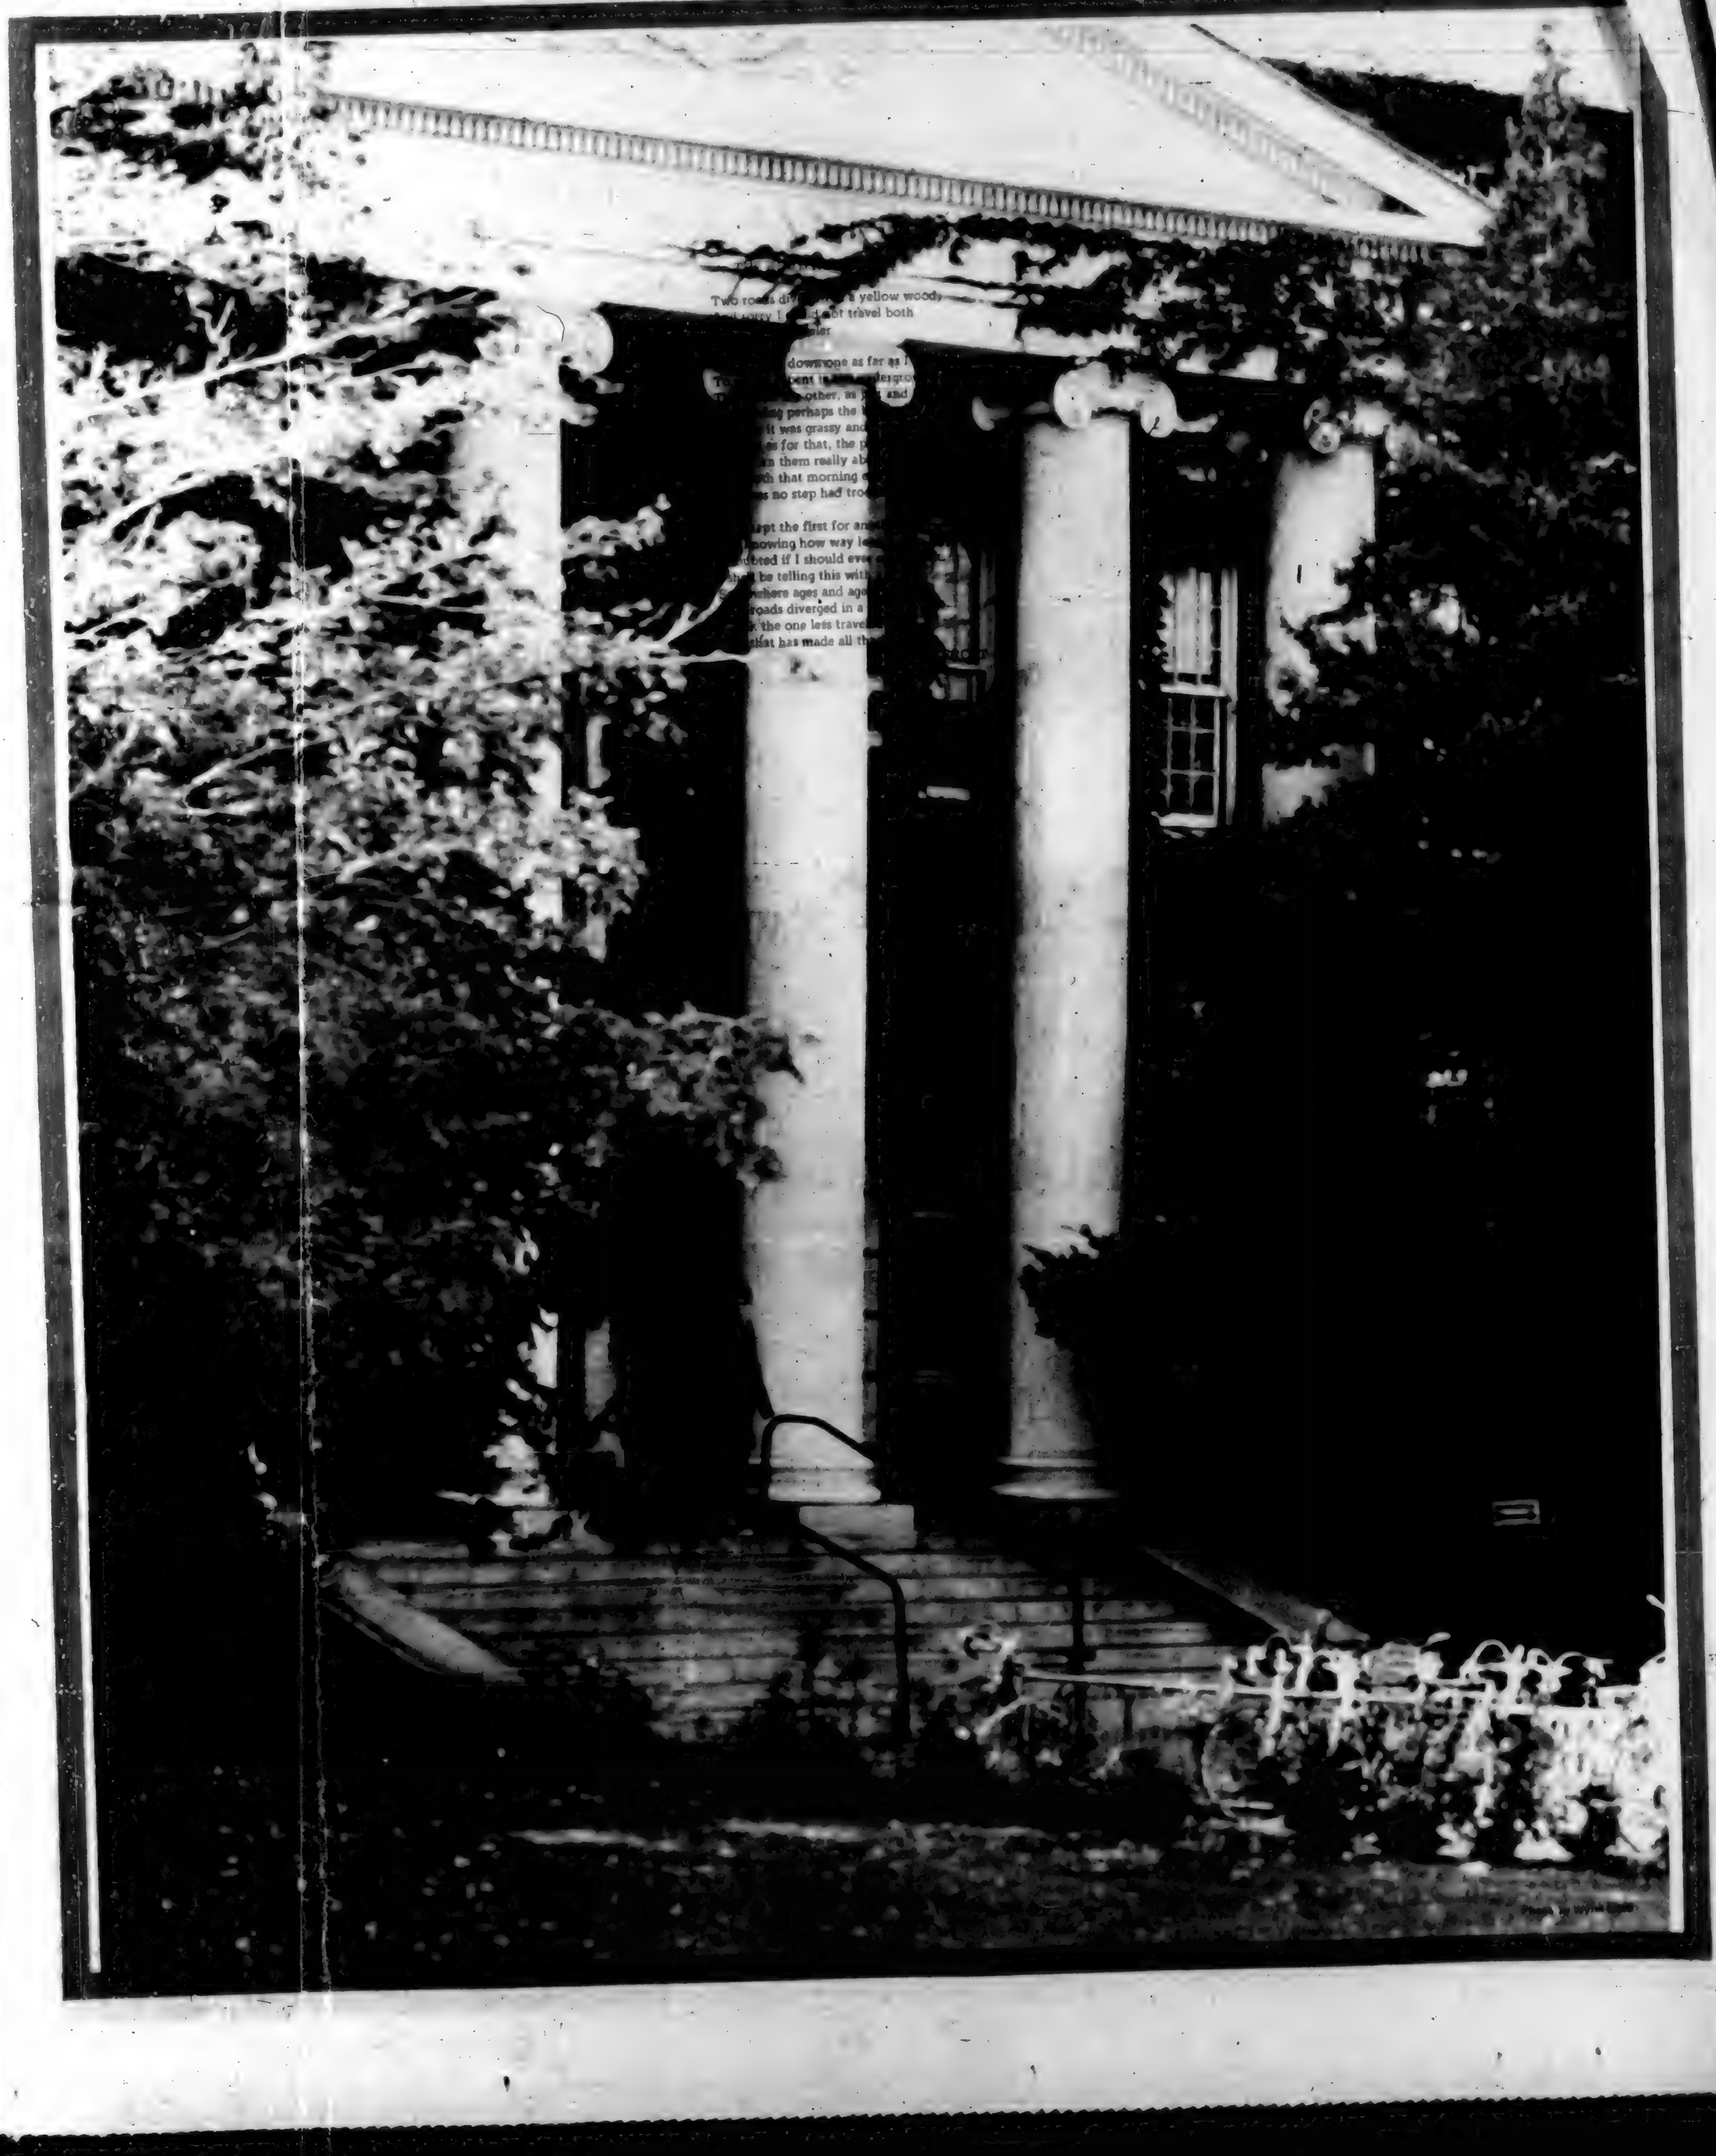
MILLS & GREER
Within Walking Distance to Campus-
East On Williston Rd. Across From Howard Johnsons
Rawlings

Many physicians get their own prescriptions filled here for their family, shouldn't you?
Our prices have got to be RIGHT
Prescriptions filled at Discount Prices
Grandway Pharmacy
Grandway Shopping Center
Shelburne Road
864-6869

VERMONT CYNIC

The Privilege to Live in Vermont

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 18 FOUNDED IN 1883 SEPTEMBER 28,



calendar annoucements

'Tuesday At 7:30'

"Tuesday at 7:30" is a new weekly program for the residents of Main Campus Residence Halls featuring prominent speakers, interesting workshops, and relevant seminars from the campus and the community. It is held every Tuesday at 7:30 PM in the Buckham Hall Lounge. Expand your horizons!

This week's "Tuesday at 7:30" (September 30) will be an S. A. Forum with Student Association President Staige Davis and Vice President Paul Ajamian as well as new S. A. candidates. The Forum will initiate students to the new form of Student Government at UVM under the new Constitution. "How can I make a difference?" will be an overriding theme and student participation is encouraged. Let's fight apathy!

VPIRG Meeting

There will be a VPIRG informational meeting on Tuesday, September 30 at 7:30 p.m. downstairs in Billings Roundroom for any students not familiar with VPIRG who want to become involved.

Israeli Dancing

Every Wednesday night at 8:00 p.m. there will be Israeli dancing in Room 131 Building A Living Learning. Rachel Elinor who spent time in Israel will lead the sessions. First session is on Wednesday, September 24th.

Firearms Safety Course

The Extension Service of Vermont and the State Fish and Game Department have joined forces briefly, to extend to the students, staff, and faculty of the University of Vermont, the opportunity to enroll and take part in a Firearms Safety Certification Course. All who wish to hunt and have not previously held a hunter's license, must engage and successfully complete this type course.

The areas covered are:

Firearms - Handling and Care

Knowledge of Ammunition and Firearms

Hunter Responsibility

Survival

First Aide

Wildlife Management

Only the first twenty-five to be enrolled can be taken.

The course will include 5 two hour classes with a test at the end. Also the students will fire 15 rounds at a target practice area.

Classes start October 6 and run consecutively until November 3, from (this is every Monday night.) 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in Living Learning B-132.

For more information or pre enrollment call Eric Nichols, Chittenden County Extension Service.

Morality And The Law

On Wednesday, October 1 at 4:00 p.m. in Room 109 Old Mill, the John Dewey Philosophy Club is presenting a lecture by Professor Robert Gurland, Chairman of the Department of Philosophy at New York University, who will discuss "Morality and the Law."

Professor Gurland is one of the most highly acclaimed teachers in the United States. He was twice named Teacher of the Year at C.W. Post College, where he taught mathematics, he was the youngest person ever to win New York University's Great Teacher Award, and he received national recognition for his Sunrise Semester Course entitled "Practical Reasoning" which appeared on the CBS Television Network.

The lecture is free and all are invited.

US Entanglements

At 8:00 p.m. in Room 150 Building B Living/Learning Marc Stoler, Ph.D. (Assistant Professor of History), will give a talk on "U.S. Entanglements Throughout the World".

That will be quite an interesting topic! Thursday, September 25, 8:00 p.m. 150 B Living/Learning.

Newcomers Meeting

Are you new to UVM because you are a transfer student, or because you have just come to college after working for a while, being at home with a family, or in the service... or whatever?

If you've answered yes to any of the above, then you're probably feeling a little strange here, and more than a little alone.

Why not come to Marsh Lounge, Billings Center, at 3 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 2. This is the time and place for a reception for transfer and non-traditional students, sponsored by the UVM Women's Caucus and Mortar Board, senior women's honorary.

Students of both sexes are cordially invited to come and make some new friends.

Mortar Board and the Women's Caucus say they'll "try to have some interesting people there for you to meet, but best of all, you'll meet each other!"

Student Teachers

All University Students who plan to Student Teach next semester should obtain an intern application form from your program internship coordinator or from the Office of Professional Laboratory Experiences (237 Waterman) and MUST turn this in completely filled out by Oct. 1.

All Juniors and Seniors in the College of Education and Social Services and the College of Arts and Sciences who intend to Student Teach next semester:

There will be a mandatory intern placement meeting 7:00 p.m. Wednesday October 15 in Memorial Lounge for all elementary education interns and Thursday, October 16 for all secondary education interns.

At that time placement procedures will be explained, group interviews with schools will take place, and the intern handbook will be distributed.

Anyone who cannot attend the meeting MUST contact the Office of Professional Laboratory Experiences immediately since non-attendance will put you at a serious disadvantage in obtaining the placement you prefer.

Remember! The Lane Series opens its 21st season Tuesday, Sept. 30 with the Royal Shakespeare Company performing "Pleasure and Repentance." The second concert of the season will be Sunday, October 5. The Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra of Hamburg. Ticket information from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman Building, telephone 656-3418.

At Fleming Museum through Spring '76, "Collectors and Collections," which highlights the collections of six major donors to the Museum, and "Traditional Africa," which draws from the Museum's extensive holdings of African art. Both shows are in the second floor galleries. And if you can't get to the Museum during the daytime, remember that now they're open Wednesday evenings from 7 to 10:30--absolutely free.

Graduate students: note that the Bailey Library Reference Department is hosting coffee hours for you, September 30 - October 2, from 9 to 10 a.m. Come into the Staff Lounge at the Library and discuss your research programs and find out what library services are available to you.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25

3:10 p.m., College of Engineering, Mathematics and Business Administration (EMBA) presents an open lecture, Prof. Henry Steffens, history, on "Science, Technology and Society," at B-106 Cook Bldg.

4:30 p.m., Senate meets at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building.

7:30 p.m. SA Films American Actress series presents "20th Century," filmed in 1934 and starring Carole Lombard and John Barrymore, admission free at B-106 Cook Bldg.

7:30 to 9 p.m., Living Literatury program presents the first of five "Oral Interp Showcase" programs at 216 Commons, Living/Learning. Free admission, and refreshments will be served.

8 p.m., the departments of psychiatry and family practice join to present John Money, M.D., noted sex education authority, on "Juvenile and Adult Sex Education: Its Relationship to Gender Identity," Carpenter Auditorium, Given Bldg.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26

Fleming Museum closed all day for installation of all works submitted to "Vermont Photography '75." Show opens up Saturday.

Church Street Center mini-course on Bird Migration begins; details from 656-4221.

12 noon, open lunch hour at the Counseling and Testing Center, 146 S. Williams St. Bring your lunch and make new friends.

1 to 4 p.m., UVM apples on sale at the Horticulture Research Center off Shelburne Road. Yum.

2:10 p.m., Physics colloquium, Stephen E. Luce and J. Michael Wentzell will report on undergraduate research in 1975 summer programs at Worcester Polytechnic Institute and Yale University. Held in A-402 Cook (B-104 as alternate) and followed by coffee in A-429. Open to all.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four," open house/entertainment at Royall Tyler Theater; admission free. If you've never been to the UVM theatre, why not take this opportunity?

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA Films "the biggies" series presents "Z," the 1973 film starring Yves Montand, Jean-Louis Trintignant and Irene Pappas, admission $1, at B-106 Cook Bldg.

7:30 p.m., open poetry reading at the Church Street Center, with R. Tinker Greene of Poets Mimeo Coop. Bring your own poetry if you wish!

8 p.m., UVM Folk Dance Club meets at Southwick Ballroom. Instruction for all levels, no experience, no partner necessary - just come and have a good time. Details from Ben Bergstein, 863-6686.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27

9 a.m. to 12 noon, Church Street Center workshop, "Working with Bone: A Demonstration" with Bruce Hasse. For $3, learn about processes involved. Held at Shelburne Craft School - register in advance by calling 656-4221 or visiting the Center at 135 Church St.

10 a.m. to 5 p.m., public viewing at the Fleming Museum of all works submitted to "Vermont Photography '75."

7:30 p.m., SA Films mini-series presents "Ball of Fire," filmed in 1942, and starring Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, and Dana Andrews. Admission free at B-106 Cook Bldg.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 28

3 p.m., "Photography and the Picture Experience," public lecture by author/photographer Nathan Lyons, who is the Juror for "Vermont Photography '75." Admission free - location is the Marble Court, Fleming Museum.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 29

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center "Career Planning Awareness" program with Bill McNeil. Open to anyone with questions regarding occupational selection, choice of major, career plans. Admission free at 146 S. Williams St.

4:30 p.m., first general meeting of the year of Fellows and Associates of the Center for Research on Vermont, Dewey Lounge, Old Mill. See story this issue.

7-8 p.m., Teacher Education written communication test, Room B-106 Cook Bldg. Required of all students seeking certification.

7:30 p.m., "Planning for Title XX--Does Citizen Participation Count?" Free community seminar at the Church St. Center, led by Margaret Whittlesey, to discuss the Title XX Social Security Act planning process in Vermont; guidelines for Fiscal 1976 and implications and possible strategies for Fiscal 1977.

7:30 p.m., the UVM Church Street Center offers two short courses, "Drawing from Life," and "Making Hand Puppets," details from Ext. 4221. Call early--advance registration is requested.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30

12 noon, Counseling and Testing "Study Skills Workshop" with Alice D. Outwater; admission free at 146 S. Williams Street. Open to all with questions, problems or concerns about study habits.

12 noon, Department of Pharmacology lecture, Prof. W.S. Feldberg, M.D., laboratory of neuropharmacology, National Institute for Medical Research, London, England, "The Ventral Surface of the Brain Stem-- A Hitherto Scarcely Explored Region of Pharmacological Sensitivity," Room E-214 Given Building.

3 p.m., "TM Club" meets, Billings Conference Room. For students and faculty practicing transcendental meditation.

4-5:30 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal group of students, staff, townspeople and professors who get together to speak in Spanish about anything of interest, E-380 Living/Learning. A high level of speaking ability is not required. Come and see -- open to all who are interested. Sponsored by El Club Hispanico.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance Program open lecture, Prof. Richard Sweterlitsch, English, on folk culture and daily peasant life in the Middle Ages, 216 Commons, Living/Learning.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization meets to share healing experiences, Harris Hall recreation room. More information from Holly Aspden, Ext. 3156.

7 p.m., Tuesday night drawing group meets for figure drawing second floor, Williams Hall. $1 donation at the door to pay the model.

7:30 p.m., SAFilms British Cinema Series presents "Odd Man Out," starring James Mason, Kathleen Ryan, and Robert Newton. B-106 Cook; admission free.

8 p.m., Lane Series opens the season with the Royal Shakespeare Company, "Pleasure and Repentance", at Memorial Auditorium. Tickets in advance from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, 656-3418.

6:30-8:30 p.m., "Yoga for Beginners," at the Church Street Center, a six week course for $24. Details from Ext. 4221.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1

10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Box Office hours at Royall Tyler Theater for "Lysistrata," which will run from October 16-19.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a free "Relaxation and Mediation" program with Nancy Koch, at the Center, 146 S. Williams Street. Come and learn some creative ways of dealing with daily tension and stress.

3:30 p.m., International Club meets at 479 Main Street, the Area and International Studies Building.

4 p.m., John Dewey Philosophy Club lecture, Professor Robert Gurland, chairman of the department of philosophy at New York University, "Morality and the Law," 109 Old Mill. Prof. Gurland was twice named teacher of the year at C.W. Post College where he taught mathematics, and was the youngest person ever to win NYU's Great Teacher Award. He received national recognition for his Sunrise Semester Course entitled "Practical Reasoning" which appeared on the CBS Television Network. The lecture is free and open to all.

(continued on page three)

Israeli Group

On September 28 (Sunday) at 2:00 p.m. in Suite 230 Building B Living/Learning (The Hebrew Suite) there will be an informal talk on creating a pro-Israeli group on Campus. A representative of the American Zionist Youth Foundation, Yossi Gottlieb will be coming in from Boston to lead the discussion and to distribute materials. Please come and participate. It should be a good time. Call Marc Pollack at 4248 if you have questions.

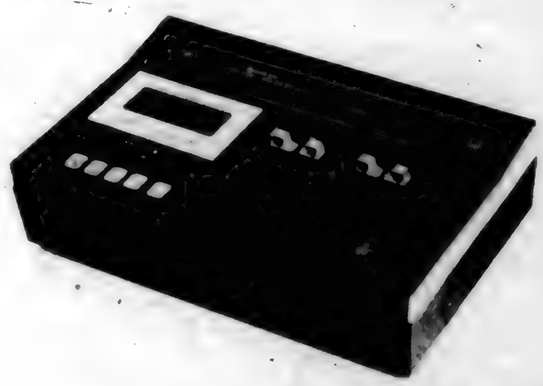
Jill's School

Small, intimate playgroup near UVM
French included in curriculum
Ages 2 - 5 Open 8:15 to 5:00
— hours flexible —
call: 862-1151 985-2033

Bible Study

★organized, in depth, non-denominational
★ free ★ open to public
10am & 5 pm Every Sunday
Howard Johnsons Lodge
Williston Rd.

Sankyo STD-1510
Stereo Cassette Tape Deck
with Dolby* For Under $200.



This 4-track 2-channel stereo cassette tape deck has the famed Dolby noise reduction system to reduce tape noise, plus Automatic & Manual Bias Switching for top performance, regardless of the type tape you use. Has two heads and a 4-pole hysteresis synchronous motor for low distortion and high frequency response... with less than 0.12% wow/flutter. Features slide rule input and output controls, twin VU meters, function indicator lights, 3-digit tape counter, tape run lamp and Total Automatic Shut-off in any mode... fast forward, rewind, play or record. Has two mike inputs and a headphone jack plus auxiliary input jacks.

*A trademark of Dolby Labs Inc.

Sankyo

Dealers in Burlington Area

LAFAYETTE RADIO - Essex Junction
CREATIVE SOUND- Next to K-Mart

The Beautiful Oval

One of Mother Nature's loveliest shapes, translated into sparkling diamond engagement rings. Their charm lies in the fact that they have all of the brilliance of the round-cut, plus the grace and the glitter of the marquise. They are particularly becoming to slender tapering fingers.

Illustrations slightly enlarged

Prices start from under $100

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1860

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

DOMINO'S PIZZA

FREE DELIVERY
864-7444

Mon - Thurs 4:30 to 1 AM
Fri & Sat 4:30 to 2 PM
Sun 4:30 to 12:00

SUPPER SPECIAL ANY DAY
4.30-8.00 pm.
$1.00 OFF LARGE PIZZA
(except plain)

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____

1 COUPON PER PIZZA

Cal...

(continued from pa

4:30 p.m., the Council for ... having a meeting for members ... joining in room B 161, L/L Center.

7:30 p.m., Transcendental ... introductory lecture, Marsh Lounge.

8 p.m., Teacher Educa... test, B-106 Cook Bldg. Requ... certification.

7 p.m., German Feature Fil... German and Russian, "Schloss ... directed by F.W. Murnau, ... admission free at 104 Old Mill.

UVM Church Street Center ... Drawing" and "Politics Aren't D... Details from Ext. 4221 -- adva... drawing course will run three m... politics course five weeks, 8 to 1...

Internatio...

There will be weekly coffee hours of the International Club every Wednesday from 3:30 to 5:00 in the Center for Area and International Studies, 479...

Placement Of...

As of Monday, September 22, the Office of Career Planning and Placement will move from its old facility in the Mansfield House to its new headquarters in the Alumni House, on the corner of College and Prospect Streets. The new, larger facility will...

Phys. Ed...

ATTENTION: Physical Education/Health and Recreation majors planning to student teach in the Spring... 1976 semester pick up ...

Learn...

Learn how to hustle, to... rock and to bump!!! In Slade... Hall Friday, September 26...

Christian...

Campus Crusade for Christ
"Agape Hour" -...
evening of Christian fellowsh...

St. Ansel...

SCHEDULE OF EVENT...
SUNDAY
11:30 a.m. - Ho...
Eucharist (Episcopal); 6:... p.m. - Service of The W... and Communion (Protest...
With supper following
MONDAY
7:15 a.m. - Morn...
Prayer; 5:15 p.m. - Eve...
Prayer; 8:00 p.m. - Praye...
Share - A time for infor...
worship
TUESDAY
7:15 a.m. - Morn...
Prayer; 5:15 p.m. - Eve...
Prayer; 8:30 p.m. - For ...
Only - Informal discussion...
Christian beliefs and faith...
men who want to be ...
serious about their religion...
find formal wors...
meaningless. 10:00 p.m...
Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)...
WEDNESDAY
7:15 a.m. - Mor...

Project-Br...

"Project-Breakthro... an advocacy effort based ...
Living/ Learning Cent... overcome barriers encoun...
by the physically and me...
handicapped, presen...
introductory film, Beatin... Averages... This film pe...
both the attitudina...
architectural barriers fa...
the handicapped in daily...
and what they must ...
break these barriers. Th...
not restricted by the ha...

Cunningha...

Weekday Masse...
p.m. Tues. - 10:00 p.m...
Saturday (for ... obligation) 4:15 p.m. ...
p.m.
Sunday: 9:00 a.m...
a.m., 4:15 p.m. and 6:...
Confessions: b...
Masses.
A New Testamen...

SPE...
Sept 29
600 S...

... Calendar

(continued from page two)

4:30 p.m., the Council for Exceptional Children will be having a meeting for members and all those interested in joining in room B 161, L/L Center.

7:30 p.m., Transcendental Meditation program, introductory lecture, Marsh Lounge.

8 p.m., Teacher Education written communication test, B-106 Cook Bldg. Required of all students seeking certification.

7 p.m., German Feature Film, presented by the Dept. of German and Russian, "Schloss Vogelod," made in 1921, directed by F.W. Murnau, silent with German subtitles; admission free at 104 Old Mill.

UVM Church Street Center courses begin, "Point Line Drawing" and "Politics Aren't Dirty: How to Run for Office." Details from Ext. 4221 -- advance registration required. The drawing course will run three mornings, 10 a.m. to noon, the politics course five weeks, 8 to 10 in the evening.

International Club

There will be weekly coffee hours of the International Club every Wednesday from 3:30 to 5:00 in the Center for Area and International Studies, 479 Main Street. The Club welcomes faculty, students and townspeople interested in travel abroad or exposure to different cultures.

Placement Office Relocated

As of Monday, September 22, the Office of Career Planning and Placement will move from its old facility in the Mansfield House to its new headquarters in the Alumni House, on the corner of College and Prospect Streets. The new, larger facility will greatly aid the office operation in meeting the needs of students. Any student who has concerns about his/her career plans is encouraged to visit our new location so that we can help you help yourself. Office hours are 8-4:30 Monday-Friday.

Phys. Ed. Meeting

ATTENTION: Physical Education/Health and Recreation majors planning to student teach in the Spring 1976 semester - pick up an application and schedule your interview by October 1, with Miss Condon at Southwick Gym, Ext. 3240.

Learn To Hustle

Learn how to hustle, to rock and to bump!!! In Slade Hall Friday, September 26. Free entrance, welcome to everybody! (semi-formal).

Christian Fellowship

Campus Crusade for Christ "Agape Hour" - an evening of Christian fellowship and fun, Friday, 7:30 p.m., in room 216 Commons, Living and Learning.

St. Anselm's Chapel

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

SUNDAY
11:30 a.m. - Holy Eucharist (Episcopal); 6:30 p.m. - Service of The Word and Communion (Protestant) With supper following

MONDAY
7:15 a.m. - Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. - Evening Prayer; 8:00 p.m. - Prayer 'n Share - A time for informal worship

TUESDAY
7:15 a.m. - Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. - Evening Prayer; 8:30 p.m. - For Men Only - Informal discussions of Christian beliefs and faith for men who want to be more serious about their religion but find formal worship meaningless. 10:00 p.m. - Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

WEDNESDAY
7:15 a.m. - Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. - Evening Prayer; 10:00 p.m. - Compline - A brief service of prayer and songs to end the day.

THURSDAY
4:00-5:30 p.m. - Wine and Cheese - A chance to drop by and relax; 5:15 p.m. - Evening Prayer. 9:30 p.m. -

FRIDAY
7:15 a.m. - Morning Prayer Service for Protestant Prayer; 5:15 p.m. - Evening Prayer; 7:00-9:30 p.m. - Navigator's use the facilities at St. Anselm's the first and third Fridays of each month. 7:00 p.m. - Tomorrow Night - Open House for all Protestant and Episcopal Students, All are Welcome!

Nancy Allen, Protestant Chaplain; Geoffrey Schmitt, Episcopal Chaplain; 656-3882

Project-Breakthrough Film

"Project-Breakthrough", an advocacy effort based in the Living/Learning Center to overcome barriers encountered by the physically and mentally handicapped, presents an introductory film, Beating the Averages. This film portrays both the attitudinal and architectural barriers faced by the handicapped in daily living and what they must do to break these barriers. They are not restricted by the handicap itself but by the wheelchairs which they must get around in. Please come and find out what we're all about!

Thursday, September 25, 8:00 p.m., Building C, Room 166 Living/Learning Center.

Cunningham Newman Center

Weekday Masses: 4:15 p.m. Tues. - 10:00 p.m.

Saturday (for Sunday obligation) 4:15 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

Sunday: 9:00 a.m., 11:30 a.m., 4:15 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

Confessions: before all Masses.

A New Testament course, Jesus in the Gospels, of approximately ten sessions will begin on Monday, September 29, at 7:00 p.m. If interested please notify the Newman Center.

"WHAT WE ARE IS GOD'S GIFT TO US -- WHAT WE BECOME IS OUR GIFT TO GOD."

Career Planning and Placement

by Rose La Rue

Greetings for a successful academic year! Beginning October 13, the Fall Campus Interview Program will get underway. Seniors and graduate students are encouraged to participate in this program. Employer representatives will be coming from various private businesses, hospitals, state and Federal agencies, also from graduate schools to discuss possible employment opportunities and graduate programs with interested students. These interviews will be conducted on a personal basis by setting up an appointment. The Campus Interviewing Schedule will be available October 1.

The Career Planning and Placement Service also provides a credential and resume service to assist students with their personal vitas. Credential folders may be set up and maintained in the office for your use in pursuing post graduate goals.

A career library, recently developed and constantly growing, houses information on numerous corporations, institutions of higher learning, liberal and scientific areas, and much, much more! Full-time position openings for degree holders are on file, as well as a part-time jobs listing for UVM students.

You are invited to stop by the Placement Office at 109 South Prospect Street (our new home). Members of our staff will be most willing to meet with you to discuss your career objectives or to assist you with your job search. The Director, Larry Simmons, is available to talk with students in Liberal Arts, Nursing, Government, and service related areas. David Kelley, Assistant Director will meet with students in Business, Technology, Agriculture and Home Economics as their major relates to business and profit making. Stop by and get acquainted!

SA Films Plus Cartoon

The schedule of SA Films for this week begins tonight with Twentieth Century, starring John Barrymore, Carole Lombard, Walter Connolly, and Roscoe Karns. During the depression years of the thirties, the "crack" Twentieth Century Limited, operating between New York and Chicago, was the most glamorous of trains, representing the height of speed and luxury. During these years John Barrymore and Carole Lombard represented the height of Hollywood glamor and were among the best of the sophisticated, fast-talking, light-comedy stars. Barrymore, here starring as Oscar Jaffe, theatrical impressario and genius, presents a roaring, capering caricature of theatrical drive and temperament and egomania. Carole Lombard as his famous protege, Lily Garland, incarnates the giddy, absurd glamor of the era. Together, they irreverently skip through a gaily rollicking comedy that has become a classic of its times! It will be shown in B-106 Cook at 7:30.

On Friday, at 7:30 and 10:00, Z, winner of the Academy Award for Best Foreign Film and the New York Critics Award for Best Picture of 1973, will be shown. Starring Yves Montand, Jean-Louis Trintignant, and Irene Pappas, it tells the story of a Greek pacifist leader who is struck down by a speeding truck while hundreds watch. Despite the official police report of accidental death, a journalists persistant questioning leads to a full investigation. Look Magazine calls the film "the last word in thrillers," and NBC-TV says it "stands without peer as a document and thriller." Admission is $1.

Along with Z, there will be a cartoon short from the Max Fleischer Collection. Fleischer, who died in 1972, was the most surreal and imaginative animator ever to come out of Hollywood. There was nothing in a Fleischer cartoon that couldn't come to life, no situation that was too outrageous, and nothing that was impossible. The film to be shown is Boop Oop a Doop (Betty Boop and Koko in the circus). This is part of the Betty Boop series, "the raciest cartoon series ever produced." Starring that 1930's sex kitten, Ms. Boop and her two sidekicks, Koko and Bimbo, a Boop cartoon always began in

(continued on page twelve)

Hypnotist Reappearing

The amazing John Kolisch, world's fastest Hypnotist, upon popular demand, will be reappearing at Ira Allen Chapel, October 18 at 8:00. Kolisch, who has hypnotized over 1 million people, will not only amaze and fascinate you - he will show you fantastic powers of your own that you never imagined. Plus, you will be dazzled with amazing feats of ESP, mind reading and hypnotism. His impressive list of appearances include the Tonight Show, the Sands, the Concord, Playboy Clubs and many others.

Find out why Earl Wilson of the New York Post says, "his mental powers are almost frightening. I rank him as one of the most exciting entertainers I have ever seen."

Tickets will be available at Billings Information desk, Bailey's Music Store, or at the door at a cost of $.75 with student ID or $1.50 without.

Doomsday Cult

We need several copies of Doomsday Cult by John Lafland in our Bailey Library. The book is not out of print, but it was used on campus in Fall of 1973. Students who might be interested in selling their copy to the library please call Bailey Library Ext. 2020 and ask for Mrs. Harvey.

Band Car Wash

The University of Vermont Band will again be holding its fall car wash, beginning at 10:00 AM at the Cloverleaf Texaco, 1055 Williston Road, South Burlington. A mere, deflated dollar will be all that's necessary to obtain a sparkling prize of an automobile, this Saturday, September 27.

Gay Student Union

The Gay Student Union will hold its first organizational meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 1, at 7 p.m. at the Gay Student Union desk, second floor in Billings.

All interested people please attend.

Last Chance To Vote

Today and Tomorrow are the last days to vote on the proposed Student Association Constitution and VPIRG Referendum. It is essential that your views are made known on these two important issues. Voting is taking place at all dining halls, and at Billings Center and Waterman all day.

Ticket Book Raffle

Starting this week the UVM Men's Gymnastic Team will be selling Raffle tickets for two Athletic Books. Two drawings will be made, so you have two chances to win one of the Ticket Books. The Gymnastic team is a club activity and although it competes intercollegiately, it is not funded by the Athletic Department. So its members must raise desperately needed funds to exist. Ticket Books are no longer available by any other means, so please help the UVM Men's Gymnastic Team, and get a chance to win a hot item, an Athletic Ticket Book. Raffles will be sold for $1.00 apiece in Billings.

Gossip!

The Vermont Cynic will be featuring a gossip/chit-chat/advice column next week. The columnist in charge of said illustrious project is Helen Wate, special to the paper. If you have any choice and juicy topics you desire to appear in the Cynic (such as birthdays or first dates), please feel free to drop them off at the Cynic office at any time with Ms. Wate's name on the paper. Phoned in topics are not accepted. Ms. Wate reserves the power to decide what shall be printed.

Cadets Perform Well

ROTC Cadets from the University of Vermont established an impressive record at three U.S. Army training centers this summer.

Cadets Theodore P. Landry of Essex Jct. and Alan L. Moloff of West Orange N.J., completed the Army's most physically demanding course, the Ranger School at Fort Benning, Ga. Major Donald B. Safford, of the University's Department of Military Studies, noted, "It's very difficult to earn a Ranger tab and to have two from the same school in the same summer is very unusual. It constitutes a real display of excellence."

Three other cadets completed the Army Airborne School also held at Fort Benning. Cadets Winston G. Curtis of Springfield, Dean P. Terry of Richmond and Jeffry J. Rounds of Manchester all earned their parachute wings after completing five jumps from an aircraft. At the Advanced Camp at Fort Bragg N.C., Cadet Rounds graduated in the top five percent of over 1,900 cadets attending the camp.

Another cadet, John K. Evans of Woodbridge, Conn., earned a two-year Army ROTC scholarship for his performance at the six-week ROTC basic camp held at Fort Knox, Ky. The scholarship will pay his expenses, to include tuition and books, for his junior and senior years at UVM.

Jobs In The Peace Corps

Recently, our office received complete descriptions of the Peace Corps programs for the ensuing year. Most of the education requests from host countries around the world are for Peace Corps teachers at the elementary and secondary levels. However, there are some at the university level. Teachers are needed in the following subjects:

Elementary Education: foreign language, physical education, art, science, early childhood education, health education, social studies, and curriculum development.

Secondary and University level: Teaching English to speakers of other languages, teaching English to French speaking African countries, mathematics teachers, chemistry teachers, physics teachers, biological scientists and teachers; general science teachers; teacher specialists in business, curriculum development, geography, history, and educational development and methods; special education teachers and speech therapists; physical education; artists, audiovisualists; handicrafts, educational TV, and journalists; librarians; and liberal arts graduates in any subject.

Applications for winter programs (Jan., Feb., and March 1976) should be submitted by October 1, 1975.

If interested and desiring further information, please contact the College of Education and Social Services, Office of Career Planning and Placement, 237 Waterman, 656-3477.

SA Petitions Deadline

Elections for Student Association Senators (pending approval of the new Constitution) will be held on October 7, 8 and 9. Petitions must be filed by each candidate with 80 signatures of students within the constituency they wish to represent -- either dorm, off-campus, or Greek houses. these petitions are due in the SA office before 12 noon on Friday, October 3. Anyone (and everyone!) interested in running should stop in the SA office (right balcony of Billings) as soon as possible

Viet Nam Documentary Film

Hearts and Minds a controversial documentary by Peter Davis, will be at Century Plaza (Dorset Street) on Thursday, September 25. This special showing, sponsored by the Contemporary Cinema class, will be from 4:00-6:00 p.m., and will cost $1.00

Hearts and Minds is a documentary on Viet Nam which was made after the war. Bernard Weiner of Film Quarterly says it "should be required viewing for every American." Director Peter Davis produced The Selling of the Pentagon for television several years ago.

Tickets were on sale this week and will be every week from 12:00-2:00 p.m. on Wednesday near the Billings Information Desk. They will also be available at the door on Thursday afternoon. Don't miss this dynamic film. Next Thursday--October 2: Truffaut's Day for Night.

The students car's best friend

TEXACO

CLOVERLEAF TEXACO
COMPLETE CAR CARE
1055 WILLISTON RD.
SO. BURLINGTON, VT.

ROAD SERVICE
862-2935

DOPE ! ! !

YOU HAVEN'T BOUGHT YOU SMUGGLER'S NOTCH BASH BADGE YET!!!

ONLY $10

SAVE $5.00 on weekdays
Save $4.00 on weekends
ALSO
Take lessons at ⅓ price
Rent equipment at ⅓ price

LAST DAYS OF SEPT IN BILLINGS
Mon 29th and Tues 30th 9 - 5 PM

OVER 700 SOLD TO DATE JOIN YOUR FRIENDS
SKI SMUGGLERS NOTCH
RIDE THE BUS

SPECIAL STUDENT RATE

Sept 29 to Oct. 4 — 2 mos. $25

Jaine Powers Figure Salon
600 SHELBURNE ROAD • SOUTH BURLINGTON, VERMONT 05401

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Randy Jansen '77 ..... Editor-in-Chief
David Ryan '77 ..... Assistant Editor
Mark Valle '76 ..... Managing Editor
John MacDonald '78 ..... News Editor
Sue Perkins '78 ..... Feature Editor
Sari Bodi '76 ..... Arts & Entertainment Editor
Norm Robinson '77 ..... Sports Editor
Amy Weinstock '78 ..... Copy Editor
Deborah Powell '76 ..... Advertising Manager

ENERGY: HOW MUCH OF A PROBLEM

Once again, one has to wonder at the workings of the University and its policies. UVM will be blessed (or cursed, depending on your outlook) with a two week extension of the Christmas break. Supposedly, the University will save $10,000 by not heating dorms and classrooms.

At first, it seems UVM should be commended for being prudent in economical and financial matters. However, if a two week extension is so desperately needed for fuel savings, why aren't conservation measures being initiated now? Energy consumption appears to be at a pre-1973 oil crisis level. Yet, has there been any initiative by UVM to curb energy usage on campus? Why hasn't there been a publicity campaign to inform the university community of the necessity of conserving fuel?

Sauna-like conditions still prevail at the library, Waterman and some residences. One graduate student observed that the temperature in Waterman was 75 degrees this weekend, while the sun blazed outside. Obviously, a snowstorm was predicted (the administration and faculty senate are both adequately qualified to do this); and precautionary steps were taken.

Such actions do not indicate that the administration takes a potential fuel crisis seriously. If the university is so concerned about energy, it should initiate the necessary steps to deal with the problem now. If there is no foreseeable predicament in fuel, a reevaluation should be made of the two-week extension for the intercession.

The crux of the matter is that the extra two weeks that must be added in May will surely aggravate student summer employment. Summer earnings are essential to many students so that they can pay their bills. Was there any attempt to calculate the losses that students will incur this summer? It is conceivable that it would be more advantageous for the university to absorb the high fuel bill than to pay out more in student aid.

If there is an academic or financial reason to extend the intercession, it would then be entirely justified. However, all factors should be considered. The most obvious solution may not be in the best interests of the students.

R.J.

Thoughts and Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

So the summer has come and gone. The whipperwill woops South, leaving the cold far behind. Mild-faced tourists pop out of roadside cars, turn their lenses towards a heap of trees and exclaim, "My gosh, isn't the foliage exquisite?" The leaves form a myriad of brilliant hues and then die one by one. Just like the insects, they simply roll over numb and croak. Not enough Bio-1 chlorophyll. Well, such is Life. Can't live forever baby, now can you?

But education endures forever. So, despite the natural tumult, UVM once again extends its outstretched arms to a new bumper crop of amalgamated cherubs. Once again, vast hordes pour in from the far corners of the globe (all the way from Philly to Jersey City to Boston to Burlington), resplendent with stereos, hanging plants, yellow raincoats, grimy boots, and an instinctive desire to, ahem, learn. But God bless all the students of UVM (well, most anyway), and grant them a good year. However, while there is still a degree of warmth in the air, it might be nice to reminisce with a toast on what has passed.

Here's to that 110 degree August day;
Here's to that 4th of July 5 cent gas hike;
Here's to Gerry Ford's trick knee;
Here's to those longshoremen who refused to load grain;
Here's to not being Patricia Hearst right now in that interrogation room;
Here's to Cape Cod, codfish, and sunny beaches;
Here's to the Red Sox, Harold Solomon, and Carl Yaz's Potato farm;
Here's to Ann Lander's divorce, Betty Ford's interview, and Manuel Orantes;
Here's to Stink City, Preston City, and downtown Providence at midday;
Here's to Richard and Liz shacking up together again, and to the first swimmer who "got his" in Jaws;

Here's to Greyfriar's Bobby, Bambi and Benji;
Here's to all those who worked hard in and out of the sun and in those small shops along the roads;
Here's to Robert Jr. and all the other newborn babes who were born into the best and worst of times;
Here's to what could have been done and to the stuff dreams are made of;
Here's to love, peace, and laughter;
Here's to Life.

Quote for the week: Ó I am undone! I am undone! While I play the good Husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the University.

(Vincentio, Taming of the Shrew by Billy Shakespeare)

WOMEN'S CAUCUS COLUMN

This week's column is written by Dr. Kay Frances Schmucker, a counselor here at UVM. With it we'd like to remind you that the next meeting of the Women's Caucus is Thursday, October 2, in Blundell House on Redstone Campus.

When people are interacting, how much of the communication is nonverbal? Do you respond more to "vibes" and subtle messages or to the expressed content of what the other person is saying? From my vantage point in the Counseling Center, I am impressed by the enormous pressure of nonverbal communication on the daily comfort level of the UVM community. Even though this is a seemingly rational, Western, scientifically competent institution, many people report trusting nonverbal communication and say they act largely on that basis.

What about the accuracy of reading body language and other subtle communication? In my experience people are remarkably correct in sensing boredom, resentment, anger, fear, joy, etc. Research using stimulus pictures and the semantic differential, or ratings or brief film clips of human situations, tend to support substantial agreement among persons. There is evidence, however, that significant cultural differences also exist.

The crunch comes, I believe, in how the receiver interprets and personalizes the message. For instance, if you have an intestinal cramp or back twinge and feel uneasy momentarily, I may pick up the negative vibration beautifully. Then if I scan that and believe you have contempt for me, we're in trouble. I'll feel bad and begin to be defensive and you may accurately "read" my discomfort, but interpret that I feel superior to you. Phenomenologists would say, "Of course, it's how persons construe their own private world that is real for them." If we do not wish to live in our own prison, however, it would seem important to check out interpersonal communication rather than struggling with private interpretation.

Ornstein and other researchers suggest the interesting possibility that our education and public awareness largely acknowledges the logical, rational side of the brain. This is physically located on the side of the cortex opposite your dominant hand (as a loyal leftie, I refuse the use of the usual right-handed example). Yet much of our experience seems to be mediated through the other side of consciousness, where we process things in the realm of meditation, spiritual awareness, fantasy, ESP, nonverbal communication, "vibes;" the American language is still primitive and inadequate here. We have received little help in learning and using this capacity and even less in integrating its input with our logical, rational side. I would suggest that many people have a highly developed sensitivity to "auras" or communication but then clamp on some "rational," alienating or self-punishing meaning from the other side of their consciousness. A few resources do exist to learn to bridge the division; maturing helps, as does fortunate life circumstances, increased skill in communication, counseling or therapy, and responsible training in approaches which tap the other side of consciousness. At present, individuals are left to find their own way.

Nowhere do communication problems seem more acute than between men and women, where confusion and misunderstanding seem the rule rather than the exception. Looking at verbal and nonverbal communication conflicts and the newer brain research may give us more insight. Earlier students of human behavior actually tried to prove that women possessed "intuition," whereas men were capable of logical thought. Even today, rigid sex role conditioning limits men's and women's opportunities for developing/valuing all ways of knowing. A glance at the intelligence test performance of women which amply demonstrates the capacity for abstract reasoning, and at the history of men's artistry, refutes charges of innate difference. Learned differences in behavior and in communication are there though, and certainly get in the way.

Taking this one step further to where the greatest difficulties are, I see them as achievement for women, self-expression for men, and adult sexuality. The latter interests me because of the number of women whom I see who have been pressured sexually and are all mixed up and unsure. The term "rape" means being jumped from the bushes by a man with a knife to most people, and yet there is a continuum from a brutal attack to verbal pressure for "just a little more." Here, male training to be aggressive and female conditioning to be agreeable are made even more treacherous by verbal and nonverbal communication blocks. There is no question that women can enjoy sexuality as much as or more so than men, and the age-old problem of contraception is somewhat resolved, so why the continuing conflict? It seems that people have simply not caught up with themselves in a time of rapid change.

For the last five years we have concentrated on maladaptive aspects of the female role and communication pattern using publicity, consciousness-raising groups, assertiveness training, and other techniques to bring about the subtle revolution that is still in progress. There is also the growing questioning of the traditional male assumptions and behavior in research, in the media, and among men. On the horizon let us hope that female-male communication that is fully human will begin to occur. If you think you are already there, I challenge you to open up on any significant topic to someone of the opposite sex and see how long it is before one of you finds it impossible to be equally honest. I'm trying and I wish you luck.

B-PAC SUPPORTS VPIRG

We, the student members of B-PAC, hereby give our complete and total support to the VPIRG organization and request that all students at the University, support this highly effective organization.

Sincerely,
Richard King,
Chairman

RESPONSE TO DN'G

To the Editor:

In response to the thoughts expressed by Gary Chilson in his article "Society is Coming to an End" (Cynic Sept. 18), I would like to express a few of my own. I am what Gary referred to as a true Christian, and although I agree with some of his remarks, there are others which I must refute, as they pervert the Gospel of Christ.

Anyone who has read the Bible in any depth would find it impossible to assume, even for the sake of argument, that Jesus was a Communist, and preached communism. Jesus did not seek to establish earthly peace. He said Himself (Luke 12:51) "Do you suppose that I have come to give peace upon earth? No, I say to you, but rather division." Jesus knew the kind of opposition His message would create. He did not even deal with earthly, temporal kingdoms, as does Communism. Ephesians 6:12 says, "For we are not wrestling with flesh and blood—contending only with physical opponents—but against the despotisms, against the powers, against the master spirits who are the world rulers of this present darkness, against the spirit forces of wickedness in the heavenly supernatural sphere."

When Jesus hung on that cross, He fought a spiritual battle for a spiritual kingdom, and He won, and rose again. He claimed the right to fill those who, by invitation of His Spirit into their bodies, made themselves literal physical temples for His literal supernatural presence.

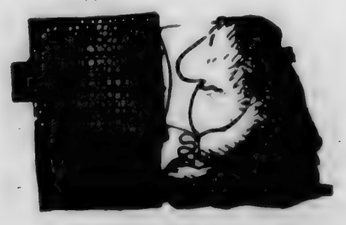
I agree with Gary that the "Church", in becoming a political and business enterprise, has turned the Christian religion into worldly, blasphemous applesauce, but my Lord said to render unto Caesar that which is Caesar's and render unto God that which is God's. Jesus didn't care about making money, His power is spiritual power, high above and far greater than the kind of fleeting power that money brings. And no matter what His church is doing, Jesus is yesterday, today and forever the same.

Everything Jesus does is supernatural. Fully man, He is also fully God. Colossians 1:15 says, "He is the exact likeness of the unseen God—the visible representation of the invisible." Jesus is His Father's Son, and the family resemblance makes them indistinguishable. Jesus is not a political philosophy or figure, He is the risen Savior.

As for money, Jesus did have strong feelings about money. He was only against it when it was put before Him in someone's heart. God's most beloved servants, David, Job, Solomon, yes, even Billy Graham, have/had great wealth. And the day they make money their god, The God takes it away. He will have no other gods before Him, because He knows that nothing else is worthy of our worship. Jesus said, (Luke 6:38) "Give, and it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over, shall men give unto your bosom." You can't outgive God! The more you give away, the more He gives back to you. I know it, because I've seen it in my own life. I challenge you to give in the name of Jesus and watch it come back to you ten times over.

There is one last thing I would like to say. I do believe in Hell, the day of Judgment, Armegeddon and the end of this world, and a new heaven and earth. But God is Love, and God's message to this world through His Son Jesus is still a message of love, forgiveness, and a burning desire to bless each one of us with His loving kindness and the simple pleasures of communing with Him and knowing Him as Friend, Father, and Comforter. I know this too, because I know God and have a completely real and personal relationship with Him in His Son Jesus. And if you're too scared or skeptical to seek God in this way for yourself, I can only tell you that you're denying yourself real love, and the true experience of the "good life". Inner peace is no longer a cliche to me. I know what I was like and you know what your inside is like. And God's love is so great that He love us right now, no matter where we're at. God has given me new life, new birth, complete freedom, (no, Christianity is not a list of don'ts) and the confidence to be myself. And that's alot more than Communism, or money, or the Church ever gave anybody.

Alison McBean



letters to the editor

SHAME, MS BOYLE !

To the Editor:

So the Seven-Per-Cent Solution is "the first time Mycroft (Holmes) appears in one of Sherlock's adventures," eh? Shame, Ms. Boyle! In the interests of accuracy, it should be pointed out that the redoubtable Mycroft Holmes (1847 - 1946) plays leading roles in "The Greek Interpreter" and "The Adventure of the Bruce-Partington Plans," as well as making a brief silent appearance in "The Final Problem."

By all means, be sure to read The Seven-Per-Cent Solution and the many other "writings about the Writings," but never fail to read the immortal sixty stories of the canon itself! As for Holmes and Watson, "they cannot die, because they live within the minds and hearts of men."

Alan J. Gagne

VPIRG NOT STUDENT RUN

To the Editor:

Printing this letter may prove a start towards compensating for the bias reporting printed in your last newspaper. Such all-out support in favor of a Nader-based lobbying group certainly does injustice to the Banner-Head, Cynic.

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group has done some good things. Their work in the field of children's dental health and fraudulent hearing aid salesmen may help many Vermonters. Though they claim to be student-run, and working on student ideas, the bulk of the projects were decided by forces outside the student body. Student projects may include surveys of bicycle locks or drug prices in the area. These can be compiled without professional administrators, and without lots of money. It would be easy enough to initiate a Student Interest Group to investigate student ideas and projects, and which would truly be student run.

VPIRG spends our money influencing State Legislators to vote for their bills, which bills are decided by Ralph Nader's doctrines, or by paid administrators. (VPIRG's former Director Scott Skinner is now an official Nader worker.) They are student-run only by our money. And now they exhort us to give them money because they are student-run. Applying logic, they are saying that we ought to give them money because we give them money.

Now don't forget what the vote is really about. We are deciding whether our tuition bill in the future will include the $3.00 VPIRG fee. This also holds for students who will be here after we are gone. So this addition of $3.00 onto the bill is preying on the unknowing, or apathetic. Sure, you can get it back, and sure, you don't have to pay it. But wouldn't it be easier if those who wanted to pay did so directly, rather than forcing non-payers into action? Three dollars doesn't look like much compared to a bill of $2000 or $3000 or more. And many of the people who let the $3.00 go by don't really care, they are just apathetic. If VPIRG wants to get money from students, they ought to have a donation desk at Waterman sometime during the semester. Students may be less willing to part with $3.00 when looking in their wallets now, and only those who want to will donate.

The American Red Cross is a good cause also, but they don't prey on non-willing students.

Dave Gacette

Thanks For Buckham Garden

To the Editor:

It is all too rare in the day-to-day hustle of the University that an individual goes out of his way to help a group of students who want to help themselves. It is even more rare that such an individual gets properly recognized.

In attempting to beautify the grounds of a "shoebox", the students of Buckham Hall would like to extend their appreciation to Dick Streeter, of Physical Plant Dept., for his help and concern in obtaining flowers, tools, and compost. The "Buckham Garden" is the result of students' work and planning, but it would not have been possible without the help of Dick Streeter.

Bob Rothhouse
Resident Advisor
Buckham Hall

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in — we are downstairs at Billings Center — or call 658-4911.

NEWS: Margo Howland, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Peter Duquette, Steve Wells, Scott Curtis, Charles Kountze.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt.
ARTS: Eloise Boyle, Cathy Brown, Martha Hess, Tricia John, Barbara MacFarlane, Jose Santana, Kaye Tatro.
COLUMNISTS: Ken Markowitz, Peter Cobb, Gary Chilson, Larry Seiden.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Sarah Clay, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis, Linda Mansfield, Martha Hess, Louise Beinke.
SPORTS: Debi Bloom, Rita Bruce, Randy Briggs, Pat Taves, Chris Brown, Scott Curtis.
ADVERTISING: Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

RANTING, R

by Larry Se

Caught on a ledge in this sunl ledge, the last jut of the earth as face out of Lake Champlain, an energy and complexion. The water and tacky as it offers a rhythmical below me. My imagination lies c water. I am washed back to my with senile movements through strength my grandfather had as for three years swatting death's reach out to caress his fevered bro good man he was, an immigran neighborhood muscleman, a calm city. I listened and felt the pl memory. Then I cried, for surely circle in this life with that grandmother's pictures, his he sincerity, shone as beacon of the

I slipped back against my gra my backside melting into the grandmother ate herself to garn grandfather died, for grief leaves satisfaction. She needed a hand body out of a chair or he'd be forced to violate areas that wo chairs without arms or she'd be approaches. She would say that he'd build her a chair that she your time runs away, a comfor important.

It is in this daydream that the crags of the rocks as my har slate that forms my seat as th softness of my gran
Sunday-Burlington afterno comfortable ledge trying to sp back to me. It calls me to be ready to step through the seas layers of clothing as I go in my on the lines, and the peaks of the lines of the streets home, t to steer my magic carpet any today, waiting for the sky to

D N

A PERSP

by Gary

In order to clarify the fi for the fourth, I offer this Comic Relief

'I have often heard it said and brothers, husbands and f war. The concept underlying confrontation in which the
Of the antics that follow, lit tragic truth never realized. It

Ibsen's An Enemy of th
comedy with a message. I Man, and try to tell them w only way people will appre
and not very real.

The usual run-of-t misfortune. Either the sa farmer's expense; or the sa when he sees the daughter from someone's bumbling

Which is the only everyone can participate i humor. The better the p dismay. Sometimes casting ears. When was the last tim when you heard one? Whe pun is a mistake, a flaw in Puns are simply not th known language is imperfe words so strongly that you

Words are the nu
technological breakthrough ago. It is a tool very Calculus, some people use it for purposes other than

The Cro-Magnon Ma
seems to have spoken a its use, the Cro-Mag Neanderthal's more prim to hunt in groups, coor which helped him to feed

The Cro-Magnon ha his language exacted. He drawbacks of language.
cared, for language is Mo product of countless bestowing the awful gift ability underlying Ration

Eating the fruit of man knowledge of Good a means of accumulating

The two drawback
need for agreement upo man to speculate upon share with others, and so

In the beginning th
God. Words are pretty what?

In any grouping of the followers. The trib chiefs and priests, phy used the word to tell words from the priests end, or so they thou created Society for Ma

Over the years,
directions of primitive
after the improvement
coalesced into relative general terms. Easte
Nomads being neither.

But the Nomads
Neanderthal Man befo first Technological To they were equal in La Agriculture, the secon third tool, finally ov
Dynasty (in the Old World). The latter

RANTING, RAVING & DROOLING

Time Flowing, Tides Line

by Larry Selden

Caught on a ledge in this unsettling urbane paradise. This ledge, the last jut of the earth as it picks its stoned and rocky face out of Lake Champlain, and I have united as one in energy and complexion. The water's upward movement is slow and tacky as it offers a rhythmical mouth-washing to the rocks below me. My imagination lies captivated by the flow of the water. I am washed back to my grandmother's lap. She labors with senile movements through another discourse on the strength my grandfather had as he lay on the same deathbed for three years swatting death's grey hand away as it would reach out to caress his fevered brow. She would tell me what a good man he was, an immigrant, a plumber, a carpenter, a neighborhood muscleman, a calm breeze in the chaos of the city. I listened and felt the pleasure in this circle of her memory. Then I cried, for surely I would not walk that same circle in this life with that little bald man. In all my grandmother's pictures, his head, polished to a lustre of sincerity, shone as beacon of the light that came from within.

I slipped back against my grandmother's lap, the feeling of my backside melting into the jellied fat of her thighs. My grandmother ate herself to gargantuan proportions after my grandfather died, for grief leaves a painful taste that knows no satisfaction. She needed a hand to help her move her spiritless body out of a chair or her bed. By physical limits she was forced to violate areas that were unprotected by sides and chairs without arms or she'd be trapped like a rabbit as Easter approaches. She would say that if my grandfather were alive he'd build her a chair that she might be comfortable in. As your time runs away, a comfortable chair to wait in is very important.

It is in this daydream that I hear my voice echo through the crags of the rocks as my hands explore the hardness of the slate that forms my seat as they once touched the extreme softness of my grandmother's lap. It is a Sunday-Burlington-afternoon and I'm waiting on a comfortable ledge trying to spot my echo as it starts its path back to me. It calls me to be proud to be where I am. I'm ready to step through the seasons of this city, shedding my layers of clothing as I go in my yearly circle. My vision centers on the lines, and the peaks of this city as its hills rise to guide the lines of the streets home, the tar offering its wafting steam to steer my magic carpet anywhere I might want to go. I delay 'today', waiting for the sky to redden with sunset as it lingers waiting to be swallowed into the ebbullient nighttime hole.

This early autumn Sunday, the streets are bared of workmen, his tackhammer is hidden by compassion as I need the silence to find some room to slip away. I cross the wooday paths over to Oakledge Park which is abandoned save for a pair of lovers. I hesitantly apologize for disturbing the sound of their hearts as they seek a union in the trees. I hear the lake fight its time- wearied scheme to overcome the rocks and send that obstruct its natural course. I look across to New York as it rises like Canaan. Its mountainous border guarded by a shroud of grey haze.

I watch bashfully as the blond girl in her winter sweater removes her argyle knee socks to reverently approach the lake with a summer's spirit. "It's warm," she cries, surprised at the comfort that can be found in such a vast and endless blanket. They touch their solitude together like a bridge and then bid goodbye as she turns and gathers her smile and bounds out of the water, redeemed. I sit on the ledge, afraid I've disturbed a friendship I should not have recognized. But she is unaware of my intrusion as she pauses to reflect the tameness of a small pool in the rocks as it drenches itself in the warm window of sunlight. She acknowledges the existence of previous life as she picks the two inverted bottlecaps out of the pool and carries them away in her pocket.

I look down the cove as the tranquility of the city's face rises placidly on its banks. There, protected by its oil storage tanks, Burlington offers a hymn to stoic New England religion. Four steeples make their way to heaven as the settled brick of the rest of the city retreats from the crowded pace that permeates its workday week. A crane silhouetted against the lakefront sky controls the sun as it passes down Church Street, Burlington's monument to the runaway American urban dream. I wish I could step out of the dream, and try to hide from changes the way my grandmother did, the way I wish Burlington could. My shadow laughs at me, as it reels in a late afternoon dance. "You'd only be fooling yourself if you thought you could get out of the circle of a life of time and tide."

VPIRG COLUMN

Health Care Costs

by Peter Cobb

Health care in Vermont is big business. At present Vermonters are spending over $214 million ($1700 per family) a year on health care. While most Americans spend .08 out of each dollar earned on health services, Vermonters spend .11, a difference of 40%. Since 1960, personal medical expenditures have jumped from an average of $140 per person/per year to over $460 annually. As a result of these spiralling costs, Vermonters use up 9.9% of the gross state product on health care.

WHERE DOES THE MONEY GO?

Most of the money ($68 million) is gobbied up by the hospitals. The state physicians take up the next biggest chunk by receiving $43 million. Nursing homes, drugs, and mental health get 18 million each. Vermonters are also paying $16 million to profit and administration of health insurance companies.

One of the reasons that Vermonters pay so much is that we use more doctors, more equipment and more facilities to get the job done than most other states. Vermont has a disproportionate number of specialists which helps account for the high price tag. The more specialists, the more special problems. The more special problems, the more expensive hospital rooms are needed to handle the problems.

Another important reason for Vermont's high medical costs, according to a report by the Comprehensive Health Planning Agency, is that Vermonters spend $6.5 million a year to maintain hospital beds that are not needed. There are 335 excess beds, 18% of the total 1,904 acute care beds. Hospitals with the highers room rates usually have the most unneeded beds.

CRISIS CARE, MEDICAL CARE

Probably the most important factor in the high cost of medical care is the fact that the medical system has developed into a "crisis care" system. Basically, this means that most people do not seek help until a problem has developed to such a degree as to cause the patient discomfort so that he or she seeks help from a doctor. Medical care for many people in the state consists of bad experiences in overcrowded, understaffed emergency rooms.

This kind of medical care requires that millions of dollars be poured into expensive equipment, costly clinics, and large hospitals that are needed to respond to the medical "crisis."

PREVENTATIVE MEDICAL CARE

According to the Director of New York's Strang Clinic, it costs nine times more to cure a disease than to prevent it in the first place. Preventative medicine, unlike crisis care treatment, not only responds to complaints from patients but also sets up a program that reaches out to disease, stopping it at its earliest stages when treatment is least costly and most effective. It is also the dynamic process that detects problems of one's lifestyle that may lead to poor health.

The largest discrepancies in health care delivery exists in those services that must be paid for by the patient and are not covered by insurance. Most insurance companies perpetuate these inequalities by refusing to cover preventive services. They are willing to pay $150-200 a day for cardiac care, but will not pay $15 for a simple blood pressure screening exam that might detect a heart problem long before it becomes a heart attack.

Nationally, 97% of health care expenditures are for the treatment of acute physical and mental problems. Less than 3% goes for early detection of disease. The result of this disproportionate emphasis on acute care is needless waste of resources. Investment of a few dollars in prevention may well pay huge dividends if a disease or dangerous condition is detected at the earliest possible stage. Continued reliance on crisis care treatment will feed the high medical costs. The only people who benefit from them are the doctors and administrators who make profits from those who cannot afford to pay.

D N 'G

A PERSPECTIVE

by Gary Chilson

In order to clarify the first two issues and to prepare you for the fourth, I offer this synopsis of History. Think of it as Comic Relief.

I have often heard it said that if the mothers refused, sons and brothers, husbands and fathers would never fight another war. The concept underlying Lysistrata: an ancient, theatrical confrontation in which the women see wisdom and say 'No'. Of the antics that follow, little remains of the concept but a tragic truth never realized. It is a farce.

Ibsen's An Enemy of the People is another example of comedy with a message. The experts of Language who see Man, and try to tell them what they see, use comedy. It is the only way people will appreciate the truth. It must be funny, and not very real.

The usual run-of-the-mill joke involves someone's misfortune. Either the salesman gets the daughter at the farmer's expense, or the salesman gets the raw end of the deal when he sees the daughter. Almost all forms of comedy stem from someone's bumbling attempt to cope. Except the pun....

Which is the only truly original comedy that nearly everyone can participate in. Yet the pun has become petty humor. The better the pun, the more we groan in mock dismay. Sometimes casting our arms in the air and hiding our ears. When was the last time you rolled and slapped your thigh when you heard one? When was the last time you realized the pun is a mistake, a flaw in the Language?

Puns are simply not that kind of humor, and Sure, you've known language is imperfect all along. So why do you believe words so strongly that you'll die for a few?

Words are the nuts and bolts of a complicated, technological breakthrough that man made some 35,000 years ago. It is a tool very much like Calculus is a tool. Like Calculus, some people use it better than others, and some use it for purposes other than those expected.

The Cro-Magnon Man, or the oldest Modern Man found, seems to have spoken a highly developed Language. Through its use, the Cro-Magnon assembled tribes out of the Neanderthal's more primitive family lifestyle. It enabled him to hunt in groups, coordinating the actions of the hunters which helped him to feed his larger tribe.

The Cro-Magnon had no conception of the ultimate cost his language exacted. He did not realize at the start the two drawbacks of language. Had he known, he would not have cared, for language is Modern Man's means of survival. It is the product of countless generations of biological evolution, bestowing the awful gift of Intelligence and the physiological ability underlying Rational Thought.

Eating the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge did not give man knowledge of Good and Evil. It gave man Intelligence and a means of accumulating learned experience.

The two drawbacks to Language: Language created the need for agreement upon shared experiences, and it enabled man to speculate upon the unexplainable in terms he could share with others, and so, explain them.

In the beginning there was the Word, and the Word was God. Words are pretty Important, if God is one of them, then what?

In any grouping of Men, there are always the leaders and the followers. The tribal system of Modern Man had leaders as chiefs and priests, physical and spiritual leaders, all of whom used the word to tell their followers how to follow. A few words from the priests and the whole world might come to an end, or so they thought, and so it has turned out. Words created Society for Man.

Over the years, leaders have come and gone, and the directions of primitive Society are mani-fold. But sometime after the improvement of Written Language, Society became coalesced into relatively few directions. To be specific in these general terms, Eastern and Western Philosophy with the Nomads being neither.

But the Nomads are nearly extinct now, much like the Neanderthal Man before them. Neanderthal was decimated by the first Technological Tool, Language. The Nomads were hardier; they were equal in Language usage until the combined force of Agriculture, the second great tool, and Written Language, the third tool, finally overcame their greatest might in the Khan Dynasty (in the Old World) and the western tribes (in the New World). The latter were even more disadvantaged, for the fourth great tool had become firmly established by then, and this was Mechanics in the Industrial Revolution.

Living in America, we are the descendents of Western Philosophy. This philosophy gave us Western Civilizations. These flourished up through to the Greek and Roman period and was then crushed by several factors. The previous civilizations had come and gone, but the Roman Empire was the last to collapse in our History. We are told the Heathens destroyed the Empire, and they certainly did wipe up the pieces. But the Empire had already toppled. It wasn't the first Western Civilization to go from spiralling greatness to plunging disaster. They have all invariably gone the same route. It is inherent in the Philosophy.

We become attached to our temporal, physical existence. It is called Materialism and it is fostered by Greed. These great civilizations began with leader selection based very much on the selection mechanism of the Nomads. The best Men became leaders. But once the leaders were established, they became leaders by blood, rather than ability. This is simply because being a leader enables one to live "high on the hog," and who would want to chance losing this position just because they aren't fit to Rule? The leaders became despots, tyrannical and gluttonous. Living only for the grossest of physical extravagence.

Until the Society collapsed under them, they maintained their exalted position through Language Use.

Language Use covers all technological advances since Language. It enabled Agriculture to develop. It fostered the need for Written Language. Language Use allows us our Rationality, or the power to think. It allows the accumulation of Language, and defined, classified Knowledge. It has given us what we believe is Reality.

Yet Reality is merely a Definition.

The Priests, our spiritual leaders, fell to the physical pleasures of the chiefs sometime during the formulative years approximately 10,000 years ago. Agriculture enabled them to reap in the profit from the labor of their followers without having to do the work themselves. It happened so long ago that each generation of priests believed themselves entitled to this support for their Priestly Functions. More recently, Christ showed the Priests their evil ways and brought God to the Masses. Through the machinations of the High Society in the Roman Empire, including a Christian Emperor, God once again became confined to structures called Churches and available only through the Priests. That was the Deal the physical leaders made with the spiritual leaders. Then the Roman Empire collapsed and the Priests finally had the opportunity they had always wanted: Total Control.

Through their use of the Language, and through the total control of thought through the "Dark Ages," the Church maintained control when the royalty of Rome had collapsed. The Priests had finally overcome the physical leaders in a struggle that began when Language was first used and the royalty had won the first battle. Temporal bliss as a bribe bought the first Priests and now the Priests could buy the savage Princes of Middle Europe.

As I told you last week, the neophyte capitalists, the Princes of Europe, the weakened and defeated physical leaders, made their comeback. It was a time of great turmoil and hardship for the peasants who fought the wars and who suffered the pillage and death. But that's what peasants are for. Society almost collapsed again, but it was saved by the discovery of the New World.

In the shift of power, from Priests to Princes, wealth was the deciding factor. Until the fifteenth century, almost all the wealth of the Known World was controlled by the Church. With the discovery of the New World, a whole new repository of wealth lay just over the Ocean. The Princes financed the first voyages and made their fortune. Money flowed into their hands, more money than the Church ever had. A few Priests, seeing the tide turning, jumped to the shirttails of the next Rulers of the World and called themselves Protestants.

Through the impetus of discovery and New Ways of Thought, the new leaders molded the new Reality of the World through Language Use. The Time is the Renaissance. Money flowed into Science, Art, Literature and Music, and they flourished, they were sponsored by the Princes. The result was the Industrial Revolution. The accumulation of defined Reality, Language defined, and classified Knowledge, permitted the utilization of the theoretical field of Mechanics, the fourth great tool in man's technological advance. Machiavellian politics reigned supreme. Look it up if you don't know what kind of politics that is. Again, Society almost collapsed under the threat of constant war and money grubbing.

As the New World opened up channels of thought, the people colonizing the New World were forced to meet the Need of Leadership. The Princes in Europe certainly wouldn't leave their palaces. The confusion of the times generated a selection mechanism similar to the way the Nomads pick their leaders. The Best rather than Who Had The Most. These men became the leaders of an entirely different mode of thought.

The American Revolution was a direct result. Our example has since become a beacon to people everywhere who have lived under Western Philosophy. For it was as close to Utopia as we could make it. Then.

But America was a strange land, almost totally unexplored, full of dangers and Indians. Americans became a hardy, mercilous people, devoted to expanding their New Frontier. This attitude, coupled with the confusion of the times, led to regions settled far from any of the political discussions and dialogues, far from the center of the new Alternative Reality the Utopian Man had always dreamed of.

The people who settled America, conquered and tamed it, were Europeans, who dreamed of riches only the Priests and the Princes once had. America, Land of Opportunity. They were so far away and so rudely ignorant of all that transpired "back East," the designs and hopes of the American Intelligentsia, that a new class of people arose. They were what had always been the Merchant Class, that step below the Priests and Princes in Europe.

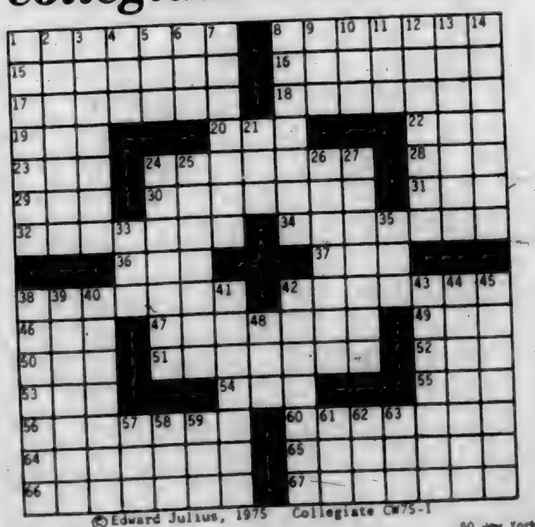
The Intelligentsia, formulating Democracy in its infant stages, were outnumbered. Democracy failed through the Greed of the Merchants who used the new Alternative Reality to their own advantage. And in America, anyone could become a merchant if they were shrewd and mercilous enough. The merchant class, the Businessmen, overcame the leaders in a better way? better aimed at the Utopia the Intelligentsia everyone had been discussing for centuries. They took control and began using Language in its more technological expressions of the Industrial Society and created the Super-Industrial Society.

The Intelligentsia, at least those who advocated Capitalism, succumbed to the same malady the Priests fell for, the Princes after them, and the Businessmen recently: Greed. But the rest of the Intellectuals managed to develop Ideas nevertheless, though the Reality of their Language is kept from implementation. It is those Ideas which must be implemented if Society, pushed to the brink several times already, won't collapse totally. This time more horribly than ever before.

The last time we came close, the world had only a fraction of the human population we have today. And even if we had wanted too, we couldn't destroy the planet. Today we are overpopulating, over polluting and overproducing. The planet is not capable of absorbing the destruction our Defimition of Reality implies.

We must change that.

collegiate crossword



©Edward Julius, 1975 Collegiate CW75-1

ACROSS

1 Protective wall
8 Where Congress convenes
15 Fatty
16 Usually (3 wds.)
17 Merrymaker
18 Calls it a day
19 Malt liquor
20 Male sheep
22 College degrees
23 Pose as a model
24 Expressing feeling
28 Suffix: follower of 29 Undivided
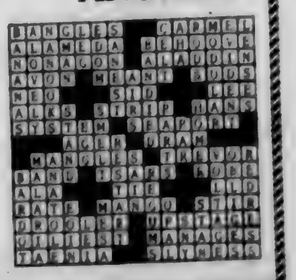
30 Harbors for yachts
31 By birth
32 Books of accounting records
34 Woman with great power
36 Jazz pianist Tatum
37 Hawaiian food
38 — Fizz
42 Bring together again
46 Greek letter
47 Inflames with love
49 No, in Scotland
50 New York time (abbr.)
51 Get rid of
52 Game show prizes
53 Cushion
54 High-speed plane
55 Decay
56 Of a certain speech sound
60 Obliteration
64 Miss Powell
65 Worker with secret symbols
66 Stanzas of six lines
67 — Mill

DOWN

1 Portable sunshade
2 "Sweet —"
3 Old construction work
4 Imitate
5 Krakow's country (abbr.)
6 Compass reading
7 Those who create intense fear
8 Vivid red
9 Peer Gynt's mother
10 "— and Mike"
11 Biblical name
12 Type of engine
13 Esters of oleic acid
14 Tenants
21 New Zealand aborigine
24 Come into view
25 Popular cocktail
26 Jazz improvisers
27 Merry
33 Go: Scot.
35 — Tin Tin
38 Russian plains
39 Explorer or car
40 Surpasses
41 Former UAR President, and family
42 Team supporters
43 Interrupt and bother
44 One who shows preference
45 Previous days (poet.)
48 Army cops
57 College entrance exam
58 Chemical ending
59 Finn in Ingrid
61 Peleg's son
62 Perform on stage
63 Drunkard

LAST WEEK'S ANSWER



courages articles, columns, nts, faculty, and members ust be submitted no later Thursday of publication. be withheld upon request. perhaps curious about how ownstairs at Billings Center

arkowitz, Peter Cobb, Gary ilson, Larry Selden.
RODUCTION Rick Barney, arah Clay, John Lunde, Barb rrithis, Linda Mansfield, artha Hess, Louisa Beinke.
PORTS Debi Bloom, Rita ruce, Randy Briggs, Pat aves, Chris Brown, Scott ams.
DVERTISING Stephen Lee rown, Sherry Grancey, ebbie Powell.
USINESS MANAGER: ancy Shenk.

torials, cartoons, or necessarily reflect the inistration, faculty, or Opinions expressed by ily reflect the opinion bers of the CYNIC college year by the Vermont and State ent Business offices in Vermont Telephone is one week prior to ription rate $8.00 per ham Garden

ld like to extend their ciation to Dick Streeter, ysical Plant Dept., for his and concern in obtaining ers, tools, and compost. "Buckham Garden" is the of students' work and ing, but it would not have possible without the help k Streeter.

Bob Rothhouse
Resident Advisor
Buckham Hall

DENT RUN

hout us to give them because they are t-run. Applying logic, e saying that we ought them money because their money n don't forget what the really about. We are g whether our tuition the future will include .00 VPIRG fee. This also or students who will be ter we are gone. So this n of $3.00 onto the bill ing on the unknowing. hetic. Sure, you can get , and sure, you don't pay it. But wouldn't it er if those who wanted did so directly, rather forcing non-payers into ? Three dollars doesn't ke much compared to a f $2000 or $3000 or And many of the people t the $3.00 go by don't care, they are just tic. If VPIRG wants to ney from students, they to have a donation desk terman sometime during mester. Students may be illing to part with $3.00 looking in their wallets nd only those who want donate he American Red Cross is od cause also, but they prey on non-willing nts.

Dave Gacette

OYLE !

making a brief silent nce in "The Final all means, be sure to he Seven-Per-Cent and the many other about the Writings," ver fail to read 'the sixty stories of the itself! As for Holmes son, "they cannot die, they live within the d hearts of men."

Alan J. Gagne

tp or

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Book Review

A Ghetto Love Story

If Beale Street Could Talk
James Baldwin
Published 1975, Signet Books
by Elouse M. Boyle

This is a story of love. It is also a story of hate, fear, oppression and depression. But most of all it is a story of hope.

Tish and Fonny are in love. Tish is nineteen and pregnant. Fonny is twenty-two. They live in the ghetto of New York. How Tish and Fonny first met, the way in which they grew up, and how they fell in love, are told through the use of flashback. But more important than the past, is the very real present. Fonny has been accused of a rape he didn't commit. Everything is against him: he's black, he's poor, and he's a victim of social prejudice. While he's in jail, Tish and her family work like mad to get him out. They try, against all odds to find the woman who accused Fonny and find out why. Tish never loses hope and plans the future for herself, Fonny, and their baby.

The love Tish and Fonny have for each other, and their refusal to let anything destroy it, is the focal point of the book. The oppressing conditions which exist in the slums are vividly displayed. The despair which Fonny feels: "The sky is the color of steel, the heavy tears drip down Fonny's face, causing the stubble on his face to itch. He cannot muster his defenses because he can give himself no reason for being here." is contrasted with the undying hope of Tish; "And I understand that the growth of the baby is connected with his determination to be free. So, I don't care if I get to be as big as two houses. The baby wants out. Fonny wants out. And we are going to make it: in time."

James Baldwin paints an extraordinary portrait of human emotions. Fonny's mother and sisters, for instance, are bitter snobs. Sharon, Tish's mother, is one of the most interesting characters in the book. Her character develops as she struggles to convince the woman who accused Fonny to leave Puerto Rico, the place to which she has fled, and come back to the States. The fathers of the two young lovers are perhaps the most pathetic and endearing people in the story. You'll laugh and you'll cry at this masterpiece of a book.

Royall Tyler Revival

by Karen Trott

This Friday at the Royall Tyler Theatre, the University Players will present the second annual PRESENTATIONS OF PAST PRODUCTIONS-a revue of the 1974-75 season, scheduled for this week's FRIDAY AT FOUR on September 26, at the theatre. The repertoire will consist of representative songs, scenes and/or bits from all major productions, as well as best loved vignettes from Playtimers' tour, the Champlain Shakespeare Festival's Apprentice Show, the One Act Festival and sample entertainment from the Players' annual Winter Costume Ball.

Included in the list of the great "gone but not forgottens" are (in case you'd forgotten): Dylan Thomas' Under Milkwood, West Side Story, Arthur Kopit's Chamber Music, the great sellout, Ionesco's Macbett, and John Webster's The White Devil. Billings' Center's highly successful The Real Inspector Hound is due to appear, along with the utterly flamboyant Knight of the Burning Pestle. Moliere's The Doctor in Spite of Himself, most recently performed outdoors as a Friday at Four presentation is also on the billing, along with the "Playtimers Tour" production of The King of the Castle. To round out the show, The Lemmon Sisters, who made their debut at last year's Winter Costume Ball, will return for a repeat performance of their smash hits, "I've Been Workin' on the Railroad", and "Kansas City".

For those who have seen any of last year's productions, the Royall Tyler Revival should prove to be an enjoyable afternoon of reminiscence, and for those who haven't, a fast-moving, colorful collage-revue is in store, with an hour's worth of non-stop entertainment. With the exception of only two, all actors will appear in their original roles and costumes, with Steven "Fingers" Freeman providing pre-show (and otherwise) piano, ably assisted by Master of Ceremonies Paul Ugalde. The show begins at 4, and admission is free. A coffee and donut reception will follow in the Craftsbury Room, and all are invited to attend.

Lane Series Opens...

Pleasure And Repentance

The Lane Series opens its twenty-first season on Tuesday, Sept. 30, with the world-famed Royal Shakespeare Company, from Stratford-Upon-Avon England, in Terry Hand's production of Pleasure and Repentance, billed as "a light-hearted look at love." The University of Vermont will see the first performance of this show in the current tour of the English company.

The concert will be held in Memorial Auditorium and begin at 8 p.m.

Pleasure and Repentance is a light-hearted look at love, devised and directed by Terry Hands, with music arranged and composed by Martin Best.

The Royal Shakespeare Company regales the audience with a delightful treatment of all the aspects of love, utilizing scenes with many of the best-known lovers in literature.

The program commences and concludes with "A Description of Love" by Sir Walter Raleigh and encompasses a selection of some of the most romantic miscellanea illustrated with poetry, prose and music.

On the program love is revealed as witty, bawdy and deadly; also love may be, and most likely is, from time to time, blue. With the words of Ogden Nash, Tennyson, Keats and Dickens to the romantic jottings of D.H. Lawrence, W. H. Auden, George Bernard Shaw and Shakespeare, Pleasure and Repentance is illuminated with the lyrics of Lennon and McCartney and The Rolling Stones, with music arranged and composed by Martin Best.

Ending where it began with pleasure and repentance, love turns out to be "a game where none do gain," and, funny or sad, these words are the genuine language of love.

Starring in the cast of Pleasure and Repentance are Hugh Sullivan, Bill Homewood, David Suchet and Lynette Davies.

Mr. Sullivan performed in the repertory theatre at Bristol, and the Glasgow Citizen's Theatre before he joined the Royal Shakespeare Company, where he had leading roles in The Wars of the Roses.

Lynette Davies from "Pleasure and Repentance."

Macbeth, Under Milk Wood, Henry V, and Marat/Sade. Next came seasons with the Pitlochry Festival Theatre and the Birmington Repertory Theatre. Mr. Sullivan scored a great personal success last year in the London West End production of Waltz of the Toreadors.

Mr. Homewood, who sings the songs in Pleasure and Repentance and performs on the guitar, has given recitals all over the British Isles, including singing the title role in Benjamin Britton's Noyes Fludde. Six years ago he was appointed lecturer at several London colleges.

Mr. Suchet has appeared with the Royal Shakespeare Company at Stratford-Upon-Avon playing Hubert in King John, Pisanio in Cymbeline and the Fool in King Lear. He also played the King in Love's Labours Lost, which toured America before playing at the Aldwych.

Miss Davies played in The Taming of the Shrew, Gaslight, Macbeth, and See How They Run, before she joined the RSC, where her works included leading parts in A Midsummer Night's Dream, King Lear, Love's Labours Lost, and Summerfolk.

Producer of Pleasure and Repentance is Paul Elliott, who, although still in his thirties, has established himself as one of the major theatrical producers in the world. Some of his London West End hits include The Chalk Garden, When We Are Married, Big Bad Mouse, and Brief Lives. His recent RSC productions are Hedda Gabler, starring Glenda Jackson, and The Hollow Crown with Sir Michael Redgrave.

Terry Hands, who devised and directed Pleasure and Repentance, has also done much directing outside the RSC, including Richard III at the Comedie Francaise in 1972 – which won the Paris Drama Critics Award – and also Pericles at the Comedie Francaise in 1974.

Known everywhere as one of the world's greatest repertory companies, the Royal Shakespeare Company, which first presented the plays of Shakespeare in 1879, is formed around a core of artists under long-term contract. By constantly working together in a varied repertoire, it aims to be a flexible ensemble with a distinctive style. Although Shakespeare is the RSC's major concern, with the company being responsible for many of the major Shakespearean productions in England, the RSC's annual Aldwych Theatre season (the company performs both in Stratford and at the Aldwych in London) complements Shakespeare's plays with modern works and other classics. Plays by such varied dramatists as Pinter, Genet, Albee, Gorky and T.S. Eliot have recently been performed at the Aldwych.

In New York during the 1974-75 season, two of Broadway's major hits were the RSC's productions of Sherlock Holmes and London Assurance.

Tickets for Pleasure and Repentance, $3.50, $5.50, and $6.50, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. The play may also be bought as part of a series of 6, 9 or 12 concerts. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The next Lane concert is the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra of Hamburg, Oct. 5. Conducted by Jurgen Jurgens, the large company of 45 musicians, 50 singers and 6 soloists will perform Monteverdi's oratorio "Vespro della Beata Virgine."

It's a better movie than 'Blazing Saddles' or 'Young Frankenstein'. –Rolling Stone

PG
FROM CINEMA 5
BURLINGTON PLAZA
CINEMA 1 & 2
RT 7 AT I 189 SO BURLINGTON
PHONE
862-5070
ANYTIME

Space Odyssey:
Starring Ed The Dead Head

by Paul Prior

"Hot Damn!" Chris exclaimed. Half-running, half walking, he zipped up the steps into his third floor apartment. Without so much as taking off his coat, he tore at the package he had been clutching for the past half hour. The first item he found was a piece of paper folded with the utmost care. As he examined it more closely, he realized it contained a small piece of folded tin foil.

"Well, good things come in small packages" he said, as he placed the tiny blotter on his tongue. Chris now read the note, which was from his best friend, Ed the Head.

Chris–Enclosed you will find the most potent little blotter I've ever encountered. There's enough here to get ten people off, highly concentrated, you know. Also enclosed is latest album by the Dead–Need I say more than it is their trippiest disk since Dark Star!! So put on the Dead and spread!! Enjoy, stay high – Ed.

"Shit–I guess that means I'd better bag it as far as classes are concerned." His hands trembled ever-so-slightly as he placed side one of Blues for Allah upon the turntable. He turned the volume onto nine, and sprawled across the carpet of his room. And it went something like this...

"Help on the Way" opens side one, with those ever familiar gee-tar notes from "Fingers" Garcia. The first thing one notices is how good it is to hear the Dead on record after a year's absence. The band took a year's leave from recording and playing together, a move which many followers interpreted as being the group's demise. Not so, and it is clearly a move which benefitted all involved, both the band and their fans. The album is constructed so each song runs into the next, similar to the Airplane's Bathing at Baxter's l.p. Early fans will of course

(continued on page seven)

SA CONCERTS PRESENTS

CONCERT-DANCE

JAMES COTTON BAND

JAMES MONTGOMERY BAND

NO SHOES

FRIDAY OCT. 3RD 8:00

PATRICK GYM UVM

UVM STUDENTS 2.50

GENERAL ADMISSION 3.50

SHOES WILL BE CHECKED AT DOOR

TICKET SALES
UVM BOOKSTORE
BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOMS
VERMONT BOOKSHOP IN MIDDLEBURY, VT.

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

Old Time Movies
Every Sunday Night
With Free Popcorn

This week
The Sherlock Holmes Thriller
"Hound of The Baskervilles"

147 MAIN ST.

Arnie and Walter ~
The Odd Couple

Walter of "Walter's Olde Ice Cream Shoppe" has joined hands with Arnie ~
Originator of the Deli Samerch ~ to create a new Walter's Snack Bar at Living Learning
To facilitate the change, Walter's will close friday the 26th & 27th
But
Will reopen Sunday at noon with opening Specials

SA Prese

On October 3 at 8:00 p
the Patrick Gymnasium,
SA Concert Bureau will pre their first concert of semester. It will be a free dance concert with two boogie bands, the Ja
Cotton Band and the J
Montgomery Ba
Recognizing the impossib of trying to remain s
during the high en performances by these b
the Concert Bureau decided not to place any on the newly resurfaced

Space C

(continued from page six) recall the Dead's Anthe

the Sun to which it also resemblance. The first tracks into "Slipknot"
then into one of my fav
"Franklin's Tower."
chorus, "Roll Away the will get you sin along–Guaranteed!! This into "Stronger than Dir
it certainly is – right do the Ajax Riff. The side with "The Music Stopped", a Bob Weir
Side two opens with Fingers", with a very reggae influence. Very percussion on this track, nice rolls and little flou
"Sage and Spirit" is be with flute and dominating, you'd believe it was the
Unfortunately, the title disappointing. Lots of out drum and cymbal which are good, but the are ingratiating. "Sand and Glass Camels" is space music, as is "U Occurrences in the D which finishes the album

Overall, this is th studio album from our Friends in three or fou
Mars Hotel had its mo
but it only reinforced

RESEAR
Thousands of To Send for your up-to-d page, mail order catalog
$1.00 to cover post handling.
RESEARCH ASSISTAN
11322 IDAHO AVE.
LOS ANGELES, CALI
(213) 477-8474
Our research papers are research purposes o

THE FOREIGN SERV
of the
UNITED STATES OF A is looking for qua
men and women political/labor of economics administrative of consular office and for the U.S. Informa information/culture
Work–and serve–in Wa overseas. You must be citizen and 21 (or 20 completed your junior y to take the written exami
will be given this year on Entering pay levels
$10,920 and $14,745. Ap the December examina
submitted by October additional information
lease write to:
Board of Exam
Room 7000
Department of S
Washington, D.C.

SA Presents A Night To Boogie

James Cotton

On October 3 at 8:00 p.m. in the Patrick Gymnasium, the SA Concert Bureau will present their first concert of the semester. It will be a free spirit dance concert with two giant boogie bands, the James Cotton Band and the James Montgomery Band. Recognizing the impossibility of trying to remain seated during the high energy performances by these bands, the Concert Bureau has decided not to place any chairs on the newly resurfaced gym floor. In order to minimize the damage that will occur to the floor, everyone's shoes will be checked as they enter the door. For this special dance concert the bleachers along the sides of the gym will be available for seating comfort.

In case you've just come out of the woodwork, James Cotton is a giant among modern day harp players. As a teenager he started in the Johnny Young Blues Band from the southside of Chicago. He helped originate the south side sound with its dashing harp licks and trade-offs with the guitar (Johnny Young) and piano (Otis Spann).

Now James has his own band and they have played in this area many times in the past few years. He is an energetic performer who knows how to raise his audience to great heights. The James Montgomery Band comes from Boston where their reputation as the area's best bar band preceded their national recognition. With two very successful albums behind them (First Time Out and High Rollers) they are the epitome of the Boston "blooze" scene. They have done extensive touring with the Steve Miller Band and occasionally blew him offstage with their tight riffing. James Montgomery is the lead singer and harpist extrordinaire.

On Friday October 3 make sure you are in Patrick Gym for the funkiest, sweatiest, most danceable good time you ever had 'cause Jameses Cotton and Montgomery are going to bring their bands into Burlington smoking fire. So be sure you're there to catch the heat.

Get your tickets now at the UVM Bookstore where they are $2.50 with a student ID and $3.50 general admission. General Admission tickets are also available at Bailey's Music Room on Church Street and Vermont Bookstore in Middlebury.

Utah, Rosalie, Cassel At Sting

by Lynn Van Matre

Two of the country's most respected folklore musicians will combine their energies with the popular John Cassel Band in a benefit concert for the Shaker Mountain School of Burlington on Oct. 2 at The Sting on Pearl St.

Appearing with Cassel on the evening's "mini-festival" program will be U. Utah Phillips and Rosalie Sorrels, both of whom are recording artists with Vermont's Philo Records.

Phillips, whose previous appearances at the University of Vermont have drawn enthusiastic audiences, is best known for his story-telling, piercing humor, and songs about railroads, hobos, cowboys, whiskey, and other facets of American folklife.

Referred to affectionately as "The Golden Voice of the Great Southwest," Phillips has two albums on Philo: Good Though! and the just released El Capitan.

Rosalie, who has just moved to Burlington, refers to herself as a cabaret singer, and her style ranges from jazz and blues through country and folk. Her songwriting reflects a varied life and lifestyle, resulting in songs which are more on the level of intense poetry than lyrics.

She recently edited an anthology of women's songs and poetry (What, Woman, and Who, Myself, I Am) and has seven albums to her credit, only three of which are in active circulation. An eighth album on Philo Always a Lady was just completed and will be released in November.

Rosalie Sorrels

The Cassel aggregations is generally regarded as one of the finest bands in the state, consistently attracting large and loyal audiences wherever they play. They have a new album scheduled for release this fall.

Door proceeds from the Oct. 2 concert ($2 donation per person) will go directly to the Shaker Mountain School, an alternative educational facility for Burlington area students with a goal of "learning by direct experience."

The eight-year-old school, under the leadership of Jerry Mintz, has 45 students and 11 staff members who participate in such programs as exchanges with the Mohawk Indians and travel to various places throughout the country.

Shaker Mountain is accredited by the State of Vermont, but must relie on fund raising to supplement minimum tuitions in order to meet their operational costs.

Book Review

US Decline

by Phil Murphy

The Republic: Decline and Future Promise by Lt. Col. Archibald E. Roberts, AUS, ret., Betsy Ross Press Bicentennial edition, $2.95.

In his newest book, barely off the press, this great patriot presents a scholarly treatise on the U.S. situation - combining information, warnings and solutions for every American citizen to heed.

As an established author, lecturer, recipient of countless awards and listee in several "Who's Who," Col. Roberts has the unique distinction of being perhaps our only contemporary author who can write as authoritatively on current affairs.

The book is presented in two parts. Part one sets forth exposes and explanations on such diverse subjects as regionalism, the $5 billion "slush" fund to state governments, the Rockefeller Foundation, federal land and water control and the seven fatal steps to dictatorship up which we have been steadily climbing.

Col. Roberts emphasizes the dangers of the perverted mass media and the secret government of monetary power which are forcing us into a "New World Order."

In his words, "To escape this new world order, being prepared for us by the Council on Foreign Relations, and the aristocracy of finance, Americans must demand that their state lawmakers investigate the illegal actions of federal agents who attempt to abridge the U.S. Constitution in violation of their oath of office."

The author deplores the apathy and mindless acceptance of and by the people, and implores every thinking American to start immediately to reverse these fatal movements by direct and forceful action at every level of government.

Quoting from "The Law", Roberts stresses, "Each of us has a natural right - from God - to defend his person, his liberty and his property. These are the three basic requirements of life and the preservation of any one of them is completely dependent upon the preservation of the other two."

Well, folks, that says it all. We will retain our rights only so long as we are willing to defend them. Isn't it about time we start?

Reprinted from The Ledger September 17, 1975

Space Odyssey with Ed the Head

(continued from page six)

recall the Dead's Anthem of the Sun to which it also bears resemblance. The first song tracks into "Slipknot" and then into one of my favorites, "Franklin's Tower." The chorus, "Roll Away the Dew" will get you singing along–Guaranteed!! This runs into "Stronger than Dirt" and it certainly is – right down to the Ajax Riff. The side ends with "The Music Never Stopped", a Bob Weir tune. Side two opens with "Crazy Fingers", with a very strong reggae influence. Very nice percussion on this track, lots of nice rolls and little flourishes. "Sage and Spirit" is beautiful, with flute and piano dominating, you'd never believe it was the Dead. Unfortunately, the title track is disappointing. Lots of spaced out drum and cymbal effects, which are good, but the vocals are ingratiating. "Sand Castles and Glass Camels" is more space music, as is "Unusual Occurrences in the Desert", which finishes the album.

Overall, this is the best studio album from our Frisco Friends in three or four years. Mars Hotel had its moments, but it only reinforced the fact that the Dead just were not able to put a decent studio album out. Most Deadheads agree that there is no substitute for seeing and hearing them live, which is true of most of the California bands of the Flower Power era. What can we attribute this fine effort to?

For one, the year off gave them time to write material that was exceptional instead of throwaway stuff. Secondly, Mickey Hart has rejoined the band. He left shortly after American Beauty. His father used to manage the band, at least until he sleazed off with quite a bit of money. The group didn't blame the younger Hart, he couldn't continue to work with the band after it happened–he felt responsible. Thirdly, from the sound of some of the tunes, the Dead must have had an awfully good time making the album. Some real eye-openers from the league of spiritual discovery. In all, a fine record to listen to, even if you're not tripping or a Deadhead. Which reminds me...

"Chris---Chris..." Carol knocked on the door again and then opened it. She was totally unprepared for what happened next.

"Aaaaliieeeeeyoowww!!!" She looked up and saw Chris, clad in only a loincloth, swinging from the chandelier. His hair looked as if he had plugged his hand into a light socket. Chris jumped down from the top of the fireplace and in front of Carol. He ripped off her clothes, and in one quick lunge was on top of her.

Minutes later, when she had caught her breath, Carol lit a cigarette.

"Chris–Ya wanna listen to the new Dead Album I just got?"

Chuck Brown To Hold Tryouts

Auditions for You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown will be held at the Royall Tyler Theatre, September 29, 30 starting at 7:00. The production is under the direction of Ed Tracy and will be presented in Billings November 6-9, sponsored by the UVM Governing Board. Charlie Brown is a musical show with acting or you could say it was an acting show with alot of music, or you could even call it just plain fun. Any way you put it, Charlie Brown is a part of everyone. There are 6 roles available, 4 men and 2 women. People who can sing, dance, act crazy, walk funny, fall down, eat and even talk all at once or singularly are urged to audition on September 29 and 30 at 7:00 in the Royall Tyler Theatre. For further information stop by the theatre or call 656–2095.

introducing:
NECTORS
Super Entertainment
Bluegrass & Folk
Fri. Caught In The Act
Sat. Moonlights
Enjoy the fast service of a Cafeteria - Buffet . . or for Leisurly dining, let us do the work - table service available and
SPECIALS EVERYDAY
NECTORS
188 MAIN STREET, BURLINGTON

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS
OPEN 10 to 10 DAILY
45 E. Allen St. Winooski Vt.
(At the rear of Frank's Texaco)

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
95 Church St. Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5 P.M.
Fridays 9:30 'til 9 P.M.

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11322 IDAHO AVE., # 206
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474
Our research papers are sold for research purposes only.

CAREER IN MINISTRY
...in HOLY CROSS, a religious community of men serving the community of men as teachers, counselors, parish priests, campus ministers, ministers of social concern and overseas missions.
for brochure write:
HOLY CROSS FATHERS
BOX C
936 Clinton Avenue
Bridgeport, Conn. 06604

THE FOREIGN SERVICE of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
is looking for qualified men and women to be:
political/labor officers
economists
administrative officers
consular officers
and for the U.S. Information Agency:
information/cultural officers
Work–and serve–in Washington and overseas. You must be an American citizen and 21 (or 20 if you have completed your junior year) in order to take the written examination which will be given this year on December 6. Entering pay levels are between $10,330 and $14,760. Applications for the December examination must be submitted by October 31. For additional information and applications write to:
Board of Examiners
Room 7000
Department of State
Washington, D.C. 20520

WE'RE THE GREATEST
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Sept. 22-Sept. 27 – Doobie Bros. Garage
Sept. 29-Oct. 4 - Tops (Dynomite) from N.J.
Oct. 6-Oct. 12 - Wide Open
Oct. 13-19 Spoonfeather
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9 Mon. – Thurs.

SKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENS

...ware and Repentance."

RSC, including Richard III at the Comedie Francaise in 1972 which won the Paris Drama Critics Award and also Pericles at the Comedie Francaise in 1974.

Known everywhere as one of the world's greatest repertory companies, the Royal Shakespeare Company, which first presented the plays of Shakespeare in 1879, is formed around a core of artists under long-term contract. By constantly working together in a varied repertoire, it aims to be a flexible ensemble with a distinctive style. Although Shakespeare is the RSC's major concern, with the company being responsible for many of the major Shakespearean productions in England, the RSC's annual Aldwych Theatre season (the company performs both in Stratford and at the Aldwych in London) complements Shakespeare's plays with modern works and other classics. Plays by such varied dramatists as Pinter, Genet, Albee, Gorky and T.S. Eliot have recently been performed at the Aldwych.

In New York during the 1974-75 season, two of Broadway's major hits were the RSC's productions of Sherlock Holmes and London Assurance.

Tickets for Pleasure and Repentance, $3.50, $5.50, and $6.50, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. The play may also be bought as part of a series of 6, 9 or 12 concerts. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The next Lane concert is the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra of Hamburg, Oct. 5. Conducted by Jurgen Jurgens, the large company of 45 musicians, 50 singers and 6 soloists will perform Monteverdi's oratorio "Vespro della Beata Virgine."

SA Presents A Night To Boogie

James Cotton

On October 3 at 8:00 p.m. in the Patrick Gymnasium, the SA Concert Bureau will present their first concert of the semester. It will be a free spirit dance concert with two giant boogie bands, the James Cotton Band and the James Montgomery Band. Recognizing the impossibility of trying to remain seated during the high energy performances by these bands, the Concert Bureau has decided not to place any chairs on the newly resurfaced gym floor. In order to minimize the damage that will occur to the floor, everyone's shoes will be checked as they enter the door. For this special dance concert the bleachers along the sides of the gym will be available for seating comfort.

In case you've just come out of the woodwork, James Cotton is a giant among modern day harp players. As a teenager he started in the Johnny Young Blues Band from the southside of Chicago. He helped originate the south side sound with its dashing harp licks and trade-offs with the guitar (Johnny Young) and piano (Otis Spann).

Now James has his own band and they have played in this area many times in the past few years. He is an energetic performer who knows how to raise his audience to great heights. The James Montgomery Band comes from Boston where their reputation as the area's best bar band preceded their national recognition. With two very successful albums behind them (First Time Out and High Rollers) they are the epitome of the Boston "blooze" scene. They have done extensive touring with the Steve Miller Band and occasionally blew him offstage with their tight riffing. James Montgomery is the lead singer and harpist extrordinaire.

On Friday October 3 make sure you are in Patrick Gym for the funkiest, sweatiest, most danceable good time you ever had 'cause Jameses Cotton and Montgomery are going to bring their bands into Burlington smoking fire. So be sure you're there to catch the heat.

Get your tickets now at the UVM Bookstore where they are $2.50 with a student ID and $3.50 general admission. General Admission tickets are also available at Bailey's Music Room on Church Street and Vermont Bookstore in Middlebury.

Utah, Rosalie, Cassel At Sting

by Lynn Van Matre

Two of the country's most respected folklore musicians will combine their energies with the popular John Cassel Band in a benefit concert for the Shaker Mountain School of Burlington on Oct. 2 at The Sting on Pearl St.

Appearing with Cassel on the evening's "mini-festival" program will be U. Utah Phillips and Rosalie Sorrels, both of whom are recording artists with Vermont's Philo Records.

Phillips, whose previous appearances at the University of Vermont have drawn enthusiastic audiences, is best known for his story-telling, piercing humor, and songs about railroads, hobos, cowboys, whiskey, and other facets of American folklife.

Referred to affectionately as "The Golden Voice of the Great Southwest," Phillips has two albums on Philo: Good Though! and the just released El Capitan.

Rosalie, who has just moved to Burlington, refers to herself as a cabaret singer, and her style ranges from jazz and blues through country and folk. Her songwriting reflects a varied life and lifestyle, resulting in songs which are more on the level of intense poetry than lyrics.

She recently edited an anthology of women's songs and poetry (What, Woman, and Who, Myself, I Am) and has seven albums to her credit, only three of which are in active circulation. An eighth album on Philo Always a Lady was just completed and will be released in November.

Rosalie Sorrels

The Cassel aggregations is generally regarded as one of the finest bands in the state, consistently attracting large and loyal audiences wherever they play. They have a new album scheduled for release this fall.

Door proceeds from the Oct. 2 concert ($2 donation per person) will go directly to the Shaker Mountain School, an alternative educational facility for Burlington area students with a goal of "learning by direct experience."

The eight-year-old school, under the leadership of Jerry Mintz, has 45 students and 11 staff members who participate in such programs as exchanges with the Mohawk Indians and travel to various places throughout the country.

Shaker Mountain is accredited by the State of Vermont, but must relie on fund raising to supplement minimum tuitions in order to meet their operational costs.

Book Review

US Decline

by Phil Murphy

The Republic: Decline and Future Promise by Lt. Col. Archibald E. Roberts, AUS: ret., Betsy Ross Press Bicentennial edition, $2.95.

In his newest book, barely off the press, this great patriot presents a scholarly treatise on the U.S. situation - combining information, warnings and solutions for every American citizen to heed.

As an established author, lecturer, recipient of countless awards and listee in several "Who's Who," Col. Roberts has the unique distinction of being perhaps our only contemporary author who can write as authoritatively on current affairs.

The book is presented in two parts. Part one sets forth exposes and explanations on such diverse subjects as regionalism, the $5 billion "slush" fund to state governments, the Rockefeller Foundation, federal land and water control and the seven fatal steps to dictatorship up which we have been steadily climbing.

Col. Roberts emphasizes the dangers of the perverted mass media and the secret government of monetary power which are forcing us into a "New World Order."

In his words, "To escape this new world order, being prepared for us by the Council on Foreign Relations, and the aristocracy of finance, Americans must demand that their state lawmakers investigate the illegal actions of federal agents who attempt to abridge the U.S. Constitution in violation of their oath of office."

The author deplores the apathy and mindless acceptance of and by the people, and implores every thinking American to start immediately to reverse these fatal movements by direct and forceful action at every level of government.

Quoting from "The Law", Roberts stresses, "Each of us has a natural right - from God - to defend his person, his liberty and his property. These are the three basic requirements of life and the preservation of any one of them is completely dependent upon the preservation of the other two."

Well, folks, that says it all. We will retain our rights only so long as we are willing to defend them. Isn't it about time we start?

Reprinted from The Ledger September 17, 1975

Space Odyssey with Ed the Head

(continued from page six)

recall the Dead's Anthem of the Sun to which it also bears resemblance. The first song tracks into "Slipknot" and then into one of my favorites, "Franklin's Tower." The chorus, "Roll Away the Dew" will get you singing along--Guaranteed!! This runs into "Stronger than Dirt" and it certainly is -- right down to the Ajax Riff. The side ends with "The Music Never Stopped", a Bob Weir tune. Side two opens with "Crazy Fingers", with a very strong reggae influence. Very nice percussion on this track, lots of nice rolls and little flourishes. "Sage and Spirit" is beautiful, with flute and piano dominating, you'd never believe it was the Dead. Unfortunately, the title track is disappointing. Lots of spaced out drum and cymbal effects, which are good, but the vocals are ingratiating. "Sand Castles and Glass Camels" is more space music, as is "Unusual Occurrences in the Desert", which finishes the album.

Overall, this is the best studio album from our Frisco Friends in three or four years. Mars Hotel had its moments, but it only reinforced the fact that the Dead just were not able to put a decent studio album out. Most Deadheads agree that there is no substitute for seeing and hearing them live, which is true of most of the California bands of the Flower Power era. What can we attribute this fine effort to?

For one, the year off gave them time to write material that was exceptional instead of throwaway stuff. Secondly, Mickey Hart has rejoined the band. He left shortly after American Beauty. His father used to manage the band, at least until he sleazed off with quite a bit of money. The group didn't blame the younger Hart, he couldn't continue to work with the band after it happened--he felt responsible. Thirdly, from the sound of some of the tunes, the Dead must have had an awfully good time making the album. Some real eye-openers from the league of spiritual discovery. In all, a fine record to listen to, even if you're not tripping or a Deadhead. Which reminds me...

"Chris---Chris..." Carol knocked on the door again and then opened it. She was totally unprepared for what happened next.

"Aaaaiiiieeeeeyoowww!!!" She looked up and saw Chris, clad in only a loincloth, swinging from the chandelier. His hair looked as if he had plugged his hand into a light socket. Chris jumped down from the top of the fireplace and in front of Carol. He ripped off her clothes, and in one quick lunge was on top of her.

Minutes later, when she had caught her breath, Carol lit a cigarette.

"Chris--Ya wanna listen to the new Dead Album I just got?"

Chuck Brown To Hold Tryouts

Auditions for You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown will be held at the Royall Tyler Theatre, September 29, 30 starting at 7:00. The production is under the direction of Ed Tracy and will be presented in Billings November 6-9, sponsored by the UVM Governing Board. Charlie Brown is a musical show with acting or you could say it was an acting show with alot of music, or you could even call it just plain fun. Any way you put it, Charlie Brown is a part of everyone. There are 6 roles available, 4 men and 2 women. People who can sing, dance, act crazy, walk funny, fall down, eat and even talk all at once or singularly are urged to audition on September 29 and 30 at 7:00 in the Royall Tyler Theatre. For further information stop by the theatre or call 656-2095.

introducing:
NECTORS
Super Entertainment
Bluegrass & Folk
Fri.-Caught In The Act
Sat. Moonlights
Enjoy the fast service of a Cafeteria - Buffet . . or for Leisurly dining, let us do the work - table service available and
SPECIALS EVERYDAY
NECTORS
188 MAIN STREET, BURLINGTON

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
96 Church St.
Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5 P.M.
Fridays 9:30 'til 9 P.M.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
11 GREAT SUDS
145 E. Allen
Winooski, Vt.
(At the rear of Frank's Texaco)

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11322 IDAHO AVE., # 206
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474
Our research papers are sold for research purposes only.

CAREER IN MINISTRY
...in HOLY CROSS, a religious community of men serving the community of man as teachers, counselors, parish priests, campus ministers, ministers of social concern and overseas missions.
for brochure write:
HOLY CROSS FATHERS
BOX C
836 Clinton Avenue
Bridgeport, Conn. 06604

THE FOREIGN SERVICE of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
is looking for qualified men and women to be:
political/labor officers
economists
administrative officers
consular officers
and for the U.S. Information Agency
information/cultural officers
Work--and serve--in Washington and overseas. You must be an American citizen and 21 (or 20 if you have completed your junior year) in order to take the written examination which will be given this year on December 6. Entering pay levels are between $10,520 and $14,740. Applications for the December examination must be submitted by October 31. For additional information and applications write to:
Board of Examiners
Room 7000
Department of State
Washington, D.C. 20520

WE'RE THE GREATEST
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Doyle Bros. Sept. 22-Sept. 27 - Garage
Tops (Dynomite) from N.J. Sept. 29-Oct. 4 - Canyon
Oct. 6-Oct. 12 - Wide Open
Oct. 13-19 Spoonfeather
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9 Mon. -- Thurs.

SKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENSKIMADRIVERGLENS

VOICES OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Reprinted from The People's Bicentennial Commission

On July 4, 1776, when the Continental Congress approved the Declaration of Independence, the western world's first successful revolution against political and economic tyranny was launched. Several years ago, the Associated Press released this news item:

MIAMI (July 4) – Only one person out of 50 approached on Miami streets by a reporter agreed to sign a typed copy of the Declaration of Independence. Two called it "Commie junk," one threatened to call the police, and another warned: "Be careful who you show that kind of antigovernment stuff to, buddy." Comments from those who took the trouble to read the first three paragraphs:

"This is the work of a raver."

"Somebody ought to tell the FBI about this sort of rubbish."

"Meaningless."

"The boss'll have to read this before I can let you put it in the shop window. But politically, I can tell you he don't lean that way. He's a Republican."

crises as great as any that faced our Nation at its birth two hundred years crises as great as any that faced our Nation at it birth two hundred years ago. The list is long and familiar: the way in Indochina, civil-rights agitation, assassinations of political leaders, massive inflation and unemployment, economic chaos over food and energy, the tortuous battle over the impeachment of a President, and on and on. But as that reporter in Miami discovered, an even greater crisis haf hit our country: the uncertainty we all feel about what America stands for today. While other national problems gain public attention in our newspaper headlines and on the evening news, this crisis gets little notice. Yet this confusion national ills.

In the last few years, we Americans have experienced domestic and foreign crises as great as any that faced our Nation at its birth two hundred years ago. The list is long and familiar: the war in Indochina, civil-rights agitation, assassinations of political leaders, massive inflation and unemployment, economic chaos over food and energy, the tortuous battle over the impeachment of a President, and on and on. But as that reporter in Miami discovered, an even greater crisis has hit our country: the uncertainty we all feel about what America stands for today. While other national problems gain public attention in our newspaper headlines and on the evening news, this crisis gets little notice. Yet this confusion over our basic values as a people lies at the root of all of our other national ills.

It all boils down to a single, basic question: What does it mean today to be a patriotic American? Two hundred years ago, people had a ready answer: a patriotic American was anyone who firmly believed in the democratic principles of the Declaration of Independence and our American Revolution – plain and simple. But today, when only one out of fifty Americans will endorse our Nation's founding document, something is drastically wrong. Crises in foreign policy, in the economy, in political leadership will come and go, but a people who have lost sight of their roots and ideals will soon fall prey to those very same "dark, designing knaves" our ancestors fought a revolution against.

The problem is as old as our country. Tom Paine, the chief propagandist of the American Revolution and the author of Common Sense, wrote a prescription for his fellow Americans that is still valid:

> It is at all times necessary, and more particularly so during the progress of a revolution, and until right ideas confirm themselves by habit, that we frequently refresh our patriotism by reference to first principles. It is by tracing things to their origin that we learn to understand them, and it is by keeping that line and that origin always in view that we never forget them.

To our ancestors, this was not a vague notion. It was "reference to first principles" that sustained the Revolution. In revolutionary times every institution, leader, law and political viewpoint was deemed a just target for public scrutiny. The test was a simple one: "What role does this leader (or law or philosophy) play in building and preserving our democratic birthrights?" As King George III learned, even a tradition as ancient as the monarchy could be challenged when an institution was judged directly by the people and found wanting. "Tracing things to their origins" taught our ancestors a basic truth: people make institutions; people can change them.

It is this continuing reference-the endless questioning, examining, arguing, debating and even standing up and fighting when necessary-that is the real substance of the American Revolution. True, the typical historical accounts of the "Spirit of '76" focus on a handful of famous men, a series of battles and dates, and the usual empty platitudes abou the "War for Independence." If this were all the American Revolution was really about, it wouldn't have more than passing interest to us today.

The American Revolution was earth-shaking two hundred years ago, and has profound meaning for us today, because it showed that ordinary people who believed and lived the principles of democracy could take on the greatest empire and the most powerful monarch in the world, and win.

It is ordinary people, who live and die in obscurity, whose names do not appear on monuments or in the pages of our history books, who are the real force behind all of this history. Generals, politicians, poets, saints and tycoons may get the speaking parts, but without "the people" there would be no history. In history, there is no audience: all of us are actors, willing or not. There are 'stars'-the people historians single out to be remembered; and there is a "cast"-literally a 'cast of millions,' without whom the stars could not exist. In a truly democratic society, the stars can rise only to the degree that they express the hopes and dreams of the rest of the cast.

At certain moments the cast emerges from the relative obscurity of its daily existence to assert its power. The American Revolution was such a moment, and the 'stars' of the time knew it. When Thomas Jefferson was asked where he gained the inspiration to write the Declaration of Independence, he replied that he had but to look into the hearts of the people, where he found its revolutionary principles indelibly stamped. What Jefferson and the other founding radicals learned, and what we would do well to remember, was the fundamental truth that "Power resides always in the body of the people." Once they knew this, the people had only to use it, and that was just what they did: two million colonial Americans, living in a remote wilderness far from the center stage of history, asserted themselves with startling boldness and resolution. As a result of their act, the course of world history was changed.

It is the Declaration of Independence, that gives us the best sense of what that Revolution of two hundred years ago meant to the people who lived it. The Declaration articulated all the dreams, ideas, principles, hopes and yearnings engendered by the revolutionary movement that began with the agitation against the Stamp Act of 1765. But it was in the plain fact that women and men were willing to die for the principles which it set forth that the Declaration derived its ultimate power. Had it been otherwise, the Declaration of Independence would have been merely an historical curiosity: interesting to scholars, but of little practical consequence.

Two centuries ago, Americans committed their "lives, fortunes, and sacred honors" to the ideals of this Declaration. Today we scarcely know anything about our founding document and the people who lived it. It's time once again for "We the people," to assert that ultimate power which lies within us. What better way to celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the first American Revolution?

To understand our founding democratic principles, and what they can mean to us today, we must trace our country back to its origins; back to the events which set the stage for our Declaration of Independence, and the American Revolutionary philosophy it represented.

The TIMES are Dreadful, Direful, Doleful, Dolorus, and DOLLAR-LESS.

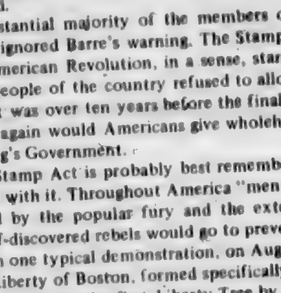
Anti-Stamp Act Cartoon

A Revolution In The Making

When the 1760's began in America, none of the two million people who inhabited the thirteen colonies had any reason to believe earth-shaking changes would take place in their lifetime. Since the arrival of the first Europeans over 150 years before, America had been a place far removed from the center stage of history.

What few people on either side of the Atlantic realized was just how different Americans had become from their relatives in Europe in that short time. Three thousand miles away from the kings and feudal systems of the "old world," the colonists had changed dramatically. If Americans could not themselves understand the transformation that had been taking place during that century and a half, recently arrived immigrants could. A Frenchman, Hector St. John de Crevecoeur, recorded his excited observations of this "new world" mentality:

> In this great American asylum, the poor of Europe have by some means met together. Urged by a variety of motives, here, they came. Every thing has tended to regenerate them; new laws, a new mode of living, a new social system; here they are become men: in Europe they were so many useless plants, wanting vegetative mould and refreshing showers... but now by the power of transplantation... they have taken root and flourished... What then is the 'American, this new man? Here individuals of all races are melted into a new race of man, whose labors and posterity will one day cause great changes in the world... The American is a new man, who acts upon new principles; he must therefore entertain new ideas, and form new opinions. From involuntary idleness, servile dependence, penury and useless labor, he has passed to toils of a very different sort... This is an American.



It was this 'new American' that was to come into conflict with the ruling authority of the Crown in the 1760's. It all began when the Government of King George III, having decided that the New World had for too long been left to its own devices, attempted to draw the colonies closer to "the parent state." By doing so, the Royal Government unwittingly showed Americans that their destiny could lie within themselves, and not with kings and empires.

The King's first attempt to increase his control over his American subjects began in 1765. Seeking funds to pay the debts incurred by the French and Indian War, George Grenville, First Minister in the Tory government, decided to impose a tax in the form of stamps on legal documents, newspapers, and as Americans saw it-on practically everything else in sight. During the debate over the tax in Parliament, Colonel Isaac Barre, an Englishman and an ardent supporter and friend of the American cause, declared that such a tax would be viewed as unconstitutional in the colonies. He described earlier acts of the Government and its officials in America that had "made the blood of those sons of liberty boil within them," and warned of dire consequences if the tax were passed.

A substantial majority of the members of the House of Commons ignored Barre's warning. The Stamp Act was passed and the American Revolution, in a sense, started at once: the ordinary people of the country refused to allow the stamps to be used. It was over ten years before the final break occurred, but never again would Americans give wholehearted allegiance to the King's Government.

The Stamp Act is probably best remembered for the riots associated with it. Throughout America "men of quality" were astounded by the popular fury and the extent to which the newly self-discovered rebels would go to prevent the use of the stamps. In one typical demonstration, on August 14, 1765, the Sons of Liberty of Boston, formed specifically to stand against the Act, christened the first Liberty Tree by hanging an effigy of the Governor's brother-in-law. The turmoil in Boston continued until November 1, when the Act was to go into effect. Another effigy was strung up, this time of the Prime Minister, as crowds marched in solemn procession to the tolling of bells. Later in the day, the effigy was found hanging from the town gallows. Finally, on December 17, the Governor's brother-in-law, Andrew Oliver, was forced to stand beneath the Tree and publicly resign his commission as a stamp distributor before two thousand irate citizens.

Other actions followed throughout the colonies: more forced resignations of stamp agents; destruction of Government officials' homes by angry mobs; the burning of crates of unused stamps. In the end, the opposition was so widespread that there is but a single recorded instance of the stamps ever being used. The unthinkable had happened: the people rebelled, on their own and with little leadership, and fought the mightiest empire in the world at the time to a standstill. When the Government did the only thing it could-repeal the Act-Americans felt as though they had slain a giant.

Celebrations took place from Massachusetts to Georgia. John Adams' description of the mood in Boston serves as a testimony to the spirit of the Stamp Act rebels:

> Such a day has not been seen in Boston before or since. The Bells of Dr. Blye's church began the tune at one in the

(continued on page twelve)

UNIVERSITY STORE

PORTRAITS PAINTED
Charcoal and Pastel
Quality work done by artist
Donald Peckham
Every Monday thru
Wednesday at the
UNIVERSITY STORE
Staring Sept. 29

A world of intriguing objects from far away places and intricate creations from our foremost native craftsmen.

Pleasant aromas, exciting designs, bountiful colors and an atmosphere designed to stimulate your imagination await you in one of Vermont's most exciting shops. Serendipity has become a local favorite and an attraction to visitors.
Come, enjoy some time with us!

India Print Spreads
Hand Thrown Pottery
Stained Glass
Dry Flowers
Paper Lamp Shades
Scented Candles
Music Boxes
Many "One of a Kind" Creations Sculpture
Beaded Curtains
Miniatures
Imports from over 40 Countries
Imported Coffee & Teas
Enamel on Copper
Mirrors
Mobiles
Stone Craft
Collector's Items
Largest Selection of Handicrafted Jewelry in Vermont Conversation Pieces

Featuring our own exclusive designs in silver

Serendipity
206 College Street
Burlington
862-5400

It no longer has to decide who is going to college.

Your future no longer has to be in the hands of the almighty dollar—your dollars that is. Because an Air Force ROTC 4 year scholarship will pick up the bills. Tuition bills....textbook and lab bills. Plus, it provides for a hundred dollar a month allowance for you to spend as you see fit.

And at graduation, that scholarship really starts paying off. You receive a commission as an Air Force officer. Plus a good job to go to. And a future without limits. Travel. Promotions. Prestige.

There are 6500 Air Force ROTC college scholarships in total. Why not see if you've earned one during the last few years.

UVM Students are eligible to enroll at St. Michael's. Contact the Dept. of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's
Call 656-2000, ext. 281

Put it all together in Air Force ROTC.

VERMONT CYNIC

'Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont

FOUNDED IN 1883

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 19 OCTOBER 2, 1975 5

Is UVM Going Broke?

by Randy Jansen

UVM's budget like any other budget is a complex and sometimes confusing report on the resources (revenues) that are available and the expenditures that can be expected. The most carefully thought-out budget can become thrown into disarray by events that were not anticipated. This is the basic problem that is besetting UVM now. The budget presented [illegible] this age is now out-of-date because of recent action [illegible] by Governor Salmon.

The trustees must now postpone any decision-making on the budget until the Vermont State Legislature decides on the course of action it will take on Governor Salmon's tax proposal. The administration in turn must wait for the decision of the trustees before they implement those decisions.

The articles in this page will aid you in understanding what the situation is at the present, what are the possibilities in the future, the objectives and principles of the trustees in regard to the financial problem, and what actions students might possibly take.

You will find some of the same material presented in several articles. This is necessary in order to fully understand this complicated matter.

In future weeks we will present [illegible] different aspects on the state of affairs in and around UVM and the University community.

by Randy Jansen

If the legislature rejects Governor Salmon's tax-program, he has decided that he will impound $600,000 more of UVM's funds. If Governor Salmon does go through with this plan, Staige Davis will hold a "Student Awareness Day." No definite plans exist now, but Staige, other interested students and the administration are working on a contingency program. The main thrust of the day, will be to insure that students are informed on the actions of the legislature and Governor and the effects.

Davis emphasized that it will be a positive day of information-sharing, instead of a demonstration. Students will let their feelings be known to the legislators and the people of Vermont. He commented, "We will tell the people in Vermont that we care about our education, and how impounding $600,000 will seriously affect the quality of the University."

Faculty will be contacted in hopes of gaining their support for "Student Awareness Day", if it becomes necessary. The Student Association will try to make it a united University action, rather than a student-only operation. "We are seeking cooperation with the faculty and administration in order to make the day successful."

The SA President stressed that he hopes such a day will not be necessary. "But", he added, "if the legislature supports the impoundment of $600,000, a real emergency will exist for the University."

TUITION HIKE FOR '76-'77

by Randy Jansen

UVM students face still another round of tuition hikes next year and quite possibly this Spring semester. The serious financial situation that became obvious to students last Winter has in fact grown worse.

In-state students will see tuition increases up to $80, while out-of-state student tuition will increase $210. Tuition was raised 7 per cent to reflect the current inflation rate. While there are no plans to raise tuition above these figures as of yet, the possibility of such action is likely. Dr. Wayne Patterson, Interim President, commented that tuition might rise beyond the scheduled increases. According to Dr. Patterson, "It all depends largely on what the state legislature allocates us."

Causes for the increase in tuition are many and complex. The basic overlying problem is that Vermont's small industrial base and a population of less than half a million cannot support an educational institution of UVM's size. Stated simply, Vermont just does not have enough money to support all of its services and UVM is one of these services which must be cut.

Last year Governor Salmon impounded $100,000 from UVM's state appropriation. As a result, hasty last-minute budget cuts had to be put into effect. UVM's state appropriation was then voted in by the legislature as level funding for the current year. However, inflation increased expenditures, and the $100,000 impoundment resulted in a $675,000 operating deficit.

The trustees decided to keep the University at level funding and took steps to achieve this goal. The General Fund which had accumulated capital from previous years, lowered the deficit by $316,000. This still left UVM with $359,000 deficit which had to be compensated for in order to achieve the desired zero budget. A committee was established by the trustees to recommend where reductions could be made. Each department head was required to submit a budget at a 90 per cent level. These budgets will only be used as a guideline to determine priorities. Dr. Patterson emphasized that not all budgets will be reduced 10 per cent. Instead, depending on the recommendations of the committee, some budgets may receive 105 per cent of their allotment while others may receive 90 per cent. The Committee will submit its recommendations for trustee approval at the October board meetings. The Vermont legislature was called into a special session last week and convened on Monday, September 29. The legislature voted on Governor Salmon's tax program. Action was postponed on

(continued on page ten)

UVM NOT ENTIRELY TO BLAME FOR BUDGET WOES

by Randy Jansen

Numerous questions are asked by the University community about the financial strain that UVM is undergoing. Many students and faculty question UVM's competence in dealing with the finances. There are no simple answers, but one thing is fairly certain. UVM can not be held entirely responsible for its troubles. There are other countless external factors that influence the University's budget.

Basically, the population of Vermont is too small and the income too low to support a University the size of Vermont. Vermont's population ranks 48th in the nation, as less than a half million people inhabit the state. The per-capita income is a low 38th in relation to the rest of the nation. Primarily, this is because of Vermont's small industrial base, and dependence on agriculture and tourism.

Balancing the state budget in the past has required ingenuity and conservative Yankee economics. It was as difficult to achieve a balanced budget in the past as it is today. There were fewer services then, and their budgets were far less than those of the present. In the late 60's and early 70's federal money was abundant, and instrumental in helping Vermont establish much needed service. When federal money dried up, Vermont was forced to take on a greater share of the burden. Cutbacks were initiated to ease the overtaxed Vermonters.

Education was one of the services suffering from cutbacks. Vermont has traditionally placed a low priority on education. Voter resistance for schools bills was common, and consequently, schools including UVM were hard pressed for money. When lined up with other state services, UVM is not ranked as being vital. Welfare, health, and low tax rates are far more important to the voters and legislators than the University.

Vermont's economy is tied tightly with tourism, and therefore is subject to sudden and radical downswings. In conjunction with the above mentioned was the disastrous tourist season of 1974. The combined lack of snow and gasoline kept many tourists (and their money) away from Vermont. Revenue plummeted as ski-areas were empty for lack of skiers. Tax revenues correspondingly declined and Vermont faced a sizable deficit.

In response to this deficit, Governor Salmon impounded $100,000 of UVM's already budgeted state appropriations. This was the cause of the frantic budget cuts that the University was compelled to make last winter. Governor Salmon then recommended that this year's state appropriations be at level funding. This would have caused no serious problems except that inflation was escalating at approximately a rate of seven percent. Briefly stated, UVM's expenditures were rising while revenues were staying relatively stable.

UVM's own measures were not increasing enough to match price rises. Temporary Investments has been a stable source of revenue for many years. UVM would borrow money in September using tuition as collateral. The money would be borrowed at a rate of six percent and then lent out again at 13 percent. (The University was able to borrow at this low rate because it is a non-profit institution.) Utilizing this method, the University was able to earn approximately $900,000 depending on national interest rates. Interest rates have recently dropped so that this source of revenue is no longer as profitable as it has been.

The Trustees' action to limit enrollment has also had its effect on UVM's finances. When enrollment was increasing, tuition revenue also increased. The leveling of student enrollment brought about a corresponding level of tuition revenue.

There are several significant reasons to limit enrollment. More students mean more capital outlay in terms of facilities, faculty and administration. Also the size of the University has been cited as one of its main attractions by students who enter UVM. Obviously, increasing the student population will only aggravate the problem of many for UVM and not lead to its solution.

There are several other events which have had an effect on UVM's budget. While each individual event has little influence on the total budget, the culmination of them has quite an impact.

The Arab oil crisis of 1973 caused a dramatic increase in fuel prices for UVM. The four-day week was initiated the winter before last in efforts to alleviate this problem. This year's solution is to extend the intersession so less fuel will be required. However, even this effort will not lower the fuel bill to pre-1973 levels.

UVM has far too many course offerings for its student population. Dr. Wayne Patterson, Interim President, remarked last year that the University offers as many courses as the University of Pennsylvania, which has a student population almost four times that of UVM. The large number of course offerings are expensive to maintain, and as a result, their number is being reduced. The elimination of courses will enable some faculty members to allocate their time more resourcefully.

Medical School Compacts are yet another source of revenue. They are being renegotiated to reflect the higher costs of educating medical students. Medical Compacts are what the other North Eastern States pay so that their students can enter UVM on an in-state status. The University wants to raise the Compacts from the present $5,000 to $8,500 to make up the difference of the cost of educating medical students. Massachusetts feels that they can no longer offer this option, and have dropped out of the program. It is possible, however that New York may enter the Compacts for the first time. Negotiations are still continuing with the other North Eastern States. Additional revenue from the medical compacts will be dependent on the approval of those involved with the Medical Compacts.

Additional resources including athletic ticket sales, Lane Series, annual giving, etc. will all remain stable. These resources do not fluctuate widely but they also do not increase to any great extent.

In conclusion, there are only two main areas where resources are capable of increasing to match expenditures, and thus avoid a deficit budget for UVM. These two options are state appropriations and tuition increases. It has been noted that state appropriations are in jeopardy because of Vermont's own financial difficulties. This leaves the trustees with only one avenue that they can follow in order to prevent UVM from going broke, and that is the necessity of raising tuition and, or cutting services.

Raising tuition is understandably a deep concern for students. But unless it is done, the quality of education at UVM will decline substantially, because of the necessary adjustments that would have to be made.

UVM is only unique in its troubles by the magnitude of the problem. Nearly all public and private universities are experiencing similar financial difficulties. The University of Vermont is unique in the manner in which it has decided to deal with the problem. Instead of eliminating whole programs (as some colleges have done), UVM tries to search out areas that can be cut. How long UVM will be able to continue this is debatable, considering recent events. Any prediction of what will happen to UVM in the future, is only a futile exercise in conjecture. Anyway, the University community will have its hands filled adjusting to any given present situation.

UVM FUTURE

by Randy Jansen

As bad as it is now, UVM's financial picture could worsen in the upcoming years. The administration and trustees never quite know the extent of UVM's financial woes. Budgets are projected and planned, and then revised upward because of escalating inflation, impounded funds, or decreased revenues. The situation changes so rapidly that new budgets are proposed almost every other month.

A budget was presented in July but is now obsolete because of the recent impoundment of $100,000 (A). The most recent budget which was proposed last week reflects the altered situation. If the $100,000 had not been impounded and if the Vermont legislature had authorized a $500,000 increase in state appropriations (which the trustees have requested) then the deficit would be only $1,211,000 (B). Because of the impounded funds though the current deficit is $1,311,000 (C).

However, UVM's problems do not end here. If the governor does not attain the taxation program he has requested, then he will try to impound an additional $600,000 (D) of UVM's funds. The University would then have to cope with a deficit of $1,911,000 (E).

Another viable possibility is that Governor Salmon will recommend that UVM receive level funding (exactly the same state appropriation UVM received this year). If this were to occur, then UVM's deficit would rise to $2,411,000 (F).

Yet another option is open to the Governor. He could recommend to the state legislature that the state appropriation remain at level funding, less the $700,000 maximum impoundment. This would leave the University with a maximum deficit of $3,111,000 (G).

Only one of the above-mentioned options has occurred, the impoundment of $100,000 (A). The other situations are only potential courses of action. As the situation looks today, these courses of action are highly improbably. Yet the chances that they may be realized alway exists and this would result in financial consequences.

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT
FY '76 AND FY '77 OPERATING BUDGETS
IN THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS

	Current FY '76 Budget		Projected FY '77
State Appropriation	$11,382	(B) State Appropriation	$11,882
Tuition & Fees	17,489	Tuition & Fees	18,686
Other	5,895	Other	6,204
	$34,766		$36,772
Expenditures	$35,441	Expenditures	$37,983
Operating Deficit	(675)	(B) Operating Deficit	(1,211)
General Fund Balance (June '75)	316	(C) Governor's Impoundment 9/22	100
Target for Reductions	359		1,311
		Possible General Fund Deficit (June '76)	(700)
Sub-Total	0		($1,911)
(A) Governor's Impoundment 9/22	(100)		(500)
(D) Governor's Impoundment [illegible]	(600)	(F) Sub-Total Level State Funding	(2,411)
Possible General Fund Deficit on June 30, 1976	($700)	(F) Sub-Total State Funding at Maximum Impoundment Level	(700)
		(G) Possible General Fund Deficit on June 30, 1977	($3,111)

RESULTS OF LAST WEEK'S ELECTIONS

VPIRG	YES – 2100 NO – 229 (9.8%)
S.A. CONSTITUTION	YES – 1964 NO – 93 (4.2%)

calendar annoucements

OVP Help Needed

Wanted: Person with interest in art, display and the curatorial field to work at the Fleming Museum.

Wanted: Person with interest in children, science, and animals to work at small children's museum.

Wanted: Person with interest in photography, research, architecture and the elderly to help visually handicapped woman who has been researching a book on Gothic Revival Architecture.

Wanted: Person with interest in ballet and modern dance to teach basic dancing skills to an 8 year old.

Wanted: Person with interest in music and voice to teach a 14 year old girl.

Information on any of the above positions is available at the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, UVM, or call 656-2062. Many other unlisted positions are also available. Reach out.

Horse Club To Host 4-H

The UVM Horse Club will hold its weekly meeting Thursday night, October 2, at 8 pm in Coolidge Lounge. Besides the usual agenda, the Club will show the Buster Keaton film Blacksmith. All interested people are welcome.

On Saturday, the Club is hosting a 4-H Judging Contest starting at 10 am at the Farm on Spear Street. The Judging Contest is for 4-H members from throughout the state of Vermont. They will be judging the Horse Club horses in such areas as breeds, in hand classes, and under saddle. All spectators are welcome and coffee will be available.

For those of you who are not familiar with the Horse Club, it consists of all sorts of members, 16 of whom stable their horses at the UVM Farm on Spear Street. Any questions? Call Sue Taisillo at 656-2636.

Am. Friends Service Comm.

The local chapter of American Friends Service Committee, an international anti-war and relief organization would like to invite interested persons to a potluck supper/organizational meeting at 398 North St. Thursday, Oct. 2, 6:30 p.m. Burlington AFSC has brought Daniel Berrigan, Don Luce, and Russell Johnson to UVM and the community. It is currently involved in the B-1 Bomber National Peace Convernion Campaign which is being activated nationally against the State Dept.'s 80 billion dollar boondoggle. Please come to the meeting if you are interested in working with us. If you are interested in information please use the North St. address as a mailing address and we will contact you.

Senior Class Council

There will be a meeting of the Senior Class Council on Wednesday, October 8, at 7:00 p.m. in the Fireplace Lounge at Living/Learning Center. Anyone interested in planning Senior class activities is invited to attend. If interested but cannot attend the meeting call:

Rick Fischer 656-4253, Pat Daley 656-4261, Nancy Dean 656-4245, or Richard Sears 864-6240.

Stage Help For Lane Series

Able-bodied boys and girls are wanted to work as members of the stage crew for the Lane Series concerts. Such persons will not only be paid for their work (long irregular hours) but will also see the concerts they work – sometimes behind stage! Apply to the Lane Office, 234 Waterman.

Women's PR Opening

There is an opening for a part time public relations position with the Women's Athletic Department.

All interested persons should contact Miss Sally Guerette, Women's Athletics Director at Southwick Gym, 656-3240 before Tuesday October 7.

Roundhouse Opens

BILLINGS CENTER GOVERNING BOARD PROUDLY ANNOUNCES THIS SEMESTER'S FIRST ROUNDHOUSE. HELD IN BILLINGS ROUNDROOM AT 9 PM ON FRIDAYS. ROUNDHOUSE FEATURES LOCAL MUSICIANS AND OTHER ENTERTAINMENT.

Octoberfest

All crafts people in the Burlington community interested in exhibiting their work at the Octoberfest on the 11th, please contact: Kathy Long at 656-2690 or Karen Thari at 656-2199 by October 8.

Emergency Task Force Needs Help

The Office of Volunteer Programs is faced with the problem of serving immediate human needs on an emergency type basis. Several times each day calls come into the office for one shot, hour or day long needs. Example: Elderly woman has to move and has no way or means to accomplish this move. Can OVP mobilize an emergency task force of volunteers to respond to this need within three days?

OVP will offer its resources and help to any student who will establish an Emergency Task Force as an ongoing project. At least two people are needed to serve as Project Directors to coordinate this response to the human needs of the community.

If you feel that you can commit yourself to the administration of a group of volunteers in this project, or, if you wish to be one of the volunteers, please come to the OVP office at Mansfield House at once, or call David Schwartz at 656-2062.

Davis Brothers Return

The Davis Brothers Band, the hottest band in Vermont, will return to UVM's Simpson Hall on Friday, October 24, for the first annual "Fall Fling." This is sponsored by the WDW Complex, and there will be 20 kegs and the best dance band around. This evening of music and dance is available to all for the meager price of $2.50 each. For more information contact Hank or Jim, 2nd floor Wilks, x3443 or x3444. Tickets will go on sale October 13.

ATO Sorority Softball

The first annual ATO sorority softball tournament will be held on Southwick field this Saturday at 10:30 a.m. The five sororities Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Phi, and Tri-Delta have all promised an all-star roster.

The hard hitting Theta team opposes the unscored-upon Pi Phi Giants while the always powerful Alpha Chi grandslammers lead off against A D Pi's Golden Gloves.

Stories tell of a tough young Tri-Delta, who drew the 1st bye. They will get plenty of inspiration from the rumored three foot winning trophy plus the gala clubhouse champagne party.

The ubiquitous umpiring has been acquired from ATO's prestigious national school of sports officials.

Firearms Safety Course

The Extension Service of Vermont and the State Fish and Game Department have joined forces briefly, to extend to the students, staff, and faculty of the University of Vermont, the opportunity to enroll and take part in a Firearms Safety Certification Course. All who wish to hunt and have not previously held a hunter's license, must engage and successfully complete this type course.

The areas covered are:

Firearms – Handling and Care

Knowledge of Ammunition and Firearms

Hunter Responsibility

Survival

First Aid

Wildlife Management

Only the first twenty-five to be enrolled can be taken.

The course will include 5 two-hour classes with a test at the end. Also the students will fire 15 rounds at a target practice area.

Classes start October 6 and run consecutively until November 3, from (this is every Monday night) 7 pm to 9 pm in Living/Learning B-132.

For more information or pre-enrollment call Eric Nichols, Chittenden County Extension Service, 878-8381.

SA Petitions Due Soon

The deadline is nearing for nomination papers for Student Association Senatorial candidates. Representatives from the Greek houses and off-campus are especially needed. Run for senator and get involved with UVM – you'll make a difference! Interested students may obtain information by visiting the SA office, right balcony, Billings Center or by calling 656-2053.

UNIVERSITY STORE

$1.99

BOOK SALE!

UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

STARTS MONDAY OCT 6 - 24

Homecoming and Parents Weekend events are scheduled October 10 and 11. See special story in this issue.

The Box Office is now open everyday for anyone who wishes to purchase a ticket for Lysistrata showing October 16-19. Tickets cost $1.50 with a UVM I.D., and $3.00 for regular admission. Call 656-2094 for information.

A reminder that Lane Series Tickets are still available from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, tel. 656-3418. The Chaplin film series starts October 10.

At Fleming Museum through Nov. 9: "Vermont Photography '75," a juried exhibition of work by Vermont Photographers. Through Spring '76, "Collectors and Collections," which highlights the collections of six donors to the Museum, and "Traditional Africa," both in the second floor galleries.

S.A. Senatorial elections Oct. 7 through 9, story in this issue.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2

12:15 p.m., Mechanical Engineering Department Seminar, Votey 231. Dr. Mahandra S. Hundal will talk on "The Use of Control Theory in Ski Turn Analysis." All are invited, bring lunch.

Three evening courses begin at the UVM Church St. Center: "What Should Our Schools Be Doing?," "Childbirth. A Course for Prospective Parents," and "Introduction to Bob Dylan." Contact the Center, ext. 4221, for details and registration.

7:30 p.m., SA Films "American Actress" series presents "It Happened One Night," starring Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert, B-106 Cook Bldg., admission free.

7:30 – 9 p.m., Living Literature "Oral Interpretation Showcase," 216 Commons, Living/Learning. Admission free, refreshments served.

7 – 8 p.m., Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship is holding a series of small group Bible studies on various doctrines of Christianity. Will be held in 206 Tupper. Join us!

8:00 p.m., Orientation meeting for those interested in the Junior Year in Salzburg Program. German House, Living/Learning.

8 p.m., English department lecture series presents Leslie Fiedler, author of Love and Death in the American Novel, who will discuss "English Literature 2001," Ira Allen Chapel. Admission free. Reception following in Old Mill. See story this issue.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 3

UVM hosts a symposium today through Sunday on college-based programs in radiologic technology.

8 p.m., opening of the juried show, "Vermont Photography '75" at the Fleming Museum.

12 noon, open lunch hour at the Counseling and Testing Center, 146 S. Williams St. Come and get acquainted.

1–4 p.m., UVM apples on sale at the Horticulture Research Center, off Shelburne Road.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four," open house at the Royall Tyler Theatre.

4:30 – 6 p.m., College of Medicine faculty meeting, Carpenter Auditorium, Given Bldg.

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA Films presents The Last Picture Show, starring Timothy Bottoms, Jeff Bridges, Cybill Shepherd, directed by Peter Bogdanovich. Admission $1 at B-106 Cook Bldg.

8 p.m., Thomas Mann Symposium opens with address by Michael Steinberg of the Boston Globe, "Luther, Lohengrin and the Devil: Music in Thomas Mann," auditorium of the new music building, Redstone Campus, with a reception following in the lobby.

8 p.m., UVM Folk Dance Club meets, Southwick Ballroom, instruction for all levels, details from Ben Bergstein, 863-6686.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4

Torrey Hall, formerly known as the old art building, will be dedicated today in noon-time ceremonies in honor of UVM President Rev. Joseph Torrey.

9 a.m. – 4 p.m., one-day workshop at the Church Street Center, "Home Health Remedies." Fee is $6, advance registration requested. Details from ext. 4221.

1:30 p.m., Thomas Mann Symposium continues at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg., with a film showing "Thomas Mann und die Deutschen." At 2 p.m., an address by Prof. Harry Zohn, Brandeis, "Thomas Mann's Perception of the Man of Letters," and at 3:15 p.m. a panel on Mann's Relevance Today, followed at 4:30 by a coffee hour.

7:30 p.m., SA Films "mini-series" presents a double feature: Morocco, made in 1930 and starring Gary Cooper and Marlene Dietrich, plus For Whom the Bell Tolls, made in 1943 and starring Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman and Akim Tamiroff. Place is B-106 Cook Bldg. and admission is free.

8 p.m., Women of UVM host an Oktoberfest for newcomers, an evening of German food, music and so forth at Given Courtyard. Reservations from Linda Gilbert, 5 Bacon Drive, Shelburne at $4.50 per couple.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 5

Thomas Mann Symposium ends with showing of Visconti's film Death in Venice at 2:00 p.m. in the Flynn Theatre.

7 p.m., Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship is having a time of singing, sharing, Bible study and prayer. All are welcome! Held in L/L A-101. For more information, call Lois Wright x2243.

8 p.m., Lane Series presents the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra, Memorial Auditorium. Tickets from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman Bldg., tel. ext. 3418.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 6

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center "Career Planning Awareness" program with Bill McNeil. Open to anyone with questions regarding occupational selection, choice of major, career plans. Admission free at 146 S. Williams St.

7:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center course, "Reproduction: Cattle and Horses", and two study groups, "Small Is Beautiful – A Community Seminar", and "Planning For Title XX – Does Citizen Participation Count?" The study groups have no admission charge.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 7

12 noon, Counseling and Testing "Study Skills Workshop" with Alice D. Outwater; admission free at 146 S. Williams St. Open to all with questions, problems or concerns about study habits.

2:00 p.m., Mathematical Sciences seminar, Dr. Heath Riggs, "Methods of Computing Orbits", B-203 Cook Bldg.

3:30 p.m., College of Agriculture faculty meeting, Room 108, Terrill Hall.

4-5:30 p.m., "Tertulia", an informal group of students, staff, townspeople, and professors who get together to speak in Spanish about anything of interest, E-380 Living/Learning. A high level of speaking ability is not required. Open to all who are interested. Sponsored by El Club Hispanico.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance program lecture, Prof. Susan Whitebook, French, on individualism in Provencal lyric poetry of the 12th Century, 216 Commons, Living/Learning. Open to all who are interested.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization meets to share healing experiences, Harris Hall recreation room. More information from Holly Aspden, ext. 3156.

7 p.m., Tuesday night drawing group meets for figure drawing, second floor, Williams Hall. $1 donation at the door to pay the model.

7:30 p.m., SA Films British Cinema Series presents "Queen of Spades", starring Anton Walbrook, Dame Edith Evans, and Yvonne Mitchell. B-106 Cook, admission is free.

7:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center Course, "Plants and The Zen". One of three sessions illustrated by slides. Details from Ext. 4221.

8:00-9:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center Course, "How To Buy A House/ How To Buy Land." The first of four sessions; details from Ext. 4221.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8

Start of three day "Symposium for Educators in College Sponsored Programs in Radiologic Technology". See story in this issue.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a free "Relaxation and Meditation" program with Nancy Koch, at the Center, 146 S. Williams St. Come and learn some creative ways of dealing with daily tension and stress.

4 p.m., Century Forum hosts Dr. Solomon H. Snyder, John Hopkins, "The Brain's Own Morphine and Its Receptor," Carpenter Auditorium, Given Bldg. Story this issue.

12 to 2 p.m., UVM Church Street Center presents an "Assertiveness Training Workshop" on Oct. 8 and Oct. 15.

3:30 p.m., International Club, General Meeting and Coffee Hour at the Area and International Studies Building, 479 Main St. The Club especially welcomes foreign American students and students who have an interest in travel or study abroad, or who have just returned from an overseas experience and would like to share it with others.

4:30 p.m., Senate meeting at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building.

8 p.m., "Henry Schnakenberg: Artist and Collector", conversation with Antoinette Kraushaar, Director of Kraushaar Galleries in New York, about one of Fleming Museum's major donors. Public lecture in Marble Court of the Robert Hull Fleming Museum.

8-9:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center lecture/discussions: "Chaplin – His Life and Films" Participants of the course may purchase the Lane Chaplin Film Series at a reduced rate of $3.00 for the 6 films. This is the first of four sessions.

8-10:00 p.m., UVM Church Street Center study group, "Politics Aren't Dirty: How to Run For Office." No charge.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9

12:15 p.m., Mechanical Engineering Seminar, Room 231 Votey Hall. Dr. F. Martinek will speak on "Analysis of Solar Optical Systems using Monte Carlo Techniques." Bring lunch, all are welcome.

Junior Year In Salzburg

If you are interested in spending your Junior Year in the picturesque Austrian city of Salzburg, perfecting your German and getting credit for your studies, why not attend an orientation meeting concerning this program? The meeting, with illustrative slides and refreshments (Gluehwein and cheese), will take place at 8:00 p.m. in the German House, Living/Learning. Dr. Karl Arndt of UNH will introduce the program and answer your questions. Further details are available from Dr. David Scrase of the Department of German and Russian (ext. 3431).

Horse Club Meeting

Thursday Oct 2
8 PM
Coolidge

Buster Keaton's "Blacksmith"

4-H Judging Contest
Oct 4
10 AM
UVM FARM

SPECTATORS WELCOME

Pre-Law Seniors!

A representative of Western New England College School of Law will be on campus Thursday, October 9. He will meet with interested pre-law seniors at 2:00 p.m. in room 210 Old Mill.

Students interested in being nominated for N.Y.U. School of Law's Root-Tilden Scholarship should submit: 1) an academic transcript and, 2) A letter of reference to Professor Gould of the Political Science Dept. by October 15. Two Root-Tilden Scholarships are awarded annually to each federal judicial circuit. These are awarded on merit rather than need.

School Books

We need donations for our pre-school. Toys, books, paper, old clothes, furniture, lamps, records, paint, tools - anything that may be in your attic or garage and you would like to see put to use. If you can help us, please stop by the Center on the corner of North Street and North Winooski or call us at 656-2291.

THANK YOU!

MOUNTAIN BOOT REPAIR
RESOLE WITH GALIBIER
FREE OILING WITH EACH RESOLE SHINE WITH EACH REPAIR

TOWN COBBLER

Shoe Repair & Gift Shop
Rt. 7 Shelburne, Vt. 985-2844

Plannin Placem

On-campus Employment and Graduate School Interviews will begin October 13, in the Career Planning and Placement Office, 109 South Williams St.

SIGN UP October 6, 7, 8. Schedules will be filled on a first come basis.

RECRUITING PERIOD NO. 1
OCTOBER 13

Washington Hospital Center, Washington, D.C. No sign up necessary. Representative will be located in the Brickyard, Rowell to talk with graduating nurses.

OCTOBER 14

Ohrbach's Dept. Store, New York City. Offers Executive training positions.

UVM Business Career Day, sponsored by the Business Dept. & the Placement Service visiting Business Executives.

The Sho

The shortest will contested but subsequently admitted to probate in English law was the

First

Until students enter the working environment of the career they've chosen, they have varying expectations of what it will actually be like. Some of these expectations are upheld, but oftentimes false expectations lead to big disappointments. Undergraduate students need the opportunity to learn about their chosen fields before they get there.

In the past, UVM has offered no direct experience upon which to base their career expectations. Therefore, the Business Administration Department in cooperation with Career Planning and

'Day Fo

Truffault's Day for Night which won the Oscar for Best Foreign Film of 1973, will be playing at Century Plaza on Dorset Street Thursday afternoon at 4:00 p.m.

This special showing, sponsored by the Contemporary Cinema Class, costs only $1. Tickets were on sale this week and every week near the Billings Information Desk on Wednesday from 12:15 – 2:00. Tickets also ar

St. Anselm's

Remember-this Saturday October 5, we will be goin apple-picking, leaving S Anselm's at 12:30. Come-an bring a friend.

Nancy will be preaching both services on Sunday. Th 11:30 a.m. service will morning prayer. Future dat to keep in mind:

October 11: 10-12 noo open house for Parent Weekend.

October 12: 12:30 luncheon for Students and parents.

October 19: Woo gathering, we'll leave followi morning worship.

Benefit for

U UTAH PR

THE J
Doors op
Happenin

1100 forced

SMU

$
$

NOW PUR
YOUR CA

BI

Planning And Placement

On-campus Employment and Graduate School interviews will begin October 13, in the Career Planning and Placement Office, 109 South Williams St.

SIGN- UP October 6, 7, 8. Schedules will be filled on a first come basis.

RECRUITING PERIOD NO. 1

OCTOBER 13

Washington Hospital Center, Washington, D.C. – No sign up necessary. Representative will be located in the Brickyard, Rowell to talk with graduating nurses.

OCTOBER 14

Ohrbach's Dept. Store, New York City – Offers Executive training positions.

UVM Business Career Day, sponsored by the Business Dept. & the Placement Service visiting Business Executives will be available for discussion in the Billings Center.

OCTOBER 15

New York University, Graduate School of Business Administration – Information on Graduate Programs.

U.S. Coast Guard – Information Team, Billings Center.

U.S. State Department and Foreign Service Agency, Washington, D.C. – Information Group Meeting 2:00-4:00 p.m.

OCTOBER 16

Northeastern University, Graduate School, Engineering, Boston, Mass. – Graduate programs.

OCTOBER 17

Claremont College Graduate School, Claremont, Cal. – Graduate programs.

The Shortest Will

The shortest will contested but subsequently admitted to probate in English Law was the case of Thorn v. Dickens in 1906. It consisted of the three words "All for Mother."

Scandinavian Seminar

Scandinavian Seminar is now accepting applications for its study abroad program in Denmark, Finland, Norway, or Sweden for the academic year 1976–77. This living-and-learning experience is designed for college students, graduates and other adults who want to become part of another culture while acquiring a second language.

An initial 3 weeks language course, followed by a family stay whenever possible, will give the student opportunity to practice the language on a daily basis and to share in the life of the community. For the major part of the year he is separated from his fellow American students, living and studying among Scandinavians at a "People's College" (residential school for continuing adult education) or some other specialized institution.

All Seminar students participate in the Introductory, Midyear and Final Sessions, where matters related to their studies, experiences and individual progress are reviewed and discussed. The focus of the Scandinavian Seminar program is an Independent Study Project in the student's own field of interest. An increasing number of American colleges and universities are giving full or partial credit for the Seminar year.

The fee, covering tuition, room, board, one-way group transportation from New York and all course-connected travels in Scandinavia is $3,800. A limited number of scholarship loans are available.

For further information please write to: Scandinavian Seminar, 100 East 85th Street, New York, N. Y. 10028.

Greek Week

In past years, the excitement of the Homecoming Football Game and the magnificently colored fall foliage have been highlighting factors of the infamous Greek Week at "Groovy U.V." This year, however unfortunate, there will be no football game, and if we're lucky we'll see a few scattered leaves clinging to exfoliated maple trees. Nevertheless, the traditional Greek Week will be continued with all the excitement and enthusiasm as displayed in past years.

Plans are in the making for numerous activities varying from the educational to the absurd, from guest lectures to chariot races to the Greek games, and of course, the rotating cocktail parties.

Greek Week is scheduled to begin on October 11, the Saturday of Parents' Weekend. There will be many activities throughout the course of the day, including, for the true sports who are up for real excitement, a soccer game at Centennial Field. For those who wish to see the work of some authentic Vermont artisans and experience traditional German customs, there will be an Oktoberfest on Redstone Campus.

Many of the houses are planning special events for the parents including cocktail parties and dinners. Delta Psi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon are planning an outdoor cocktail party for the "folks" giving them a little taste of the beer blasts of the 70's at UVM.

Greek Week is a light, fun-loving time for the Greeks, but amongst the fun and games there is a very important reason for the course of events. Greek Week is a concentrated effort on the part of all 20 houses to work together as one, to plan a series of activities for all the Greeks to participate in. During most of the school year, the houses work independently of each other organizing their own philanthropies, social events, etc. Greek Week is one time of the year that the spirit of the 800 Greeks at UVM becomes alive and overpowering.

A tremendous amount of work has been involved in planning what we hope will be a very successful Greek Week, so come on out everyone, drink up, and enjoy the fun.

The Exchange

by Alice D. Outwater
Counseling and Testing

The Fall season unwinds and it is a delight to see how beautiful the campus looks. It has surely received much attention this summer; the flowers and new trees are an innovation that we have been awaiting for many years. The fountain has already succumbed to the threat of frost but the fruit on the trees makes up for it. Benches are out and we look forward to enjoying them far into the semester.

The hamburger stand behind Billings is new too and a fine place for lunch on a sunny day. Meeting colleagues and learning from them has ever been a valuable part of college life; any encouragement we can get from the physical facilities is a real help. Try using them; think up more ways to interact and enjoy each other's diversity! For you interested in helping the community, try a visit to Volunteer Services in Billings

There is a varied list of important and useful tasks that need doing. You may find you can add another dimension to your own week as well as helping others.

There are still a number of homeless students in town; they felt the Referral Service for apartments in Billings was a good idea, but listings are not crossed off when taken which leads to much fruitless footwork and frustration. An up-to-date file would be appreciated. THE EXCHANGE is getting its poster and boxes up as soon as the printing is completed. Drop your comments in the Billings box – which is in situ or call them into X2068. We'll answer you if you leave your extensions; we'll mull over and pass on your ideas to appropriate parties; we'll attend to your requests. We'll respect your confidentiality. Nothing is impossible on this campus!

First Annual Business Career Day

Until students enter the working environment of the career they've chosen, they have varying expectations of what it will actually be like. Some of these expectations are upheld, but oftentimes false expectations lead to big disappointments. Undergraduate students need the opportunity to learn about their chosen fields before they get there.

In the past, UVM has offered no direct experience upon which to base their career expectations. Therefore, the Business Administration Department in cooperation with Career Planning and Placement is holding its first Annual Business Career Day. Professionals from the business community will be coming to talk with students about their careers.

Specifically, students will learn about job openings in their field, responsibilities and difficulties they may encounter, salary ranges, promotion possibilities, entry requirements for specific professions, and professional associations and societies connected with particular careers. Additionally, they will learn about resume preparation, interviewing techniques, as well as interviewing problems of specific fields.

Business Career Day will be Tuesday, October 14, 1975, in Billings Center, North Lounge. Business undergraduates should sign up for their career fields in the Business Administration office, 301 Votey, for morning and afternoon time slots. Each time slot can accomodate 15 persons in each field. Students can attend more than one specialty field discussion. The sessions begin at 9:30, 10:30, 11:30, and 1:30. Participants will include executives from IBM, GE, JC Penney, Holiday Inn and other nationally known corporations.

Students should feel free to ask any questions of the discussion leaders. Many fields present unique problems which often aren't discussed during an actual job interview. The business leaders are here to help answer some of these more sensitive questions and to provide a general background of their given field. Fields covered will be: Law, Accounting, Retail Management, Bank Management, Hotel/Restaurant Management, Public Services, Sales/Marketing, Industrial Management, Executive Development, and Insurance and Financial Planning.

Fiedler To Speak

"English Literature 2001" will be Leslie A. Fiedler's topic tonight, Thursday, Oct. 2 in the first lecture of this year's Distinguished Lecture Series sponsored by the Department of English.

Now Samuel Clemens Professor at the State University of New York in Buffalo, Dr. Fiedler has had a long and distinguished academic and literary career. Essayist, prizewinning poet and fiction writer, lectuerer, he is probably best known to the reading public for his Love and Death in the American Novel. His many essays on a variety of literary, social, and political topics have been widely reprinted and translated into several foreign languages.

The Lecture, open to the general public, will be in Ira Allen Chapel at 8 pm. A reception for speaker and audience will follow in the Dewey Lounge on the second floor of Old Mill.

The Distinguished Lecture Series is supported through the generosity of an anonymous UVM alumnus. Elizabeth Hardwick, advisory editor of the New York Review of Books, will appear on November 5; S. Schoenbaum, Shakespearean, on March 25; and John Aldridge, critic of contemporary fiction, on April 22.

Cunningham Newman Center

'Tis a privilege to live in Vermont, especially right now because... THE CREATOR HAS MADE THE WORLD — COME AND SEE IT!!!

Weekday Masses: 4:15 p.m.; Tuesday, 10:00 p.m.

Saturday: 4:15 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

Sunday: 9:00 a.m., 11:30 a.m., 4:15 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

On Monday evenings courses are being offered in the following areas:

Scripture (Jesus In the Gospels)

Basic Catholicism (for any persons who are interested in knowing more about Catholicism)

Liturgy (taken from the approach of its historical development)

CLIMB A MOUNTAIN!

--A fine way to get together, enjoy nature at this beautiful time of year in Vermont, and feel a sense of accomplishment, all at the same time. Sign up for the OVERNIGHT HIKE TO MOUNT MANSFIELD this weekend, October 4 and 5.

– Next Weekend: October 4 and 5, Father Richard Mythaik of the Society of Saint Edmund will be here at the Center to share with us at the liturgies.

BABY SITTERS NEEDED. We would like to start a baby-sitting service for the 11:30 Mass on Sundays. If anyone is interested in serving the Newman Center Community in this way, please contact us at the Center.

STAFF

Rev. Francis M. Holland, Director

Rev. Normand Nadeau, Associate Director

Sr. Clare Burgoyne, R.S.M., Campus Minister

Sr. Jeannine Mercure, R.S.M. Campus Minister

Rev. Gerald Ragis, Campus Minister

'Day For Night'

Truffault's Day for Night which won the Oscar for Best Foreign Film of 1973, will be playing at Century Plaza on Dorset Street Thursday afternoon at 4:00 p.m.

This special showing, sponsored by the Contemporary Cinema Class, costs only $1. Tickets were on sale this week and every week near the Billings Information Desk on Wednesday from 12:15 – 2:00. Tickets also are available at the door on Thursday afternoon.

Don't miss this great foreign film – it will probably have a short run in Burlington, so see it while you can.

Next week--check next week's Cynic.

$70,000 To Aussies

(CPS)--Even while Americans tighten their belts to make it through hard times, their taxes still subsidize the pursuit of knowledge.

The Congressional Record recently listed several uses of tax money that Congress appropriated, including:

$20,000 to study the blood groups of Polish Zlotnika pigs, and $70,000 to study the smell given off by Australian aborigines.

St. Anselm's

Remember-this Saturday, October 5, we will be going apple-picking, leaving St. Anselm's at 12:30. Come-and bring a friend.

Nancy will be preaching at both services on Sunday. The 11:30 a.m. service will be morning prayer. Future dates to keep in mind–

October 11: 10–12 noon – open house for Parent's Weekend.

October 12: 12:30 – luncheon for Students and/or parents.

October 19: Wood gathering, we'll leave following morning worship.

Protestant Ministry

SUNDAY

11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal); 6:30 p.m. – Service of The Word and Communion (Protestant) with supper following.

MONDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 8:00 p.m. – Prayer 'n Share, a time for informal worship.

TUESDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 10:00 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

WEDNESDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 10:00 p.m. – Compline, a brief service of prayer and songs to end the day.

THURSDAY

4:00–5:30 p.m. – Wine and Cheese, a chance to drop by and relax; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 7:30-9:00 p.m. – A time to share, an opportunity to share feelings and experiences of being new or being a freshman; 9:30 p.m. – Prayer Service for Protestant students in McAuley Hall (used by UVM) at Trinity College.

FRIDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

For information, please call Nancy Allen, Protestant Chaplain, or Geoffrey Schmitt, Episcopal Chaplain, at 656-3882.

Benefit for The Shaker Mountain School

U UTAH PHILLIPS AND ROSALIE SORRELS JOIN THE JOHN CASSEL BAND

Doors open at 8:30 Donations requested

Happening at THE STING Thursday

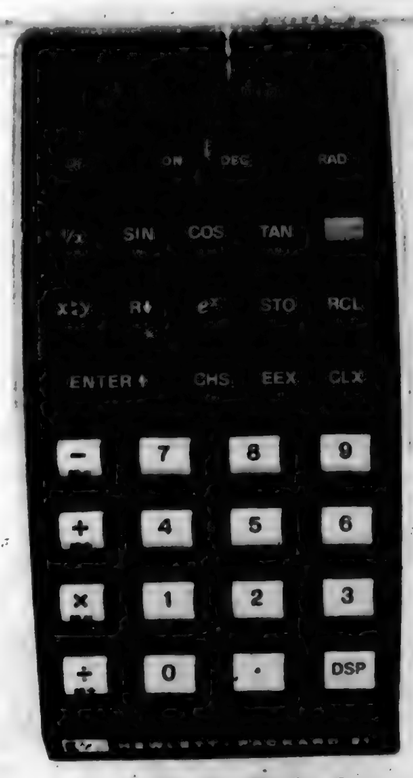
1100 of you people have forced us to continue selling the SMUGGLER'S NOTCH BASH BADGE

$5 off weekday lift ticket
$4 off weekend and holiday ticket
½ price on lessons
½ price on rental equipment

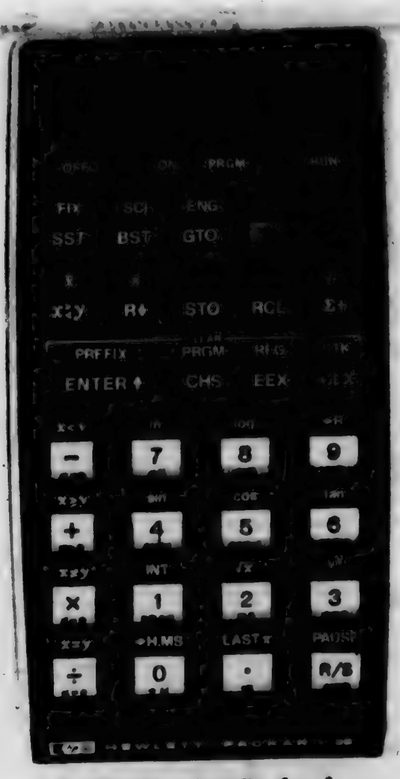
NOW PURCHASE FROM YOUR CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVES or at BILLINGS CENTER

OCT M - 27th T - 28th W - 29th 9-5 PM

The uncompromising ones.



The Hewlett-Packard HP-21 Scientific $125.00*



The Hewlett-Packard HP-25 Scientific Programmable $195.00*

The calculations you face require no less.

Today, even so-called "non-technical" courses (psych, soc, bus ad, to name 3) require a variety of technical calculations—complicated calculations that become a whole lot easier when you have a powerful pocket calculator.

Not surprisingly, there are quite a few such calculators around, but ours stand apart, and ahead. We started it all when we introduced the world's first scientific pocket calculator back in 1972, and we've shown the way ever since.

The calculators you see here are our newest, the first of our second generation. Both offer you technology you probably won't find in competitive calculators for some time to come, if ever.

Our HP-21 performs all arithmetic, log and trig calculations, including rectangular/polar conversions and common antilog evaluations. It's display is fully formatted, so you can choose between fixed decimal and scientific notation.

Our HP-25 does all that—and much, much more. It's programmable, which means it can solve automatically the countless repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces.

With an HP-25, you enter the keystrokes necessary to solve the problem only once. Thereafter, you just enter the variables, and press the Run/Stop key for an almost instant answer accurate to 10 digits.

Before you invest in a lesser machine, by all means do two things: ask your instructors about the calculations their courses require; and see for yourself how effortlessly our calculators handle them.

Both the HP-21 and HP-25 are almost certainly on display at your bookstore. If not, call us, toll-free, at 800-538-7922 (in Calif. 800-662-9862) for the name of an HP dealer near you.

HEWLETT hp PACKARD

Sales and service from 172 offices in 65 countries.
Dept. 658B, 19310 Pruneridge Avenue, Cupertino, CA 95014

*Suggested retail price, excluding applicable state and local taxes—Continental U.S., Alaska & Hawaii.

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded in 1983

Randy Jensen '77 ..... Editor-in-Chief
David Ryan '77 ..... Assistant Editor
Mark Valle '76 ..... Managing Editor
John MacDonald '78 ..... News Editor
Sue Perkins '78 ..... Feature Editor
Sari Bodi '76 ..... Arts & Entertainment Editor
Norm Robinson '77 ..... Sports Editor
Amy Weinstock '78 ..... Copy Editor
Deborah Powell '76 ..... Advertising Manager

SAGA: Back To The Old Den

Last year Saga Food Service came up with an excellent plan to relieve overcrowding in the den during the lunch hours of 11:00 a.m. – 1:00 p.m.

By only allowing money to be used during this period, and thus postponing the onslaught of coupon meal buyers, Saga turned a former zoo into a comfortable and enjoyable place to eat.

What happened between last year and this year?

Now off-Campus students are forced to wait for long periods of time behind coupon meal buyers who have alternative places on campus to eat. If they prefer to eat in the den they can arrange to eat either before or after this period.

Last year when this plan was implemented it met with general approval. On-Campus students understood why these rules existed and agreed to give their fellow students a break.

Why not implement the same plan again this year?

D.R.

Security Not Sufficient At Night

Recently, there have been incidences of violence occurring on campus which have concerned many students. Because, generally, women are physically weaker than men, and their physical natures more vulnerable to sexual crimes, women more so than men must be concerned about campus violence. This does not exempt men though from the possibility of attack. Whoever the victims are, the accosters at best must be apprehended, and, at least, their crimes prevented.

Yes, some say that circulating stories are just myth. But many know for a fact that the stories are true. But myth or truth, these stories have created fear in the minds of students. Not only does the University of Vermont have the responsibility to prevent violence on campus, they also have the responsibility to alleviate the fear that students now have. Why? It is not a privilege, but a right to be able to use the library at night. Students have the right to be able to go to their Evening Division courses without worrying about how they will get home safely. Clearly, we are all entitled to the use of campus facilities at night instead of being hampered by our own fears, and coerced by them to stay securely in our dorms.

But security measures are not sufficient. For years it has been a complaint that the path between Redstone Hall and St. Anselm's is too dark. No lights have been installed. And if they were, would they be turned on? Maybe not – after all, the other night, the lights in the passageway intersecting Living/Learning were off.

But lights really aren't the solution to the problem. An attack is still an attack, whether you are accosted in the light or in the dark. Students who take night courses hear rumors of plans for shuttle buses to leave strategic locations to transport students in the dark. But plans for something this costly are not being formulated. Neither are plans being organized at the library to have students leave en masse from the Library or Billings at designated times to East or Redstone campus. This is a project that security might be interested in designing.

What kind of patrol system is there at night? There must be a patrol system, but is it large enough to insure the safety of the students? Well, the budget just cannot accomodate a security patrol system of that size. Yet proponents of the tunnel which is now being built felt that the $500,000 expenditure was worth it if it saved even one life. (Meanwhile, the construction site creates an unsafe environment.) This dichotomy of safety should be questioned.

The issue of safety is crucial. Measures to prevent it don't have to be costly. To provide measures of safety, all that is needed is a little thought, organization and implementation of a plan to channel students about campus at night.

S.J.P.

letters to the editor

The Wrong Villians

To the Editor:

Your editorial in the Cynic of September 18 contains several statements which you may wish to correct. Perhaps you have been unable to get in touch with me to clarify the matter which you say "reportedly" involves Speaker O'Connor and myself. I would like your readers to know the facts of our involvement with the VPIRG issue.

I have no desire to "muzzle" VPIRG. In fact, I consider the involvement of students in public and consumer affairs a valuable experience. I sometimes disagree, as you might expect, but my rating with them is quite a good one as is my relationship with the staff and individual members.

In the last hours of the 1975 session of the Legislature, a resolution was about to be offered calling for an investigation of the VPIRG funding procedures. VPIRG members – Peter Franchot in particular – felt that the proper place for this discussion was at the University, and I agreed. I was able to help persuade the sponsors to let me as a legislative trustee, bring their concern to the attention of the University, and they in turn agreed not to introduce the resolution. VPIRG members were in accord with this and I carried out my part of the bargain by bringing the matter to the attention of the administration, expecting that it would be reviewed by them. It appeared, however, that the process had been established by the trustees and therefore was a trustee matter.

At the June trustees' meeting, it was agreed that this should be a topic for the October meeting when the students were back on campus. The Board of Trustees has taken no action or position at all.

The referendum, of course, was the decision of VPIRG, and I understand they have also offered to make a presentation at the October meeting.

To say that Speaker O'Connor or I have "insinuated that UVM funds might be cut" or "pressured anyone" to "cease student funding," or used "blackmail" or "strongarm tactics" – is simply not so.

I have taken no position on the billing mechanism. I would want to be sure that it was clear to the consumer what the terms of the sale are – and this, I think is quite consistent with VPIRG's own strong conviction on consumer matters.

You have the wrong villains here, and I hope you will correct the impression given in your editorial.

Very truly yours,
Louise R. Swainbank
Representative

Students Make VPIRG Work

To the Editor:

This letter is a response to M. de Totehill's attack on VPIRG in the Cynic of September 25. In his letter, Totehill states that VPIRG does not truly represent Vermont consumers, but is instead a "central agglomeration of power, used not by the students or people – but by the State itself." He goes on to declare that "Organizations... become (evil)...by separating themselves from real and radical positions of the people..."

While it is true that VPIRG could hardly be labeled "radical," it certainly doesn't have a cozy relationship with the powerful interests, as the funding controversy demonstrates. VPIRG has antagonized a few legislators, some of whom are also UVM trustees, not by slinging simple-minded, us-versus-them rhetoric, but by successfully bringing about change through research and lobbying. The changes that VPIRG has supported in its four year history – improved dental care, hearing-aid control, nuclear power control and others – are far more meaningful to the vast majority of everyday Vermonters than the fiery ideology of political groups that claim to represent the people of this state.

As a UVM student and a member of VPIRG, I have found VPIRG an open organization that encourages student participation. Some readers may be unaware that under some circumstances, it is possible to get academic credit for work on VPIRG research projects of the student's own design. VPIRG welcomes student attendance and involvement at its trustee and other meetings. During the 1974-75 academic year, I, a non-trustee then, attended most VPIRG trustee meetings. (Held at that time in Conference Room C, upstairs in Billings, Mondays at 5. Time and place for this year to be in Cynic.) At these short (15-20 minutes) sessions, I had always felt free to make suggestions.

As I stated earlier, VPIRG is not in league with the powerful interests. Its people do have a different point of view (from the State et al.),...and if VPIRG survives the October meeting of the UVM trustees, it will continue to work for Vermonters, provided it has the support and ideas of students. VPIRG has a small staff (three people) and a limited budget (available for inspection), so it is the students who make VPIRG work. I am proud to be associated with this group, and I hope this letter has cleared up a few misconceptions.

Tom Joslin
VPIRG trustee

Where's My Prize?

To the Editors of the Vermont Summer Cynic:

Gentlefolk, some weeks ago I won your summer writing contest. At that time there were some vague rumblings of a prize. Now, after three visits to your offices, and many leavings of name and address, I have still received no answer. Is there to be a prize as originally stated? If so would it be possible for me to receive mine? You, at the time of the contest, had my name and number. Not only did you not contact me to tell me that I won, but never returned any of my inquiries as would normally seem your duty. Your paper has released my story in two different issues; once in the original summer issue, and then again in the freshman arrival issue. I am very proud to have won your contest, however, it would be very nice (not to mention honorable) for you to fulfill your end of the obligation. I look forward to hearing from you some time in the near future. In case the summer issues have eluded you, my story was Tyrone Power was Short, Too.

Waiting in good faith,
Seth J. Lapidow

Editor's Note:

The Vermont Summer Cynic was an entirely different entity than the regular Cynic. The editorial board consisted of different editors than those now presently working for the Cynic. We have referred this matter to them.

B-PAC Wants Action

To the Editor:

B-PAC feels that it is time that the University take action regarding the parking problem in the CBW/Converse area.

We recommend the following action:

I. Ticket and/or tow commuter and faculty vehicles from the area.

II. Impose a limit on the number of permits sold for the area relative to the number of spaces available.

B-PAC feels that these changes will at least help ease the current parking problem.

Sincerely,
Richard King
Chairman
Buckham Political Action Committee

A Facist Bookstore?

To the Editor:

The University Bookstore is supposedly there to serve the student, yet a recent experience surely negates that fact. One of the services offered is that of printing on T-shirts purchased there. Perhaps it is naive (yet I think not) to assume that the choice of words is an individual perogative. Our intended choice of words obviously did not please the bookstore employee whom, incidentally, we support monetarily. There was no concrete explanation offered other than, "I'm sorry, I can't print this." Obviously, her moral repetoire does not include, "Free Tanis, Gorilla Fighters Unite." We feel it pertinent here to point out the difference between GORILLA AND GUERILLA. We were simply attempting to surprise a roommate with a house joke. Our only conclusion, therefore, is that the University store on this campus is a fascist organization.

Long live UVM red tape.

Judy Shlasko
Barbara Frank
Pete Condaxis

Streets, Trees, and Students Discussed

by M. de Totehill

In past issues of this paper, I have attempted to show how students and others have become acquiescent. They are convinced that this system of economics is natural and immutable, that one must follow the masses in complacency and immunization, that it is wrong to seek change beyond the limits of the bourgeoisie State, and that we are all isolated individuals competing to sell our labor-power to the Rulers.

"This is a new generation", there's no viable reason to accept any absolute morals or interference from those who disseminate the population for their own class interests. Now, from you gestation I hope will come some interest for a few ideas that have been kicking around for years.

Topic I: The Tunnel

To keep with the reasoning of the UVM tunnel we would have to build a few more. This is to insure that everyone will not get hit by those "antiquated machines." Why, just the other day I saw a dog get run-over in front of John Dewey! A tunnel ought to go there too, and another in front of Waterman and Old Mill. I think a better stand on this topic would be to close down University Place to all through-traffic. How nice it would be to have it quiet again. Perhaps one could get the impression that he or she is really on a campus and not on a race track!

Topic II: Co-op Book Shop

The S.A. plans a hot line with the necessary coordinating apparatus to help book buyers and sellers get in touch with one another. Although a co-op is needed, we do not need one that will take days to follow up a contact, etc. A more viable plan I suggest would be to solicit 50 cents from willing students and rent (on or off campus) a suitable space to display books with a catalogue of person, book, and price, and have there be a 10% surcharge for the services of the co-op to be paid at the time of sale. This way the store could build up a reputation and some capital, with an expansion of services in the future to cover new book orders directly from the professors (thus an alternative to the present UVM monopoly). All that is now needed are books, ideas, volunteers, and interest. Let's get up with it and make a Co-op Book Shop work.

Topic III: The Plight of UVM

I have heard it said by members of the Administration that what draws students here are the fine teachers; yet the faculty complains of departmental budgetry cuts, students of poor teachers, and an emphasis is put on lower division classes. Moreover, some think that UVM spends more money on administration than they ought to. Some claim this provides lucrative jobs for politicians wives and opportunities for local business interests. Thus it seems that UVM is cutting the more visible radicals from the University in hopes of recruiting greater financial aid from the state. This only proves that the first position of the Administration is quite incorrect. I think that UVM has failed drastically in conveying to students that the University is a fermenting, bubbling, exciting, and growing intellectual enterprise. In other words, a place of potential research industry. What they have proved is that people actually come here for easy degrees and recreation. They, the students, deserve a higher quality of education than that which the state provides. The only way to get it is by Student Power, by working for control of the University, and a radical transformation of both the University and the society in general. Student Self-Government! We must curtail the ability of Administrators to repress our need to refuse their way of life–the regimentation and bureaucratization of existence.

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank

Inspiration For The Unhappy

by Ron Tepper

Once upon a time there was a little sparrow who hated to fly south for the winter. He detested the thought of leaving home so much that he decided he would delay the journey until the last possible minute. After bidding a fond farewell to all his sparrow friends, he went back to his nest and he stayed for an additional four weeks.

Finally, the winter turned so bitterly cold that he could delay no longer. As the little sparrow took off and started to fly south, it began to rain. In a short time ice began to form on his little wings. Almost dead from cold and exhaustion, he fell to earth in a barnyard.

As he was breathing what he thought was his last breath, a horse walked out of the barn and proceeded to cover the little fellow with organic fertilizer. At first the sparrow could think of nothing except that this really wasn't the way he wanted to die. But, after the fertilizer started to sink into his feathers, it warmed him and life began to return to his body. He also found that he had enough room to breathe.

Suddenly the little sparrow was so happy that he started to sing. At that moment a large cat came into the barnyard and, hearing the chirping of the little fellow began digging into the pile of fertilizer to see where all the music was coming from. The cat finally uncovered the little bird, scraped him off and ate him.

Now, this story contains three morals:

1. Not everyone who shits on you is your enemy.
2. Not everyone who takes shit off you is your friend either.
3. When you are warm and comfortable, even if it is in a pile of shit, keep your mouth shut.

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

NEWS: Margo Howland, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Well, Peter Duquette, Steve Wells, Scott Curtis, Charles Kountze.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt.
ARTS: Eloise Boyle, Cathy Brown, Martha Hess, Tricia John, Barbara MacFarlane, Jose Santana, Kaye Tatro.
COLUMNISTS: Ken Markowitz, Peter Cobb, Gary Chilson, Larry Seiden.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Sarah Clay, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis, Linda Mansfield, Martha Hess, Louisa Boinke.
SPORTS: Debi Bloom, Rita Bruce, Randy Briggs, Pat Taves, Chris Brown, Scott Curtis.
ADVERTISING: Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

OCTOBER 2, 1975

Illegal Games Somes Bus

by Peter

During the past few years wisely passed a number of co that protect consumers from de state has also beefed up the whose job it is to protect co crimes.

Bait-and-Switch

Bait-and-switch advertising the book. Fortunately it is no Business people lure in potent product at a low price. The ad and unattractive and is used store.

Once inside the salesperson buy a more expensive version salespeople use such gimmicks one do you, this model over h well worth the extra costs."

Examples of unlawful ba Vermont law, include the fa item at the advertised price show the item.

Remember, if you respo gives you a hard time by tellin of junk, the seller may be bre be sent to the Consumer Frau Burlington.

Threat or Coercion by Debt

Threats to collect unpa business can abuse or threato uncollected debt. A debt language nor can they call w the business or company Collectors cannot call one's do so and cannot bother a de hours of the night.

Debtor's protections w unnecessary harassment by past obnoxious collectors ha the night threatening law su carrying out.

Deceptive Pricing

Under Vermont law, advertisements. For exampl saying that the buyer is savi was really only .79 the store cannot advertise that the pr stores unless they are in fa than their competition. No mart" unless their prices stores. Also it is illegal to a price or to represent a pric than the price paid directly

Consumer Fraud Division o

The Consumer Fraud D empowered to handle investigations, file law su draft consumer legislation, should be sent to their of action can be taken to prev

collegia

© Edward Juli

ACROSS

1 Large letters, for short
5 Small
9 Red Cap and Bass
13 Do not include
14 Clean the floor again
16 —— shark
17 Wingless insects
18 Jose or Buddy
19 Beige
20 W.C. Handy's forte
22 Wedding band.

Illegal Games Somes Businesses Play

by Peter Cobb

During the past few years the Vermont Legislature has wisely passed a number of consumer protection regulations that protect consumers from deceptive business practices. The state has also beefed up the Consumer Fraud Department whose job it is to protect consumers from "white collar" crimes.

Bait-and-Switch

"Bait-and-switch advertising is one of the oldest tricks in the book. Fortunately it is now against the law in Vermont. Business people lure in potential customers by advertising a product at a low price. The advertised item is usually chintzy and unattractive and is used only to get the buyer into the store.

Once inside the salesperson tries to get the customer to buy a more expensive version of the product advertised. The salespeople use such gimmicks as "you really don't want that one do you, this model over here is a little more expensive but well worth the extra costs."

Examples of unlawful bait-and-switch techniques, under Vermont law, include the failure to reasonably display the item at the advertised price and the refusal by the seller to show the item.

Remember, if you respond to an ad, and the salesperson gives you a hard time by telling you that the product is a piece of junk, the seller may be breaking the law. Complaints should be sent to the Consumer Fraud Department in Main Street in Burlington.

Threat or Coercion by Debt

Threats to collect unpaid debts is against the law. No business can abuse or threaten a debtor in connection with an uncollected debt. A debt collector cannot use obscene language nor can they call without disclosure of the name of the business or company that the collector represents. Collectors cannot call one's place of business if asked not to do so and cannot bother a debtor at home during unreasonable hours of the night.

Debtor's protections were passed to help people avoid unnecessary harassment by aggressive collection agents. In the past obnoxious collectors have called people in the middle of the night threatening law suits that they had no intention of carrying out.

Deceptive Pricing

Under Vermont law, it is illegal to publish deceptive advertisements. For example if a store advertises yo-yos at .79 saying that the buyer is saving 20% but that the former price was really only .79 the store is breaking the law. The seller also cannot advertise that the price is a bargain compared to other stores unless they are in fact selling the item at a lower cost than their competition. No store can call themselves a "bargain mart" unless their prices are consistently lower than other stores. Also it is illegal to advertise a retail price as a wholesale price or to represent a price to be a factory price if it is higher than the price paid directly at the factory.

Consumer Fraud Division of the Attorney General's Office

The Consumer Fraud Division was established in 1967 and empowered to handle consumer complaints, conduct investigations, file law suits, promulgate regulations and to draft consumer legislation. Any and all consumer problems should be sent to their office in Burlington so that prompt action can be taken to prevent fraud against Vermonters.

Ten-speeds: Gearing Down for the Bicycle Backlash

by Neil Klotz

It was bound to happen. For awhile, as ten-speed sales soared and every city council boasted a bike path plan, it seemed that bikes would be hailed the saviours of modern transit: the no-gallons-per-mile answer to the energy shortage. But now, prepare for the bicycle backlash.

Two harbingers of the coming backlash surfaced recently. One, a survey by a car insurance institute, purported to prove that most car-bike accidents were caused by bikers. With some glee the institute heralded the fact that 99% of the bikers involved in accidents were injured as opposed to only 1% of the motorists.

The other omen arrived more subtly in an editorial in the Christian Science Monitor bewailing the ten-speed fad. "Ten years ago it was a souped-up Chevy; now it's a 10-speed bicycle," grumbled the Monitor writer. Ten-speeds really have little to do with ecology, physical fitness or fun, he said, they're just another damnable way for these kids to be "in."

Both of these clips somehow fused in my head as I was almost side-swiped in a bike lane for what seemed like the fiftieth time this week. Behind the standard "Get-off-the-road-expletive" combination, sat the Sphinx-like automobile brooding self-assured over the roads of America, chanting, "Back to the Chevy, children. The roads aren't free. 100 bikers get it for one of me."

Predictably, bikers have never been much more than toys for American industry. As bike sales doubled in the past five years and European models flooded the market, American bike-makers desperately tried to grab some of the ten-speed market. So desperately, in fact, that most of them just slapped a derailleur, hand brakes and the word "racer" on their old clunkers and crossed their fingers. So you don't have to cross yours when you buy, here are some basic tips:

1. Buy at a bike store. Ten-speeds found at large chain department stores are poorly made as well as inexpertly assembled – usually thrown together by some stock boy right after he blew up the basketballs. If you ever needed to replace the brake calipers, overhaul the headset or just about anything else, you couldn't get replacement parts. Even if you stole next door in the dead of night and cannibalized parts from the obnoxious ten-year-old's Sears racer, you couldn't get them to fit yours because of imprecise workmanship. To collect some strange looks, just go into any department store and ask to see their bicycle service department.

A good service department is a touchstone for any good bike shop. A well-stocked workshop is a better guarantee than a salesperson's smile. Also, don't buy where they won't let you ride. You can't buy a bike by brand or component list, since all manufacturers note that components are subject to change without notice and component makers say the same. For this reason, consumer ratings of ten-speed models are usually out-of-date and misleading. So buy a particular ten-speed only if you like the way it rides, not because Consumer Reports received a good test model of it.

2. Lugged frames are best. In the $100–$200 range, which is where you should stay for your first bike, look for a lugged frame; that is, one in which the steel tubes are connected by sleeves rather than just welded together. In addition, the lugs should be tapered, not just cut straight across the tubing like a pipe joint. Unlugged frames are either heavy and unresponsive or light and seriously weak. If you hadn't guessed, most unlugged frames are made in the U.S.

American bike-makers have weakened their frames further by removing the top tube to make a "women's model." Unless you're planning on riding in a dress, women should buy "men's models" or one of the European "unisex" bikes and adjust the saddle forward to reach the handlebars comfortably.

3. Avoid overlapping gears. Unknown to many, not all ten-speed bikers have ten speeds. The combination of five rear and two front gears, or sprockets, can create ten different speeds (5x2 = 10) – but not always. If bike-makers don't put together the right combination of sprockets (and guess which country most often doesn't), the overlapping gears will result in the feeling that you're shifting but not doing anything.

Unfortunately, even with a mini-calculator it takes awhile to figure out whether gears overlap, much too long if a salesperson's hovering over you. But there are some good gear combinations for touring and general use you can ask for. These include: a rear sprocket cluster ranging from 14 teeth to 32 teeth with two front sprockets of 52 and 38 teeth or 52 and 40 teeth. Another good match is a 14-34 rear cluster with 45- and 52-teeth front sprockets.

One other thing: for once-around-the-dorm usage three speeds will serve you as well as ten, but a five-speed bike is usually a bad deal. They cost only $10 to $20 less than a ten-speed, are no less complex and don't ride much better than a three-speed.

Ten-speed freaks or not, for your brushes with the bicycle backlash the two best books on do-it-yourself repair I've found are Derailleur Bicycle Repair (XYZYX Corporation) and, for more esoteric jobs, The Complete Book of Bicycling by Eugene A. Sloane (Trident Press).

A Club for Everyone : The Outing Club

by John Nininger

Occasionally everyone has gotten an inner urge to escape from the normal routine. And so, in the beginning, man created "the weekend." This gave the hard working man a chance to relax with his family, and the hard working student a chance to spend time with his friends. The weekend has become a sacred moment, usually saturated with alcohol and good times. But there are always some weekends which require a new adventure, or a relief from all the wild, rowdy parties.

Some people like to spend the weekend "between the sheets," catching up on all the sleep they've missed. However, this is usually accompanied by boredom and depression when they wake up and find everyone gone. The ambitious ones, however, know where to find that unusual experience they need to break the monotony. Whether it be three hundred feet up on a small, six-inch ledge, anchored only by an old rusty piton hammered into a crack in the rock, or riding uncontrollably over the white waters of a madly rushing river, with hopes that under that approaching haystack of white foam there isn't a huge rock about to be enveloped by aluminium, it will be an unforgetable experience.

Anyone who has gone on an Outing Club trip knows the enjoyment that can be had. The thrill of doing something adventurous that you've never thought you could do, and the fun of meeting new people, can make it a long remembered weekend. It doesn't take any Joe-Jockulan to get to the top of Camel's Hump. If you live on Redstone Campus and walk to the main campus everyday, you're in fine shape! If you're interested in activities like rockclimbing, canoeing, spelunkering, or backpacking, the Outing Club provides the opportunity for you to try it. No previous experience is necessary to participate in any of these activities. There are experienced members of the Outing Club who are willing to lead trips and teach you. Last Sunday, an experienced spelunker (cave explorer) took several people into a deep cavern. Most had never been in anything more cavernous than a fallout shelter. Maybe you could even share a specialty of your own by going on a weekend backpack trip and cooking a gourmet dinner from the roots of a forest fern, or point out some constellations on a clear, cool night, high on a mountain, somewhere.

Other activities that the UVM Outing Club has done include: lectures and slide shows given by famous mountain climbers, canoeists, and outdoorsmen; kayak building and instruction; first aid and mountain rescue seminars; a square dance; and trail maintainence on Mt. Mansfield. Other activities must be brought up by the members and any interested persons at the weekly Outing Club meeting on Wednesday evenings at 7:30. Membership is free in this Student Association funded group. The president of the club, David Mainer, has been working to secure more funds in order to enlarge the supply of equipment and cut down the cost of transportation. At the meetings (places are posted weekly), the plans and schedules of upcoming trips and activities are announced.

So why not check out the UVM Outing Club and see what it can do for your weekends? At the same time, find out what you can do to make it a better service to the rest of the University. For more information on up-to-date outings and activities, check the Outing Club bulletin board in Billings, or this section of the Cynic each week.

Women's Caucus Column

We would like to remind everyone that there is a Women's Caucus Meeting TODAY, Thursday, Oct. 2, at Noon at Blundell House on Redstone Campus. Come bitch at us and give us your ideas! This week's column is written by Wenna Matthias, a member of the Caucus and on the University staff.

Women and Careers

This article is completely off-the-cuff. It is my personal opinion and belief based on a short life's experiences. One of those beliefs is that all individuals have a right to their opinions, and that we all have an obligation to give them their air-time. I've been lucky enough to grab some air-time!

I feel that it is important for the students at UVM to be in a constant state of planning and thinking about their futures. This is particularly important for the female students because of women's lack of life models and encouragement in growing up to look forward to very much more than how handsome our husbands will be, how many brats we'll have, and what we'll name them. (Obviously there are exceptions to this; I maintain that they are still exceptions.) Starting from our primer readers, boys receive more models, more variety in career goals than girls. If you don't believe that get in touch with Mary Ellen Martin in the English Dept. She'll put you in touch with some convincing research. Therefore, I contend that the women on this campus are more apt to waste the $20,000 they invest in their education here. This is simply because we are more likely to arrive on this campus with little or no idea of what we want to do and where we want to go with our selves.

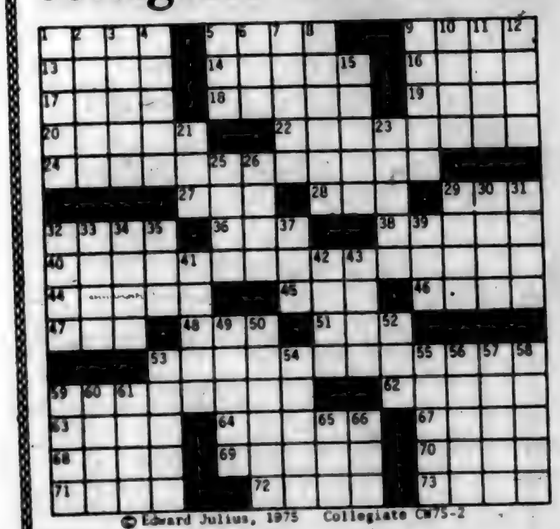
It is important to me that today's women do "something" with themselves, because I personally am going to be very ripped-off if the women of this country again retreat in to their respective, comfortable shells as they did after we won the vote. I have a stake in the next generation (even though I don't plan to have any children): I don't want those girls to grow up with only the career choices of housewife, nurse, or secretary. No criticism intended; I am a good secretary. I just want more of a choice for future women. I believe that this depends a great deal on the number of models they will have to follow, look up to, believe in, and see themselves in. The few we've had may have spurred a few of us on, but I'd be willing to bet most of us were as able to relate to the reality of those secluded few as we were able to relate to the possibilities of becoming a boy (and thereby gaining the openings denied to us as girls). Most of us need lots of everyday people to look at and say "Hey! I'd like to and could do that." Anyone that tells me that the human race hasn't gotten where it is without pioneers, who by definition are not followers, will be perfectly right. The people who stand out in our history were exceptional people by any time's standards. They were the few that rose above everything. Most of us here at UVM are not that type of person. We're everyday people who have a right to do something satisfactory with ourselves and not just what society's expectations dictate. Men are as trapped by this as women. We all need the freedom to choose. I believe we need a continuing revolution of societal mores to accomplish this atmosphere of choice. I'm looking to us, the people that are here now to start this revolution.

Because I am a woman, I'm looking to my sisters to help me change society - simply by helping themselves to their rightful opportunities and by giving themselves a wider range than traditional society has offered them.

One of the ways I see young women in college doing this is by trying to discover enough about themselves to have more than a vague goal that when scratched becomes the "but I'll probably get married" ending. By questioning and searching themselves to see what each individual wants for herself, she may seek what she wants to do with her life. This is a simple but constant process of communication with the self. It can often be accomplished through talking with other people about where they're going. Get your friend talking about it and you'll find yourself thinking about you. If you really get into it, or want to, and can't, there are lots of people around campus whose jobs are simply to listen and talk with you. They are trained, skilled individuals who are there for you, but only if you want them enough to seek them out. If in your talking you discover that one of your strongest values is based around fairness for the consumer, perhaps you ought to get out of elementary education and talk to the folks at OVP about UYA internship researching consumerism. Is your declared major where you really want to go?

Obviously, your career is important to you. It is important to me and to the rest of society. What you do with your career will have a direct influence on what some future girl will aim for and eventually do with hers.

collegiate crossword



© Edward Julius, 1975 Collegiate CW75-2

ACROSS

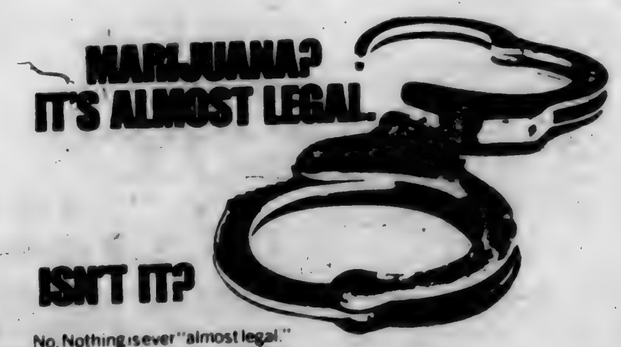
1 Large letters, for short
5 Smell
9 Red Cap and Bass
13 Do not include
14 Clean the floor again
16 —— shark
17 Wingless insects
18 Jose or Buddy
19 Beige
20 N.C. Handy's forte
22 Wedding band, usually (2 wds.)
24 Wasp (2 wds.)
27 —— Paulo
28 —— Park, Illinois
29 Smart —— whip
32 Colorful solo
36 Roman 586
38 Hollyman and Hines
40 Colors on Costa Rica's flag
44 Pablo Casals' instrument
45 More than enough
46 State of unconsciousness
47 Old TV show, "—— King"
48 Mauna ——
51 Siesta
53 Decorations of honor (2 wds.)
59 Horse in old song (2 wds.)
62 Inexperienced
63 Marsh bird
64 Nautical
67 Boleyn
68 ——-European
69 Double—— bookkeeping
70 Word pair in Hamlet line
71 Mr. Musial
72 A few
73 Dispatch

DOWN

1 College in Maine
2 Jim Ryun ran —— in 3:51.1
3 Oriental measure of weight
4 Tennis racket material
5 Association (abbr.)
6 —— Fuehrer
7 Last Greek letter
8 Elaborate style in art
9 Wide awake
10 Geometrical points
11 Deserve
12 Cozy
15 Lawrence Welk's dance
21 —— your old man
23 Pulled a hockey maneuver
25 Arabian watercourse
26 Sudden jerk
29 Guthrie
30 Poor living area
31 Confused
32 Forms a curve
33 Smell
34 Inactively
35 Shoemaker's tool
37 Old pro
39 Telephone-dial trio
41 Nonsense
42 Welk's —— and a-two
43 Wallace's brother
49 Clean a blackboard
50 Stage parts
52 Cribbage piece
53 Bridge structure
54 Slow, in music
55 Near East natives
56 Miss Adoree
57 Part of a carpentry joint
58 Mortimer ——
59 Spanish cubist
60 Declaim vehemently
61 Verdi heroine
65 Part of a phonograph
66 City in New York

LAST WEEK'S ANSWER

P	A	R	A	P	E	T		C	A	P	I	T	O	L
A	D	I	P	O	S	E		A	S	A	R	U	L	E
R	E	V	E	L	E	R		R	E	T	I	R	E	S
A	L	E				R	A	M				B	A	S
S	I	T		L	M	O	T	I	V	E		I	T	E
O	N	E		M	A	R	I	N	A	S		N	E	E
L	E	D	G	E	R	S		B	M	P	R	E	S	S
		A	R	T				P	O	I
S	L	U	L	G	I	N		R	E	U	N	I	F	Y
T	A	U		E	N	A	M	O	R	S		N	A	E
E	S	I		D	I	S	P	O	S	E		T	V	S
P	A	D			S	S	T			R	O	T
P	L	O	S	I	V	E			E	R	A	S	U	R	E
E	L	E	A	N	O	R		R	E	C	O	D	E	R
S	E	S	T	E	T	S		S	U	T	T	E	R	S



No. Nothing is ever "almost legal." Especially marijuana. Last year alone 420,000 people were arrested for marijuana offenses. Of those, 90% were for simple possession.

But now a growing number of Americans are thinking seriously about changing the present marijuana laws. In fact, some laws have already been changed. The state of Oregon has successfully de-criminalized the personal use of marijuana. The American Bar Association, The National Council of Churches, Consumers' Union and The National Education Association have urged other states to do the same. An inevitable chain of events has begun. Become part of that change.

Help us help you.

NORML

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Spotlight on Director Susan Selig

Director Susan Selig

by Jose Santana

On October 16, Aristophane's Lysistrata directed by Ms. Susan Selig will open at UVM's Royall Tyler Theater. It was after twenty years of war with Sparta that Lysistrata was originally produced for an Athenian audience in 411 B.C. Lysistrata is a comedy that is concerned with war and women – the organization, the irregularities, and the final success of a sex-strike against war. "The novelty of Lysistrata," Susan said, "is that in it there are six sizable women's roles and that it portrays women amongst women, dealing with their own problems. It gives women an opportunity to act. "However," she added, "it is not necessarily a positive play for women. The basic joke of the play in Greek society was that women were taking initiative. In general women in Greece were home-bodies; they stayed home. The idea of women taking over the Acropolis was absurd to the Greek audience. Aristophanes makes fun of women as much as he does anything else," she said.

Susan Selig is presently a senior at UVM. In the spring of '73 she won her first major role as Penelope in Happy Birthday Wanda June. Since then she has appeared as Mrs. Rocket in Fumed Oak, Rosie Probert in Under Milkwood, the second witch in Macbett and Maurya in Riders to the Sea. She was stagemanager of the Playtimers Tour in 1974, The Dragon's Tale, and in 1975, she wrote an adaptation of a children's story The King of the Castle. With the help of Sally Reit, she directed that play for the Playtimer's Tour. The Playtimers Tour performs at several elementary schools over the Christmas holidays. In 1974 she directed Arthur Kopit's Chamber Music, a one act play.

As costume assistant in the '74 Champlain Shakespearean festivals she appeared briefly as a lady-in-waiting in Hamlet. This past summer, an apprentice at the festival, Susan played Timadra in Timon of Athens and Mrs. Webb in Our Town. Both were directed by Edward Feidner.

This summer, Susan spent much of her free time reading various translations of the play, learning all she could about the domestic life of Greece, and reading some of Aristophanes' other works. Subsequently, she chose a translation that was not coy about sex. She said, "Sex jokes will not be innuendos, but will be right up front. Sex will be treated blatantly because, to today's modern audiences, the play's comedy stems from the sex. But to the Greeks, sex was respectable, a part of their religion. Therefore, to deal with their comedy, one must present it unmagnanimously."

Should children come see Lysistrata? "Definitely not," says Susan. She said that she wouldn't bring a child to this or any other play unless she had read it or knew of it beforehand.

Unlike the characters in works by contemporary authors such as Tennessee Williams and Edward Albee, the characters in Greek drama are left open. They are not locked into a script with one specific function. With this liberty, Susan will try to create characters in the play which the audience can identify with and respond to just as certain masks were easily recognized by Greek audiences.

With Lysistrata, Susan hopes to break down some of the stereotypes about women and Greek aristocracy. She hopes to present a play that will entertain and recreate the spirit of Greek comedy.

Storks, Birches, and Grapes with Living Lit.

by Sari Bodi

Last Thursday night the Living Literature program presented their first oral interpretation showcase this year. Through prose, poetry, and drama, the performers introduced this art form to newcomers while also reinforcing prior appreciation of it.

The newcomers may have found oral interpretation similar to acting although the demands upon an individual interpreter can be more than those of an actor. An entire short story may be acted out by a single interpreter using changes in facial expressions, tones of voice, and body fluctuations to change characters.

Martha Workman welcomed the audience and in school-marmish style pseudo-lectured with her first piece, "Of Modern Poetry," by Wallace Stevens. With glasses perched on the end of her nose, the intellectual character argued that "poetry is the act of the mind." Martha proved her versatility later in the program when she returned as a little boy making his first confession. Gone were the vestiges of effete snobbery and in their place stood the trembling Jackie with his Irish brogue from "The First Confession" by Frank O'Connor. When Jackie confessed his "terrible" sin, the wish to kill his grandmother with an axe, Martha switched to the kindly and not-too-worried priest to advise the distraught cherub.

Following Martha on the program came Yvette Knight with two poems by Ahmasi. She sensuously described why she would like to be the "Water of Your Bath" in a poem by that name: "I would memorize each and every muscle...Roll on, over and off your satin skin." In the second poem, "I Made it Through This Weekend Without You", her voice acquired an angrier tone, as it advised the audience to "Sit back and wait for life if you dare!"

Millicent Preston next animated one of James Thurber's fables. Thurber is a favorite for interpreters because the style of his writing adapts so well to story telling. "The Stork Who Married a Dumb Wife" tells the tale of a stork housewife who isn't suspicious of her playboy husband because he says he is out delivering human babies until 5:00 in the morning. When she finally catches on, Millicent, as the enraged wife, sarcastically drawls, "Hello, you phoney obstetrician."

Using loneliness as the topic of the following set of poems, Jamie Williams combined "The Vacuum" by Nemerov and "The Geranium" by Roethe. She conveyed especially well the empty life of a man who allows his dying Geranium to be disposed of, rather than admit his loneliness.

Denise Cammock downed the aristocrats with her interpretation of a Dunbar poem entitled "My Sort of Man." Delivered in a rythmic Negro dialect, the poem ended its attack against the aristocracy with, "The aristocrats ain't got it all, for much to their surprise; That's one of earth's most blessed things, they can't monopolize."

Guest performer, Tim Boisbert, began by telling the audience about a group of birches in a park in his hometown where Al, the town bum, sits indefinitely. Al once traveled to 42nd St. in New York City where he had "a hell of a time... saw 37 visions of heaven and had his pockets cut out..." Al's back to his park now. What does this all have to do with Tim's selection, "Birches" by Robert Frost? Well, as Frost says in the poem, "One could do worse than be a swinger of birches." Tim effectively portrayed Frost's regret over the dying art of birch swinging.

Living Literature's director, Jennifer Cover, performed a scene from Ossie Davis' Purlie Victorious. Set in the 'deaf old south', this play is a spoof on white-black relations. With professional ease, Jennifer changed roles; from Captain Cotchipee, the white plantation owner, to the conniving black minister, to Ludibelle Jessebelle Jenkins, the minister's sweet young ploy. To persuade Captain Cotchipee to donate money for his church, the minister uses Ludibelle as a lure. As an added incentive, the minister awards the fat old captain a special honor; "Great White Father of the Year." However, none of these devices serve to ply the stingy captain from his precious money. Jennifer's second selection, "Wild Grapes" by Robert Frost is a favorite of hers as well as anyone who has ever seen her perform it. Students who have taken her oral interpretation course have probably seen it, but the vitality and excitement which go into each individual performance make it something which never loses its appeal. We fly with Jennifer, as the little girl, to the top of the tree and desperately cling with her there. Then, we follow her to the ground when she plays the smug older brother, laughing at the predicament he got his sister into.

The Living Literature Program will be producing four more showcases in 216 Commons, Living Learning Center. The next one will be an "Evening of Prose" on Oct. 14. The other dates for performances are: Oct. 30, Nov. 11, and Dec. 4. Bob Amelio and Jackie Patterson will be producing an oral interpretation workshop for high school students in November, and Keith Gaylord is directing The Zoo Story for an October 15 performance in 155 Commons. If all of these showcases are as entertaining as the first, they are well-worth seeing. Anyone who has not been exposed to oral interpretation at UVM, should definitely experience it.

Living Lit: (from left) Denise Cammock, Jennifer Cover, Jamie Williams, Photo by Henry Lewis
Martha Workman, Lynn Harvey, Millicent Preston, Tree, Tim Boisbert, Yvette Knight

Album Review

Clapton Is Back

by Ron Tepper

E. C. Was Here
Eric Clapton
RSO Records 4809

It's kind of funny. Just as soon as it looks like Eric Clapton is down and out, he bounces back with a bullet. Where we find him now is where we found him ten years ago, and that (of course) is playin' the Blooze...

E.C. Was Here should convey, without a doubt, that Clapton is truly one of the greatest Blues guitarists around. Side one starts out with the classic, "Have You Ever Loved A Woman," with Clapton and George Terry exchanging some real bad licks. "Presence of the Lord" follows, and has never sounded better with beautiful harmonies between Clapton and Yvonne Elliman (Jesus Christ Superstar). This side fades out with "Drifting Blues," laid back and sweet.

Side 2 opens with a song from the "Blind Faith" days entitled "I Can't Find My Way Home." Although the harmonies fall short of soaring of Stevie Winwood, it still measures up to par with some impressive acoustic finger picking from Clapton, and mood progressions conveyed nicely by Dick Sims on organ. From here on, Clapton takes off. "Rambling On My Mind" is Clapton at his best, hitting those high notes with kindly precision. The album closes with a sped up version of Bobby Bland's "Farther On Up The Road" which can only be described as a real bailbuster. Clapton soars from Jaime Oldaker's drum shuffling and vivid bass lines from the incomparable Carl Radle.

Clapton usually looks down on "live" albums, but this is one he has to like. Why? Simply because he never sounded better. If you think Clapton is a "has been," think again. Eric Clapton is back!!!

Fleming Collections

The Fleming Museum's fall public lecture series begins Wednesday evening, October 8, when Antoinette Kraushaar will speak on "Henry Schnakenberg: Artist and Collector".

Director of the Kraushaar Galleries in New York City, and a noted collector in her own right, Ms. Kraushaar is particularly familiar with the Fleming Museum Collection and its major donor, Henry Schnakenberg. This talk was arranged to coincide with the Fleming's current exhibition, "Collectors and Collections," a visual profile of six donors whose gifts have helped shape the Museum collection since its formal founding in 1873.

The public is invited to the informal talk which will begin at 8 p.m. in the Museum's Marble Court. Admission is free.

CBS Season in a Nutshell

by Eloise M. Boyle

The new television season offers us shows that are typical and old-hat, but there are a few refreshing programs. For all of you who have time to watch TV, I'll be reviewing the new shows on each of the networks. This week: CBS

Saturday: One new show – Doc a situation comedy involving a doctor (Barnard Hughes) and his patients, lower-middle class people who come in and trade quips with him. It's rather dull all the way around.

Sunday: 7:00 – Three for the Road starts out the new "family hour" established by the FCC. This show is a disaster. A father and his two sons riding around the country in a camper named "Zebec," learning all types of moral and ethical lessons, is not my idea of an interesting hour. It's not even good fare for kids because it simply is not believable. Alex Rocco stars.

Bronk – Nothing new in this series about a private-eye turned special investigator to the mayor. However, Jack Palance is a marvelous actor and just might be able to pull it off.

Monday: Phyllis – This series, an offshoot of The Mary Tyler Moore Show, stars Cloris Leachman as a zany widow on the loose in San Francisco. She's got a 17-year-old daughter and an eccentric mother-in-law living with her. So far, it's very popular, but I think that if they created a show called The Guys Who Sit Behind Mary in The Newsroom, it would be a hit.

Tuesday – This is CBS' big night. At 8:30 there's Joe and Sons. It's a situation comedy involving a widower trying to raise two sons. Richard Castellano stars as Joe, and Barry Miller and Jimmy Baio as his sons. Jerry Stiller co-stars as the friend of the blue-collar worker, Joe. This is one of the few truly funny comedies on the fall line-up.

At 9:00 there's Switch. Now Switch isn't much of a switch. Here we have an ex-con man (Robert Wagner) and an ex-cop (Eddie Albert) who team up and form a detective agency. Very ordinary private eye fare, but the performances of Albert and Wagner, as well as a blend of comedy, make this a watchable show.

At 10:00 the most controversial show of the season airs. This is, of course, Beacon Hill. It's the story of a wealthy Irish-American family, the Lassiters, who live in Boston in the 1920's. It also involves their servants. The family is headed by Ben Lassiter (Stephen Elliot), a strong-willed Irishman who worked his way to the top from the streets. Of his children, his daughter Fawn stands out. She's a "free spirit" who has numerous affairs and wild parties. The most prominent figure downstairs is the chauffeur, Brian Mallory (Paul Rudd), who is fresh off the boat from Ireland. He has a roguish charm that works on everyone, especially women, and Rosalyn Lassiter in particular. Beacon Hill is having a bit of trouble getting started, but this show is the best thing that's hit TV in a long time. The acting of the whole cast is superb, and the producers are trying to bring us some subject matter other than cops and robbers, doctors and silly comedies. Beacon Hill is definitely the best new show of the season.

Wednesday – Kate McShane starring Anne Meara is a lawyer show. Kate is an Irish girl out to prove that women can be objective defenders. Miss Meara's performance is good, on the whole, and so are those of her co-stars, Charles Haid and Sean McClory. But, as in the case of most of the new shows this fall, the lines have been used before.

Friday – Big Eddie stars Sheldon Leonard as an ex-Mob Boss turned sports arena owner. Sheree North co-stars as Eddie's wife, an ex-showgirl. The material written for this show is not funny enough to keep it going.

Next week: NBC.

Believe it or Not!

The greatest demon barber on record is Gerry Harley, who shaved 130 men in 60 minutes with a cut-throat razor at The Plough, Gillingham, Kent, England, on April 1, 1971. In setting a marathon record he ran out of volunteer subjects!

The first beauty contest was staged at Atlantic City, New Jersey, in 1921, and was won by a blue-eyed blond with a 30-inch bust, Margaret Gorman.

century PLAZA 1&2
NOW SHOWING 7:15 9:15
Opposite Keyes, Dorset St. 863-6963
"An incredibly literate, astute, lovely-to-look-at, charming and chilling movie that is guaranteed to open both your eyes and mouth in shocked disbelief. I want to warn that this film isn't for the faint-hearted, nor those given to blushing. A sparkler you won't forget for a long time." —Liz Smith, Cosmopolitan
A film by Roger Vadim
Every act of love can be repeated ...except one.
Charlotte

BOLTON VALLEY
STUDENT SKI CLUB
$10 discount pass
$5 weekdays
$7.50 weekends
$2.50 nights
OR, IF YOU PREFER:
STUDENT AND FACULTY SEASON PASS $125.
STUDENT AND FACULTY MIDWEEK PASS $75.
25 MINUTES FROM BURLINGTON
Reps in Billings
For more information call 434-2131
9:30-3

yarn cellar
...orberg, Vermont's foremost ...adquarters for the needleworker. ...perienced or beginner, you'll ...preciate our vast, in stock, ...lection.
Locations: Burlington Shelburne Barre St. Albans

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON
ENTER OUR FABULOUS PINBALL WIZARD
Every Friday Afternoon 4 - 7
Enter as often as you like Great Prizes each week
147 MAIN ST.

ART PRINT SALE!
Over 2000 Lithos, Etchings, Silk-Screen Reproductions and Limited editions!
...an Billings Classic
MARSH LOUNGE
Wed. Thur. Fri.
Oct. 8-9-10
10AM 'til 6PM
• Old & Modern Masters
• Contemporary
• Art Nouveau
Sale Special PICASSO $1.50
SALE NOW IN PROGRESS AT GALLERY 40
214 College St. 862-3693

m Review

pton Is Back

by Ron Tepper
e Here pton cords 4109 kind of funny. Just as s it looks like Eric is down and out, he
s back with a bullet.
we find him now is ve found him ten years
d that (of course) is the Bloom...
Was Here should without a doubt, that n is truly one of the st Blues guitarists
d. Side one starts out he classic, "Have You oved A Woman," with n and George Terry
ing some real bad licks.
ence of the Lord"
, and has never sounded
r with beautiful nies between Clapton
vonne Elliman (Jesus Superstar). This side out with "Drifting
laid back and sweet.
e 2 opens with a song
he "Blind Faith" days
d "I Can't Find My Way
e." Although the nes fall short of soaring vie Winwood, it still es up to par with some sive acoustic finger
g from Clapton, and progressions conveyed by Dick Sims on organ.
here on, Clapton takes Rambling On My Mind" ton at his best, hitting high notes with kindly ion. The album closes sped up version of Bland's "Farther On Up
oad" which can only be ed as a real ballbuster.
n soars from Jaime
r's drum shuffling and bass lines from the parable Carl Radle.
apton usually looks on "live" albums, but one he has to like. Why?
y because he never d better. If you think n is a "has been," think
Eric Clapton is back!!!

eming Collections

e Fleming Museum's fall
c lecture series begins
sday evening, October 8, Antoinette Kraushaar speak on "Henry kenberg: Artist and tor".
irector of the Kraushaar
ries in New York City, noted collector in her right, Ms. Kraushaar is ularly familiar with the ing Museum Collection its major donor, Henry kenberg. This talk was ed to coincide with the ing's current exhibition, ectors and Collections," a l profile of six donors
e gifts have helped shape luseum collection since its l founding in 1873.
The public is invited to the mal talk which will begin p.m. in the Museum's ble Court. Admission is

RINT
r Zoo Litho.
Silk Screen
ductions and ited editions!
Sale Special
PICASSO $15
Dove Gouache OGRESS AT
y 4th
863-3695

Right Here On Our Stage

Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra

One of the largest concert attractions ever to fill the stage of Memorial Auditorium appears on the University's Lane Series next Sunday, Oct. 5, at 8 p.m. – the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra of Hamburg, Germany.

The company of over 100 musicians and singers includes an orchestra of 45, a mixed chorus of 50, six soloists and the conductor, Jurgen Jurgens.

The program will be Claudio Monteverdi's "Vespro Della Beata Vergine" (1610), generally regarded as the first genuine oratorio. Monteverdi, a seventeenth century Italian composer, wrote a large quantity of vocal music, including madrigals and operas, the best known of which is Orfeo.

The Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra of Hamburg, was founded in 1955, by its conductor, Jurgen Jurgens. It was originally the Choir of the Italian Cultural Institute of Hamburg. It's composed of 45 young men and women whose singing has been acclaimed throughout Europe by critics and audiences alike. Its tours of Europe and the Middle East have been triumphant, as were its United States debut performances in 1972.

The Choir, which has recorded extensively for Telefunken, and Philips and Archive, has won many international prizes, including the coveted Grand Prix du Disque.

Conductor Jurgen Jurgens was born in Frankfurt, Germany, and received his musical training there and in Freiburg. Director of Music and Lecturer in the Theory of Music at the University of Hamburg, Jurgens is particularly noted for his recordings of Monteverdi and of choral works by contemporary composers.

Soloists for Sunday's performance are the noted English tenors, Ian Partridge and Nigel Rogers; two German sopranos, Barbara Schlick and Ine Kollecker; and the Dutch bass Lieuwe Visser and the German bass Berthold Possemeyer.

Monteverdi's "Vespro Della Beata Vergini" is structured into a wide variety of parts, including an intonation for a unison choir; a toccata for a six-part choir and orchestra; a concerto for a tenor and contralto; a psalm for two sopranos, two tenors, two basses; an eight-part double choir and orchestra; another psalm for a ten-part double choir and orchestra; a sonata supra for unison choir and orchestra; and several other combination of voices and instruments.

The church music that constitutes the "Vespro Della Beata Vergini" (or Marion Vespers) was dedicated to Pope Paul V when it appeared in 1610. Composed in a modern style, it stands in sharp contrast to the Mass on Themes of Gombert, written on the old Netherlands polyphonic tradition. In the Maria Vespers, Monteverdi ingeniously put the new dramatic music to the service of the Liturgical text and thereby created a modern oratorio.

In his work, Monteverdi relied strongly on the liturgical sequence, of which the principal sections – the five psalms, the Hymns, and the Magnificat – are also the center of his work. Unlike the pure liturgical vesper compositions in which every psalm is accompanied with Gregorian antiphons, Monteverdi used solo "concerti," which borrows somewhat from the antiphons, but also contains some free verse.

Tickets for Sunday's performance, $3.50, $5.50, and $6.50, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The next Lane concert will be the eagerly awaited Dance Theatre of Harlem, a classical ballet company directed by Arthur Mitchell on Oct. 22.

A few season tickets ($5) for the Charlie Chaplin movie series are also available in the Lane Office, as well as single admission tickets for all of the films ($1).

Movie Review: Hearts and Minds

'This Damned War'

by Dawn McGinnis

Hearts and Minds, a documentary on Vietnam by Peter Davis, was awarded the Oscar for Best Documentary for the Year in 1975. This film was shown in Burlington for two days last week. It's unenthusiastic reception could have been due to many factors: 1) there was no advance publicity, and the newspaper ad had no supporting materials such as explanatory pictures, reviews, etc., 2) people in this area have never heard of the movie and didn't want to take a chance, and 3) people are sick of Vietnam and don't want to see a movie about it.

Hearts and Minds is a propaganda film. It shows the suffering of the Vietnamese people in a myriad of ways. Their suffering and death comes from shooting, bombing, napalm, defoliant, and torture. Sandwiched between these scenes are interviews and footage taken of political leaders, returned POWS, historians, and ex-military men. There also are excerpts of speeches by presidents who perpetuated the war – Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, and Nixon.

The view presented by this filmmaker was almost totally one-sided. He wanted to impress upon the viewers what he feels are the roots of war: the football games played in school, the "never give up" attitude of the returned POW's, and the philosophy preached in the homes of parents who are "for" the war.

Davis shows the young men of America who went away to the war for the glory of their country––and came home years later after being a POW, maimed, or in a coffin. Some of these men spoke proudly of what they had done, while others were filled with bitterness. One man, who had come home in one piece, cried when he thought about what he would do if his children were bombed. He remarked, "It's not very easy to cry anymore."

This film can do one of two things to the viewer. It can make a person hostile, bitter, and he'll say, "Haven't we seen enough of this damned war?" This person will think Hearts and Minds is propaganda by some Commie.

The other person cries when he sees the naked child with skin burned off from napalm; he gasps when a soldier shoots a Vietnamese point blank in the head and the blood gushes out. This person thinks the film represents "The Truth About The Vietnam War" and holds it up as an example of a good documentary.

Who is right? If the movie ever returns to Burlington, or if it is shown in your hometown, see it. See it and sympathize, or see it and feel that you have been taken for a ride by the filmmaker.

Just keep in mind that regardless of which side the film favors, it still shows a facet of the Vietnam War––a war we all want to forget, but never will.

Duelling Guitars: Blues vs. Jazz

by Paul Prior

Primed, lit, psyched, or even whipped up – Choose your favorite phrase indicating extreme anticipation, and you'll have pin-pointed this reporter's feelings as he entered Middlebury's fieldhouse for Saturday evening's guitar duel, Larry Coryell's 11th House and Roy Buchanan. Coryell and Buchanan both have impeccable reputations in their fields; Coryell has been kicking around the jazz-jazz rock spectrum for quite a number of years, and Buchanan has been celebrated as one of the all-time best blues guitarists ever heard.

The first thing I noticed was an extreme lack of energy and anticipation on the crowd's part. At most concerts I've attended, there has been more than enough frisbee hurling, wild yells and gut-shaking screams. Perhaps it was Middlebury's famed sophistication, or just plain tiredness, but the gym looked more like the sight of a Knights of Columbus Bar-B-Que than a rock concert. There were no seats to speak of, only a thin blue plastic floor covering, and way in the back, the bleacher bums. A fairly "rep" crowd, though the gym was dotted with an assortment of dregs from the UVM/Burlington community.

Coryell appeared shortly after 8:30 and played an acoustic solo. He was joined shortly after that by bass player John Lee and keyboard player Mike Mandel. After one piece by the trio, drummer Jerry Brown took his seat behind a transparent set of skins, and the show got movin'. The 11th House I had expected were not present...I owned a copy of their debut album put out early last year, and it featured quite a different line-up. Randy Brecker played trumpet, Danny Trifan played bass, and Alphonse Mouzon was featured on drums. What made the original 11th House unique was the uncanny guitar/horn interplay between Coryell and Brecker. When Brecker left to form a group of his own (Brecker Brothers), Coryell lost a major force integral to the existance of the 11th House. With the departure of Mouzon, the group became just another back-up band for Coryell.

The evening was not without highlights. The replacements are more than adequate, especially drummer Brown, who seems to have graduated from the Billy Cobham school for drummers. Coryell turned in a virtuoso performance. No matter who he surrounds himself with, one can be sure of hearing some incredible fingerwork. The first few numbers were unrecorded. Soon Coryell announced songs from their latest release, Level One, most of the songs featuring fine musicianship on all counts, but nothing memorable. For me, the last three songs were the highlights, "Diedra," "Adam Smasher," and "Cover Girl." The only song performed from their debut album was "Adam Smasher;" This seemed to suffer the most from the absence of a trumpet. In all Coryell was good, but the rest of the group failed to transcend typical jazz rock – I've seen it done much better by Cores and Company, who'll be here on the 7th of November.

Roy Buchanan has been in my record collection for a couple of years now, ever since I saw him perform on a WNET–TV special several years ago in New York. He is able to produce a wide range of effects using only his trusty axe. The major problem for Roy has been that of finding worthy back-up musicians. His guitar is so distinct, yet the bands he records and tours with are always mediocre at best. This Saturday was no exception – The back up men looked as if they climbed right out of the manure pile, into the pick-up, and then to the gig. What can you say about an average bar band elevated to playing with one of the world's best guitarists? Very little. The second song they played was Johnny B. Goode. Most bands I've heard usually save this as a final number, nosirree, not these boys. What was even more laughable was that this got the entire audience on their feet! Those that hadn't passed out in puddle of unknown origin got up and got in to some good time, good'n'loud rock and roll. Yup, Roy even played "Hey Joe" and a few bars of "Foxy Lady," an ode to Jimi. Highlights included Roy's stunning rapport with the audience, which included such gems as "Pass me that bottle." One enlightened bopper tossed Roy a hat, which he promptly wore. Extreme volume and lack of interest prevented me from staying to hear him finish; needless to say, except for flashes of brilliance on Roy's part, his appearance was a major disappointment.

Can't say what next week will bring; there's been a slew of new releases, so it could be anything. Until then, over and out, onward and upward.

Vermont Photography '75

by Martha Hess

Saturday, September 27, marked the opening of Vermont Photography '75 at Robert Hull Fleming Museum sponsored by the Northern Vermont Artists Association in coordination with the museum. The contest was open to all residents of Vermont.

Quite a few Vermont photographers have taken advantage of this opportunity to have their work displayed and possibly to win one of two or more cash awards. Although photographs fill wall and table space in three large rooms in the museum, few would be likely to find the exhibit tedious, for the quality of the work is generally impressive and the subject matter diverse.

A large portion of the show is devoted to Vermont scenery, of course. In this category black and white entries are generally superior to those in color, which have a tendency to resemble oversized picture postcards. A number of works from this category will be chosen to tour the state after the exhibition closes at Fleming Museum.

Besides the usual landscape photography, the exhibit includes some interesting figure photography, very expressive portraits, carefully composed still-life, and provocative social exposees. Within these categories, subject matter is most important, and, as with any regional endeavor, the subject matter chosen by a majority of contestants retains a particularly distinctive Vermont flavor.

And that's the way it should be. In an area so rich in natural beauty, who could resist the temptation to photograph its renowned landscape or, for a more innovative effect, photograph a nude cradled in the hollow of a rock formation or lying leisurely in a stream. In a state so suffused with its own generations - old character, it would be impossible, if not foolish, to neglect to photograph the wise, strong faces of Vermont's men and women or the pleasing symmetry and simplicity of their aging, yet ageless homes. And it would be unforgiveable for Vermont's photographers not to have caught the vacant gaze of the poor or the effects of the influx of corporate industries and cosmopolitanism which threaten to keep them that way.

In some work, however, subject matter was considered secondary. There were an interesting series of photographs employing special techniques such as magnification, over-exposure, artificial coloration, and the addition of supplementary materials. In a few instances several photographs were arranged sequentially or photographs of the same subject were taken and fitted together to produce unusual effects.

The exhibition is a good one and worth anyone's time. The winners will be chosen this week by the contest judge, Nathan Lyons, Director of the Visual Studies Workshop in Rochester, New York. On October 3 the exhibition will again be opened to the public through November 3.

'Rags and Bones'

by Therese Bundo

Last Friday at 4:00, the University Players presented the Royall Tyler Revival of the 1974-75 season: an hour of zany characters lethargically dusting dandruff from the piano man's shoulders, unsuccessfully (though devotedly) trying to escape from a locked trunk or listlessly blowing bubbles on the four rather stomach-churning "Lemmon Sisters;" it was an hour of talent borrowed from a year of productions; it was a well spent hour.

The ten scenes were interspersed with comments or background on each by the emcee, Paul Ugalde, as he sat in a regal chair sipping sherry.

Several highlights of the melange included singing by the Jets gang from West Side Story, a feather-dusting solo from The Real Inspector Hound which gave the entire plot in under one minute; a duet from Ionesco's Macbett, and the aforementioned sweet little Lemmons. And then there was Humphrey, from The Knight of the Burning Pestle, prancing around in his multi-colored pantaloons while squeaking about his love to his lady fair. He must have been happy about something, his sweet one said, because he was prancing and squeaking even higher at the end of the scene.

Anytime there was a pause, and even when there wasn't, a mysterious hooded figure walked by calling out Rags and Bones, or Joan of Arc creaked in complaining that her pants were rusty and that she must do "something about those voices.""

One can't give credit here to all the characters although it's due, but both the piano fingers (owned by Steven Freeman) and the lighting crew deserve mention. The whole group obviously had a lot of fun during the production as did the audience. Watch for the next Friday at 4 production – it's sure to be excellent if this was any indication of the level of entertainment the University Players offer.

CAREER IN MINISTRY

...in HOLY CROSS, a religious community of men serving the community of man as teachers, counselors, parish priests, campus ministers, ministers of social concern and overseas missions.

for brochure write:

HOLY CROSS FATHERS
BOX C
835 Clinton Avenue
Bridgeport, Conn. 06604

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11322 IDAHO AVE., # 206
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474
Our research papers are sold for research purposes only.

IS IT POSSIBLE YOU "CENSORED" YOU SEE YOUR ... IT IS!
7:15 & 9:10 PM
IF YOU DON'T STOP IT... YOU'LL GO BLIND!!!
TOPAR FILMS, INC.
SFD RELEASE
A CALLIE-LEVY FILM
SEE THE MOST RIDICULOUS CAST OF CHARACTERS EVER ASSEMBLED. YOU'LL HOWL AT THE ANTICS OF:
"HARRY THE SEX MANIAC" • "USCHI SAZZOOM"
"DO IT AGAIN MATILDA" • "SUSIE SUPER FAN"
"SMALL WORLD'S GREATEST LOVER" • "HORRIS, THE PIRET PEDDLER"
"THE SWANEE RIVER KID" • "SCOTTY THE SHEEPHERDER"
...AND EIGHTY MORE CRAZIES WHO WILL KEEP YOU IN STITCHES FROM BEGINNING TO END!
The stage attraction of the decade becomes the greatest entertainment event in history!
Bill Cosgrove presents
JAMES WHITMORE
as Harry S. Truman in
GIVE 'EM HELL, HARRY!
EVES AT 7 & 9:00 PM
SAT. & SUN. 2 PM
NOW ON THE SCREEN
BURLINGTON PLAZA
CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862 5070 ANYTIME

WE'RE THE GREATEST
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
from N.J. (Dynomite) Tops
Sept. 29-Oct. 4 - Canyon
Oct. 6-Oct. 12 - Wide Open
Oct. 13-19 Spoonfeather
Oct. 20-26 Triads
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9
Mon. – Thurs.

Ah, yesss...
THE RED DOG
is re-opening this Friday - Oct 3 rd
under new mangement
GET TOGETHER AFTER THE CONCERT LIVE BAND

CONCERT DANCE
THIS FRIDAY
8 PM - PATRICK
JAMES COTTON
JAMES MONTGOMERY
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE DOOR
UVM STUDENTS $2.50
GENERAL ADMISSION $3.50
DOORS OPEN 7:00

Cynic Interview : Rosalie Sorrels A Travelin' Lady

by Sari Bodi

Rosalie Sorrels will be appearing at The Sting tonight, along with U. Utah Phillips, John Cassel, and Sparky Rucker, in a benefit concert for the Shaker Mountain School of Burlington.

Over a cup of tea last Sunday, this Cynic interviewer learned more about folk singer Rosalie's career, personal history, and ideas.

Cynic: How did you begin your career in music?

Rosalie: I've sung since I was a little girl. I didn't sing professionally, though. During the time I was married, I started taking a folklore course at the University of Utah where I got interested in collecting old folk songs. They were mostly regional songs from the Salt Lake City area...a lot of Mormon songs.

Cynic: Did you go out among the people and interview them to collect these songs?

Rosalie: Oh, yes. I really enjoyed that. I did a lot of things that were kind of fun. I used to go on a local television program. It was a woman's show where they'd cook something and then I'd sing a few songs and say I was looking for old songs. Millions of people would call in. Anyway, I got a lot of songs. I made my first record then, called Folk Songs of Utah and Idaho. My next one was a collection of various songs I had collected; some old ballads, Mormon songs, and mining songs called Rosalie's Songbag. I did one album that was just songs of the Mormon pioneers which I never liked very much because they dubbed in a choral group in the background.

Cynic: Where were you performing at this time?

Rosalie: I sang in ski resorts, really a drag, and occasionally at folklore conferences. I suppose I got more confidence about singing during that time because I started doing some writing, though I never sang any of my original songs in public. I got invited to the Newport Folk Festival in '66. I made an album that was half Bruce (Utah) Phillips' songs and half songs that I had written. That was the first time I'd sung them for anyone. I really still like that album pretty well. Then I got together with Mitch Greenhill and did two albums with him. I also sang with his band for awhile in California. When my marriage broke up, I decided I had to do something to make a living so I became more and more a singer-songwriter.

Cynic: Where do your ideas for songs come from?

Rosalie: What I do is more oriented towards personal experience... things that happen to me.

Cynic: Do you think that is one of the best methods...taking from personal life?

Rosalie: No, not necessarily. Actually, I think Utah Phillips is one of the best songwriters I know and he's written about a lot of other things. I wish I could but I find it difficult to write from anyone else's point of view.

Cynic: Have either of you written songs that other recording artists have performed?

Rosalie: Other people have done several of his songs. I can't think of anyone who's recorded my songs except one time Paul Cantor took a song I wrote the tune to and one verse and put it on the "Jefferson Starship" album. It made me a lot of money. I don't think of it as a song I wrote. It's a song called "The Baby Tree."

Cynic: Was it a traditional song you found during your collecting days?

Rosalie: It's basically a children's poem that a friend of mine, a very old lady named Olive Bert, taught to me. She said her mother used to sing it to her but Olive's tone deaf and couldn't remember the tune...so I wrote a tune for it and then wrote another verse. I copyrighted it for no other reason except I was copyrighting all my material. If I'd been looking for a song for the "Jefferson Airplane," that'd be the last song I'd have thought of. But Grace Slick was having a baby then... you know China or God. On the album she did a marvelous drawing of a baby tree with babies hanging from the branches.

Cynic: You've known Utah Phillips for a long time. Do you usually travel and sing with him?

Rosalie: No, very rarely. We went on a tour this spring together, which was very successful, but that was the first time we've ever really done that. We don't sing together. Occasionally we sit and swap stories and reminisce... he'll sing one and then I'll sing one and we'll talk about what we've been through. That's fun. Neither one of us sings harmony very well.

We're both really into the European concept of cabaret performing where it's live theater as much as it's singing. All the songs relate to one another and all the raps in-between too, so that it makes a whole story when you've finished the show.

Cynic: Do you use set stories when you talk to the audience or do you think of them while you're performing?

Rosalie: It's a little bit of both because I've done it for so long. People request stories I've done before. I usually have a concept of what direction I'm going to go in. I have a pretty good idea of what songs I'm going to sing although I don't carry a list around with me. I kind of pick a trip to go on with a song for the beginning and a song for the end suggesting the theme.

Cynic: What kind of stories do you tell?

Rosalie: They're generally true stories. Some of them are set pieces – jokes or vignettes that go with the song I'm singing. In one of my sets I use material about what it's like being a women... what it's like getting older, to have children, and to try to sing professionally and take care of children at the same time. So this set begins with the fact that I've just become a grandmother and how I'm not particularly ready for that and what it's like to get older in the face of the determined effort of the consumer-oriented public to make you feel disgraceful to get older and how I don't give a damn if they make me feel like that... I'm going to grow old gracefully. In that set, I tell a funny story about a little old lady who has a run-in with the establishment and gets them in a particularly funny way. Now that isn't a true story. It's basically a dirty one.

Now that isn't a true story. Another story I tell is... about how I got thrown out of high school for wearing red silk stockings. I relate that to my daughter's rebellious behavior. They had a rule against wearing any kind of silk stockings. They really hated the redness of mine. They suspended me for three days and so when I went back I had cut my hair off in a ducktail, which was popular then, and I dyed it black with a silver streak in it. I wore a black turtleneck, black shirt and black stockings, and I'd taken two brightly colored scarves and threw them over my shoulders so they hung down to my ankles. I looked really strange but they didn't have any rules to cover me on that so they couldn't send me home. They called my mother but she thought it was great. In fact, she taught me to be like that. She taught me you shouldn't put up with bullshit.

Cynic: It seems that your lifestyle corresponds with the women's liberation philosophy, yet I've read that you really aren't concerned with it...

Rosalie: A lot of people ask me about that and I've had a chance to really think about it. I think that women's lib has a lot of incredibly important issues involved – politically it's right at the core of things with population control and individual rights. I'm a humanist basically. I feel that men have as many traps as women do. I don't accept the idea that men are responsible for my dilemmas. There are men who have actively interfered with my life, but by the time you are as old as I am... I'm 42... if you haven't realized that you dig your own holes, you're in terrible trouble. Certainly when you're young, you need someone to blame things on and you need to fight, but by the time you get to be my age, you really have to be doing something in spite of what anybody's doing to you.

Cynic: I notice in the reviews about you that you were compared to other recording artists as a female Kris Kristoferson or a female Ramblin' Jack Elliot. What do you think of these titles?

Rosalie: It's a silly comparison. I've been compared to those two, as well as Utah, mainly I think because I was 33 years old before I started doing this so they can't figure out what woman to compare me with. And my lifestyle includes a lot of drinking and staying out all night. I'm also someone's mother and not the conventional barfly type. They can't figure out where to place me. I don't represent a helpless female who needs to be taken care of. I guess it's also because I tell a lot of stories and have a similar attack towards performing to Jack and Utah.

Cynic: Do you get tired of traveling?

Rosalie: I like it, though I do get tired of it. Actually, I came to Burlington so I could get off the road for awhile. I want to start a music place. It's going very slowly. I'm going to have to go back on the road for awhile to make some more money because I don't ever make enough where I'm able to just say, 'Well, I guess I won't do that for awhile.'

Cynic: Where are you going on tour now?

Rosalie: First I'm going to Madison, Wisconsin and then Ann Arbor, Michigan and to the Chicago area and then back to Saratoga Springs. I'm also going to Boston where I'm doing a television show.

Cynic: Are you coming back to Burlington after your tour?

Rosalie: I'm taking another short tour... just places that are close by – New Jersey and New York. After that, I hope we'll have a more definite idea about the music house.

Cynic: What kind of music place are you planning? Will it be in downtown Burlington?

Rosalie: Bob Durand is in charge. We're looking for a place in the downtown area. What I want is a music club for people who are really interested in listening to music. I would have to charge a cover charge because I want to bring in well known artists and they won't come if you don't pay them.

Cynic: What kind of music do you want to bring to this club?

Rosalie: I'd like to eventually get into everything besides folk and country. I like the idea of having some jazz and some cabaret performers. I'd also like some theater and some square dances to bluegrass music. You really have to educate your audience to what you're doing.

I was really convinced that this would be a good place to do this. Last April Utah and I sang in a folk festival here and it snowed while we were singing. Any place where 700 people could stand outside turning blue for three hours listening to someone who can't get their guitar in tune because it's too cold is a good place.

Cynic: What type of places do you usually perform in?

Rosalie: All different. My favorite place to sing is the "Great American Music Hall" in San Francisco. It's very elegant – looks like a high class whorehouse. Sometimes I sing in coffeehouses. I don't always like to sing in bars – some are pretty noisy. If I have a band and I'm playing for dancing, I don't expect anybody to be quiet. But then I don't tell stories either. If I'm just there by myself and it's noisy, there's no point to my being there. You can't dance to me.

Cynic: Would you have any suggestions for a folk singer starting a career?

Rosalie: It's so hard. People ask me how to get recorded. You have to figure out what you think and how to say what you think. If you have anything worth listening to, people will listen. The less general you are and the more directed toward one notion, the more chance you have of being noticed. One of the things that first made it easy for me to get noticed was that I was the only person who knew Mormon songs. I grew from that.

Cynic: Did you ever want to be very famous?

Rosalie: No, I would like to make a decent living by doing what I like to do. I have some books and records I'd like to do. I want the people who like them to hve them. I do not want people going through my garbage or tearing off my clothes. I don't want every creep in the Village coming up to me and sitting next to me so they can get their name in Rolling Stone.

Rosalie's new album, her eighth, Always A Lady on Philo has just been completed and will be released in November. She recently edited an anthology of songs and poems of women's experience titled, What, Woman, and Who Myself, I Am. The book contains poems by such poets as Sylvia Plath and Anne Sexton and songs, including songwriters Dorie Previn and Rosalie, herself.

"The book was meant to be read from beginning to end," suggested Rosalie as I flipped through it from end to beginning. "It has an idea," she added. "I tell people that because they don't think of reading a songbook in that way. The idea behind my new album is very similar to the continuity of this book, although the songs aren't the same." Rosalie said that she uses one of the poems, "I Have Had to Live with My Face" by Diane Wakoski, to quote to photographers who attempt to put make-up on her.

Perhaps a verse from one of Rosalie's songs, a song included in the book, will help describe her:

Oh, I've gotten to be quite a rambler,
Going by land and by sea.
Once it was aprons and dustpans and such,
But now I'm a travelin' lady."

Law Tests Lure Entrepreneurs

by Anthony Schmitz

(CPS) – In a tangle of frayed nerves and sweat-beaded brows, about 112,000 persons each year lock horns with the Law School Admissions Test, LSAT.

The fight is for one of an estimated 37,000 positions in law schools around the country, and for many the test will be a major factor in determining whether they will be admitted to a school of their choice.

A handful of companies around the country have found this nervous battlefield perfect territory to turn a profit. They offer courses designed to help students study for the tests and maximize their scores, promising in one instance that "there IS a difference."

But administrators of the LSAT claim that the only significant difference is that persons taking these courses are anywhere from $85 to $225 poorer after the course.

Administrators claim that the LSAT measures "intelligence qualities that develop gradually and types of knowledge that one accumulates over a long period of time." No evidence shows that a review course or book will help any more than studying the test guide provided with the $13 LSAT fee, administrators say.

There is "no evidence that the courses really help test scores, and if there is, we've never seen it," according to Robert Wiltsey, program director of the law school tests.

Persons in the review course business, however, claim that the LSAT administrators are only protecting their self-interest by claiming that the review courses can't help.

Test administrators "have a vested interest in defending the validity of the test as an accurate measure of ability," said a spokesperson for the New Jersey-based Law School Admission Test Review Board, Inc. The spokesperson, who didn't want to be identified, claimed that test scores improved by taking the course his firm offers as well as other review courses.

The Review Board's program offers a 20-hour course, taught by attorneys for $85. Actual results are difficult to pinpoint since only about 20% of those taking the course each year return a card supplied by the company score they received on the 800-point test. The number of students taking the test each year is "confidential information."

The review board spokesperson claimed, however, that the LSAT administrators themselves say that test scores can be expected to increase by 35 or 40 points for persons taking the test a second time. The course offers pupils a chance to take the test in a simulated setting, he said, giving them a head start similar to taking the test once before.

The success of review courses, the spokesperson claimed, spurred the recent addition of the sample test in the LSAT handbook.

An eight-session program offered by Stanley Kaplan Education Center of New York for $225, boldly advertises that "There IS a difference!!!" But Kaplan explained that the claim refers to the difference between his test preparation program and others.

Course graduates receive an average score of 600, Kaplan claimed, while the overall mean for persons taking the test is 522. The mean score Kaplan cited was on a 20% non-random return of information cards handed out to persons taking the review course, and is not based on a scientific study.

Wiltsey of the LSAT board pointed out that there is no way to tell what those students might have scored on the test if they hadn't taken the review course.

No fraud suits have been filed against any of the firms, according to both LSAT administrators and review course spokespersons. There "is no basis for a suit," Kaplan said. "There are no guarantees, so what can you say? But if we can't help someone, no one can."

According to the Review Board spokesperson, they have "never had a complaint," although some who have taken the course still didn't earn high scores on the test. "But some people are stupid and will never do well on the test. Some people just aren.t capable of scoring 700."

Law school deans across the country are as reluctant as LSAT administrators to recommend the courses.

Saratoga Folk Festival

The second annual Saratoga Folk Festival, featuring musicians, folklorists, a mime troupe whose performance runs from fire-eating to enacting Brecht, and a crafts fair, will be held October 4, on the Skidmore College new campus green.

The musicians, nearly all of whom have appeared at Caffe Lena, include U. Utah Phillips, Rosalie Sorrels, Thomas Mitchell, The Bob Warren Band, David Amram, Sparky Rucker, Bill Staines, Huxtable, Christensen and Hood, Charlie Chin, and Calliope's Children, a steel band whose repertoire ranges from pop tunes to Bach.

Bagpiper John Pedersen will open the festival at noon, and Al McKeaney, the noted road stories archivist, will serve as emcee.

The clowns, jugglers, fireswallowers and actors of 'Flash in the Pan', a Rochester-based mime troupe that for several years has opened the Rochester Philharmonic's young people's concerts, will present a stage show and stroll among the audience.

Kathy Radcliffe, producer of the festival who has been doing free-lance record promotion and performer management in Austin, Texas, says that secondons in a hot air balloon will be made if the weather is right.

The festival is sponsored by Skidmore College and the Saratoga Arts Workshop and is free.

news

Secret S

by Steve Wells

Things are coming down to the wire in the search for UVM's new president. The Trustees' Search Committee hopes to recommend its three choices to the full Board of Trustees at its October meeting, but the chairman of the Committee, Robert E. Boardman, still classifies the work as "confidential, and extremely delicate."

According to Boardman, the Committee has gone over dozens of published reports and other sources, trying to find the best possible method of selecting a president. Extremely important, the Committee realizes, is the need for confidentiality of the procedure and Boardman points out that they have kept several top candidates because they recognize the "delicate nature of the selection process." The final candidates are becoming known, however, as they come to campus for interviews.

The search process has been necessarily long and tedious. In the beginning, the Search Committee advertised the opening for the presidency in various journals and received over 200 responses. The twelve member Committee then broke down into two groups of four and each person in the subcommittees reviewed the applications. Each applicant was then rated as well suited, acceptable, or not suited. Each subcommittee then met to debate the relative merits, qualifications, and drawbacks of each candidate, and, after reporting back to the full Search Committee, the number of candidates was narrowed to 38.

County Auction

Plans are well under for the Green Mount Audobon Society "Coun Auction" to be held Saturday, October 11 fr 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at Nature Center in Hunting All proceeds will be used pay taxes on property provide operating funds for continuation of educati programs at the Center.

Area chairpeople who responsible for collect merchandise and publici the auction are as follows: Burlington area-Alice My Emily Bell, Edith Fo Jennifer Gaden, Sandy Ru Ethel Shuele, Margaret Pau and Elsa Waller; the Hinesb Charlotte, and No Ferrisburg area-Mrs. Do Burden and Iris Mugenth the Williston and St. Ge area-Leota Pillsbury; Richmond and Huntin area-Sharon Corologas; Essex Junction area-Janet Greg Wilson; the Winooski Colchester area-Sheila and Nancy Stevens; Underhill area-Kit Shelto Ellen Zimmerman; the Je area-Betsy Bahrenburg Milton, Westford, St. Al and Fairfax area-Peter M and the Stowe, Water Waitsfield, and Mont area-Janice and Philip Na Auction chairwo Eloise Merchant, of Junction, reports donations are coming in Items to be sold include pony, a walk with the Lady" Fran Howe, baby piano, bird carving by Spear, bicycles, oil and gas 200 psychology book trout and salmon flies pr by John Engles.

(...ntinued on page

white stag
speedo
Men's & Lad
RACING SU
The Roy
96 Church St.
Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til
Friday 9:30 'til

news

Secret Search For UVM President

by Steve Wells

Things are coming down to the wire in the search for UVM's new president. The Trustees' Search Committee hopes to recommend its three choices to the full Board of Trustees at its October meeting, but the chairman of the Committee, Robert E. Boardman, still classifies the work as "confidential, and extremely delicate."

According to Boardman, the Committee has gone over dozens of published reports and other sources, trying to find the best possible method of selecting a president. Extremely important, the Committee realizes, is the need for confidentiality of the procedure and Boardman points out that they have kept several top candidates because they recognize the "delicate nature of the selection process." The final candidates are becoming known, however, as they come to campus for interviews.

The search process has been necessarily long and tedious. In the beginning, the Search Committee advertised the opening for the presidency in various journals and received over 200 responses. The twelve member Committee then broke down into two groups of four and each person in the subcommittees reviewed the applications. Each applicant was then rated as well suited, acceptable, or not suited. Each subcommittee then met to debate the relative merits, qualifications, and drawbacks of each candidate, and, after reporting back to the full Search Committee, the number of candidates was narrowed to 38.

These applicants were then interviewed at a place neither on their campus or UVM campus by a panel of three, usually consisting of a faculty member, a trustee, and a student, alumnus, or other non-academic person. Following the interview, each member of the panel wrote a critical evaluation of each candidate. This information went back to the full Committee which looked over all the material again. The Committee then cut the numbers another time, putting many candidates on a hold list and selecting eleven highly qualified applicants who underwent intensive interviews at their own campuses. In addition to the meetings with the candidates, the Search Committee did other fact finding, such as talking with faculty members and other associates and trying to get a well-rounded look at the individual.

The Committee has now chosen five outstanding candidates and invited them for personal interviews at UVM. The first two to visit the campus are Dr. Edward B. Jakubauskas, Dean of the College of Commerce and Industry at the University of Wyoming, and Dr. George C. Christiansen, the Vice President for Economic Affairs at Iowa State University. Jakubauskas is a professor of economics, Christiansen, a professor of Veterinary Anatomy.

Boardman says that selection is still an on going process with room for a highly qualified individual should one arise. Barring this, however, the Committee will cut the list to three and make their recommendations to the full Board of Trustees who must make the final decision. Hopefully, UVM will have a president by November.

Off Campus Eating Alternatives

by Mary D. Partridge

According to one member of a newly established student household, the primary difficulty in a communal situation is the food. The majority of off- campus students would agree that it is both cheaper and more convenient to share food. An individual who buys his own food spends at least $15 a week whereas the individual in a communal set-up averages $10. In addition, the individual who feeds for himself must devote time every evening to prepare dinner, while the communal dweller only has to make dinner once every few nights or once a week, depending on the number of people in the household.

Most groups opt not to share in the preparation of breakfast, lunch or weekend meals although these meals are included in the budget.

There are esentially two schools of thought concerning who cooks when. The "laissez faire" system allows anyone who "feels like it" to buy food and cook; the "committal" system is an organized scheme which ties each person to a specific night on which he must cook the dinner and wash the dishes. The advantage of washing the dishes on the same night as cooking is that one can fulfill his responsibilities to the community in one evening instead of two.

The collection of communal food money is commonly approached in one of two ways: Either cash is put into a "kitty" each week, and when a person needs to buy food, he gets the money out; or, each person shops with his own money and receipts are kept, so that at the end of the month, those who spent over the norm are reimbursed by those who spent under. Both of these methods have drawbacks, one because a substantial sum of cash is left out; the other because of the book-keeping required.

To a large degree, the success of the food plan in a household depends on the congeniality of the dietary preferences of each member. Most groups place restrictions on the type of food purchased with communal money, such as no alcohol, "munchies," or meat. Some households do their shopping exclusively through food co-operatives.

No food plan is economically equitable for all involved because naturally some people eat more than others. But in the opinion of one UVM junior, it is best not to fool with these inequalities. "There was one guy who lived with us last year who said that he didn't like peanut butter and wouldn't pay for it, so every week he subtracted .30 from his food money...I mean, it'll never work that way."

US Presidential Hopefuls Speak

by Appleton King

Outside the modern civic center in downtown Springfield, it was a warm, sunny Saturday. Quite a change from a week of soaking rain, floods, and post-poned Red Sox games. Thirty or so pickets promenaded their anti-abortion signs to passers-by; a butcher in a blood-smeared white frock was holding a "right to life" placard against the glass doors, where inside Birch Bayh, an Indiana Senator, was addressing TV cameras, newsmen, a state Women's Caucus, and others who had come to attend the Northeast Democratic Conference. In all, five of the scheduled seven candidates for the Democratic nomination fielded questions from individual panels of prominent journalists, political leaders, economists, academicians, labor representatives, and members of the business community. They also answered written questions gathered from the audience.

The first speaker was former Senator Fred Harris of Oklahoma, who defaulted early in his '72 campaign for lack of money. Harris clarifies why a man like him can run and have a chance. "The (new) law provides full Federal financing in the general election campaign...if you are to be considered a serious candidate, you have to raise $5000 at least in each of 20 states. Now that's a revolution in presidential politics." Revolution or not, it has swollen the race with many eager and confident candidates, each frantically trying to give himself a distinction that will separate him from the pack. Fred Harris, although neglected by the influential media moguls, is promoting himself as a populist, traveling alone without the usual covey of aides and reporters, staying in the homes of friends and supporters instead of seclusive hotels, as he makes his way along the campaign trail. An anti-aristocratic candidate determined to break up the corporate giants and dispel the elitist attitudes of the Rockefellers and Kissingers whose values are confused with those of the people, Harris wants a fairer distribution of wealth, income, and power. "The issue is privilege, whether or not the government's going to begin to look after the average family or continue to protect the interests of the super rich and the giant corporations...What we've had is an elitist foreign policy dominated by an economic class.... They really believe what's good in Latin America for the Rockefellers and Exxon and Chase Manhattan is good for the country."

The economic class issue is one which most of the candidates seem to have in common as it is the issue on which the McGovern campaign faltered. McGovern gained much support because he was sincere about ending the war, but due to some bad statistics from aides and an extreme case of honesty and well-meaning, his economic policies were not credible and he was branded a raving socialist. This time around, the Democrats with the fore-knowledge that the Vietnam War was prolonged so that we could produce military goods and stimulate the economy, are taking no false steps. The fact that private corporations like Lockheed are receiving enormous subsidies, although it has been stated by former high-ranking executives in the company that Lockheed was falsifying parts lists for its airplanes and grossly mismanaging its public benefits, has taken hold of concerned men like Harris, Moe Udall, and Birch Bayh.

Bayh, in particular, has shown leadership in the areas of equal rights for women, civil liberties, gun control, tax reform, and other ecomomic issues. He impresses this reporter more than the first three speakers (Harris, Udall, and Jimmy Carter) as being the most charismatic, and consequently as having the best chance. In addition to a solid liberal reputation as a Senator from conservative Indiana, Bayh, according to syndicated columnists Evans and Novak, is organized labor's favorite candidate and the most acceptable across the Democratic spectrum. His dynamism on the stump and proven ability to organize and lead support against such tyranny as the vertical flow of oil monopolies, which allows the major companies to control all facets of production, transportation, refining, and marketing, thus creating an anti-competitive atmosphere, has given him a name which is more familiar than most of his competitors, with the exception of Henry Jackson and a slipping and senile George Wallace.

Moe Udall is a very respected man in Washington and his strong identification with the environmental issue, along with a solid record of voting on the right bills, gives him a stature comparable with that of Bayh. In fact, most political forecasters predict that Udall, Bayh, and Carter (all of whom spoke in Springfield) are the most likely to carry the nomination in New York City next summer.

Two candidates, Governor Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania and former Governor Terry Sanford of North Carolina (who lost in his own state to Wallace four years ago), are considered longshots and were unable to make it to the convention because of unexpected developments. This left Sargent Shriver with the last say. He argued, as most of the candidates did, for a full-employment economy, accusing Ford of harboring vested interest in Big Business and forfeiting increased government spending by operating the economy short of its full-employment capacity. Shriver is shrewd and a good talker, but the enigma of the '72 campaign is not that easily disposed of.

At one point during his panel, Birch Bayh was asked why the candidates did not choose among themselves one man they woud all stand behind, thus avoiding a splintering of the party and allowing some ninny like Humphrey to hop into the nomination. Bayh replied that inevitably during the primaries one candidate would stand out and receive a majority of support from the others. Hopefully, one candidate will stand out, preferablyUdall or Bayh, avoiding a potentially damaging deadlock. Meanwhile, Fred Harris will continue to travel alone and unheralded by the press, although the fact that he and others like him can run, says little about the changing political landscape.

What's A McAuley?

by Debbie Richlin

"What's McAuley Hall?" is the question most often posed to residents of this dorm. To begin with, McAuley is located on the Trinity College Campus and is rented by UVM. This year there are one hundred fifty freshman women living there.

This is the second school year that McAuley has been one of the UVM residential buildings. Last year, UVM only rented the second and third floors of McAuley. The result was that the University students living there had to abide by Trinity College rules. Men were allowed in the dorm by invitation only, and the women were subject to the Trinity curfew. Life at McAuley was an unhappy experience for everyone, including the RA's.

This year, all residents of McAuley Hall are University students. Consequently, it is a better place to live. Trinity College no longer has control over what goes on in their tenant's dorm. Most of the new women were reluctant to move in upon hearing tales of the previous year's living situation. But by the end of the first week, only a few still wanted to change halls.

In many ways, it is advantageous to live in McAuley. Trinity allows the women to use their dining hall located on the main floor on McAuley. The dorm rooms are large, they have plaster board walls, and the windows have curtains. Each floor has its own lounge where everyone can congregate, talk, write letters, and study. Classes are only five to ten minutes away, except the gym is farther.

When everyone arrived on the first day, they were all in the same boat, not knowing where to go, what to do, and most of all, not knowing anybody. Because of their eagerness to meet new people, the McAuley women soon became a close-knit group. The Resident Advisor, Nancy Cable, and her assistants, Karen Kaplan, Cathy Scharfen and Jamie Gagan have worked hard so that McAuley women would get to know one another and others on main campus.

(continued on page ten)

Depression In Vermont

News Analysis

In the opinion of Liberty Union, the State of Vermont and the nation are in the midst of a depression. Unemployment in Vermont is higher than it has been for many, many years. The official statistics tell us that 20,000 people are unemployed but, in our opinion, these are grossly inadequate figures and we would estimate unemployment to be at least 50% higher — or somewhere around 35,000.

The wage scale in our state remains dismally low. Despite the fact that prices for every basic commodity have soared during the last several years there are still tens of thousands of Vermonters who earn the starvation wage of $2.10 or $2.50 an hour. The per capita personal income of Vermont is now, with the exception of some southern states, the lowest in the nation and the situation gets worse each day as real income continues to decline because of inflation.

One manifestation of the decline of the standard of living of the working people of this state is that they are now purchasing less of what they need. The recently revised estimate of what the sales would bring in is over 3 million dollars less than the original estimate. The State of Vermont is clearly in the midst of an economic crisis and the state government faces a serious financial deficit. What should we do about it?

The Liberty Union does not believe that, in the midst of this economic crisis, the cost of government services can be decreased. On the contrary, low income people, unemployed people and elderly people need at this time more help, not less, and our government workers are going to need significant pay raises to simply keep pace with inflation. Governor Salmon says that taxes have got to be increased — and we agree with him. The question is — who should pay the increased taxes? Where should the money come from?

Governor Salmon suggests that the sales tax — the most regressive form of taxation imaginable — should be raised from 3% to 4%. His suggestion, in essence, is that the burden for increased taxes should fall on the shoulders of the ordinary working people of this state, the tens of thousands of women and men who earn $5,000 or $10,000 a year. These people, already the victims of low wages, an unjust tax structure, outrageous utility rate increases granted by the Governor's Public Service Board, and of the general inflationary process which is rapidly lowering their standard of living — are now being asked

(continued on page ten)

County Auction

Plans are well underway for the Green Mountain Audobon Society "Country Auction" to be held on Saturday, October 11 from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the Nature Center in Huntington. All proceeds will be used to pay taxes on property and provide operating funds for the continuation of educational programs at the Center.

Area chairpeople who are responsible for collecting merchandise and publicizing the auction are as follows: the Burlington area-Alice Myers, Emily Bell, Edith Foulds, Jennifer Gaden, Sandy Ruvera, Ethel Shuele, Margaret Paulsen and Elsa Waller; the Hinesburg, Charlotte, and North Ferrisburg area-Mrs. Douglas Burden and Iris Muggenthaler; the Williston and St. George area-Leota Pillsbury; the Richmond and Huntington area-Sharon Corologas; the Essex Junction area-Janet and Greg Wilson; the Winooski and Colchester area-Sheila Petry and Nancy Stevens; the Underhill area-Kit Shelton and Ellen Zimmerman; the Jericho area-Betsy Bahrenburg; the Milton, Westford, St. Albans, and Fairfax area-Peter Mallet; and the Stowe, Waterbury, Waitsfield, and Montpelier area-Janice and Philip Nagel.

Auction chairwoman Eloise Merchant, of E Junction, reports that donations are coming in well. Items to be sold include a live pony, a walk with the "Bird Lady" Fran Howe, baby grand piano, bird carving by Robert Spear, bicycles, oil and gas stove, 200 psychology books, and trout and salmon flies prepared by John Engles.

(continued on page ten)

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
96 Church St.
Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5 P.M.
Fridays 9:30 'til 9 P.M.

FUJICHROME
FILM SPECIAL
20 Exp. $3.59 List $5.25
36 Exp. $4.99 List $7.85
PROCESSING INCL.
OCTOBER ONLY
Vermont's Largest
CAMERA CENTER
ABRAHAM'S
111 CHURCH STREET, BURLINGTON

fly high with e-z wider join the e-z wider flying team at the:

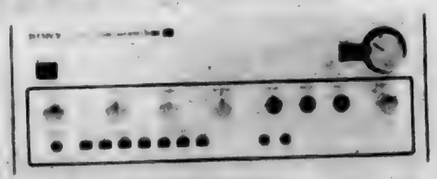
WORLD CUP HANG GLIDING MEET
SUGARLOAF MT., MAINE
OCTOBER 2-5, 1975
double width e-z wider rolling paper.

Watts the problem? A Sony amplifier is the answer.
When an amplifier starts to add things to the music that wasn't there, that's bad. Or when it can't handle high's or low's that's bad too. With a Sony integrated stereo amplifier you get it straight...nothing added or taken away until you decide to. And when you do, there's a full array of tone and balance controls to let you do just that. So know what you're getting out of your amplifier. Get a Sony integrated stereo amplifier. It can make the difference between music and noise.


TA-4650 INTEGRATED STEREO AMPLIFIER
- Newly developed true complementary vertical FET power amplifier stage, for the natural, high definition triode sound
- Direct coupled power amplifier stage
- Inputs for 2 phono sources, tuner, 2 aux. sources, 2 tape playback sources and external adaptor
- Preamp outputs and power amp inputs
- Direct coupled FET amplifiers in tone control and buffer stages
- Phono stage with newly developed LEC (low emitter concentration) transistors coupled directly to a low signal V-FET
- Tape monitor for 2 recorders and independent tape dubbing switch
- Precision volume control with muting switch
"IT'S A SONY"
CREATIVE SOUND
NEXT TO K-MART • S. BURLINGTON, VT.

Depression In VERMONT

(continued from page nine)

by the Governor to pick up even more of the financial burden of this state. And what is extremely pathetic, and is an indication of the bankruptcy of both the Democratic and Republican parties, is that there is not one voice from within the government which has any alternative to this approach. Democrat or Republican, liberal or conservative, they all say the same thing. Either raise the taxes on working people or cut government services which are desperately needed.

The Liberty Union, however, has an alternative – a real alternative. We are presenting today, and will be presenting to the Legislature when it reconvenes, a concrete, realistic proposal that will take the tax burden off working people, where it presently rests, and place it on those people who can afford to pay it.

Our first proposal for raising additional revenue calls for the doubling of the state's corporate income tax. This single act alone would bring in more money – 9.2 million dollars – than the raising of the sales tax by 1%. It would effectively, by itself, wipe out the estimated state deficit. Who are the people who will be affected if the corporate income tax is doubled?

Almost, without exception, the major industries and businesses in Vermont are owned by giant conglomerates which are themselves owned by multi-billion dollar banks. These corporations and banks are, of course, controlled by some of the richest people in America. Some of the corporations which would have to pay higher state taxes under the Liberty Union proposal would be the New England Telephone Company which is owned by A.T.&T. whose major stockholder is Rockefeller's Chase Manhattan Bank; the General Electric Company which has large plants in Burlington and Rutland and whose major stock holder is the Chase Manhattan Bank; Union Carbide which has a large plant in St. Albans and whose major stock holder is the Chase Manhattan Bank; the American Optical Corporation of Brattleboro which is owned by the giant Warner-Lambert Company whose major stock holder is the Chase Manhattan Bank; I.B.M. of Essex Junction which is heavily controlled by the Rockefeller dominated First National City Bank (CitiCorp); Fairbanks Morse of St. Johnsbury which is owned by the giant Colt Industries conglomerate; Bryant-Grinder of Springfield which is owned by the Ex-Cello conglomerate and on and on it goes.

These are the institutions which should take on the increased burden of taxation which is now required, and not the working people of this state who are already overtaxed and underpaid. During the last few years we have heard the governor, and members of the Legislature, raise their voices sharply against people on welfare and the unemployed. How courageous it is to come down heavy on the desperate and the poor. And now these same people continue their acts of "courage" by attempting to raise the taxes of the ordinary people of this state. What we in Liberty Union would like to know is why the Governor and the Legislature do not have the guts to stand up to the banks and corporations which dominate the state's economy. Why don't they go to them for more money? The proportion of state and local tax revenue collected from Vermont businesses is the lowest in New England and amongst the lowest (41st) in the entire nation. Businesses must bear a larger share of the tax load.

Secondly, in order to raise additional revenue for the state's needs the Liberty Union proposes a major overhaul in the state's income tax system. According to the latest statistics that we have (1973) the richest 3.5% of the earners in Vermont made as much money in that year as the combined income of the lowest paid 40% of our workers, and the top 6% earned as much as the bottom 50%.

It would seem that, on the basis of these facts, any fair minded person would demand that those people – the people who have the money – should pick up the increased tax burden rather than the people who don't have the money. It seems clear to us that the people who should pay the increased taxes are those best able to pay – the people who earn $30,000, $50,000 or $100,000 or more a year – and not the people who earn $5,000 or $10,000 as the Governor would have it.

The Liberty Union income tax proposal would completely eliminate the income tax for people under $10,000, would lower the income tax for people under $15,000 and would progressively increase the income tax for those people with high incomes. We estimate that this progressive income tax proposal would bring in 101 million dollars more than the present state income tax.

Finally, because of the huge gain in revenue which a truly progressive income tax would yield, and because of the doubling of the corporate income tax, it would be possible to eliminate virtually every regressive sales tax in the state such as the 3% sales tax, the gasoline tax, the cigarette tax and all the rest and still end up with 17 million dollars more than the current government projections.

Timothy Bates, chairman, Liberty Union economic development committee

Bernard Sanders, chairman, Liberty Union labor committee.

Budget Problems Plague Trustees

The University of Vermont trustees understand the serious position of our financial situation and potential consequences of the various courses of action. In light of the situation, the trustees have reiterated basic policies that the University follows. Many of these policies have been long-accepted traditions and therefore are not specifically binding to the trustees and the University. They felt, however, that the objections and principles of the University should be reaffirmed.

Several years ago, it was decided that there would be level enrollment. Level enrollment has been defined to be 7,300 undergraduate students, 850 graduate students and 330 medical students. The trustees recognize that increased enrollment would bring in much-needed capital. On the other hand, it would create added expense which would cancel any gain to be had. The physical plant is capable of handling the present student load aside from three major areas. These are: the library, physical education/athletic building, and the resident halls. Both the library and the physical education facilities were constructed for a student population of half the present size. Additions are planned for these two facilities so as to accomodate the increased current student enrollment. The money planned for these additions will not affect UVM's budget because they are capital funds, which work somewhat on the principle of mortgage.

Capacity in the residence halls has been over 100 per cent for the last few years. No major additions are planned in this area so as to avoid additional cost to the student. But, increased enrollment would cause added expenditures in the physical plant.

It has often been remarked that if the University were to increase the ratio of out-of-state students to in-state students, a substantial amount of money would be raised. The trustees have rejected this as a means of dealing with the financial crisis. The trustees have reaffirmed the principle of accepting "all qualified Vermont students."

The reason for the original adoption of this principle and its continuation over the years has been the conviction that the principle purpose of the University is to serve the needs of Vermont students in higher education at the undergraduate level. This is the cornerstone of existence for a state university, and the principle justification for the receipt of state support."

The student ratio is now composed of approximately 40 per cent out-of-state students and 60 per cent Vermonters. Politics are also involved in the decision to keep this student ratio at its present level. State appropriations will be endangered if the Vermont student ratio were to fall below 60 per cent. The trustees, however, do not wish to see the fall of the out-of-state student ratio. They reported that, "the educational (and financial, it must be noted) impact of anything less than 30 per cent out-of-state students could pose serious problems to the University."

In brief, the trustees feel "that as a state university, our overriding objective is service to the state and its students..."

Tuition is probably the subject that holds the most interest for students. UVM already holds the infamous distinction of having the highest in-state and out-of-state tuition in the nation.

The trustees also place great emphasis on the maintainence of as low as possible tuition for in-state students. By law (Vermont Statute, Title 16, Section 2282), Vermont tuition must be maintained not more than 40 per cent of the out-of-state tuition. They justified this by pointing out that "the annual state appropriation provides both the justification and the wherewithall to maintain lower in-state tuition." Recently, the state appropriation has failed to provide the difference between in-state and out-of-state tuition. To make this point clear to UVM and to the legislature, the trustees have stated that "Maintainance of low tuition levels for Vermont students is entirely dependent on a level of state appropriation that makes it possible."

Action to deal with a "financial strain" should be thoroughly planned and not reactionary. The trustees believe "that all proposed solutions or strategies should be tested against the objective of maintaining the quality of the institution...Illadvised and inappropriate reaction to the present financial limitation could do serious damage to institutional quality, both present and future."

Recommendations and conclusions about dealing with any financial problems were made by the trustees, but with the situation changing so rapidly, these may have to be altered and revised.

Tuition Hike Seen For 76-'77

(continued on page one)

administrative-proposed tax increases, giving the legislature time to study the matter further. The special session will recess until October 15.

When one counts the anticipated reductions, UVM would have ended the year with a balanced budget. However, UVM is not the only entity suffering from inflation, increased expenditures, and reduced resources. Vermont is experiencing a severe deficit which compounds the problem. In an attempt to balance his own budget, Governor Salmon once again impounded $100,000 from UVM's budget. Now, instead of having a balanced budget, UVM will have a $100,000 deficit. The deficit will be carried into next year's budget, as UVM does not plan to make an additional $100,000 budget reduction.

The Vermont state legislature cannot override the Governor's recent impoundment because he was given authority in the last legislative session to impound state funds. UVM is now faced with the prospect of raising tuition drastically or curtailing programs and services. Such decisions will not come easily, and those decisions will probably be met with large-scale resistance.

If last year's reaction to the budget cuts are any indication of what can be expected this year, current and near future reductions will not be popular. The forthcoming reductions will require much work, patience, cooperation, and the wisdom of Solomon.

$ $ $ $ $

Elections Coming Soon

by Paul Ajamian

Under the new ratified SA constitution, Senator elections will be held on October 7,8, and 9.

The election of a strong, dedicated Senate body is an essential first step in the mobilization of the Student Association. There are many plans being made and projects being developed, but without a wide cross-section of representatives to the Senate, none of these can be implemented.

Senators will be elected on an at-large basis from the following three categories: on-campus (18 senators), fraternities and sororities (5 senators), and non-university connected housing (14 senators). This underscores the critical nature of equal representation. If a dorm or dorm-complex makes no effort to encourage and support a candidate, the students in that dorm will go unrepresented for the duration of the academic year. It is of the utmost importance that the voices of the above three groups are clearly heard in all University matters. Senators of the Student Association will have the power to insure that this comes about.

All interested students are strongly urged to run for this important and worthwhile position. Information and petition forms can be obtained at the SA office, Right Balcony, Billings Center.

Brown University Strikes As Budget Protests Spread

(CPS) – Called "the nation's first major university protest in several years" by the wire services, Brown University in Providence, RI, was the scene recently of a four-day student strike and a subsequent administration building takeover.

The strike occurred when the administration announced it would cut back its 1975-76 budget by severing many student services and firing some 75 faculty members over the next three years.

When University president Donald Hornig refused to release the raw figures on the budget, students called a mass rally and held a vote in which 68% of the student body of 5200 voted three to one to hold a four-day strike.

According to administration and student estimates, about 70% of the student body took part in the boycott and many professors, against administration directives, cancelled classes.

The list of demands the striking students presented included:

–That students have greater input on the budget and be allowed to review budget figures;

–That present health services be maintained;

–That the number of faculty not be decreased;

–That the number of black students be maintained at the current 10% level or be increased;

–That $500,000 be added to the $3 million financial aid budget.

The heavy student support for the strike, however, had little effect on the Advisory and Executive Committee (A&E) which approved the original budget submitted by President Hornig in its entirety.

The one concession the A&E made was to ask the Faculty Policy Groups to study possible mechanisms through which student input could be increased in the future.

In a referendum following the A&E decision, 38% of the student body voted: 8% voted to accept the A&E report, 20% to reject the report and 43% to ask the Strike Coalition to "work with the A&E and use alternative tactics."

According to one member of the Student Coalition, the low turnout and "the results leave us with no idea of what the students want."

On the day following the referendum, black and third world students seized an administration building, contending that budget cutbacks would keep minority group students out of Brown and turn it back into a "rich, white American university."

"Because we're on the bottom rung of the ladder, we just had to do something decisive," said Vincent McKnight, a spokesman for the occupying group.

The sit-in ended peacefully when students and administration reached a compromise and the students voluntarily ended the 38-hour occupation.

The agreement included a goal of 25% more blacks and Spanish-speaking students in each entering class during the next three years, more recruitment of minority-group applicants, a re-evaluation of the Afro-American students program, and academic and legal amnesty for the protesters.

Meanwhile, nation-wide cutbacks in student aid and rising college costs have given birth to a rash of student protests.

Rallies, boycotts and building takeovers have already been reported at the State University of New York, the Universities of Maryland, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, Howard University, Rutgers, Princeton, and Brandeis University.

A spokesman for the National Student Association in Washington theorized that the protests were inevitable because "it's an issue that doesn't have a legitimate forum." Protests occur because there is no formal mechanism through which students can influence the budget process at colleges and universities, he said.

What's A McAuley

(continued from page nine)

McAuley, however, is not the ideal place to live. While the atmosphere is friendly and fun, there are several drawbacks to living there. Many students have never heard of McAuley Hall. If they have heard of it, they generally associate it with the way it was last year. Posters and announcements of social events don't always make their way down to McAuley, but there have been more posters than there were last year. Unlike the rest of the campus, McAuley residents cannot paint their rooms nor put nails in the woodwork.

Although McAuley is a comfortable place to live, the residents with they weren't so alienated from the rest of the University. The campus map recognizes McAuley only as an arrow pointing toward the general direction of the hall. With that sort of representation, McAuley remains somewhat isolated. Just to test how smart you are...do you know where McAuley Hall is?

County Auction

(continued from page nine)

Duane Merrill, of South Burlington, will assist him. There are no restaurants near the Nature Center. Lunches prepared by the Women of the Baptist Church, however, will be available.

"According to Mrs Merchant, help is still needed in the auction office. Also, donated items can be left at her home at 95 Park Street, Essex Junction or at the Nature Center after lunch on Saturday and Sunday. Arrangements will be made to pick up items that cannot be personally delivered.

The auction office is open Monday-Friday from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Call 879-0536 to pledge your donations or ask for information.

Many antiques have been donated including dishes, bottles, wall telephone, baby carriage, copper tea kettle, spool bed, church bench, 78 rpm records, teak table to seat 20, school desks, blanket chest, mirrors, and wood working tools donated by Lee Murray of Underhill.

There will be an open house at the Nature Center on Friday, October 10 from 6:30-9:00 p.m. All are invited to attend to view the items to go on sale the next day. Sealed bids will be accepted at that time.

Colonel Walter Flatow of Waterbury Center, president of the Vermont Auctioneers Association, has offered his services to head the auction.

MAZEL'S
Family Shoe Store
194 North St. Burlington
dunham
CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS®

Also Available In A 9" Boot For Men And Women
Tyroleans . . . the hiking, biking, camping, mountaineering or anywhere boots . . . You'll find 'em at Mazel's in Men's & Ladies' styles . . . Comfort from first step to last . . . the boots for all outdoors and all seasons.
FREE PARKING OPEN DAILY ... THURSDAY and FRIDAY ...

M.C. ESCHER REPRODUCTIONS imported from Holland
$5.00
Emerald City of Oz, Ltd.
79 S. Pearl St. Burlington, Vermont, 05401
802-863-1290

PRICES START UNDER $100.00
YOU ARE INVITED TO OPEN A PRESTON'S CHARGE ACCOUNT
Prices start from under $100
E.J. PRESTON & SON INC.

yarn cellar
Yarn Cellar has bought out the complete stock of the Knitting Nook, Rouses Point, N.Y. This stock now on sale at 50% to 75% off. The Royal 90 Church St.
Locations: Burlington Shelburne Barre St. Albans

Fieldwork In Vietnam: The Common Man's Buddhism

Buddhism always held a fascination for me. I had the opportunity to join a special summer session when D.T. Suzuki was in residence at our University (this goes back some years now). He had for a time lived in a Zen monastery in Honolulu (a cool monastery, would you believe?). Like many Americans of my generation, the wisdom (read mysticism) of the East was intriguing. It seemed to make sense when nothing else did. It seemed to answer my cries for meaning and relevance with its ko-ans of nothingness... Zen struck me as especially "right-on". I mean, if you were the sort who would ponder, "What are the dimensions of my Being?" the Zen master could offer, "The branches of the second tree from the corner," and you couldn't argue with that, right? I liked it. It quieted my mind.

Thus it was in this state of idiosyncratic satori that I set as one of my goals in fieldwork that of studying the nature of Buddhism in Vietnam. I was lucky enough to meet Venerable Thich Giac Hanh in San Diego just after he finished his doctoral thesis, "On the Relationship of Buddhist Ideology and Politics in Asia," for the University of California. He arranged for me to stay at An Quang Pagoda (the meeting place of those very effective and very political Buddhists who had contributed to the events leading to the assassination of Ngo Dinh Diem) and live with the Buddhist nuns there, in Saigon, for a month. Venerable Hanh and I went over the various Vietnamese words for the concepts of nirvana, meditation, enlightenment, karma, and so forth. By the end of a month I was, in terms of Buddhist doctrines, a virtuoso.

Armed with this background, I organized a set of questions from which to elicit villager's beliefs and notions about religion. I wanted to learn the extent the belief systems of villagers and "just folk" Vietnamese conformed to and, or depended on doctrine. That is to say I looked for what the villager selects out of culturally-postulated and culturally-given religious ideals, notions, values and norms. What concepts does he modify or adapt in his daily life? What practices is he able to integrate into daily living? What practices and ideas does he reject? What is the goal of fasting? Does he fast? For what reasons? For example, or because of a vegetarian diet? I did not go to find out the doctrinal reasons or sanctions for religious behaviors; I went to know what Joe-on-the-street in Vietnam felt were adequate reasons. I did not want to elicit an exegesis on the Buddhist pantheon from my villagers; what I did want was a statement of their own personal notions, and the sense they made out of material that had been culturally and historically granted to them – the living belief system, or, in a word, existential Buddhism.

It became apparent to me, in the course of my work in the village, that this objective of mine was difficult for many people to grasp. Many villagers did not understand that I wanted to know their ideas; they thought that if I wanted to know about Buddhism, I should go see the monks at the pagoda. Time and again they reiterated this. I already had been to many pagodas, and I suppose I already knew more about Buddhist scriptures and doctrines than a good many of the village monks. But this was not what I was after. It took a good deal of patience and time, but finally, after pursuing countless bull sessions, show-and-tell, and let's-have-the-anthropologist- to-dinner meetings, I was on good terms with people and could either persuade them to deal directly with the questions or else I could steer the conversation around to the topics I wanted to sound out. My Vietnamese was getting quite good—especially as I was dealing with a limited linguistic universe consisting of sets of terms specific to Buddhism and religious ideas. The fact that I knew such words and phrases often gave people the (wrong) impression that my abilities in other areas of Vietnamese were also excellent, and contributed greatly to the myth that I was rapidly becoming "that American girl who speaks Vietnamese."

One day I managed the following interview with my neighbor. Chu Tu (Mother's Fourth Younger Brother) was a man of about 40 years, father of ten, and somewhat dubiously the head of the poorest family in the village. Tu had fought with the Viet Minh in an earlier decade of war. He had been exposed to Western values and culture and knew a good deal of the world beyond our village gate. In fact, it was the opinion of the village womenfolk that he knew too much of "that world" out there, for it was known that in 20 years of marriage he had come home only once a year, at Tet, the New Year, when all Vietnamese seek to be with their families. At that time, he got his wife pregnant and went off again. He was the village "No-goodnik" – and one of my most cooperative sources of information. Anthropologists are warned in their training to try to avoid such "no-goodniks" or social outcasts, since it seems that it is these types who try to curry favor with the foreigner in an attempt to gain social prestige. Nevertheless, because my approach was "idiographic," I thought my data from Tu was valuable and attempted to elicit and record what I could.

In addition to his wanderings, Tu also was a shiftless and a poor provider. When the sun would shine, he sold milk made from the soybean. Occasionally, he peddled French bread — if he arrived at the dock in time to pick it up early in the morning. On other days, he just lounged around and took care of the latest baby. His daughter, Dom Em, puttered around my house some, and I gave her a few piasters every week. This provided the family with plenty of excuses to visit when they liked, which was at least twice daily... which was what I wanted, wasn't it?

Once in a while I would nurture fervent prayers for a moment's peace and quiet, some freedom from the stares and giggles, a little relaxation from the tortuous trials of understanding in a second language...Mostly, I resigned myself to time and place and tried to make the best of it by digging into minds.

"Can you tell me about that small statue I noticed in your house, the one by the ancestor's shrine?"

"Oh, that. That's just a Chinese god. I don't know his name. He is Chinese — but he is supposed to bring money into the house. My wife bought it in town. It's just for the fun, really."

"Do you believe in him?"

"No, of course not." (laughs; lights a cigarette. Offers me one which I accept.)

"What about Ong Troi (God)? Do you believe in that?"

"Well, there are many kinds of God. There is Jesus. There is Buddha. There are our parents. The parents are like God. They determine our lot in life for us. Everything is up to them. So, of course, I believe in God. But I am not a religious man."

"Well, what about the soul?"

"I don't know about that word. You have to ask a monk about that sort of thing."

(Trying another approach.) "Well, what happens when we die?"

"When we die, we have big funerals and a big celebration and we are buried. What do you do?"

Tu's last question was not meant to be funny, sarcastic or rhetorical. Like so many Vietnamese, he was extremely interested in American habits, beliefs and customs. He really wondered what we did when our people died and he was concerned with "them" i.e., dead bodies on a very practical, down- to-earth way. As for myself, I remained endlessly preoccupied with the mysteries of the soul – my head in the clouds. I frequently found the villagers would interpret my metaphysical queries in terms of the practical, i.e., the real world. It was damned tricky to get any imaginative, speculative, or philosophical material from them. We inevitably ended up with some discussion of American burial habits or an ad hoc summary of the "Death of God in America," which my interpreter would struggle to correct, supplement and explain from my determined but misintoned Vietnamese. I found older people better subjects, and some of them, seeing how keenly interested I was in what they had to say, would talk for hours. The only thing that would slow them down would be an interruption from my interpreter. She would say that she could not keep up with the translation. Actually, it was really not necessary for her to translate, as I could follow the discussions very well by now; I kept using her because it gave me a chance to take copious notes! People thought I was writing down what she was saying, but what I really had done was to copy down what they had said and the sense I had made from it, long before her translation was forthcoming. With her around, however, I could feign ignorance. People would say and do things as if I did not know what was going on, and I picked up a lot of information that way, including how people felt about my presence in their village, the work I was doing, and so on. Miss Phan, my interpreter and teacher, was also uncertain about my abilities and could not tell whether I followed an interview or not. The only clues I gave her were when I caught her mistakes or omissions, which gradually decreased.

With Chu Tu, however, I needed no interpreter, no pretenses.

"So, what happens after we die? Are we reborn? What is it that is reborn?"

Tu struck a serious pose and said philosophically, "Chet la het. Death is the end."

Chet la het. It's a phrase that rhymes in Vietnamese, a catchy little phrase. Pretty soon, the little kids that thronged around us as we talked were mimicking us, "Chet la het! Chet la het!" Be Tam, Tu's fifteen year old boy, addressed the group dramatically, "Chet la het!" and led them off to school. They marched down the village path, "Chet la het, Chet la het..."

I tried to return to the topic of the soul, but the commotion made it impossible. The butcher's wife arrived just then with a bowl of grease for cooking my morning meal and some information about a chicken that I had expressed interest in buying. I liked eggs so much — they were easy for me to fix – that she thought the most economical thing for me to do would be to raise chickens. She had started negotiating on my behalf with Mrs. "Chicken Soup" — a very old lady who peddled – what else? – chicken soup at nightfall. Tu interjected a comment that the price being asked was too high, whereupon an argument between him and the butcher's wife ensued. Miss Phan, my interpreter, arrived fortunately, in time to help me make sense out of the argument. Things finally settled down – I did not succeed in entangling the butcher's wife in a discussion of metaphysical matters as she had to hurry back to her market stall — Phan began, on her own, to talk about the monks in the village pagoda.

"They are not very good monks here," Tu said suggestively.

"Why do you say that?"

"Well, they eat meat sometimes – I see the village people bring it to them. Also, they have women. You better believe that! A good monk does not have women. They lead a quiet life. You know, the life of a monk is a good one, let me tell you. When I am old, I will become a monk."

"But who will take care of your children?"

"When I am old! When I am old, my children must take care of me! I will save them the trouble. I will become a monk."

At this point in our increasingly more interesting discussion, the door burst open. It was Be Tam, out of breath from running back again.

"Co Hai, Cu Hai! O dang kia kia co Ong Xa Truong va Ong Dai Ta..." an excited jumble of Vietnamese poured out; "Elder sister, elder sister, down there is the Village Chief and Coloner Binh from the Province..."

Phan and I shared puzzled glances. Chu Tu, beaming, rose to accompany us to meet my distinguished visitors. We made our way down the path to the Colonel's jeep in front of a small coffee shop near the market.

The Colonel's contingent was impressively dressed, and stood, with rifles at their sides, positioned around the shop, effectively cordoning it off from traffic and prospective clientele. The Colonel was apparently inside, and already an argument could be discerned. The shopowner was annoyed at this imposition. While she was, as she declared, ever so honored to serve tea to the distinguished Colonel, the morning was her best time for business because the tired husbands of marketing housewives normally filled her shop at that time.

And now, with his jeep right out front and his soldiers there, who would come in? Colonel Binh gave her a 1000-Piaster note (what she might hope to gross in a morning) and ordered coffee, for two. He then waved me over, and spoke out loudly in impeccable English, "Miss Lan-Chi? Miss Lan Chi! I have been waiting so long for this opportunity to meet you." He extended his hand.

His interpreter stepped forward and said to me, "Colonel Binh has expressed to me his desire to tell you that he has been looking all over IVCorps (The Mekong Delta) for you for four months now."

Binh spoke angrily to his aide in Vietnamese, "Duo roi. Di! Alright already, go!" He then turned to me again, and spoke, this time in Vietnamese, which I had a feeling he had a feeling I would understand.

Colonel Binh, it turned out, was the director of Vietnamese Intelligence in the Delta. After there was an article published in the New York Times about a woman anthropologist living in his sector, his superiors in Saigon began to wonder why American reporters had got the scoop, why they were the last to know these things, and how come Americans knew what was going on before they did? All valid questions to put before Binh, all valid criteria for him to start an all-out search, "Mission Lan Chi", after my name, Lan Chi, in Vietnamese, which means Orchid.

If there is anything I am not, it is an orchid. Where the Vietnamese get their inspiration for these names, I don't know. Colonel Binh began to remark on the appropriateness of my name, and I told him it was probably a corruption of my English name which Vietnamese found difficult to pronounce. He went on, protesting, all the while in Vietnamese, which I was sure, by now, he was using as a test, to gauge my comprehension.

Colonel Binh and I became great friends – he was a source of much support, both emotional as well as logistical, and information. Before returning to our adventures together, a note on intelligence in Vietnam:

THE CULT OF INTELLIGENCE IN VIETNAM

The best intelligence in South Vietnam was run by the North Vietnamese (NVA) and the Viet Cong, who, working together, flabbergasted other interested and involved parties, namely, the Americans, the South Vietnamese and oddly enough, the French. The French, who had gotten their asses kicked at Dien Bien Phu, had regained enough sense to stay out of most direct meddling, but, even after 1954, there remained sufficient French business and investment interests to warrant the presence of an Embassy as well as a Consulate and an elaborate intelligence gathering network. The French, after all, have kept their pride; they did not want to depend on the Americans in order to keep tabs on what was going on. Which was just as well – their interests often ran counter to American interests and the French found it expedient to have their own men over here. It was a matter of practicality that the French chose not to rely on the Americans, for the American teams were only slightly better than the South Vietnamese, who usually knew only what they were told, or what they were paid to know.

A rough ranking of intelligence forces in Vietnam would have the NVA and VC hands-down at the top of the list, followed by the French, then the Indian merchants in downtown Saigon, then the Americans, and then the South Vietnamese.

The French knew more than the Americans for several reasons: One, they had been in Vietnam longer, thus they knew how little they really knew. They also knew how little they could hope to know as well as how great their margin of error would be. This was a great advantage. Secondly, more Frenchmen could speak and understand Vietnamese than Americans. Many Frenchmen had Vietnamese blood relatives somewhere in their genealogies. Thirdly, the NVA and Viet Cong confidently shared "secret tidbits" with the French; they could depend on the French to keep their civilized mouths shut in front of Americans. Hell, the French wouldn't help us anyway – the VC knew that. Having fallen on their faces at Dien Bien Phu, the French weren't about to let us succeed where they had failed. The NVA could trust the French, and could use them as sources of information on American doings in exchange for an agreement (or two) about a rubber plantation or a tin mine... Thus, the French intelligence were usually better informed than the Americans but they were ill-equipped to use their information. The French were too civilized to "sell" information to the Americans, who were usually too proud to admit that they had to buy it. (There were exceptions, but mostly, Frenchmen in Vietnam viewed French interests as separate and distinct from American ones – the exceptions included the French Ambassador, who did, after all, have to confront U.S. Ambassador Martin on weekends, poolside at the Embassy compound.

The North Vietnamese intelligence was the best because they had an edge: They knew more about what was going on, because they were what was going on. Not only did the VC tell them what they were going to do, but, in fact, they told the VC what the VC was going to do, so they had it all hands-down. It was a tough act to beat. It was usually easy for them to predict the reactions and repositioning of the other side (U.S. and South Vietnamese), on the basis of their past experience and on the basis of their perusal of the American Congressional Records. In time, the NVA came to know our limitations better than we ourselves did. And because we Americans could only sporadically predict what "they" were going to do, we ranked third.

The Vietnamese who took over Intelligence units were determined to show how well they had learned their lessons (while they were in training at U.S. installations in Georgia, Kansas, Texas...) They would show how well they could keep secrets. They would demonstrate a unique combination of Oriental inscrutability and James Bond machismo... Virtually all the South Vietnamese intelligence personnel that I knew: a) received subscriptions to Playboy magazine, which they used to paper their headquarters, b) had identical Garrard turntables, AKAI tapedecks, and SONY amps, Panasonic AM-FM tuners... c) drank scotch-and-water, d) had shelves full of old American Reader's Digest Condensed Books, and e) had a mustache.

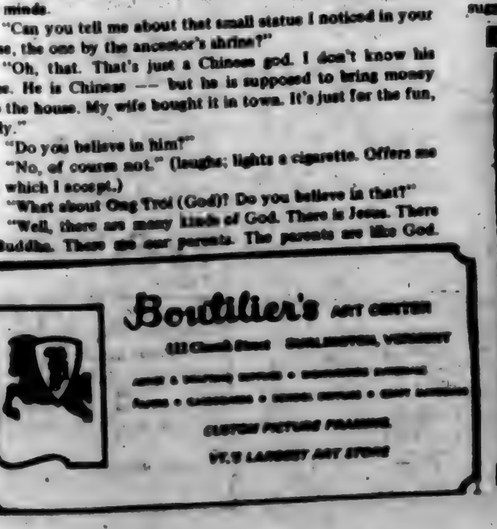
Yet we Americans managed to rank ahead of the Vietnamese because we had more money to spend on intelligence gathering. Their intelligence couldn't really improve because Uncle Sam wouldn't increase their allowances. The South Vietnamese then, ranked fifth, after the Indian merchants who ran the Black Market activities (with the help of Chinese investors). The South Vietnamese managed to hold fifth place because they were usually able to get better cooperation from the French than we could. They also managed to hold their rank because we told them some of what we knew, but not all. Since our information was itself not infallible, this little knowledge became a dangerous thing. Thus, the South Vietnamese intelligence ranked fifth and knew least of all the political machinations and military strategies of their own country. Sometimes, ignorance of the facts on the part of the South Vietnamese was important enough to the Americans for them to pay to keep them ignorant. So it seemed that false or misleading information was deliberately fed to the appropriate sources.

In time this changed and the South Vietnamese gave the Americans a run for their money – in a very literal sense.

This was the "Vietnamization Program" for the fighting forces in Vietnam in which the olive drab uniform sizes went from Extra-Large to Extra-small, and the body-bags were smaller and lighter as G.I.s withdrew. Replacement one by one of Vietnamese was initiated. For some time, there were Americans in command of virtually all-Vietnamese units. Then, finally, the commanders went home too, and just a small bunch were left to mind the store at the "Pentagon East," the Defense Attache's Headquarters near Tan Son Nhut Airport, Saigon. U.S. intelligence was restricted to the drawing board.

These Vietnamese were committed to demonstrating their honesty above all. So they could not be "bought." Their information was not to be shared at any price. Whatever they learned, they kept for themselves. Sometimes they didn't even trust their own Commander in Chief with the truth...And so, the South Vietnamese kept to themselves and did not tell the U.S. what was going on. The men at the drawing boards in the DAO took long vacations in Bali and Bangkok. And the State Department got feisty and Congress go annoyed. They decided not to tell the South Vietnamese what was going on, because, after all, we had spent years, hadn't we, helping the Vietnamese to help themselves. So now if they couldn't find things out for themselves, well, fuck 'em, Congress wouldn't approve any more money to send them back for re-training at Fort Dix or wherever. So, the two allies, the South Vietnamese and the Americans, kept their secrets separately.

Knowing this, are the events of last Spring still surprizing?



A Day On The Rocks

As the alarm once again did its duty of getting me out of bed at 7 o'clock last Sunday, I almost disregarded its obnoxious buzz until I recalled the motive for my early arising, it was to go rock climbing. I immediately popped myself out into the hazy morning and readied my slings, beaners, boots and baggy pants for the days activities.

Upon arriving at Billings, expecting to be whisked off to the cliffs, I encountered a myriad of people patiently waiting for the same. Luckily when transportation finally arrived (a Datsun truck and a two-door sedan) there was enough room in one of the cars for my bag and myself. I nestled myself in comfortably and within fifteen minutes once again I was unpacking my sleepy body onto the road. We threw the ropes and necessary paraphenalia over our shoulders and proceeded up the grassy path to the awaiting cliffs.

The walk was quite short and soon we were standing below the rock, tightening our footgear and checking out the routes to the top. I was to follow Dave (the Outing Club President) up and set up another climb next to his. The climb was a very basic and simple route. I knew there would be no problem in actually climbing, but regardless, that familiar old trembling and knotting in my stomach began to attack my nervous system.

When I was tied to the rope, and signals between Dave and me were given, (he was the belayer, the one who would hold the rope if I should fall), I began my ascent. Up the slab, over to the left until I meet the crack, then reach up and yes, that's it, a good handhold, no problem. I'm back into the rhythm: one foot up, then the hands, delicately searching for that nub which will glide me to the rock; I'm almost up to the top, past Dave, a few more feet; it's a little bit smoother, but there's still plenty (of handholds) to utilize and then one last stretch and yes,...I made it.

After untying myself from Dave's rope and finding an appropriate tree, I wrapped a few slings around it and used it as my anchor. The rope was coiled in one hand, and as I yelled "rope," and flung it down to the climbers below, it became apparent that I had a problem. Halfway down the cliff, the rock bulged out like the stomach of a fat man. This "stomach" got in the way and caught the rope everytime I threw it down. Since we did not have access to a girdle with which to tuck the protruding tummy of the rock into, I had to rely on those coming up with Dave's climb to throw the rope the rest of the way down. Needless to say, it was a tedious system.

People were making their way up the rock quickly and easily. Since this was the first time for virtually everyone, I was quite impressed. Some of the climbers would reach within seven feet of the rope where it started to get more challenging, they would look up at me, smile and say "Got any ideas?" I laughed and gave what little coaching I could from above, and within minutes they were grasping onto the level ground from which I belayed. "Wow, it certainly looks a lot different from up here," was a typical comment as they untied the rope from around their waists.

It was getting on to noon, so I handed the job of belaying over to one of the climbers, and anxiously made my way down to do some climbing of my own.

I was roped in and observing the boy in front of me struggling up the rock (which didn't do a considerable amount for my confidence). It had been quite some time since I had done amy tough climbing and I didn't know what trouble I might come across. To top it off, Greg, one of the leaders (and a damn good climber!), passed by and said, "Yeah, I always used to fall on that exact same move that he's having difficulty with," he paused, "but that was a long time ago." Thanks a lot I said to myself, and watched as the climber finally made it to the top. GULP! I was next. Falling wasn't what was causing my palms to sweat and my hands to shake, it was the possibility of not being able to make it. Enough! I waited for the signals and with a reply of "climbing," once again began the ascent up the craggy face to a corner. Here I placed my hands on some sturdy handholds above and swung my feet out back on to the face. This was where, if I had not calculated my moves before proceeding, I would have found myself plastered awkwardly against the rock with my feet twisted around one another. So, meticulously, I eased up, reaching, holding, standing, jamming, when suddenly the crack disappeared and was replaced with a smooth vertical wall, "How you doing?" the belayer called to me from just a few feet above my head. I smirked and thought of the role I had just been playing less than half an hour ago. "Oh, fine," I replied, as my leg began that lovely sewing machine motion. "I think I'm destined to fall pretty soon so get prepared." I heard him giggle, then, whoops, my foot dipped from its cozy little nubbin and there I was dangling on the end of the red rope like some mindless circus toy. "What was that you said?" the belayer asked jokingly, as I got back onto the rock and resumed the climb. My fall had placed me near a more conducive area of rock, with a few more grunts and welcome nubbins to stand on. I arrived at the top smiling, quivering, sweating, and loving every minute of it.

The sun was pouring itself down upon us with welcome warmth and light. We sat there contentedly, with eyes closed and the pressure of the hard abrasive rock against our backs. The sun was doing its blinding dance all around us filling our already weary bodies with a contented purring sensation. When I opened my eyes and looked out at the miniature world below me, I sighed with a feeling of utter satisfaction and picked myself up to go down to finish the day with more climbing.

Mediterranean Fellowships

by Meriemil R. Layton
Office of Academic Program Support

An archaeological jaunt in Mesopotamia or the Aegean Islands, two years at a British university, $10,000 for an essay on the country's "Third Century" – it sounds exciting and profitable, but best of all the three are possible through fellowships for undergraduate and graduate students.

The what, how and when of these awards are available at UVM's Office of Academic Program Support (OAPS), 340 Waterman. OAPS gives proposal planning assistance and administrative support to faculty and staff in seeking outside funding for university programs. It has a small library of books on funding sources and is on the mailing list of government and private organizations offering such funds. Although limited in number, notices about student funding opportunities are also received at OAPS, according to Caroline E. Hamilton, its director. Following are active programs with forthcoming deadlines:

1. Archaeological Institute of America – two fellowships for students of the classics, sculpture, architecture, archaeology and history who can travel in Greece, the Aegean Islands, Sicily, Southern Italy or Asia Minor; the Olivia James Traveling Fellowship ($5,500) and the Harriet Pomerance Fellowship ($1,750). Applications are due Jan. 31, 1976.

2. Wells Fargo Bank/Smithsonian Institute – "Toward Our Third Century" Bicentennial Awards for essays, films or tapes on the country's future; there are four prizes in each category of $10,000, $5,000, $3,000, and $1,000. Entries are due Jan. 31, 1976.

3. Marshall Scholarships 1976 – established by the United Kingdon government in 1953; there are 30 awards of $3,710 a year made to US students under 26 years of age, who will have completed an undergraduate or graduate degree by Aug. 31, 1976. The scholarships are for two years of study in a degree-granting program at a British university. Applications are due Oct. 10, 1975.

4. Kent Fellowships for College Teaching Careers, 1976-77 – offered by the Danforth Foundatfon of Missouri, to students under 35 years of age, with a minimum one-year full-time graduate work toward a Ph. D., who are interested in teaching or administrative college and university careers. Kent Fellows have to be nominated by a UVM faculty member, through special endorsement forms sent to the Foundation, prior to receiving fellowships applications. The deadline is Dec. 1, 1975.

5. National Science Foundation, Student Oriented Programs for 1975-76 – these fall into three categories, two of which are still open, Student Science Training (SST) for exceptional high school students (applications due Oct. 10, 1975) and Student Originated Studies (SOS) for graduate and undergraduate students (applications due Nov. 10, 1975).

6. Environmental Protection Agency (EPS), Air Pollution Fellowship Program – for graduate students contemplating a non-federal government agency career in air pollution abatement efforts. The fellowships cover tuition, up to $250 for books, a stipend and tuition are also offered for part-time study. Applications are due April 2, 1976.

Both the NSF and EPA programs are coordinated by the Office of Academic Program Support.

7. The National Endowment for the Humanities. Youth Grants in the Humanities – For students and other young people to conduct individual or group projects in the humanities studying the following: Classical or Modern Languages, Linguistics, Literature, History, Theory and Practice of the Arts, Archeology, Comparative Religion, Ethics. Youth Grants average under $2500 for individual projects and $10,000 for group projects. The Endowment Youth Grants do not provide scholarships, fellowships, loans or other type of student aid. Applications are due Nov. 15, 1975 for projects beginning after April 1, 1976, and April 1, 1976 for projects beginning Oct. 1, 1976.

In addition, the Office of Academic Program Support has three publications covering a variety of fellowships: "A Selected List of Major Fellowship Opportunities and Aids to Advanced Education for US Citizens;" "Fellowship Guide for Western Europe" and "New England Regional Student Program 1975-76, Undergraduate Level." For more information contact Meriemil R. Layton, ext. 3360, at OAPS.

Dangerous: Sulfuric Acid Fumes

by Glenn Howland

According to a report in the September 5 issue of New Times magazine catalytic converters in late model cars emit sulfuric acid fumes and sulfate mists, and heat up to temperatures of 1,000 degrees F. or more. Ford and Chrysler converters normally operate at temperatures of 700-800 degrees F. If the engine is out of tune, then these temperatures may soar. The converter, which uses the high temperatures to change certain emmissions into carbon dioxide and water, is located on the exhaust pipe of the car, much the same as a muffler. Over a period of time, they build up deposits of grunge, most notably sulfur compounds. The release of sulfuric acid combined with the high operating temperatures have raised serious questions about the safety of the converters by both Vice-President Rockefeller and the Environmental Protection Agency. They are illegal to remove and can add over $150.00 to the price of the car. In New Jersey and California, a malfunctioning converter may cost the driver $50 in fines.

Oh—If you plan to do any driving through fields or old roads, forget it. Grass and hay will ignite at around 540 F. It might be a good idea to bring a fire extinguisher.

TRAVEL!... EARN MONEY!... Be a Campus Representative for New England's largest travel agency. Interested students, write GARBER TRAVEL, 1406 Beacon St., Brookline, Ma 02146 or call (617) 734-2100 collect to Peter Johnson.

THE IRISH COUNTRY HAT

The Irish country hat. Hand-woven with love of 100% Irish tweed. Shape it as you like. The longer you wear this hat, the more individual it becomes.

$15.00, or couple up and buy 2 for $28.00

Open 10-6
Open Fridays 'til 9

Upper Church St.
mayfair
Downtown Burlington

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by H. Spencer Turner, M.D.
Director, The Ohio State University Health Service
1875 Millikin Rd.
Columbus, Ohio 43210

Q) My young female cat has been very promiscuous for the past week (I'm sure you know what I mean) and now I am wondering what her chances are of catching VD from all her boyfriends. Do animals (especially cats) catch and pass on any types of VD such as humans do? If there is any VD outbreak in the area, I know my cat has contacted it and passed it all around. It's nice that she's so popular, but should I get her to a vet for a penicillin shot in this type of case?

A) There is no known veneral disease of cats; the only epidemic from the type of feline behavior you have described might be an epidemic of new kittens.

Q) Our problem concerns the sexual habits of a young couple who are friends of ours. This couple uses the condom form of birth control, but at times they engage in sex without the use of the condom. They deny that they practice "withdrawal," because the male partner removes himself long before he ejaculates. They say this is a safe practice with no pregnancy resulting. We are not experts, but we think they are living dangerously as regards pregnancy. What is your opinion?

A) They are living dangerously! A condom properly used (which is not how most people use it) is probably 90% effective as a method of contraception. In regard to your question about withdrawal, you are exactly correct. The seminal fluid which is excreted prior to ejaculation may well contain sperm and, thus, conception can occur.

Q) I have relatives on both sides of my family who are diabetic. My mother informed me long ago that diabetes skips generations in her family. I am, according to her, in the diabetic generation of my lineage. Does diabetes skip generations in this way in certain cases? If so, is there any way I can prevent myself from contracting the condition?

A) I know of no information which suggests that diabetes skips generations. Diabetes is generally of two different types. One is the so-called "juvenile diabetes," where the symptoms begin at a relatively young age and for which ordinarily insulin shots are required. The other type of diabetes is generally called "adult onset," commonly begins at a later age of life and may respond to proper diet and/or oral medication, although, at times, insulin injections are necessary.

While there is no way to "prevent" juvenile diabetes, one can decrease the chances of developing overt adult diabetes. This is true since, most usually, the person who develops this type of diabetes is overweight and, frequently, adequate weight loss, along with proper dietary control can return blood sugar levels to normal.

Q) My ears have been ringing for a year and a half. Could you please tell me the possible causes for this? I was told by a doctor that my problem was caused by loud band music, but there are many other people who are around loud bands much more than I. Furthermore, I always put ear plugs in my ears at concerts.

A) The condition you describe; i.e., a persistent noise of ringing in the ears, is called tinnitus. In general, it is usually subjective – that is, audible only to the patient. It is often, though not always, a sign of ear disease. It may be related to a problem with the external ear, with the ear-drum, the small bones in the ear or any of the auditory structures to and including the brain itself.

Rather common causes of the problem include excess wax in the external canal, holes in the eardrum or fluid in the middle ear. A fairly common cause which, as you suggest, has been seen with increasing frequency in the past few years, is acoustic trauma or damage to the hearing mechanism by loud noises.

Studies have, in fact, been done of performers in loud music bands and these individuals commonly do have significant hearing loss with associated tinnitus. Apparently, also, this need not be limited to performers, but can be found in individuals who frequently attend concerts of extremely loud music and who compound the problem by playing similar music at an extremely high volume on stereo equipment.

While putting ear plugs in one's ears might be helpful, ear plugs have varying degrees of effectiveness, depending upon their fit and their type and may serve to decrease sound level with varying frequencies of sound and voice range frequencies. Thus, they may be effective only in decreasing sound levels by 10 decibels or so.

In my opinion, you should check back with your physician if you are not satisfied with his explanation (as I think any patient should do when not satisfied with his physician's explanation of his problem).

It would be interesting for you to have an audiogram run and if, in fact, your problem is related to acoustic trauma, we might well see a significant decrease of your hearing at some specific frequency of sound.

Q) What is the best exercise for increasing the breast size? I am only a 32A and when I lay on my back my breasts virtually disappear. Do such products that are available for breast development such as Mark Eden breast developers actually do what they claim? Or would I be wasting my money if I purchased one of these? To some women breast size is not important but to me it is. Any suggestions?

A) This particular question seems to be becoming an annual event. There is no legitimate way to actually increase breast size. If you read the ads carefully, you will notice they claim improvements in bust measurement. Bust measurement includes the total circumference of the chest, including the breasts, and is contributed to, therefore, not only by the breasts, but by all other chest structures, including the large masses of muscle which underly the breasts.

Thus, by appropriate exercise to develop these large muscles, it is true that the bust size can increase. However, this in no way implies that the actual amount of breast tissue is increased and there is no mechanism to increase the actual amount of breast tissue. The breast can be made more prominent by certain types of plastic surgical procedures.

Q) My sister and fiance have been living together for several months. Somehow she contacted a gonorrhea infection and upon physician's examination it was found that her fiance did not (or never did) have the infection. How could she have contacted the virus if it is only transmitted by direct contact?

A) First of all, the organism that causes gonorrhea is not a virus, but a bacteria. Secondly, it is correct that gonorrhea is spread only by very intimate human sexual contact. By nature of the activities in which we humans participate, this is most generally of a sexual nature.

Gonorrhea is not necessarily always easy to diagnose in men or women and while it has been assumed in the past that men practically always had a discharge and other symptoms, recent research indicates this is no longer the case and that a very carefully done urethral culture from the male may be necessary for the diagnosis to be made. Further, I know of no way to be certain that your sister's fiance "never did have" the infection.

Q) Why in the hell don't you inform us that pregnancy can result from sperm transmission through the underclothing into the vagina when the pubic areas are in contact or from vaginal contact from sperm deposits near the vaginal opening? Such knowledge dissemination will explain why virgins get pregnant from "heavy petting" even though they have actually never had intercourse. This needs to be told as a favor to future unwanted babies.

A) Consider yourself so informed!

Trail Work

To start off the school year with a burst of enthusiasm, the UVM Outing Club had a trail clearing spree on Mt. Mansfield on Saturday, September 20. Despite great interest at the Outing Club meeting on September 17, only a handful of members turned out at the appointed hour (7:30 am). This was probably attributable to both Friday night partying and the weather which appeared dubious at best. The participants drove to Stowe and up the Toll Road where they were divided into three crews under the guidance of a UVM grad student, Jack Harrington, from the Green Mountain Club (Burlington Section), and Carl Dow, formerly a ranger on the mountain and now working for Channel 3 TV. Tools were provided by Mr. Harrington and the Forests and Parks Department, as well as by Mt. Mansfield ranger Preston Bristow. Fortunately, the weather was cooperative and the crews were able to complete a "brushing" of the entire Outing Club trail system. Due to the wet conditions, underfoot blazes were not painted, although this will be done in the near future.

Not the most popular of the Mt. Mansfield trails, the UVM Outing Club trails provide interesting loops for those wishing to avoid the crowds on the ridge between the "Chin" and the "Nose," which are Mansfield's two most conspicuous summits. They have become overgrown in recent years. Upon the suggestion of Mr. Harrington, the club decided to "rejuvenate" them. During the past winter, new trail signs were constructed and painted. These were placed on the mountain last May. The brushing and painting will complete the job temporarily, although regular yearly maintenance will be required to keep them in top shape. Additionally, "major" construction, such as ladders, are needed on some trails. Those interested in participating in trail work are encouraged to contact the Outing Club.

••• CLASSIFIED •••

For sale – Hanson Exhibition ski boots. Used one year. Shell no. 2 fits 5½ – 8. Asking $100. Will throw in $15 rewaxing for free. Call Don 863-9881.

Lost – Green canvas napsack on North Prospect by John Dewey, Sept. 29. Reward, Reggie Lilly, 482-2970 (late).

Stereo Components – 20-40% off list – major brands – all guaranteed. Call Jay at 862-9172. Representative for K+L Sound Services.

For sale – 1948 Chrysler Royal – a real classic, forced to sell. Best offer. Call George at 658-0876.

Skis (190 cm) Cupco Bindings and Boots, 8-8½, very good condition. Teak and rattan queen size headboard. Each best offer over $35. 985-8725.

Found on Redstone Green – light brown and white female beagle. Tan collar with silver decorations. This dog is sick, so please call immediately. 656-2193. Ask for Dot.

Winter sublet – Nov. 1 – April 1 – quiet furnished one bedroom apt. on So. Union St. No dogs. $140 a month plus electricity. 863-3929.

For Sale – Men's ski jacket, medium-large size, very good condition, $20. Men Addidas-Stan Smith Tennis shoes, never been used, $20.00, retail $27-28. Call Will after 6 p.m., 864-4320.

For Sale – 195 cm Atomic Expert skis good condition, $65; 175 cm Rossignol 175's good intermediate skis, $55; 195 cm best ST-650's, $15; 2 pairs Look Nevatic $5 bindings, $35; Dolomite Sintesi Comp boots, fits 9-10, good condition, $60; Salomon 404 toes, $10. All prices negotiable, call ext. 2289. Ask for Robert in 337, evenings.

For Sale – Garrard 74-D Turntable auto/manual 1 year old. Call Mark, 306 Davis, 656-2515

Stolen – Levi-style leather jacket, waist length. Was taken in Silver Keg on 9/26/75. Would appreciate greatly if returned. No questions asked. Call Marty at 2613.

STEADY PART TIME AND SUMMER INCOME AT CUTCO SALES & SALES MANAGEMENT

–EXCELLENT TRAINING & EDUCATION
–$3–7000 & INCOMES TO STUDENTS WHO QUALIFY
–EXPERIENCE NOT REQUIRED; CAR IS

Write: Cutco
Box 902
Burlington, Vermont

A

THE REVOLUTIO

The year 1773 began much time it was over America was new it was in 1773 that King George in Parliament and the wealthy be the Members' votes for the right (or in this case, exceeded their ri to "hang" the British future in A American patriots were debating the year's end, the Royal Govern issues that turned the far-off stor

First came "the letters." In 1 then an American representative managed to obtain confidential between Thomas Hutchinson an King's appointed officials in Whately, a member of the Kin documents, passed from Frank Hancock, contained passages ad what are called English liberties" Government could more closely the colonies. The papers, newspapers and broadsides, stur them. Many began listening mo who had been most se Hutchinson/Oliver documents.

Just as news of the throughout the country bombshell. Lord North, rec Ministry – feeling supreme managed to cool colonial a "misplaced zeal for their another scheme of taxation.

As they sat down in Government officials must found the perfect tax pack were there. The East corporation with investme around the world, which ha be bailed out of its Government subsidy as we America. Members of Parl investors in the EIC, benefit. Most importantly with the tea tax, the Roya that would permit taxatio years.

It all seemed so perfe looked impossible to beat and a monopoly over t American consumers wou tea smuggled in from ot King assumed that Amer actually lowered the pric without representation. English business commun World people could be hard-earned money to pr battle over the Tea Tax who would rule Americ East India Company and

The Tea Act was ap For six months colonia proper strategy of resp fellow citizens and build would strike. "Put your thundered, "and keep hi

The first shipments in the early winter of 17 Americans expressed the landed. In the absence colonial governors allow turned back by crowds anger of the King of En mobs. But in Massachus had his house destroyed had authored some of th by Franklin and Adams,

As the 17th of Dec be unloaded in Massac colony turned to Griffin moored. Letting the c moment, Sam Adams co 16th. Eight thousand B of just thirty thousand South Church. After th dispatched to the Gover that the tea be sent back the Governor's refusal, "There is nothing mo country." With that, th Sons of Liberty dressed docks. That night, as 1 hopelessly on, 342 che

The Boston Tea

Some Gum

The "strongest to world" belong to Jo of Gend, Belgium. April 4, 1974, dem the ability to pull t Island Railroad passe weighing 80 tons along with a bit in his teeth.

A NATION IS BORN, PART II

THE REVOLUTION BEGINS

The year 1773 began much like any other, but by the time it was over America was never to be the same again. For it was in 1773 that King George – together with his supporters in Parliament and the wealthy business interests who bought the Members' votes for the right price – put out enough rope (or in this case, exceeded their rightful authority sufficiently) to "hang" the British future in America. When the year began, American patriots were debating tyranny in the abstract: by the year's end, the Royal Government had handed them two issues that turned the far-off storm into a full-blown hurricane.

First came "the letters." In late 1772, Benjamin Franklin, then an American representative to the court of King George, managed to obtain confidential Government papers exchanged between Thomas Hutchinson and Andrew Oliver, two of the King's appointed officials in Massachusetts, and Thomas Whately, a member of the King's Ministry in London. The documents, passed from Franklin to Sam Adams to John Hancock, contained passages advocating an abridgement "of what are called English liberties" in America, so that the Royal Government could more closely control the political affairs of the colonies. The papers, widely reprinted in patriot newspapers and broadsides, stunned and outraged all who read them. Many began listening more closely to the very patriots who had been most severely denounced in the Hutchinson/Oliver documents.

Just as news of the infamous letters was spreading throughout the country, Americans received another bombshell. Lord North, recently appointed head of the Tory Ministry – feeling supremely confident that he had finally managed to cool colonial agitation, and with it, the patriots' "misplaced zeal for their fancied rights" – hit upon yet another scheme of taxation.

As they sat down in Parliament to approve the plan, Government officials must have thought that they had finally found the perfect tax package. All the ingredients for success were there. The East India Company, an octopus-like corporation with investments, holdings and private armies around the world, which had lately hit upon hard times, would be bailed out of its financial difficulties with a huge Government subsidy as well as a monopoly on the tea trade to America. Members of Parliament, many of whom were large investors in the EIC, would receive substantial financial benefit. Most importantly, by getting one foot in the door with the tea tax, the Royal Government would set a precedent that would permit taxation that could be increased in later years.

It all seemed so perfect, and the capstone of the Tea Tax looked impossible to beat. By granting the EIC both a subsidy and a monopoly over the tea trade, the price of tea to American consumers would actually drop below the price of tea smuggled in from other countries. Lord North and the King assumed that Americans would not oppose a tax that actually lowered the price of goods even if it were imposed without representation. The King, his ministers and the English business community did not know that in the New World people could be willing to sacrifice some of their hard-earned money to preserve a principle of democracy. The battle over the Tea Tax was not for pennies, but for power: who would rule America, the unelected government of the East India Company and Parliament, or the American people?

The Tea Act was approved by the King in April of 1773. For six months colonial radicals lay in wait, developing a proper strategy of response, explaining the issues to their fellow citizens and building support for the time when they would strike. "Put your enemy in the wrong," Sam Adams thundered, "and keep him there!"

The first shipments of taxed tea arrived in colonial ports in the early winter of 1773. From Georgia to New Hampshire, Americans expressed their determination that it should not be landed. In the absence of specific instructions most of the colonial governors allowed the ships carrying the tea to be turned back by crowds of angry patriots, preferring to risk the anger of the King of England rather than the wrath of colonial mobs. But in Massachusetts, Governor Hutchinson, who had had his house destroyed during the Stamp Act riots and who had authored some of the most alarming of the letters leaked by Franklin and Adams, ordered the tea landed.

As the 17th of December neared, the date the tea was to be unloaded in Massachusetts, the attention of the entire colony turned to Griffin's Wharf, where the three tea ships lay moored. Letting the conflict build until the last possible moment, Sam Adams convened an open town meeting on the 16th. Eight thousand Bostonians (out of an entire population of just thirty thousand) turned out for the meeting at Old South Church. After the crowd assembled, a messenger was dispatched to the Governor's palace, demanding one last time that the tea be sent back to England. When word came back of the Governor's refusal, Sam Adams took the stage, shouting, "There is nothing more this meeting can do to save the country." With that, the eight thousand patriots, led by 150 Sons of Liberty dressed as "Mohawks," swarmed down to the docks. That night, as Tories and government officials looked hopelessly on, 342 chests of tea were dumped into the harbor.

The Boston Tea Party was a master-stroke of protest. What had been at the time of the Stamp Act, eight years earlier, an impassioned and spontaneous response to an act seen as arbitrary and unconstitutional, was now an carefully planned and rehearsed as a military operation. Patriots organized into squads knew only the name of their immediate leader. Immediately following the destruction of the tea, substantial rewards were offered by the Crown for the identities of the participants, but not a single person came forward to collect the money. To this day, most of the names of the rebels are unknown.

John Adams saw the event as a model of action for patriots everywhere:

> The people should never rise without doing something to be remembered – something notable and striking. This destruction of the tea is so bold, so daring, so firm, intrepid and inflexible, and it must have so important consequences, and so lasting, that I can't but consider it an epoch in history.

It was all pure, 18th Century guerrilla theater, but it was also deadly serious, this business of flaunting royal authority and openly destroying corporate property. Sam Adams, realizing the consequences of the action, quickly activated the Committees of Correspondence, sending riders throughout the country to inform other patriots of the Boston Tea Party, and to ask for signs of support. They were quick in coming.

In New York, Philadelphia, Annapolis, and other cities, patriots staged their own tea parties – burning crates of already landed tea, dumping tea chests into harbors and once, even forcing a ship owner to burn his own vessel. Everywhere, support resolutions passed in town meetings condemned the East India Company and the Tea Tax, and expressed thanks to the patriots of Boston.

The British government reacted to these outrages against property and good order by closing the port of Boston and placing the city under an 18th Century version of a state of siege. Once again, the previous three years of organizing and propagandizing paid off as other colonies sent supplies of food and money to the beleaguered city. On the day the port of Boston was officially closed, the entire country observed a day of fasting and mourning in support of their fellow patriots. A letter from the Boston Committee of Correspondence expressed what was once the hope of a few radicals, but had now become the majority sentiment: "All should be united in this opposition to the liberties of all."

Finally, in an effort to form a united strategy against these acts of tyranny, a meeting of representatives from twelve of the thirteen colonies was assembled in Philadelphia in September, 1774. The men who came to that first Continental Congress were mostly moderates, far behind the desires of the people, as most of the colonial leaders had been since the days of the Stamp Act. In the midst of growing agitation, they sat and debated, unwilling to make a bold move. After drafting renewed petitions asking the King to recognize the rights of Americans, and advocating a renewed economic boycott, the Congress adjourned, setting May of 1775 as the date for the Second Continental Congress. But even as the gentlemanly proceedings took place in Philadelphia, the revolution was proceeding throughout the rest of the country.

Armed conflicts between Minutemen (American citizen-soldiers who could be ready to do battle at a minute's notice), and the Redcoats began to break out. The pitched confrontations at Lexington and Concord on April 19, 1775, were but the most memorable of these early battles of the undeclared war. And while some Americans fought – and some died – most Americans were engaged in another monumental struggle, one that had to be resolved before any successful campaign against the King's troops could be waged. It was an emotional, internal battle, one waged within the minds of all Americans. Its object was to cast off the deeply ingrained notion that – regardless of what reason and experience might dictate – somehow kings and all they represented were of profound and vital necessity to happiness and prosperity.

The revolutionary mentality that had been forming since the days of the Stamp Act was still overlaid by thousands of treasured memories of Great Britain and her monarchs. This was the real power the King was counting on to keep his American subjects in line. If George III could have maintained the myth of legitimacy that surrounded him, he never would have had to use his powerful army and navy. Even as the Minutemen fired on the royal troops at Lexington and Concord, they proclaimed their loyalty to the King. The institution of the monarchy had become so deified and entrenched after hundreds of years in power that most Americans simply could not imagine how life would proceed without its guiding force. After all, every country Americans knew of at the time was ruled by one crowned head or another.

Into this emotional turmoil stepped Thomas Paine, a recent emigrant from England. Paine, a former corset-maker in London who had been fired for trying to get better working conditions for himself and his fellows, arrived in Philadelphia with a letter from Ben Franklin commending him to the Pennsylvania patriots. After taking stock of the situation in America, Paine quietly began preparing a pamphlet that would forever destroy the arguments that America had any other recourse than revolution. The result was Common Sense. Published anonymously, it swept the country.

Common Sense was written by a common man for the common people. It came out of the bitter years of Paine's own life as a laborer in England. Living among his fellow workers, he experienced at first hand the day-to-day abuses of the monarcy. The rights of Americans were being destroyed by this same system, but they at least had the benefit of three thousand miles of ocean between them and the heart of the Empire. No American could ever have written so passionate a statement as did the relatively uneducated and uncultured "Tom" Paine.

Common Sense pulled no punches in its assault on the monarchy: anything short of "separation and independence" it read, would be "mere patchwork." Aiming to destroy the legitimacy of the institution of the monarchy, and sweeping away with it the arguments of the moderates who continued to insist that the system was sound and that it was just a few of the men who ran it who had stepped out of line, Paine listed, then refuted, every argument in favor of kings. The monarch was descended from God?, Paine asked. He answered himself: "A French bastard (William the Conqueror) landing with an armed banditti and establishing himself King of England against the consent of the natives, is in plain terms a very paltry rascally original. It certainly hath no divinity in it."

The King is kept in check by Parliament? "How came the King by a power which the people are afraid to trust, and always obliged to check? Such a power could not be the gift of a wise people, neither can any power, which needs checking, be from God."

America has received great benefit from its union with the King? "Nothing can be more fallacious than this kind of argument: – we may as well assert that because a child has thrived upon milk, that it is never to have meat, or that the first twenty years of our lives is to become a precedent for the next twenty."

Hereditary succession is the right of kings? "All men being originally equals, no one by birth could have a right to set up his own family in perpetual preference to all others for ever."

The King is our father: Britain is our parent state? "Then the more shame upon her conduct. Even brutes do not devour their young, nor savages make war upon their families."

On and on went the indictment as Paine stripped the myths of legitimacy from the monarchy. By the time he was done, the emperor truly had no clothes. By stripping the monarchy of its supporting myths, Paine showed all who read Common Sense that beneath the purple robes and gold crowns, kings are simply the creations of the people. And anything created by people – be it a hay wagon or a pompous prince – can be changed by the people.

Having cleared the ground, Paine went on to speak in no less striking language of the earth-shattering nature of the conflict:

> The sun never shined on a cause of greater worth. 'Tis not the affair of a city, a country, a province, or a kingdom, but of a continent – of at least one-eighth part of the habitable globe. 'Tis not the concern of a day, a year, or an age; posterity are virtually involved in the contest, and will be more or less affected even to the end of time by the proceedings now. Now is the seedtime of continental union, faith and honor... By referring the matter from argument to arms, a new era for politics is struck – a new method of thinking has arisen. All plans, proposals, etc. prior to the nineteenth of April, i.e. to the commencement of hostilities, are like the almanacs of the last year: which though proper then, are superseded and useless now... Everything that is right or reasonable pleads for separation. The blood of the slain, the weeping voice of nature cries, "Tis time to part." Even the distance at which the Almighty hath placed England and America is a strong and natural proof that the authority of the one over the other was never the design of heaven... It is repugnant to reason, to the universal order of things, to all examples from former ages, to suppose that this continent can long remain subject to any external power... The utmost stretch of human wisdom cannot, at this time, compass a plan, short of separation, which can promise the continent even a year's security. Reconciliation is now a fallacious dream. Nature has deserted the connection, and art cannot supply her place.

Common Sense was an openly impassioned piece of propaganda, designed to speak to Americans who had never really cared for fine, legalistic arguments. It reflected the new American mentality developed over the decade since the Stamp Act. No scholar, no graduate of Harvard or Yale, however radical his politics, could have composed such a tract. His class, his background, his education had made him too conventional in his language, too academic, too logical, to speak with such power or touch such common chords. To say it was the most successful political pamphlet in history is to do it insufficient credit. Common Sense belongs in a category all its own. Published in Philadelphia on January 10, 1776, it was republished everywhere: all through the colonies from Charlestown, South Caroline, to Salem, Massachusetts. It crossed the ocean and was translated into German, French and Dutch. It was even published in London with most of the treasonable strictures against the Crown omitted. There is even a story that, one night, the Queen herself caught her son, the Prince of Wales, reading Paine's work under his covers.

Paine himself estimated that within three months it had sold over a hundred and twenty thousand copies, and many copies were passed from hand to hand until they were stained and ragged. It is probably conservative to estimate that a million Americans read it, or almost half the population of the colonies. Common Sense proved the power of words: it showed that a statement of common feelings and emotions coming from the common experiences and dreams of a people can change the course of history.

Patriots everywhere greeted the pamphlet with fervor: "I beg leave to let you know that I have read Common Sense," Joseph Hawley, one of the senior radicals of Massachusetts, wrote to his fellow patriot Elbridge Gerry, "and that every sentiment has sunk into my well-prepared heart." George Washington himself noted that "Common Sense is working a powerful change in the minds of men." Apparently, the change was working on the General himself because he stopped toasting the King at official meals. While John Adams deplored Paine's superficial and naive political theorizing, he recognized the power of the tract and welcomed its effect in solidifying sentiment for independence. When it appeared in Philadelphia, he sent a copy – of course – to Abigail, and to a number of friends and relatives. Deacon Palmer, thanking him, wrote, "I believe no pages was ever more rapturously read, nor more generally approved. People speak of it in rapturous praise." To Joseph Ward it was "a glorious performance," and Abigail Adams, charmed at the writer's sentiments, wondered how "an honest heart, one who wished the welfare of his country and the happiness of posterity, can hesitate one moment at adopting them."

In 1767 Franklin designed and sent this cartoon to friends. It prophesies the sad plight of Britannia stripped of her colonies.

Common Sense was especially welcomed in New England, where it provoked a flood of letters, petitions and addresses to Congress urging the delegates to declare independence. "This is the time for declaring independence," one such correspondent wrote, "we never have had such a favorable moment before, and 'tis not likely we shall have such another if we neglect this." The ordinary people of Massachusetts, James Warren or DIE.

(continued on page fourteen)

JOIN,

Fredrick Remsky

• 20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices • 20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices • 20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices • 20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices •

SPECIAL

$3.99 TURTLENECKS
100% COTTON
24 COLORS
RIBBED AND SOLID

LADIES HIS SLACKS
8.50 - 9.95

ALSO

Denim Jackets
Hosiery
India Print Bedspreads
Blouses
Shirts
Raincoats
Men's Casual Slacks
Jeans
Ladies Blouses

FOR THOSE DISCRIMINATE SHOPPERS, A FULL LINE OF SUMMER CLOTHES IS STILL AVAILABLE

CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
Layaways

65 Main St., Down by the Lake. Open 9-9, Sat. 9-5

• 20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices • 20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices • 20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices • 20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices •

The students car's best friend

TEXACO

CLOVERLEAF TEXACO
COMPLETE CAR CARE
1055 WILLISTON RD.
SO. BURLINGTON, VT.

ROAD SERVICE
862-2935

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER

40 Church St.
Burlington

Essex Jct. Shopping Center
Essex Junction

Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

Some Gums

The "strongest teeth in the world" belong to John Massis of Gand, Belgium, who on April 4, 1974, demonstrated the ability to pull two Long Island Railroad passenger cars weighing 80 tons along the rails with a bit in his teeth.

rail Work

start off the school with a burst of m, the UVM Outing d a trail clearing spree Mansfield on Saturday, ber 20. Despite great at the Outing Club on September 17, only ul of members turned the appointed hour m). This was probably table to both Friday rtying and the weather appeared dubious at e participants drove to and up the Toll Road they were divided into ews under the guidance VM grad student, Jack gton, from the Green ain Club (Burlington on), and Carl Dow, rly a ranger on the ain and now working for nel 3 TV. Tools were ded by Mr. Harrington the Forests and Parks rtment, as well as by Mt. nfield ranger Preston ow. Fortunately, the er was cooperative and crews were able to lete a "brushing" of the Outing Club trail system. to the wet conditions, rfoot blazes were not ed, although this will be in the near future.

Not the most popular of Mt. Mansfield trails, the M Outing Club trails vide interesting loops for e wishing to avoid the ds on the ridge between "Chin" and the "Nose," h are Mansfield's two most spicuous summits. They become overgrown in nt years. Upon the estion of Mr. Harrinston. club decided to uvenate" them. During the winter, new trail signs constructed and painted. se were placed on the untain last May. The shing and painting will plete the job temporarily, hough regular yearly ntenance will be required keep them in top shape. ditionally, "major" struction, such as ladders, needed on some trails. ose interested in icipating in trail work are ouraged To contact the ing Club.

For Sale – 195 cm mic Expert skis good dition, $65; 175 cm signol 175's good rmediate skis, $55; 195 best ST-650's, $15; 2 rs Look Nevatic $5 dings, $35; Dolomite test Comp boots, fits . good condition, $60; mon 404 toes, $10. All s negotiable, call ext. 9. Ask for Robert in evenings.

For Sale – Garrard -D Turntable /manual 1 year old. Call t, 306 Davis, 656-2515

Stolen – Levi-style her jacket, waist length. taken in Silver Keg on 6/75. Would appreciate tly if returned. No tions asked. Call Marty 613.

SA Films

The SA Film Series begins its fifth week with an unusually interesting selection of films, including a double feature on Saturday night.

Tonight (Thursday) the American Actress Series continues with the classic Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert film, It Happened One Night. This film, made in 1934 and directed by Frank Capra, was the winner of 6 Academy Awards, including Best Actor, Best Actress and Best Picture. It tells the story of a fugitive heiress and the rebellious newspaper reporter who finds her and tries to tame her, "a runaway romance between a tough guy and a society girl - a rough diamond and a polished jewel." This is one of Gable's most famous films. The film will be shown in B-106 Cook at 7:30 p.m.

On Friday night The Last Picture Show, starring Timothy Bottoms, Jeff Bridges, Ben Johnson, Cloris Leachman and Cybill Shepherd, will be shown. This film was made in 1972 and was directed by Peter Bogdanovich, called "one of our most gifted moviemakers" by Judith Crist (New York Magazine). It tells the story of life in a small Texas town in the early Fifties, a painfully authentic slice of Americana. Timothy Bottoms is fantastically good as a sexually eager but thoughtful high school boy, and Cloris Leschman (of Phyllis) is great as the coaches' wife hungering for a warm significant relationship. Pauline Kael calls it "a film for everybody! A lovingly exact history of small town life!" And Paul Zimmerman (Newsweek) calls it "not merely the best American movie... it is the most impressive work by a young American director since Citizen Kane!" Show times are 7:30 and 10:00 p.m. in B-106 Cook. Admission is $1. (Note: The cartoon for this week is Noah's Ark).

Gary Cooper comes out in full force on Saturday night in a double feature. First there is Morocco, made in 1930 and also starring Marlene Dietrich and Adolphe Menjou. Based on the proposition that "There is a foreign legion of women, who also choose to hide their wounds behind an incognito," this classic film tells of a cabaret singer caught between an aristocratic admirer and a footloose legionnaire. Morocco was directed by Josef von Sternberg, the man who discovered Dietrich. Next on the schedule is For Whom the Bell Tolls, a 1943 picture starring Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, and Akim Tamiroff. Based on the Ernest Hemingway novel of the Spanish Civil War, it was one of the most sensational and popular films to come out of wartime Hollywood. It attempted to set a new standard of fidelity to its source and to preserve the spirit of the novel. Gary Cooper and Ingrid Bergman were Hemingway's personal choices for the roles of Robert Jordan, the soldier of fortune who comes to blow up a Falangist bridge, and Maria, the brutalized peasant girl he falls in love with. Show time is 7:30 for Morocco and 9:15 for For Whom the Bell Tolls. Admission is free.

On Tuesday night the British Series continues with Queen of Spades, based on an eerie story by Alexander Pushkin, and starring Anton Walbrook and Dame Edith Evans. It tells the story of Herman Suvorin, a poor Captain of Engineers in St. Petersburg in the early 19th century. He carefully saves his money and dreams of acquiring great wealth. One day he reads in a strange rare book the story of the old Countess Ranevskaya who knows the secret of winning at cards. He seeks the Countess out and tries to learn her secret. She dies of fright. Then in a dream she tells him her secret. He stakes all on it and loses. William Everson describes the film as "a wonderfully florid exercise in bizarre fantasy and stylish horror... a real dilly of a horror film!" The film will be shown in B-106 Cook at 7:30 p.m.

Birth Of A Nation, Part II

(continued from page thirteen)

wrote John Adams, "can't account for the hesitancy they observe" in Congress. They wonder why "the dictates of Common Sense have not had the same influence upon the enlarged minds of their superiors that they feel on their own, and none can see the safety or happiness in a future connection with Britain, void as (the British) are of true policy, justice or humanity."

But finally, through the efforts of John and Sam Adams, Ben Franklin, and Richard Henry Lee, among others, the breakthrough came. On June 17, 1776, Lee, on behalf of the Virginia delegation, proposed calling the Revolution a revolution, and getting on with winning it. His formal statement – the Virginia Resolution – was a model of simplicity: "Resolved, that these United colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states, and that all political connection between them and the state of Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved." While the resolution was argued back and forth between the radicals and the declining group of moderates ("Their moderation," scowled Sam Adams, "has brought us to this pass; and if they were to be regarded, they would continue the conflict a century.") the Congress appointed a five-man committee to frame a declaration in conformity with the Virginia Resolution.

The answer, in part, was that it was the very radicalism of Common Sense – which seemed to hint at the abolition of all government – that made the more conservative delegates unwilling to cast off the last mooring which bound them all to certainty and security. Warren, on the other hand, believed that "People are as they should be, the harvest is mature. I can't describe the sighing after independence," he added. "It is universal. Nothing remains of that prudence, moderation or timidity with which we have so long been plagued and embarrassed."

The stage was now set. The people in every colony were demanding independence and revolution. The Second Continental Congress was now in session, and even the most reluctant and moderate of the participants felt the pressure of the times. Still, the pace of the proceedings was too slow for many of the delegates. Sam Adams claimed the Congress was turning into "a debating society." His cousin, John, added, "Some people must have time to look around them; before, behind, on the right hand, and on the left; then to think, and, after all this, to resolve." He went on to sigh, "The voice of the representatives is not always consonant with the voice of the people."

And so, after ten years of organizing, theorizing and agitating; after years in which the monarchy subverted the rights of Americans; after a decade of developing a revolutionary philosophy of government and a new vision of what it could mean to be a human being; after all of these things – an American statement of revolution, the Declaration of Independence, came to be formally written down.

Ali Outduels Frazier- -TKO In 14th After Tough Fight

Sports Shorts

The most money earned from a single sporting event is the reported $12,500,000 each by Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali in their world heavyweight boxing title fight in Madison Square Garden on March 8, 1971. This is a rate of $925.92 1/2 per second of actual fighting.

The heaviest sportsman of all time was the wrestler William J. Cobb of Macon, Georgia, who in 1962 was billed as the 802 pound "Happy Humphrey."

The world's largest swimming pool is in Casablanca, Morocco. It is 1,575 feet long and 246 feet wide, an area of 8.9 acres.

Allen R. Astles of the University of Wales potted 10,000 tiddley-winks in 3 hours, 51 minutes, 46 seconds in February, 1966.

The fastest time for running 200 yards backwards is 13.5 seconds by Bill Robinson (1878-1949)

The best standing high jump is 5 feet 9¼ inches by Johan Christian Evandt at Oslo, Norway, on March 4, 1962.

UVM, what have you been doing all this time??

by Gregory Katz

The Philippines...Manilla..." Ali...Frazier...Belinda...The Gorilla... Don King... the money, the hype, the jive....Forget it all. Because underneath the promotional bullshit are two great fighters, aging, struggling, and facing numbing pain to be champion of the world. Heavyweight Champion of the World.

Muhammad, proud and cocky, bragging, proclaiming Allah his partner, his man in the corner. And Frazier, subdued and humble, determined, facing retirement, facing old age and obscurity. Ali came out punching in the first round, his jabs snapping away at Frazier's chin, and an occasional right battering Joe's skull. Ali looks strong and aggressive, but more of a flatfooted slugger than the dancing master of the '60's. Still he looks like he can get Frazier early. Frazier does look like a gorilla, slow and ponderous, while Muhammad hits him at will. The second, the third, more of the same. Ali staggers Frazier with his combinations. Joe looks dazed, almost ready to fall. In the fourth Ali clowns on the ropes, and lures Frazier in. After absorbing some blows Ali quickly feints, and double punches Frazier. So sharp, so fast. At this point the fight looks like a massacre. Only a matter of time. But in the fifth Frazier starts putting it together. When Ali lays on the ropes Joe is there to sting him with his left hook. He batters the right side of Ali's face. Each blow makes Ali's neck snap back. Ali's counter-punches look slow, and miss their mark. It is a new fight. Frazier wins the sixth the same way, his left hook blazing through Ali's defenses. Ali is taking tremendous punishment. Frazier is bobbing and weaving, light on his feet. Ali is flatfooted, and appears to be burnt out. Frazier is the type of fighter who seems to get stronger as the fight goes on. Muhammad doesn't have the strength to dance away from Joe. The tide has turned. It keeps up this way. By the start of the tenth, though Muhammad begins to get his second wind. He can counterpunch again, though he does not look quite as sharp. Frazier keeps charging him, keeps landing his hook. The bob has gone out of Joe's step. It is Ali's round.

At the end of ten the fight is completely even. Both men have been hot, but neither could score the big punch. Both have been hit, and hit hard. Frazier's face is puffing up a little around the eyes. Ali is unmarked, but you can sense his exhaustion. You can feel how hard he is fighting for a second wind. As the eleventh begins the fans are on their feet, screaming. Ali opens with a jab, trying to open it up. Joe answers strong with a right cross. This is a slugging round, impossible to pick. These men are brawling, now, no playing on the ropes, no peek-a-boo. At one minute Frazier lands a murderous hook. Ali jerks back, dazed and hurt. But twenty seconds later he catches Joe as Joe tries to duck under a jab. Frazier's footing is weak. He staggers once. And the round ends. Still even. The tension is mounting. Something has to break, they can't go on like this. The twelfth comes and goes the same way. Both giving and taking tremendous punches, both tired, Ali collapsing on his stool at the end of the round, face drenched with sweat, breathing hard. Frazier looks confident still, but his eyes are swelling over. The fight still hangs on the next round. After 39 rounds spread out over five years these men are still even up, still looking for the edge.

The thirteenth starts. The fans in the Flynn are screaming at the screen, straining, moving. Something has to give. Joe comes out fast, his legs looking strong again. Muhammad staggers into the middle of the ring. One foot after the other. Then he explodes a left-right-left combination that staggers Frazier. The snap is there. The left jab again. It cracks against Frazier's battered face. Joe staggers, almost down. Then Frazier protects himself. But Muhammad keeps coming. The jabs so straight, so precise. But Joe will not go down. Not now, not ever will he let Ali send him to the canvas. The fans are jumping, screaming for the knockout that will not come. Ali's second wind has saved him and his title, and in the fourteenth he pounds Frazier at will. All wants the knockout, he strides at Joe, he uppercuts, he triple-jabs him one-two-three, but Frazier will not fall. At the end of the round the doctor examines Joe Frazier in his corner. His decision is swift. Frazier is not fit to fight the fifteenth. And so it ends...Ali slumped in his stool, too tired to raise his arms in victory. And Frazier numb in his corner...his head a mass of pain... and his brain trying to accept the final defeat.

After the Foreman bout Ali was a wildman, screaming his "I told you sos" across the globe. Tonight, though, Ali remains seated in his corner, surrounded by his men. The commentator fights through with his microphone. "Were you surprised, Champ?" "Yes, I was surprised at how much Joe Frazier had, how hard he kept coming." "Will you fight again?" "Once more, but this business is too painful. I might have a heart attack." "How about Joe?" "Joe Frazier is the greatest fighter of all time, except for me." Dazed, with his tired heart pounding wildly, Ali was humble. He did not try to cover the fact that he had been hurt in the tremendous brawl. For once Ali seemed human, a man of flesh and blood. And yes, also the greatest fighter of all time.

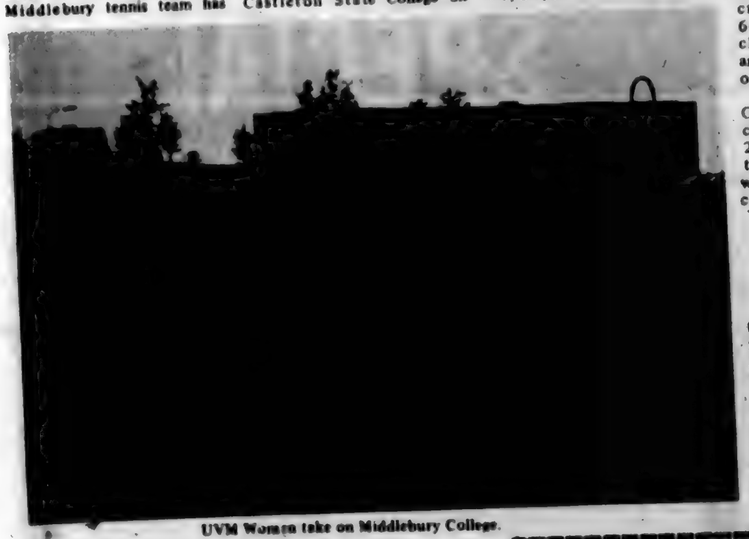
Women's Tennis Team Falters

The new strength seen in the UVM's women's varsity tennis team failed to secure them a victory against a strong Middlebury College squad last Tuesday. Vermont lost their season opener 5-2, but both the number one and number two doubles matches could have gone either way. The only wins were by Vermont's number one and number five singles players, Debi Bloom and Becky Rich. The Middlebury tennis team has given UVM trouble on the courts for the past three seasons, with only one Vermont win recorded. UVM meets Middlebury again for their last match of the season, when they hope to be at their strongest.

Tri-captains for the UVM women's tennis team for the 1975 season are Nancy Mullen (Sr.), Brownie Richards (Sr.) and Debi Bloom (Jr.). Their first home match was against Castleton State College on Tuesday, followed by a "B" team match against Trinity College on Wednesday.

Results of the Middlebury College match were as follows: Singles – D. Bloom over Mid. 6-0, 7-6; Mid. over K. McLutcher 6-2, 6-1; Mid. over N. Mullen 6-0, 6-2; Mid. over B. Hillman 6-3, 6-1; Becky Rich over Mid. 6-7,6-3,7-5.

Doubles – Mid. over A. Palmer, S. Jenny 6-4,6-4; Mid. over S. Steinbroder, K. Stanton 7-5, 6-7, 6-4.



UVM Women take on Middlebury College.

UVM Alumnus Runs First At Springbank

On Sunday, September 28, four University of Vermont runners competed among 800 other athletes in the Springbank International Road Races at London, Ontario.

Finishing first over the 100 competitors in the men's Master's 6 mile run was UVM alumnus Larry Damon, class of '55, with a time of 30:19. The 41 year old 4-time Olympic cross-country skier defeated 6-time Canadian marathon champion, Gordon Dickson and finished 31 seconds ahead of the second place runner.

Carol Degan and Jeannie Crane of the UVM Women's cross-country team finished 26th and 45th respectively in the women's 4½ mile race in which about 100 runners competed, including several members of the U.S. and Canadian National track teams. Carol's time was 27:12 and Jeannie came in with a time of 28:25.

Norm Stebbins, a graduate student at UVM, finished 54th out of the 131 runners in the 12 mile race with a time of 69:05. Competitors in the 12 mile run included Olympic marathon gold medalist Frank Shorted who was narrowly beaten by Canadian runner, Jerome Drayton, with a new record of 51:55. In third place was Bill Rodgers, Boston Marathon record holder.

Incidentally, when asked in a post-race interview what he attributed his aging success to, Larry Damon cited sex and booze as ranking high among his training priorities.

Is Skating Your Thing ?

Ten miles from campus there is a public skating facility. It's located in Essex Junction. If skating is your thing, be it hockey, figure, speed or plain recreation, Essex's rink is for you cause we got it!

Every Tuesday there is an adult only public skating session from 8:45-9:45. Lessons will be offered during this adult session and will be taught by UVM student, Carol Spence.

The various groups that skated at Essex last season found the atmosphere very pleasant and the ice surface ideal. If you are planning to enter a team in the intramural hockey league this season, why not get a jump on the others and reserve some practice or scrimmage time at the Essex Rink.

Hourly rates for group rentals are as follows: before 8:00 a.m. $25, 8:00 a.m. - 10:30 p.m. - $35; 10:30 p.m. - 12:00 a.m. $30, and after 12:00 a.m. - $25. Call Neil Mackey, Rink Manager at 879-0871 for further information.

THE FAN SPEAKS OUT

The Cynic Sports department encourages letters for all interested fans on any sports oriented subject that is on your mind. Either mail or drop them off at the Cynic office in Lower Billings.

Dear Norm Robinson,

I liked your article in the Sports Scene column of last week's Cynic. Apparently, you have been misinformed about that contraption they call a tunnel. What a lot of people don't realize is that it is actually an extremely versatile athletic facility.

One sport that I'm sure will become a big favorite with the student body, as are members of the University administration and the Vermont legislature, is tunnel book-ball. For newcomers to this fast-growing sport I will explain the rules:

The sport is played in a corregated galvanized steel culvert of the dimensions being installed in the UVM facility under Main Street. The culvert will be divided into fifteen foot segments perpendicular to its longitudinal axis. Each of these segments will be one court (advanced players may be familiar with completely walled versions where walls are installed every fifteen feet. The Burlington fire inspector disallowed this for our facility because sufficient means of egress were not allowed for.) Waterlogged tennis balls are the official ball of the USTBBA (U. S. Tunnel Book-Ball Association). These can be found under the hockey bleachers after the Tennis Team practices in Gutterson. The ball is played with a book in a similar manner to racketball. Offical books can be purchased at the book store for $45.00, used for $44.00. (You may sell your used book back to the book store for $3.50.) The rest of the rules are like handball and racket ball except that students using the tunnel to go to class may, during the ten-minute period immediately prior to and after the starting of classes, play the ball once as they cross each court, providing they carry a regulation book, and doing so only once for each class. The University is posting a security guard at the tunnel facility to referee matches, and rule on disputed calls and collect intramural scores. Reservations can be made a day in advance at the cage provided you can call between the hours of 8:05 and 8:08 in the morning. Friday night is Faculty-Staff night.

There are of course other uses for this facility so you should check the schedule before you make your plans. One other such use is an obvious attempt to replace UVM football. In this game half the students from Living/Learning, MAT, Harris-Millis and all the dorms on the Redstone campus will assemble on each side of Main Street. At a predetermined time they will rush from their side of the street with an armload of books to the other. The winning side will be the side with the most people across in ten minutes. The elevators and stairways to the tunnel may both be used. Penalties will be assessed for students attempting to cross Main Street by means other than the tunnel. Also points will be deducted for any rapes, robberies or lost books. Points will be added for handicapped persons successfully making the crossing.

To the informed, it's obvious that this half million dollar athletic facility is a bargain at any price.

See you there!

Chris Brown

What college women are being pinned with.

Put it all together in Air Force ROTC.

NAVY

Surplus Sweaters

Crew Neck $7.49
Turtleneck $7.99

SHEPARDS PIE IN THE SKY

22 Church St. A Surplus Store

BAILEY'S

MUSIC ROOMS

Serving You For Over a Century

88 CHURCH ST.
BURLINGTON, VT.

863-3210

One of the largest selections in Vt.

Records & Tapes

At Every Day Low Prices

N. Edward Bartlett

Elmer L. Nicholson

Plans have been finalized for the seventh annual University of Vermont Athletic Hall of Fame Dinner, October 10, set for the Simpson Dining Hall on UVM's Redstone Campus.

The dinner, slated for 7 pm, will honor seven former University athletes and the recently retired athletic business manager.

Tickets for the affair, the highlight of this year's Homecoming Weekend (October 10-11), may be purchased at the University's Athletic Ticket Office, Room

PFG S

Weekend o

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 3
GYM – Faculty-Staff n
POOL – Faculty-Staff
TENNIS – Faculty-Sta
TRACK – Faculty-Staf
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4
GYM – Students 1–5
POOL – Students 1–5
TENNIS – Students 1
TRACK – Students 1
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 5
GYM – Students 2/3 C
POOL – Students 1–5
TENNIS – Students 1
TRACK – Students 1
HANDBALL AND SQUAS
Call 656-3069.*
All recreation may be special events.
MONDAY through THURS
POOL – Students 7
Tuesday, Wednesday, Thu
ALL OTHER FACILI

IN S

MENS
CROSS COUNTRY
Oct. 4 vs. Williams
Oct. 8 – State Meet
SOCCER
Oct. 4 vs. Massachuse
(A)
Oct. 8 vs. St. Mike's
3:00 p.m.
TENNIS
Oct. 4 vs. Massachu
(A)
RUGBY
Oct. 4 vs. McGill (H)
p.m.
BASEBALL
Oct. 4 vs. Keene Stat
1:30 p.m.
Oct. 5 vs. North Ada
(A)

WOMENS
CROSS COUNTRY
Oct. 4 – State Meet

WEAVER'S WEB
30 Barre Street
Montpelier, Vermont
223-6989

Looms, spinning wheels, fibers and tools for handweaver and spinner, macrame supplies. Age Looms, Harrisville, Schach Ashford. Group classes, instruction. Studio availabe. Visitors & w welcome.

Open Tuesday thru Sa 10 a.m. – 5 p.m., closed S & Monday.

Vermont Athletic Hall Of Fame Dinner

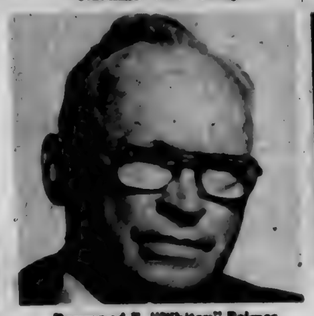
N. Edward Bartlett

Natalino "Nat" Campana

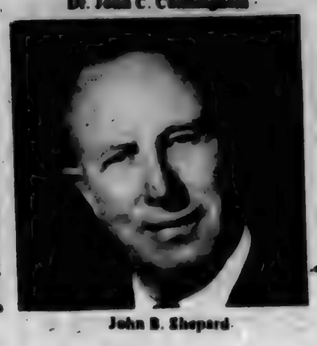
Dr. John C. Cunningham

Olney W. Hill

Elmer L. Nicholson



Raymond E. "Whitey" Palmer



John B. Shepard

John A. Smith

Plans have been finalized for the seventh annual University of Vermont Athletic Hall of Fame Dinner, October 10, set for the Simpson Dining Hall on UVM's Redstone Campus.

The dinner, slated for 7 pm, will honor seven former University athletes and the recently retired athletic business manager.

Tickets for the affair, the highlight of this year's Homecoming Weekend (October 10-11), may be purchased at the University's Athletic Ticket Office, Room 206. Tickets ($8.00 each, to include dinner and refreshments) must be purchased in advance of the evening.

A tour of the Athletic Hall of Fame Room has been scheduled from 10 am to 6 pm, October 10, and the room is open for the general public. Refreshments will be served. Also, a reception will precede the dinner at 6 pm at Simpson.

Scheduled to be honored this year are N. Edward Bartlett, UVM's athletic business manager since 1946; Natalino "Nat" Campana, '54; the late Dr. John C. Cunningham, '31; the late Olney W. Hill, '26; Elmer L. Nicholson, '39; Raymond E. "Whitey" Palmer, '35; John B. Shepard, '22; and John A' Smith, '28.

Bartlett, who retired in June after serving 29 years as the school's athletic business manager, has been active in several civic organizations the last 30 years, including the Kiwanis Club and the Burlington Boys Club. Always involved in UVM's athletic program, he most recently served on the school's Athletic Hall of Fame Committee.

Campana is considered by many, including UVM's long-time athletic director and football coach, J. Edward Donnelly, "the finest receiver ever to play football at Vermont." He now lives in Santa Ana, California.

Cunningham was a big booster of UVM athletics, particularly its fast-growing hockey program. This prominent eye surgeon, who passed away in 1971, also served for many years on the University's Athletic Council and was the past president of the Medical Alumni of UVM.

The late Olney Hill was a "sincere friend" of the University's track program since his days as a star performer in the mid-20's. The Olney Hill Award is now presented to the top field event performer at the annual State Collegiate Track Meet every spring.

Another inductee is Elmer Nicholson, the only member of his class ('37) to win three varsity letters in one season (basketball, baseball, and tennis). A former trustee, Nicholson is now retired and living in Chicago.

"Whitey" Palmer was one of the top basketball players to wear the Green and Gold in the 30's. A starter for three years with the varsity, he was also president of his class ('35). Currently the treasurer of the Corbin and Palmer Funeral Home, Inc., he lives in Burlington.

Another track star was UVM's John B. Shepard of Calabasas, Calif., a retired educator who was president of Pierce College in Los Angeles. Shepard ran cross country and specialized in the 880, an event he held the UVM record in for 27 years.

The final honoree is former Hofstra baseball coach, John A. Smith, who was a standout football and baseball player at UVM. Smith went on to be one of the most respected collegiate coaches in the East. He coached for 20 years at Hofstra. Smith is now retired and residing in Newport Richey, Fl.

The University of Vermont athletic shrine was started in 1969 and has since honored 39 athletes.

'B' Soccer Ties Vt. Tech

The UVM "B" Soccer team played its second game of the season last week, tying Vt. Tech College, 1-1. Vermont Tech opened the scoring early in the first half in a rain soaked game at Randolph, Vermont.

In the second half it was all UVM as the Cats outshot Vt. Tech in that half, 18-5. Dick Hall's goal, with only two minutes left, tied it up and sent the game into overtime. The "B" team's only other game was a 3-1 loss to the same Vt. Tech team the week before.

The "B" squad will be facing a tough challenge this week in Norwich on Wednesday, and a strong St. Lawrence team on Friday.

Coach Bruce Casagrande feels that the team has the talent to have a highly successful season.

Leading the offense will be Doug Powell, a freshman who has been outstanding in both games against Vt. Tech. Playing line with Powell are Mark "Pele" Dowhan, Darrell Grout, and Keith Allen. Coach Casagrande feels that the strength of the team position has been at the halfback position. "We have great depth at halfback with people like Dick Hall, Witt Hartt, Jeff Darrow, George Varga, John Ham, Kim Lowell, and Dan Crocker. We also depend on our fullbacks for offense. We have been getting excellent play from our goalies, Lee Garvin and Rob Woods.

Draft Horse Days

Wagon wheels will roll once again in Vermont's Northeast Kingdom the weekend of October 3-5 when New England Draft Horse Days is held in Craftsbury Common.

The annual event is being sponsored by Sterling School on its campus farm as a benefit for the Heifer Project International, the organization which contributes livestock of many species, including draft horses, to make families around the world more self-sufficient.

Friday, October 3, is a practice day. Saturday, October 4, is devoted to a 10-mile Wagon Marathon drive. Sunday morning will see the start of the teamster obstacle courses and the log-skidding classes.

There is no entry fee for draft horse exhibitors, and stabling and hay are provided. Spectators are welcome and will be asked to make a donation to Heifer Project International, which is a tax-deductible charity.

The Executive Director of Heifer Project, Ed Geers, who is coming from its headquarters in Little Rock, Arkansas, to participate in the activities, will be the guest speaker at a public supper Saturday night.

Tickets to the supper may be reserved by calling Sterling at 802-586-2561 during office hours.

Women's X-Country Season Open

UVM Women's Cross-Country team opened their season at Johnson on Tuesday, September 23, with a decisive victory over Johnson State College. The runners swept the first four places and ended up with a near perfect score of 19 to 36. (In cross-country, as in golf, the lowest score wins.)

Finishing first was leader of the pack, Captain Carol Degan. Degan, back for her third season, ran the course in an impressive time of 22:51. Next to finish was sophomore Kathy Glenney with a time of 24:55. One minute behind was junior Jane Griffith, followed by Bev Howell. Johnson State runners captured the next four places, followed by Freshman runner Joan Griffin taking ninth in her first race for UVM.

The 3.5 mile course was a rugged one which included wet fields and steep hills all along a wooded, narrow, slippery trail. The wet leaves and mud tested each runner's agility and several spectacular falls occurred.

Coach Perry Bland feels the girls ran an excellent race, and is looking forward to the upcoming State Meet at Middlebury on October 8.

Basketball Manager

Anyone wishing to help the Varsity Basketball Team as a manager, please contact Coach Salzberg at Patrick Gym.

PFG Schedule

Weekend of October 3, 4, 5

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 3
- GYM – Faculty-Staff none.
- POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.; 7–8 children.
- TENNIS – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
- TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4
- GYM – Students 1–5 and 7–10 p.m.
- POOL – Students 1–5 and 7–10 p.m.
- TENNIS – Students 1–5 and 7–10 p.m.
- TRACK – Students 1–5 and 7–10 p.m.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 5
- GYM – Students 2/3 Gym 1–5 p.m.
- POOL – Students 1–5 p.m.
- TENNIS – Students 1–5 p.m.
- TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
- POOL – Students 7–8:30 on Monday; 7–10:30 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday.
- ALL OTHER FACILITIES – Students 7–8 p.m.

THIS WEEK IN SPORT

MENS

CROSS COUNTRY
- Oct. 4 vs. Williams – (A)
- Oct. 8 – State Meet – (A)

SOCCER
- Oct. 4 vs. Massachusetts – (A)
- Oct. 8 vs. St. Mike's – (H) 3:00 p.m.

TENNIS
- Oct. 4 vs. Massachusetts (A)

RUGBY
- Oct. 4 vs. McGill (H) 2:00 p.m.

BASEBALL
- Oct. 4 vs. Keene State (H) 1:30 p.m.
- Oct. 5 vs. North Adams – (A)

FIELD HOCKEY
- Oct. 3-4 vs. Bridgewater – (A)
- Oct. 7 vs. Plymouth – (A)

TENNIS
- Oct. 4 vs. Green Mt. – (A)
- Oct. 7 vs. Plymouth State – (A)

SOCCER
- Oct. 3 vs. Keene State – (A)

WOMENS

CROSS COUNTRY
- Oct. 4 – State Meet – (A)

WEAVER'S WEB
39 Barre Street
Montpelier, Vermont
223-6839

Looms, spinning wheels, yarns, fibers and tools for the handweaver and spinner. Also macrame supplies. Agent for Leclerc, Harrisville, Schacht and Ashford. Group classes. Private instruction. Studio space available. Visitors & students welcome.

Open Tuesday thru Saturday 10 a.m. – 5 p.m., closed Sunday & Monday.

NECTORS

Super Entertainment
PINE ISLAND STRING BAND
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY NIGHTS

Enjoy the fast service of a Cafeteria Buffet . . or for Leisurly dining, let us do the work - table service available and SPECIALS EVERYDAY

NECTORS
188 MAIN STREET, BURLINGTON

Pre-season
SKI CLOTHING and
SKI EQUIPMENT
SALE

SKI PARKAS — Men's, Ladies', Children's — up to 50% off

SKI SWEATERS — Good Selection — up to 60% off

Last Season's SKIS — up to 50% off
by Rossignol, K2, Olin, Dynamic, Head, Volkl, Kneissel, Northland, Yamaha

Last Season's Ski BOOTS — up to 60% off
by Nordica, Hanson, Dolomite, Caber, Technica, Lange, K2, Henke, Humanic, Koflach, Rieker

Professional Wet Belt SKI TUNE UP — $7.95
Includes edge sharpening, bottom grinding, hot waxing, edge deburring, binding lubrication, etc.

ALPINE SHOP
WILLISTON ROAD, SO. BURLINGTON
OPEN DAILY 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.

sports

Tennis Team Outclasses Maine

by Scott Curtis

The UVM Tennis Team continued its defense of the Yankee Conference title with a strong 8-1 win over U Maine this Saturday. The team continues to be in a class of its own, as it romped over two opponents the previous week in the Cardinal Classic in Plattsburgh.

Co-captain Kirk Dice led the way for the Catamounts with some powerful tennis in the first singles match. Dice spotted Maine's Tom Hallet a 6-1 advantage in the first set, and then went to work. He took five straight games to capture the first set. Hallet was kept deep by Dice's strong serve and fine net play. When Hallet came to the net, the UVM captain drove low groundstrokes that exasperated Maine's number one player. On Gutterson's fast court, Dice was especially tough, and he took the second set with ease, 6-2.

Despite a bad cold, co-captain Tom Lenci played well, taking Chris Parsons, 6-2,6-1. Then Lenci teamed with Dice to take the first doubles, 6-2,6-3. After some first set troubles, Scott Turban came around to overpower Maine's Derek Lundberg, 7-6, 6-1. Kevin DeLaney made quick work of Bob Salt, 6-1, 6-2. He joined with Turban for a strong 6-2, 6-2, doubles win. Jeff DeLuca beat a tough Abe Parvanta, 6-2, 5-7, 6-0. Maine's only win came as Peter Pollet out-played Paul Weber, 7-6, 6-3. Weber later joined the winner's side, as he and DeLuca took the abbreviated final match, 10-4.

This Maine team was vastly improved from last year. They forced the champs to play well before the small group of fans at Gutterson. Unfortunately, Saturday's match was the final home contest for the Catamounts.

Action during Boston University — Vermont soccer game SPS Photo: R. Law

Cats Destroy B.U.

by Rita Bruce

After coming off a tough overtime victory against Plattsburgh State, the University of Vermont Catamounts seemed to do just about everything right on the soccer field here Saturday as they defeated Boston University, 3 to 1. If it hadn't been for a successful penalty kick by Boston's Vincente Carbonna, the Terriers would not have had anything to show for their grim efforts. The penalty kick came at 17:03 of the first half to give Boston the lead 1 to 0.

Vermont gallantly fought to tie the score, but tremendous goal-tending by Ken McLeod foiled their efforts. Then with eight minutes left in the first half, Gil Low put the Cats on the board. His goal, the first of two for him in the game, was assisted by Rick Whidden. At the end of the first half, the game remained tied at 1 to 1. The Catamounts completely dominated the first portion of the contest with twenty-three shots on goal compared to only two for the Terriers.

The final half of the game opened with Vermont looking even better than before. After only minutes of the half had gone by, Whidden scored UVM's second goal. Fullback Brian Hunt assisted him to give the Cats a 2 to 1 lead.

McLeod continued to make brilliant plays on every potential goal that was kicked to him. UVM pressured McLeod endlessly, but came up with nothing. However, with just minutes left in the game, Low scored his second goal of the day with fullback Carl Christianson assisting.

The Catamounts again had twenty-three shots on goal. Boston University came up with no shots on goalie Jim Taft in the final half. The Terriors had the ball on their portion of the field a maximum of only five times during the entire second half.

McLeod ended up with twenty-four saves while Taft had two for the Cats. The men in green and gold completely overwhelmed Boston. It was a fantastic win for UVM and somewhat of a frustrating day for the Terriers. Vermont next plays Massachusetts on the 4th. Their next home game will be against St. Michael's College on the 8th of October. It should prove to be a very exciting contest.

UVM FRUSTRATED AT UCONN

by Scott Curtis

The UVM Tennis Team travelled to Storrs on Tuesday and expected to return with a clear indication of their title hopes. Instead, a slow surface, some costly mistakes, and darkness left UVM with an unsatisfying 4-4 tie. UVM's Paul Weber and Jeff De Luca were leading in the final sets of the last doubles match when the contest was halted because of darkness.

Kird Dice stood out once again for UVM. He took his singles match handily, 6-3, 6-2, and he and Tom Lenci came through with a 6-3, 6-4, doubles win. Everyone else on the UVM squad struggled. Scott Turban again had first set troubles, but he overcame them to eke out a 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 win. Jeff DeLuca went three sets for a victory. In another three setter, Kevin DeLaney had triple set point at 5-3 in the final set, and he could not put Ken Peterson away.

Saturday, UVM will travel to Amherst for a 1:00 match with top calibre UMass. This is the final dual meet before the big Yankee Conference Championships the following Saturday at UNH.

SCORES

Kirk Dice (UVM) over Don Mattran (UC) 6-3, 6-2
Pete Young (UC) over Tom Lenci (UVM) 7-6, 6-1
Scott Turban (UVM) over Geoff Burnham (UC) 2-6, 6-4, 7-6
Ken Peterson (UC) over Kevin DeLaney (UVM) 6-3, 1-6, 7-5
Jim Peterson (UC) over Paul Weber (UVM) 6-0, 6-3
Jeff DeLuca (UVM) over Dave Seidman (UC) 7-6, 1-6, 6-3
Dice-Lenci (UVM) over Young-Peterson (UC) 6-3, 6-4
Mattran-Burnham (UC) over DeLaney-Turban (UVM) 0-6, 7-6, 6-1
Peterson-McGrath (UVM)-split with Weber-DeLuca (UC) 3-6, 6-4, 4-2* (V)
*called, darkness

Rugby Team Crushes Albany

The UVM team won its second game in a row defeating Albany State by a score of 31 to 4. UVM scored first when Jeff Thomas scored a 3-point penalty kick following an offside infraction by Albany State. The Cats continued to put pressure on Albany State, keeping play within Albany's 30-yard line for most of the game. UVM was able to score its first try of the game when Greg Smith picked up the ball off a poor kick by Albany's fullback and ran 15 yards into the end zone for a 4-point try. Thomas converted for 2 points.

UVM again capitalized on another Albany miscue when Charles Thornburn intercepted a lateral off of the Albany scrum half and ran 80 yards for another 4-point try. Thomas again converted for 2 points. The first half ended with Thomas scoring two more penalty kicks, making the half-time score UVM 21, Albany State 0.

The second half saw UVM attempt to sit on the lead and they were generally outplayed by Albany for the first 15 minutes, with Albany finally breaking through UVM's forwards for a 4-point try. UVM then retook charge of the game with UVM's forwards applying continued pressure to Albany's backfield. UVM again scored when a kick was blocked and the ball was taken into Albany's end zone by Paul Hodlin. The conversion was missed. Several minutes later another kick was blocked and carried across for another score by Charles Thornburn. Jeff Thomas converted for another two points giving him 15 points for the game.

In three games, Thomas has scored 40 points and has broken the season scoring record of 38 points set last year by Marcel Bergeron which was set over a 10 game period.

"B" TEAM WINS

The "B" team made it three games in a row winning its match against the Albany State "B" team by a score of 9 to 0. UVM dominated play throughout the first half but was unable to develop a sustained attack from its backfield and could not score in the first half.

The second half saw UVM again dominate full position when Tom Novak was able to kick the ball through Albany's backfield and then fall on the ball in the end zone for a 4-point try. Mick Morselli added a 2-point conversion. UVM then put the game away with two minutes remaining when Jeff Treveline took a ball from the UVM scrum and drop-kicked a 3-point drop-goal making the final score 9 to 0.

UVM will now play its stiffest collegiate competition when it faces McGill University of Montreal, a team which defeated UVM last fall by a 26 to 12 margin. The game will be played at the Archie Post Field, Saturday, October 4 at 2 p.m.

Sports Short

Joe Spring (S.F. Seals, Pacific Coast League) caught a baseball dropped from an airplane at about 1000 feet over Treasure Island, in S. F. Bay in 1939. The force of the falling ball and the manner he caught it broke his jaw.

Women's Ski Team Meeting

There will be an organizational meeting for all women interested in skiing on the UVM Ski Team in either alpine or nordic events on Thursday, Oct. 2, 1975, in the South Lounge, Southwick Building. The coaches are Perry Bland, Nordic, and Marilyn Cochran, Alpine. The schedule for this season is:

Jan. 23-24 – St Lawrence University
Jan 30-31 – Colby-Sawyer and New England College
Feb 6-7 – Univ. of Maine
Feb 13-14 – Dartmouth Carnival
Feb. 20-21 – Williams Carnival
Feb. 27-28 – Middlebury Carnival, Division I Championships.

For further information, call Janice Lange, Physical Education Dept., X3240.

'Lady Luck' Leads Cats Past Plattsburgh

by Norm Robinson

Some say that the mark of a good team is when that team plays poorly and still wins. Others say that an athletic event depends both on talent and a certain degree of luck. Well, the University of Vermont soccer squad proved both statements true last Wednesday.

The Plattsburgh State Red Cardinals invaded Centennial Field last week, and put up strong resistance as the Cats edged out a 3 - 2 overtime win. It wasn't what you'd call a great day for soccer, or anything with sub-average temperatures. It had to be even a worse day for the Plattsburgh squad as they saw two fluke goals go by their goaltender, and then losing in overtime on a penalty shot.

The Cardinals got called for "playing the man" inside the penalty area, early in the first overtime period and John Koener fired home a high blast to the right of Plattsburgh goalie Matt Ellman. Vermont held on throughout the overtime periods to gain their second victory of the season.

UVM's first goal was indicative of what was to follow. Just 57 seconds into the contest, Carl Christiansen got a corner kick for the Catamounts. His shot was right at Ellman, who bobbled the ball. John Koener was in the right place at the right time as he moved in and slipped the ball past the disgusted goaltender.

The Cats continued to dominate the first half, but several opportunities went by the boards when UVM players were called for off-sides. The Vermont halfbacks were controlling mid-field throughout most of the half, but Plattsburgh came back to tie the score on a great effort by Nick Goddard.

John Walters fed the ball to Goddard from the left corner and the halfback spun around and found the top right-hand corner with a perfectly placed shot from 15 yards out.

Momentum shifted at this juncture, as the Cardinals took the play to UVM. Walters got in free on UVM goalie Jim Taft but his shot sailed over the net, and Daniel Mannero hit the post.

The Catamounts were rewarded by "Lady Luck" a second time, when Rick Whidden hit a corner kick from the left side. For no apparent reason, fullback Chris Harvey let the ball by him and it caught the short side, past the surprised Ellman. Although it should have been 1 – 0, Plattsburgh at half-time, it turned out to be 2 - 1 Vermont.

The second half saw both sides playing even in the early going. Play got rugged as both sides failed to finish off plays. The field was extremely treacherous by this time, as it was nearly impossible to make a sharp cut without falling.

With less than a minute left, Tom Harrington got a pass from Jeff-Trombly and let loose a shot. The ball deflected off UVM's Brian Hunt, shifted direction and caught Taft going the wrong way.

Regulation time ran out, bringing about the two, 10-minute overtime periods, and the ensuing penalty shot by Koener.

The two halves seemed like night and day for Vermont. The Cats outshot Plattsburgh 15 - 5 in the first half with Taft making three saves to Ellman's eleven. In the second half, shots on goal registered seven apiece, with Taft having four saves and Ellman two.

Final statistics, including the overtime periods, had Vermont with 29 shots to 13 for Plattsburgh and Taft recording eight saves to Ellman's 15.

Probably let down after their great win over Connecticut, and looking forward to last Saturday's game with Boston University, the Cats had to feel fortunate to win. Plattsburgh State has an excellent soccer squad with much talent. Tom Harrington and Dan Marreno were trouble for Vermont all afternoon. On the plus side, Mark Heidrich and freshman Dave Verrier were stand-outs for UVM, with Koerner, Stevenson, and Christianson doing their normally outstanding jobs.

Was it luck, or a good team winning when it played bad? I suspect it was a little of both, but a win just the same.

The Largest Selection Of Lee In New England!
19½ CHURCH STREET
(Over Joanna Town)
Mon.-Sat. 10-5:30
Fri. 10-9:00
JEANS NORTH

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
SPECIALIST IN FOREIGN CAR REPAIR
ENGINE REBUILDING—TUNE-UP—STEAM CLEANING · UNDERCOATING · ALIGNMENT · SPIN BALANCING
FUEL INJECTION ANALIZER
WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
560X15 SNOW TIRES
29.95 ! inc. fet & mting
Fits most VW Bugs & Saab V4
862-7686
878-8607
ROUTE 2 WILLISTON, VT.
RAMPOE FREE WRECKER SERVICE

VERMONT CYNIC

'Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont

VOLUME XCIV NUMBER 20 FOUNDED IN 1883 OCTOBER 2, 1975 5

OCTOBERFEST

Octoberfest:A Tradition

Oktoberfest has become perhaps the largest universally observed ethnic celebration in America. Many people have asked, why Oktoberfest? Why not a Marchfest or a Decemberfest? Thousands of harvest merry makers haven't the slightest idea of the tradition and background of Oktoberfest. It dates back to the Fall of 1810, the year that the Crown Prince of Bavaria married Princess Therese Saxe-Hildburghausen. A soldier organized horse races and rifle competitions in honor of the royal couple. The contests and festivities were so well received that they were repeated every anniversary.

Beer and plenty of it available at the Octoberfest

Jewelry displayed during the Festivities.

Fraulein Schenk – Last year's Octoberfest Cuckoo

Oktoberfest comes once a year, and with it comes all the gaiety and excitement befitting a celebration for this time of year.

Co-sponsored by the Redstone Area Campus and the Student Association, Oktoberfest will be held on Saturday, Oct 11, from noon until five. The Redstone Campus will be recreated to resemble a German Village and will present a huge assortment of activities, displays, cuisine, and music.

This year's Oktoberfest will feature a rock-climbing exhibition, yodeling contest, puppet show and other exciting events. As a special treat, there will be a Bavarian Creme Pie eating contest in which the winner will be awarded an appropriate first prize and several alka seltzers upon request.

There will be craft booths and exhibits galore. A giant cuckoo clock, complete with volunteers acting as the cuckoos, will serve as announcers of all the events and activities of the day. Exhibits range from special displays put on by the residence halls of Redstone Campus to a re-creation of a German farm, animals and all.

To add to all the merriment and mirth, there will be a giant beer garden and German bands. There will be ample room to dance and enjoy and partake of all the festivities and sample the many food booths filled with authentic German cuisine, which Saga meal coupons can purchase.

In the event of inclement weather, Oktoberfest will be held in the Gutterson Field-House from noon until five.

As a celebration of the season, Oktoberfest this year is geared towards providing a fun-filled day for all the visitors and guests coming for Parents' Weekend and Homecoming.

ON UNH'S REDSTONE CAMPUS

NOON TILL FIVE

Come to the Octoberfest

calendar annoucements

Alcoholism Talk

Tonight, October 9, at 8:00 p.m., an informative and interesting program on Alcoholism will take place in the WDW lounge. The forum, sponsored by University Health Services, will take the form of a panel discussion, with experts in several fields participating. A member of the Burlington Police Department will give a demonstration of the "Breathalyzer" test, as well as covering the various legal aspects of alcohol consumption. A counselor from the Alcohol Information Center will be on hand, as well as a local physician, to review alcohol's affect on our bodies. A psychiatrist from the UVM Medical School will discuss his work concerning alcohol's effects on communication and social interaction. A question and answer period will follow the presentations.

So, save an hour tonight and stop in at the WDW lounge at 8:00 p.m. for an enlightening session on a topic that we are all, in some way, involved with.

Peace Corps Visits UVM

On Thursday, October 23, the College of Education and Social Services Office of Career Planning and Placement will host a visitor from the Peace Corps. Beth Hitchcock, regional representative, will be available to talk with and supply any necessary information about teaching and working for the Peace Corps. The meeting will be held at 11:00 a.m. in Room 456 Waterman.

Any interested student should contact the office in room 237 Waterman, ext. 3477.

SA Concerts Open Meeting

Monday, October 13, at 3:30 p.m. at Marsh Lounge in Billings Center. Here is an opportunity to ask questions and make complaints or suggestions to the concert bureau. SA Concerts will also present a preview of coming attractions and possibilities.

OVP

Wanted – Person interested in tutoring a sixth grade girl in reading and math for one hour a day, five days a week.

Wanted – Person with editorial and layout skills to help with a local paper in the south end of Burlington.

Wanted – Person with coaching skills to coach a fifth grade softball team.

Wanted – Person interested in working with food co-op program at housing project for the elderly in Burlington.

Wanted – Person with skills in arts and crafts to work at local grade school.

Help Wanted

Wanted – People willing to spend 3-5 hours a week tutoring 13-18 year old students in various subject areas.

Further information on any of the above is available at the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, UVM, 656-2062. Many other unlisted positions are also waiting to be taken. Reach out.

Attention Psych Majors

The psychology faculty would like to meet with all psychology majors to discuss graduate school programs and careers in psychology on Friday, October 17 at 3:15 p.m. in room 212, John Dewey Hall. All majors are urged to attend.

Skiers, You Missed It

Did you miss the first University of Vermont Ski Club meeting. Eighty five enthusiastic skiers attended and elected temporary officers.

Plans were made for the fourth annual Ski Show, which will be Saturday November eighth, and committees were formed to get the show rolling. A film of the 1975 World Championships was shown, and a representative of Western Ski Vacations discussed the clubs Christmas trip to Aspen. The trip will be January third through tenth, with a total cost of three hundred dollars. Anyone interested should contact Don at 863-9881.

The club is planning many other activities, including conditioning hikes, club races during the winter, and participation in the Winter Carnival. There will be a racing contingent attending Eastern's Races. Discounts for club members, weekend trips, and equipment clinics are in the works.

So if you enjoy skiing, talking skiing, and having a good time on the snow, come to our next meeting on October fourteenth. Keep your eyes open for details, and Get Psyched!

Vacancy On VPIRG Board

There is a vacancy on the VPIRG student board of trustees. Any UVM student who is interested in being on the VPIRG board should contact John King (3084).

Trustees form the VPIRG policies and decide what issues VPIRG will get involved in. They also act as a liason between students and the VPIRG staff.

There will be a meeting of the VPIRG trustees from UVM this Monday evening and every Monday evening at 5 p.m. in Conference Room C at Billings Center. All interested students are welcome. Tell us what you want VPIRG to be for you.

Hard Times for $1

Hard Times, starring Charles Bronson and James Coburn, will be shown this Thursday at Century Plaza (Dorset Street) from 4:00 - 6:00 p.m.

This special showing, sponsored by the Contemporary Cinema class, costs only $1. Tickets were on sale this week, and every week near the Billings information desk on Wednesday from 12:15 - 2:00 p.m. Tickets will also be on sale at the door at 3:30 p.m. Tickets are also available from Mrs. Schwinn at the main office in Pomeroy Hall.

Next week – Check next week's Cynic.

Women Of UVM

Married UVM women students and wives of UVM students are invited to join the interest groups of the Women of UVM.

Those groups range from hiking and skiing to a book group, to quilting and home arts...to mention a few.

If you'd like to find out more, just call Diane Hill at 658-3449.

Nurse's Meeting

Dr. Phyllis J. Verhonick, Professor, School of Nursing, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia will be the guest of the School of Nursing on Monday, October 20, 1975. She will participate in classes during the day and present two sessions on her research on skin care and its application to nursing practice.

The meetings, open to students, faculty and agency staff, are scheduled at 10:30 a.m. in Burgess Residence Assembly Room and at 4:00 p.m. in 103 Rowell. Dr. Verhonick, a well-known nurse researcher, teacher and administrator, earned her M.A. degree and Ed.D. degree from Columbia University.

Lysistrata Opens Oct. 16

Lysistrata, Aristophanes' comic farce of 5th Century Athens, opens this Thursday, the 16th, at the Royall Tyler Theatre, and will run through October 19th.

Call 656-2094 for information and reservations.

The Box Office is open from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Public Forum Next Thurs.

Members of the university community are invited to attend a public forum entitled "Some Unmet Problems of the Region" to be held on Thursday, October 16, from 12:00 – 1:30 at the First Congregational Church, 38 S. Winooski Ave., Burlington. This meeting is sponsored by the Community Council of Greater Burlington. Those who wish to do so may reserve lunch by calling 862-5010 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. weekdays. Reservations must be made by Wednesday, October 15. The price for members is $1.75 and $2.00 for non-members. Space is available in the meeting hall for those who do not want to buy lunch but do want to listen.

Girl Scouts Open Thrift Shop

The Champlain Council of Camp Fire Girls announces the opening of their new thrift shop at 73 Church Street, upstairs, Burlington. The time has come for Camp Fire, as it has for many other small agencies to fund themselves. Our local community services funding has been drastically cut, and from this emerges our new thrift shop. We serve many low income families. These children already know what it is like to be poor, but they have been able to participate in Camp Fire. We are not going to say to these children, "Sorry, no more Camp Fire, we have no more money." Instead, we will try to raise the money we need the best way that we can.

We need to have some students to volunteer to start a clothing drive for us at UVM. We also need customers, we already have a small, but nice selection of clothes.

The thrift shop is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. Closed for lunch 12-1.

We are also still looking for some students to volunteer their services to help lead a Camp Fire Group, two hours one day a week. We would also like to invite any sororities or fraternities to sponsor a low income or special education group. We have a truck available for clothing pick-up, if necessary.

The Box Office is now open every day for anyone wishing to purchase a ticket for "Lysistrata" – the first major production of the season at Royall Tyler Theatre, showing Oct. 16-19. Tickets cost $1.50 with a UVM ID, and $3 for regular admission. For more information call 656-2094.

Al Fleming Museum through Nov. 9th: "Vermont Photography '75," a juried exhibition of work by Vermont Photographers. Through Spring of '76 "Collectors and Collections," which highlights the collections of six donors to the Museum, and "Traditional Africa," both in the second floor galleries.

A reminder that the next Lane Series attraction is "Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope," on Monday, Oct. 13. Tickets for it and the remaining concerts are available from The Lane Office, 234 Waterman, tel. 656-3418.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9

3:10 p.m., EMBA College open lecture series, "Earthquake Engineering," by Dr. Jeffrey P. Laible, Room B-106 Cook.

4:15 p.m., Faculty meeting, Graduate College, Room 103 Rowell Bldg.

7:30 p.m., SA Films American Actress series present "Devil Is a Woman," starring Marlene Dietrich, Lionel Atwill, and Edward Everett Horton, B-106 Cook Bldg., admission free.

7:30 p.m., Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship is holding a series of small group Bible studies on various doctrines of Christianity. Held in 206 Tupper.

7:30 – 9 p.m., Living Literature "Oral Interpretation Showcase," 216 Commons, Living/Learning. Admission free, refreshments served.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center study group, "What Should Our Schools Be Doing?" No admission.

8 p.m., A lecture co-sponsored by the Depts. of Anthropology and Physics. Prof. Anthony F. Aveni, Astronomy Department of Colgate College: "Observatories In Ancient America." Cook B-112.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 10

Oct. 10–11 is Homecoming and Parents' Weekend.

12 noon, open lunch hour at the Counseling and Testing Center, 146 S. Williams St. A time for all friends, old and new, to join for informal visiting, exchange of ideas and getting acquainted.

1 – 4 p.m., UVM apples are on sale at Horticulture Research Center.

1:30 p.m., Physics Colloquium, Prof. Lloyd M. Lambert, Jr., Electrical Engineering Dept., "A Magnetosonic Image Converter," Held in A-402 Cook (B-104 as alternate), and followed by coffee in Cook A-429. Everyone is invited.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four," open house at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Admission free.

7:30 & 9:30 p.m., Lane Film Society Series presents Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid & The Idle Class," Benedict Auditorium, Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. Tickets are $1.00 for a single film, and $5.00 for the season, available at the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, or call 656-341 8.

7:30 & 10 p.m., SA Films "The Biggies" series presents "Catch 22," the 1970 film starring Alan Arkin, Martin Balsam, Jon Voigt, and Orson Welles. Admission is $1 at B-106 Cook.

8 p.m., UVM Folk Dance Club meets at Southwick Ballroom. Instruction for all levels. Further information from Ben Bergstein at 863-6686.

8 p.m., First Senior music recital of the season. Program: Linda Welch, clarinet, and Margaret Geoghegan, flute, will play selections from Bach Poulenc, Saint-Saens and others. Will be held in the recital hall, new music building, Redstone Campus. Admission is free.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11

7:30 p.m., SA Films mini-series presents "Sergeant York," filmed in 1941, starring Gary Cooper and Joan Leslie. Admission free at B-106 Cook Bldg.

Don't forget the many Homecoming – Parents' Weekend events – see story elsewhere in this issue!

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 12

Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship meeting will not be held as usual. Instead there will be a pot-luck supper (no charge) and an evening meeting at the United Church of Colchester for their Inter-varsity Sunday. Get to know the folks who support us financially and in prayers! Contact Lois Wright (x2243) by Saturday night if planning to attend.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 13

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center "Career Planning Awareness" program with Bill McNeil. Open to anyone with questions regarding occupational selection, choice of major, career planning. Admission free at 146 S. Williams St.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center has one study group, "Small Is Beautiful" – a community seminar. No charge.

7:00 – 9:00 p.m., Gay Student Union Switchboard 656-4173. Anyone with questions or problems concerning Gay women should call tonight.

8 p.m., Lane Series Concert musical comedy, "Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope," at Memorial Auditorium. For ticket information, call 656-3418.

9:00 p.m. – Radio Drama – "In the Wings" produces "Columbus Day" Orson Wells script, on WRUV AM and FM.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14

9 a.m., A Business Career Day at Billings Center has been arranged by the Dept. of Business Administration and the Office of Career Planning and Placement. This will give students a chance to discuss their career plans with executives from more than a dozen local businesses. Hour-long sessions begin at 9:30. Interested students should sign up with the Dept. at 301 Votey.

12 noon, Society of Sigma Xi Seminar with Rep. Emory Hebard, Chairman, Vt. House Appropriations Committee, on financing the University in the State's fiscal crisis; E-214 Given Bldg.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Study Skills workshop with Alice Outwater at the Center (146 S. Williams St.) Open to anyone with questions, problems or concerns about study habits. No charge.

4 – 5:30 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal group of students, staff, townspeople, and professors who get together to speak in Spanish about anything of interest, E-380 Living/Learning. A high level of speaking ability is not required. Open to all who are interested. Sponsored by El Club Hispanico.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance Program lecture by Prof. William Stephany, English, on the theme of individualism in Dante, will be held at 216 Commons, Living/Learning. Anyone is welcome.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization meets to share healing experiences, Harris Hall recreation room. More information from Holly Aspden, ext. 3156.

7 p.m., SA Films and Dept. of English "Shakespeare Film Series" presents "Henry the Fifth" starring Sir Lawrence Olivier and Leslie Banks, 101 Votey, $1 donation.

7 p.m., Tuesday night figure drawing group, second floor, Williams Hall. $1 donation at the door to pay the model.

7:30 p.m., SA Films British Cinema series presents "Taste of Honey," (1962), starring Rita Tushingham and Dora Bryan, B-106 Cook, no admission charge.

7:30 – 9:00 p.m., Living Literature program announces "Storyhour," its second in a series of five "Oral Interpretation Showcases. 216 Commons L/L. Free admission, refreshments will be served.

8 p.m., "Foreign Languages and Careers" Foreign language study sponsored by the Dept. of Romance Languages and "El Club Hispanico." Experts from 10 different fields of endeavor will give a short presentation on how a career in his field is enhanced by a good command of a foreign language and its culture. Living/Learning Center, Commons. For more information contact the Dept. of Romance Languages, Waterman 520.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a free "Relaxation and Meditation" program with Nancy Koch, at the Center 146 S. Williams.

2 – 3:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center has a special activity, "Bi-Centennial Walking Tours of the Burlington Waterfront." (Raindate will be Thursday)

3 p.m., Department of Economics Alumni Speakers Series presents Daniel A. Burack, Class of 1955, executive vice president for administration and planning, Metropolitan Petroleum Co., at John Dewey Lounge, Old Mill. Open to interested students and faculty.

3:30 p.m., International Club: General Meeting and Coffee Hour at the Area and International Studies Building, 479 Main St. The Club especially welcomes foreign students and American students who have an interest in travel or study abroad, or who have just returned from an overseas experience and would like to share it with others.

4:30 p.m., Council for Exceptional Children having a meeting in L/L B-161.

4:30 – 6 p.m., University Health Center Staff Meeting, Carpenter Auditorium.

7 p.m., The Dept. of German and Russian presents "Film ohne Titel" (Film Without Title) (1947). Sound: In German. 104 Old Mill. No admission charge.

7 p.m., Church Street Center mini-course begins tonight in "Creative Dramatics," taught by Evelyn Carter. For registration and details, ext. 4221.

7:00 - 9:00 p.m., Gay Student Union Switchboard 656-4173. Those with questions or problems concerning Gay men should call tonight.

8 p.m., Women of UVM Book Group meets to discuss Without Guilt and Justice, by Walter Kaufmann. At home of Alice Hyerstay, call 425-2800 for directions.

8 p.m., UVM Church Street Center study groups "Politics Aren't Dirty: How to Run for Office." No charge, information ext. 4221.

Dance Dance Dance To Davis Brothers

Yes, Boogie Fans! Friday, October 24th will be a date to remember. The Davis Brothers will be back – even better than before. Highlighting the Davis Brothers will be 20 kegs that W.P.W. has thrown in to add a touch of class to a great party. Tickets go on sale Monday, October 13th, in W.D.W., Billings, and at various dining halls around campus. Just $2.50 a head will cover you for a night of live dancing and cool drinking. So buy your tickets early, because tickets will not be sold at the door. Remember – dance, dance, dance to the Davis Brothers Friday, October 24th, at 9:00 p.m. in Simpson Hall. Be There!

DOMINO'S PIZZA

FREE DELIVERY
864-7444

Mon - Thurs 4:30 to 1 AM
Fri & Sat 4:30 to 2 PM
Sun 4:30 to 12:00

SUPPER SPECIAL ANY DAY 4.30-8.00 pm.
$1.00 OFF LARGE PIZZA (except plain)
NAME
ADDRESS
1 COUPON PER PIZZA

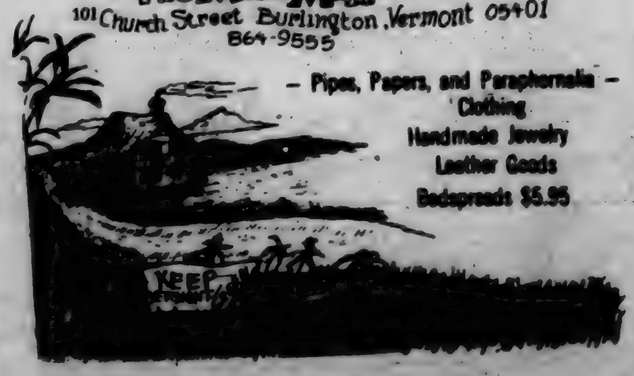
Diamond wedding ensembles — created for the girl who can't say "NO."

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

BURLINGTON PLACE
"The Mini Mall"
101 Church Street Burlington, Vermont 05401
864-9555



– Pipes, Papers, and Paraphernalia –
Clothing
Handmade Jewelry
Leather Goods
Bedspreads $5.95

OCTOBER 9, 1975

Career Plan

Week of October 20-24. Sign up for these interviews on Monday – Wednesday, October 13 – 15.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 20

Hartford Hospital, Hartford, Conn. – Positions for staff nurses.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21

AMOCO Production Co., New Orleans, La – Seeks geologists, geo-physicists, paleontologists. Contact the Geology Dept. for interviews.

Whittemore School of Business Administration, Durham, N.H. – Information on Graduate School Programs.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22

AMOCO Second Day (Geology Dept.)

Army Corps of Engineers, Waltham, Ma. – Positions for Civil Engineers.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23

Washington & Lee Law School, Lexington, Va. – Law School programs

Foreign

The Department of Romance Languages and Living Learning's "El Club Hispanico" are pleased to announce the second annual Foreign Languages and Careers. Foreign language study is too often viewed as an obstacle on the road to the degree. It can and should be considered an important tool in the pursuit of many and varied careers. If you would like to explore these possibilities, plan to attend our Foreign Languages and Careers Night. This is to be held Tuesday evening, October 14, at 8 p.m. in Living/Learning Center, Commons 115.

We have invited experts from the following fields of endeavor: Business and Industry; Peace Corps, Vista; Education (service abroad); Law; Library Science; Television; Science; Social Services; Social Sciences; Travel and Tourism. Each expert will give a short presentation on how a career in his field is enhanced by a good

St. A

UPDATE:

Last Saturday, a group of ub went apple-picking. We pla to use our several bushels Macs to make apple sauc apple pies, etc. to sell duri Parents' Weekend. All proce will be donated to Wa Hunger. If you can help ba or sell on Saturday afternoo contact Nancy at x3882.

Mouthpiece begins toni at St. Anselm's, 7:30 – 9 p. It's a high class bull sessio Bring your ideas. T possibilities are endless books, movies, religion, wo events. Tonight's meeting be organizational, but we'll some values clarificati games/exercises if t permits. Details? Cont Nancy at x3882.

Remember – Satur October 11, open ho (10–12 noon); Sun October 12, luncheon (1 p.m.); Sunday October woodgathering (1:30 p.m.)

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

SUNDAY

11:30 a.m. – H Eucharist (Episcopal); p.m. – Service of The and Communion (Protes with supper following.

MONDAY

8:15 a.m. – Mor Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Ev Prayer; 8:00 p.m. – Pray Share, a time for inf worship.

TUESDAY

8:15 a.m. – Mo Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – E Prayer; 10:00 p.m. – Eucharist (Episcopal)

DAV

560X15 SN
29.95
Fits most VW
86
87
ROUTE 2

Career Planning and Placement

Week of October 20-24. Sign up for these interviews on Monday – Wednesday, October 13 – 15.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 20

Hartford Hospital, Hartford, Conn. – Positions for staff nurses.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21

AMOCO Production Co., New Orleans, La – Seeks geologists, geo-physisists, paleontologists. Contact the Geology Dept. for interviews.

Whittemore School of Business Administration, Durham, N.H. – Information on Graduate School Programs.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22

AMOCO – Second Day (Geology Dept.)

Army Corps of Engineers, Waltham, Ma. – Positions for Civil Engineers.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23

Washington & Lee Law School, Lexington, Va. – Law School programs

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 24

University of Rochester, Graduate School of Management, Rochester, N.Y. – Graduate program information.

Union College, Schenectady, N.Y. – Interviews relating to graduate programs.

Special Workshops Sponsored by Placement Office – Free and Open to Seniors and Graduate Students

The Office of Career Planning and Placement is announcing a series of two-part special focus programs designed to assist '76 graduates in developing effective employment search skills.

For seniors and graduate students the search for employment is inevitable. "How do you identify, search out and secure the kinds of work situations which will provide the most satisfaction for you personally?"

These basic survival training programs will help you to develop the necessary skills:

(1) October 13 and 15 – 6:30–8:30 p.m. Topic: Effective Resume Writing or "How do I translate my experience into writing?"

(2) October 20 and 22 – 6:30–8:30 p.m. Topic: Employment Interviewing or "How to prepare for and make the most of the employment interview."

(3) October 27 and 29 – 6:30–8:30 p.m. Topic: Researching Employment Literature or "How to identify and use resource material about jobs in the field of your interest."

The Workshops will be held in the Career Planning and Placement Office Conference Room, 109 South Prospect Street. Registration may be made in person or by telephoning 656-3450.

Day Of Awareness

The second annual Day of Awareness, sponsored by the Ecumenical Committee for Justice and Peace, will be held October 17 at Trinity College, (Delakanty Hall) Burlington. Registration will begin at 9 a.m.. The registration fee will be $1.50. The keynote address, "Women's Rights as Human Rights" will be delivered by Joyce Mitchell at 9:30. Joyce Mitchell, a resident of Wolcott, Vermont, is an author and lecturer and was a non-governmental representative at the U.N. sponsored International Women's Year Conference in Mexico City. From 10:30 to 12:00 there will be four Human Communities Workshops as follows: "The Uncertain Future of the Nuclear Family", with Professor and Mrs. George Albee as leaders; "From Eve to Indira – Women in Power" led by Mrs. Madeleine Kunin and Dr. Ellen Cannon; "Styles of Christian Community", Sr. Ruth Ravey and the Reverend William Hollister; and "Women's Rights Equals New Communities" led by Mrs. Joyce Mitchell. In the afternoon the same workshops will be presented from 2:00 to 3:45. There will be wrap-up sessions after each workshop period. Lunch will be at one o'clock. The evening session will be at 7:30 with Joyce Mitchell giving an address on "Women as Leaders in New Communities", followed by a panel of workshop leaders and Joyce Mitchell with Sr. Elizabeth Candon as moderator. Questions from the audience will be welcome.

The Exchange

Comments from THE EXCHANGE are coming in, which add new spice to our day! One freshman wrote saying: 'I couldn't have gotten through the first confusing weeks without the support of my R.A. I'd come into the dorm afternoons and find her door open with kids sitting around having a cup of tea. It was all so friendly and nice, I always feel welcome.' Things seem to be settling down for the freshmen and we hope they are feeling part of the University – once the mid-terms are successfully over, another hurdle will be through.

One faculty member gives kudos to the custodians: 'they are a hardworking group of men and women, and often we fail to recognize the contribution they make. It saddens me to see thoughtless acts which make their work harder – cigarettes stomped out on the floor, washrooms left in dirty conditions, dogs in the buildings making more mess. I am impressed by their conscientious attitude and the night work they do when we aren't around.' I remember talking to the custodian of the Given Building not long ago and how proud he was of his responsibility of keeping heat regulated and delicate equipment going that involved experiments – one mishap and months of research could be ruined.

We walked over to the new Infirmary and were delighted with the attractive modern facilities – not quite as conveniently located as the old, but one bonus has been better service as students space their visits throughout the day, rather than pouring in at lunch break, (making the staff better able to tend to their needs.) Dr. Chris McAree said they were getting a Mental Health team together to go out to the dorms – Alcoholism would be the first topic they would cover. For information call extension – 2068.

Enjoy the Fall weather – keep the comments coming or call:

Alice D. Outwater
Counseling and Testing

Business Career Day

On October 14 the Department of Business Administration and the Career Planning and Placement Office will host the First Annual Business Career Day. This program will be a fantastic opportunity to learn on an informal basis the many intricacies of a chosen career. Professionals from diverse fields of business will be on hand to meet with you and discuss your career plans. Also these business leaders will share their early career experiences and provide strong insights into what you can expect as you enter the work world.

With the current instability in the job market this program allows you to get a feel for a career before you make that long-time commitment. If you wish to participate and learn the hard realities of the work world, you must sign up for each career session of your choice in 301 Votey.

The fields represented include Law, Accounting, Retail Management, Bank Management, Hotel/Restaurant Management, Public Services, Sales/Marketing, Industrial Management/Jr. Executive Development, Insurance and Financial Planning, Advertising and Resume Preparation/Interviewing Techniques.

Upcoming Concert

Jesse Colin Young will appear at Memorial Auditorium on Tuesday, October 23 at 8 p.m. Appearing with Jesse will be Jerry Corbett and possibly Janis Ian.

Jesse played before a packed house in his last appearance in Burlington. Enthusiasm for the concert is great and another SRO crowd seems imminent. More details next week.

Foreign Language Night

The Department of Romance Languages and Living Learning's "El Club Hispanico" are pleased to announce the second annual Foreign Languages and Careers. Foreign language study is too often viewed as an obstacle on the road to the degree. It can and should be considered an important tool in the pursuit of many and varied careers. If you would like to explore these possibilities, plan to attend our Foreign Languages and Careers Night. This is to be held Tuesday evening, October 14, at 8 p.m. in Living/Learning Center, Commons 115.

We have invited experts from the following fields of endeavor: Business and Industry; Peace Corps, Vista; Education (service abroad); Law; Library Science; Television; Science; Social Services; Social Sciences; Travel and Tourism. Each expert will give a short presentation on how a career in his field is enhanced by a good command of a foreign language and its culture. There will be plenty of time for questions.

For those who are interested in exploring this matter before October 14, the Department of Romance Languages, Waterman 520, has for sale at .25 a few copies of a booklet published by the Modern Language Association, entitled "Foreign Languages and Careers."

Skier's Dream

Anyone have the desire to float down pristine slopes covered by 2 feet of fresh powder?

We're a bunch of students that rented a condominium at Snowbird-Alta for the entire month of January. We approximate the total cost for the entire 4 weeks to be between $500 and $600. This includes car transportation, room and board, skiing, and drinking.

It's a skier's dream! Give us a call and we'll tell you more about it. Call 862-2889 and ask for Barry or 864-6240 and ask for Rob.

NOW Meets

On Thursday, October 9, 1975, at 7:30 p.m., the Champlain Valley Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) will hold its monthly meeting. Discussion topic of the meeting will be RAPE; a video tape of the Inez Garcia case will be shown. The meeting will take place at the First United Methodist Church, South Winooski and Buell Street, Burlington. All interested persons are welcome to attend.

Study In Scandinavia

Any student interested in the possibility of spending the academic year of 1976-66 studying in one of the four Nordic countries (Norway, Sweden, Finland, or Denmark) and receiving (with appropriate evaluation) academic credit for the experience from the University of Vermont, should plan to attend an orientation meeting and social hour at the Center for Area Studies, 479 Main Street, at 7:00 p.m. on Thursday October 23. A total of over 40 UVM students have studied in this program since 1971 and several of them will be on hand to discuss their experiences with you. If you have further questions, kindly contact Louise Beckerle at the Center for Area Studies, extension 4062, or come to the orientation meeting.

Greek Speaker At UVM

The UVM Greek Co-ordinating Council in conjunction with the SA Speakers' Bureau will present a convocation address to begin the activities of Greek Week 1975.

The featured speaker will be Mrs. Arel Peterson, of Pittsburgh, PA. Mrs. Peterson is past National President of Phi Mu sorority, and is currently the national treasurer.

The convocation will begin at 8:30 p.m. Monday, October 13, at Marsh Life Science Auditorium – All are welcome.

Sugarbush Octoberfest 1975

Vermont's largest Flea Market will be held on October 11th and 12th from 9:00 a.m. until 6:00 p.m. at the Sugarbush Valley Ski Area parking lot in Warren, Vermont. The Valley Area Association is sponsoring Oktoberfest.

Last year over 4000 people and 80 exhibitors were on hand. This year we expect exhibitors from all over the East Coast. All types of crafts, including pottery, handwoven goods, handcrafted wooden toys, handmade jewelry, ceramics, leather goods, macrame, quilts, pillows, handmade cards and metal sculptures as well as paintings, photographs, Indian jewelry, antiques and miscellaneous items will be sold.

An International Food Bazaar will offer a wide variety of foods for all tastes. Live country music and special attractions for children will make this a perfect way to spend a Fall weekend for the entire family. Free admission and free parking.

More exhibitors can be accommodated and are welcome to register before 10:00 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday. The fee for exhibitors is $10.00 for one day; $15.00 for two days.

For further information, call Jean Goodrich, 496-2750 (home) or A.T. Munro, 496-2591 (office).

Graduate Programs At CGS

An official of Claremont Graduate School in California will discuss CGS graduate programs with students and administrators at University of Vermont on Friday, October 17.

The representative is John Fisher, assistant dean. He will be on the University of Vermont campus from 2 to 5 p.m. Appointments may be made by calling Mr. Larry Simmons in the Career Planning and Placement Office, and literature describing CGS is available there now.

Claremont Graduate School offers study in the humanities, mathematics, botanical and social sciences, fine arts, education, and business. It awards master's degrees and doctorates. In its 50 years of operation CGS has graduated teachers and administrators for colleges, universities, and other schools. In recent years it has added more problem-oriented study to prepare students for occupations other than education and research. Examples of this direction are master's programs in public policy studies, management, and urban institutions and systems and doctoral programs in public affairs psychology and executive management and administration.

CGS is unusual in that it is a free-standing graduate institution that is not dependent on a university. It is associated with five other colleges, all undergraduate. The six, known as the Claremont Colleges, operate such central services as a library system, a bookstore, concert halls, health and counseling services and a computer center. Each college, however, administers its own affairs independently. The graduate school draws on the faculties of the undergraduate colleges to augment its own full-time faculty.

The six colleges are on adjoining campuses in the City of Claremont, a community of about 25,000 population 30 miles east of Los Angeles.

St. Anselm's Chapel

UPDATE

Last Saturday, a group of us went apple-picking. We plan to use our several bushels of Macs to make apple sauce, apple pies, etc. to sell during Parents' Weekend. All proceeds will be donated to Wald Hunper. If you can help bake or sell on Saturday afternoon, contact Nancy at x3882.

Mouthpiece begins tonight at St. Anselm's, 7:30 – 9 p.m. It's a high class bull session. Bring your ideas. The possibilities are endless – books, movies, religion, world events. Tonight's meeting will be organizational, but we'll do some values clarification games/exercises if time permits. Details? Contact Nancy at x3882.

Remember – Saturday October 11, open house (10–12 noon); Sunday October 12, luncheon (12:30 p.m.); Sunday October 19, woodgathering (1:30 p.m.)

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

SUNDAY

11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal); 6:30 p.m. – Service of The Word and Communion (Protestant) with supper following.

MONDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 8:00 p.m. – Prayer 'n' Share, a time for informal worship.

TUESDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 10:00 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

WEDNESDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 10:00 p.m. – Compline, a brief service of prayer and songs to end the day.

THURSDAY

4:00–5:30 p.m. – Wine and Cheese, a chance to drop by and relax; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 7:30 – 9:00 p.m. – Mouthpiece, a highclass bull session for everyone, a chance to talk about most anything; 9:30 p.m. – Prayer Service for Protestant students in McAuley Hall (used by UVM) at Trinity College.

FRIDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer.

For information, call Nancy Allen, Protestant Chaplain, or Geoffrey Schmitt, Episcopal Chaplain, at 656-3882.

A Quiet Place To Study

Are you interested in a quiet place to study? Are you interested in a place where you can take a break from studies – to socialize over a cup of coffee, listen to good music, watch T.V. or just rap?

There is such a place on campus! Room for upwards of 30 students in two study rooms, a kitchen where you can do your culinary thing – from brewing a cup of coffee to popping corn, to baking a cake, to cooking a casserole!! – a spacious lobby to listen to music, watch television, read the latest magazines, rap around a large fireplace, even a place to pray or just be alone.

The lobby, chapel and kitchen are on the ground floor; the study rooms are on the second floor.

Hundreds walk by the building every day on Redstone Campus. It's called the Newman Center. Next time you're passing by, stop in and check us out. We're open from the "wee" hours to the "wee" hours.

Come and make yourself at home – many do.

Cunningham Newman Center

STAFF – Rev. Francis Holland, Rev. Normand Nadeau, Sr. Clare Burgoyne, Sr. Jeannine Mercure.

TELEPHONE – 862-8403

MASSES – Daily at 4:15; Sunday Obligation: Saturday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. and Sunday 9:00 and 11:30 p.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

CLASSES THIS WEEK – Monday 7:00 p.m., "Jesus in the Gospels;" Monday 7:00 p.m., "Basic Catholicism;" Monday 8:00 p.m., "History of Liturgy." All classes held at the Center.

Hillel

Sunday, October 12. Brunch at the Hillel House, 389 College St., 11:00 a.m.

Wednesday, October 22 and every other Wednesday evening thereafter, Israeli folk dancing will take place at 8:00 p.m. in Living Learning Center A131. EVERYBODY WELCOME.

If you want to learn and/or practice Hebrew, come to daily conversations in the Hebrew House, Living/Learning Center B230 after dinner (around 6:30).

Hockey At Essex Rink

During the month of October there is ice available for rent at the Essex Rink in Essex Junction. The ice is available from 9:00 a.m. 3:00 p.m. Monday thru Friday at $25/hour. Get your intramural team together and go on out for a practice or two.

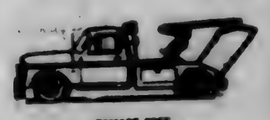
For those who prefer to public skate there is a special session for adults only on Tuesdays from 8:45 – 9:45.

Open Tues-Sat 9:00-5:00
The Bead Parlour
beads · findings · feathers · tools
Richmond, Vermont

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
SPECIALIST IN FOREIGN CAR REPAIR
ENGINE REBUILDING · TIRES · STEAM CLEANING · UNDERCOATING · ALIGNMENT · SPIN BALANCING

560X15 SNOW TIRES
29.95 ! inc. fet & mtng
Fits most VW Bugs & Saab V4
862-7686
878-8607
ROUTE 2 WILLISTON, VT.

FUEL INJECTION AVAILABLE
WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMIPERMEABLE RADIAL TIRES



SNOW FREE WINDOWS SERVICE

NOTICIAS DE CUERVO
Recipe #11½.
THE CUERVICLE:

1. Find someone who has a freezer.
2. Put a bottle of Jose Cuervo Gold in it.
3. Go away.
4. Come back later that same day.
5. Open the bottle and pour a shot of the golden, viscous liquid.
6. Drink it with grace and dignity. Or other people, if they're not around.

JOSE CUERVO® TEQUILA 80 PROOF
IMPORTED AND BOTTLED BY © 1975 HEUBLEIN, INC., HARTFORD, CONN.

Pants Plus
12 N. Winooski Ave. 864-0181
10% OFF WITH UVM ID.

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Randy Jansen '77 ..... Editor-in-Chief
David Ryan '77 ..... Assistant Editor
Mark Valla '76 ..... Managing Editor
John MacDonald '78 ..... News Editor
Sue Perkins '78 ..... Feature Editor
Sari Bodi '76 ..... Arts & Entertainment Editor
Norm Robinson '77 ..... Sports Editor
Amy Weinstock '78 ..... Copy Editor
Deborah Powell '76 ..... Advertising Manager

Faculty Evaluations Needed

The elections of the SA Senators this week, will return student government to the UVM campus. Apathy was the cause of the dissolution of the SA Senate last year, it should not be the cause this year. Now more than ever, student input and student representation are needed for all university matters.

A student service that has been neglected by the SA in past years has been the production of the Albatross. The Albatross was a publication which presented student evaluations of professors. It provided information for students (especially new students) on how their professors were rated by other students. A poor rating was a good indication to avoid that course.

Far too often, students are subjected to inept professors. There should be a means of communication for students to learn about these professors. Word of mouth is not an adequate form of communication. SA should coordinate and print student evaluations of the faculty.

Although this would be an important function, it does not go far enough. The SA Senate should set up a committee, or work with existing committees, so that students can become involved in the process of hiring and firing of professors. The faculty provides the essential service of classroom instruction. It is this service that students pay dearly for, and they deserve to receive high quality performance on the part of their instructors. Students are well-equipped to judge who are the better professors and they should be given the opportunity to make this assessment because, ultimately, they are the ones who are most affected by the quality of instruction.

The SA should make recommendations on behalf of students to the appropriate deans, so that he/she would become aware of student criticism. Students should also have the right to recommend that a faculty member be removed for poor quality performance.

In the past, consistent objections by students towards professors have been ignored by the faculty senate and the administration. The SA has the responsibility to see that these objections are presented to the appropriate persons, and the courage to press for specific and reasonable action.

R.J.

letters to the editor

Rather Work Through VPIRG

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to M. de Totehill's article in which he criticized VPIRG for being just as much as part of the Establishment as Exxon and Governor Salmon. The question he raises is can change in a democratic system be brought about by the government or must change come by revolution from the people? In approaching this problem I would like to look at the environmental problems we are facing not only as a state or a nation but as a species inhabiting the earth.

In the past ten years we have come to realize that our planet has a finite amount of resources. The past three years have brought us minor oil and gas shortages which are harbingers of what's to come in the next forty or fifty years. Air pollution alerts are posted for weeks on end in many of our major cities, while President Ford talks of relaxing pollution control standards on automobiles (the major cause of photochemical pollution). Now, in a time when strict controls on energy are needed, Congress and Ford are in a struggle for power and nothing is being done.

We Americans will have to come to the realization that our government will be unable to bring about the massive political, social, and economic reforms that are necessary if we are to survive in this environmental crisis. It has taken the blacks in this country some 200 years to gain some semblance of equality. How long will it take to change a capitalistic energy intensive economy based on continuous growth of the GNP to change to an economy based on steady state economics and efficient use and re-use of materials and energy. Obviously, such massive changes cannot be made within a system geared to slow steady change, when you consider that these and many other changes in the system have to come within the next fifty years. Changes such as these cannot come from within the system because they are the system, and above all else the system is geared to perpetuate itself. Changes like these must come from the people in the form of revolution.

What M. de Totehill doesn't realize is that to have a social revolution the feelings have to be deeply rooted in the society. I don't know if he's noticed, but the only things people get excited about these days are keg parties, hockey games and skiing. There aren't many people like you or me who get riled up about the future of the world. Until there are more of us around to bring about a social revolution, I'm afraid we're stuck working through the system to bring about incremental change, but change nonetheless. I think you realize that student activism has come to the point where students may complain about the state of the world, but they won't actively try to change it. They do, however, care enough to pay someone else $3.00 to try to change it for them. You say the change that VPIRG initiates are incremental, and on the larger scale it is, but incremental change is better than no change at all. Until students feel enough pressure from a deteriorating environment to try to save it, I'd rather spend my time working with their money through VPIRG to do what little I can to bring about change rather than do nothing at all.

John King
Robinson Hall

Response To Liberty Union

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to the Liberty Union Party's ill-conceived and insane article, "Depression in Vermont." (October 2).

Nobody will disagree that these are hard times. The recession-depression may be ending, but it is not that obvious to the consumer. Fortunately for Vermont, Governor Thomas Salmon has had the guts and fortitude to call a special legislative session to try to pass the 1% sales tax increase that is needed to produce revenues.

The Liberty Union states that the sales tax is "the most regressive form of taxation imaginable." Have they ever heard of property taxes? The sales tax is one of the most fair taxes there is. People who have more money to buy more will pay more.

Liberty Union proposes doubling the state's corporate income tax. They say that this by itself would wipe out the state's deficit (nice to know LU supports old Republican doctrines like "balanced budget"). Yeah, doubling that tax would wipe out the deficit for this year. Next year, it would be a mob scene as IBM, GE, AT&T, and others pack their tents and sneak away from Vermont, leaving us with a high corporate income tax and no corporations left to pay it.

Also, Liberty Union says "tax the rich." How can they keep saying that, while at the same time bringing up the fact that Vermont is a poor state? Not only that, but there aren't that many rich people. Liberty Union claims that the richest 6% earns more than the lowest 50%. Maybe so, but that richest 6% is only about 25,000 people, and they all aren't making $100,000 or more a year. What Liberty Union calls a "truly progressive income tax" is patently absurd.

Governor Salmon has taken a positive and intelligent action in calling for the increase in the sales tax, one which deserves support and consideration. The Liberty Union Party is being as much help as the Democrats and the Republicans in this matter, which is to say, no help at all.

David Taggart
215 Austin

Life at McAuley Not Unpleasant

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to the article in the October 2 issue of the Cynic on "What's a McAuley?" I have no idea who Debbie Richlin is, or where she resides on campus, but I would like to point out that she didn't reside in McAuley Hall last year and should learn not to make such inaccurate statements in public print such as "Life at McAuley was an unhappy experience for everyone, including the R.A.'s."

As the first UVM Resident Advisor in McAuley Hall last year, I will speak for myself and my assistant, Barb Benedict, that yes, it was an experience! But no, it was not unhappy! Admittedly, there were times of ups and downs with Trinity rules and staff, but there developed a close spirit of community and total dorm friendship and commitment among McAuley students to be unmatched by any other on campus.

There were also several outstanding successful social functions such as parties, an Award's Night, a Progressive dinner, a semi-formal Cocktail Party and a year-end barbeque.

As the authority figures for the UVM students, both Barb and I felt that the rules of restrictive parietal hours were unfair, but every girl knew that we followed a policy of "What we don't see, we don't know about!" and neither one of us ever collected one appointed $10 fine for an illegal visitor!

Perhaps students should be reminded that some of the reasons why they came to college were to study and to develop close, lasting friendships, which for both, McAuley offers a conducive atmosphere, and not just to meet a man!

Midge Jorgensen
Resident Advisor
Simpson Hall

Beware Of SA

To the Editor,

We decided that it was time for the students to find out about "representative" student government at UVM. We refrained from pointing it out earlier for reasons we hope shall become clear.

The fact is that the dissolution of the SA Senate in the spring of this year was unconstitutional under the provisions of the constitution that, perhaps, should still be in effect. The old Senate could only have been dissolved by a student referendum on the matter.

Does this render the new Constitution and the new Senate "unconstitutional"? We urge the new students here to check into this matter carefully, since the upperclass people were, for the most part, uncaring about the governing of their lives at UVM. We initiated the dissolution in the hope that students would then get involved in their own behalf. We were wrong in this aspect. Students in general don't seem any more concerned about the failures of "representative" government now than they were last spring. We mention this now, to emphasize the point we have tried to make all along – that no one is capable of looking out for student interests except for the students themselves, as individuals or as co-operating groups, but not as "represented" by so-called student government. People with a vested interest in the continuation of "representative" student government knew as well as we did that the dissolution was unconstitutional, but nothing has been said to the students in general before now.

In this time of Senate elections, proposed tuition increases, and the continued rip-off of the students at the cash registers of the UVM bookstore, the students can no longer afford "representative" governments which do nothing except to usurp the control that individual students could exercise by themselves or through simple, unbureaucratic co-operation. So we write at this time – Beware of student "government" old or new, unconstitutional or constitutional. Look out for your own interests.

Rob Macgregor
Ed Pasqualin

VPIRG Column

by Carl Bohlen

I would like to begin this column by asking you a question. How many interstates are planned for Vermont? Well if you said two, you are only half right. If you guessed three, you probably counted the interstates already complete or being constructed. If you answered four, you might have at one time carefully examined a highway map of Vermont. Yes, if the thinking of the late 1950's and 1960's continues through the 1980's, Vermont will have Interstates 89, 91, 189, and 93.

Interstates 89 and 189 are complete, and I–91 is steadily nearing completion from both the north and the south. However there is a fourth interstate looming in Vermont's future: I–93. Often confused with I–91, and until the past year, remaining virtually hidden from public scrutiny, I–93 has become one of Vermont's most controversial highways.

DESCRIPTION OF I–93

Interstate 93 is located in the Northeast Kingdom, and it would run from the Vermont-New Hampshire border in Waterford, Vermont to an interchange with I-91 just south of central St Johnsbury. Vermont's I–93 is to be 11 miles long, and it will cost a staggering $31.5 million for this short section – almost three million dollars a mile! The road will be just like other interstates – a four lane limited access highway.

Vermont's I–93 is just one section of the I–93 running from St. Johnsbury to Boston. Cutting diagonally through New Hampshire, I–93 is to go right through the middle of Franconia Notch in New Hampshire's White Mountains. Posing a threat to the Uniqueness of Franconia Notch, three New Hampshire environmental groups have successfully obtained a court injunction against any further building of I–93 without an adequate environmental impact study.

ALTERNATE PLAN

A plan more in line with today's economic and environmental problems was one result of an extensive study conducted in 1974 by a legislatively appointed committee – the Transportation Advisory Board (TAB). The TAB did not recommend the construction of I–93 as planned, and instead proposed the construction of only four miles of I-93. The four miles would run from St. Johnsbury to the junction of Routes 2 and 18. Traffic would then travel Route 18 from the four mile spur to New Hampshire. Route 18 as it now exists is one of Vermont's better roads and could easily handle the traffic expected to use it. This interstate spur would be similar to I–189 connecting I–89 to Route 7 in South Burlington.

GOVERNOR SALMON DOES NOT SUPPORT I–93

Governor Salmon endorsed the recommendation of the TAB, and his administration will not push for the construction of I–93. At a press conference on January 31 this year, the Governor said, "there is very little rationale to building I–93." The Chairman of the State Transportation Board, Attorney Robert Gensburg of St. Johnsbury, also supports the Governor's position.

However there is not unanimous support for the recommendation not to build I–93. The Commissioner of the Vermont Highway Department, John Gray, strongly supports the completion of I–93 as originally planned. The Commissioner's views are also shared by several members of the State Transportation Board who served previously on the State Highway Board.

VPIRG AND I–93

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) began questioning the necessity of I–93 in August of 1974. Since that time, VPIRG has tried to expose the total waste of public funds that I–93 represents. Next week's Vermont Cynic will detail VPIRG's findings concerning I–93.

I-93: Vermont's Other Interstate

VPIRG Is Objective

To the Editor:

I'm responding to Mr. Gacette's letter last week, about VPIRG not being student run.

There are six student VPIRG trustees, elected each year by the students, here at UVM. Another six trustees added to these, from the other six member colleges, make up the twelve members of the VPIRG Board of Directors.

The Board of Directors makes all policies, appropriates funds toward projects, and hires or fires staff members.

The VPIRG director, as a professional, is hired to assist students in legal and complex problems. He is directly responsible to the full Board of Directors and has administrative control over the full time staff. He must work in areas dictated by the board and can be fired for not doing so.

If Mr. Gacette had taken the time to check the VPIRG files of the minutes of each board meeting, he would have found that students (trustees) were behind the choice of all project fields.

Any student with a project idea, after doing preliminary research to find if it's feasible, can present their idea before the board of directors.

If the majority of the student trustees agreed, VPIRG would work in that area.

Mr. Gacette tried to say that Ralph Nader had strings attached to VPIRG.

After VPIRG was started, the only remaining tie between Ralph Nader and VPIRG was the name PIRG. It was student trustees who decided to go into the Nuclear Power field. Research into the pros and cons of nuclear power found trained experts on both sides. This left the ordinary Vermont citizen in the middle of a highly controversial and potentially dangerous technology.

The board of directors voted to have Scott Skinner (director) work on a bill to give the people through their representatives, veto power over future plants.

Most of the student trustees have never met Ralph Nader and vote objectively without his influence.

David Barney
VPIRG Student Trustee

Etteragic (Death Wish)

Graveyard grey
Volatile cloud undulates slowly
As it drifts on your breath-currents,
Reluctantly relinquishing
Its fangs from your throat.
The nameless hunger grips you
And you feed your life to it
Watching it drift before your face.
The vermine satisfied, the red eye
Of the vampire closes once again
With a slice of your soul.
You are its slave.
What is that tan-brown stain
Forming on your lips and fingers?
Writhed in writhing
Coils of stale smoke you sit
Like an Egyptian princess
Embalming your body for burial
The Asp coils deep inside the sinews
Labyrinth of your lungs
Secreting its venom.
It then steals the constricted passage
Of your throat through your skinny lips
Into the fresh air.
Its unblinking red eye stares at me
From between your lips.
What is that shimmer of breath.
That small cough?
Dragon Lady
Breathing smoke,
You think that the grey cloud
Issuing from your lungs
Enhances your beauty?
The twenty legged Arthropod
Weaves its acrid web well.
You are ensnared.
Thin blue-grey strands
Brush through your hair
And clothes drawing you ever close
To its musty parlor.
The smoke thickly circulates
Through the soft sponge tissue
Inside your chest.
Tentacles drift from your nose and lips.
The web is complete as the Spider sucks your husk dry.
Why do your hands tremble so?
The threads of smoke weave
A shroud.
You are dying
And your ruby red eye winks
In acknowledgement.

–Rodney Plagren

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

NEWS: Margo Howland, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Peter Duquette, Steve Wells, Scott Curtis, Charles Kountze.
FEATURE: Paul Ajemian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt.
ARTS: Eloise Boyle, Cathy Brown, Martha Hess, Tricia John, Barbara MacFarlane, Jose Santana, Kaye Tatro.
COLUMNISTS: Ken Markowitz, Peter Cobb, Gary Chilson, Larry Selden.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Sarah Clay, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis, Linda Mansfield, Martha Hess, Louise Deitche.
SPORTS: Debi Bloom, Rita Bruce, Randy Briggs, Pat Taves, Chris Brown, Scott Curtis.
ADVERTISING: Steve Brayce, Susan Rau, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Thumb.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for section is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

Ranting, R

by Larry Se

My intake senses are spinni channels, four football, two bas hockey, and you're on the other difference between offsides on th the blue line. I remember one su you did blush with uncertainty w was tossing the rubber." So can y that brings my living room to a of oohs and aahs? But still the blood the same way your earthy mind.

I live in that zone that is dr
the overcoming Redsox. It repre winner-to-take-all and leaves Shak stubs, and mostly empty be eyeballs as they relentlessly sar and the number of warmup between pitches. Add the min Namath whipping touchdown p every two commercials and the swoop and swarm the de Washington Redskins. A few cha a Guy LaFleur floats over the planning my winterly purchase mind is drenched in Univac jun
the grueling six hour test endurance and bladder capaci champions. My fellow spectat all-star list. My living room Roulette.

Across town I can see th within the reaches of your different than mine: It stands TV's brutal mind-beating. It plunged directly through hum that is valued at $60,000 a sea for armchair kicks and C-n bookie. Your niche includes and T.S. Eliot. I have Howard understand the fathomless m
Viet vet to boot, feels for t
Back in the jungles people s

D

by Ga

Scientists come in three Excellent. If we include a top of their quality of work neat little categories. But I simply call them Sojourners.

Sojourners are men a region just beyond our con
Newton, Da Vinci, Watson theorists who give the worl into it and then leave it for solidify the Knowledge. No the Plodders, for they aren' time collecting data that w to develop one new theory

The Prostitutes are th to our collective shame, a

Ranting, Raving & Drooling

A Spectacle of Madness in My Sunday Soul

by Larry Seidler

My intake senses are spinning like falling kites. Seven channels, four football, two baseball playoffs, one exhibition hockey, and you're on the other side of town not knowing the difference between offsides on the scrimmage and a step over the blue line. I remember one summer's night at Jary Park – you did blush with uncertainty when I remarked, "the pitcher was toeing the rubber." So can you feel this October madness that brings my living room to a frenzied, pitched, vocal battle of ooha and aahs? But still the obsession has to flow in your blood the same way your earthy grace dominates my heart and mind.

I live in that zone that is divided by the Oakland A's and the overcoming Redsox. It represents a shameless pursuit of a winner-to-take-all and leaves Shakespearian plays, bent cigarette stubs, and mostly empty beer bottles lying among avid eyeballs as they relentlessly zero in on Fred Lynn's cap size and the number of warmup swings Reggie Jackson takes between pitches. Add the mind boggling dimension of Joe Namath whipping touchdown passes at the even rate of one every two commercials and the feast as the Philadelphia Eagles swoop and swarm the decaying ancient bodies of the Washington Redskins. A few channels over, the silken streak of a Guy LaFleur floats over the frozen arena surface as I start planning my winterly purchase of thermals and ski wax. My mind is drenched in Univac juice as the body pumps itself for the grueling six hour test of physical stamina, mental endurance and bladder capacity. This is truly the sport of champions. My fellow spectators are on every optomitrist's all-star list. My living room is set for Championship TV Roulette.

Across town I can see the mirror as you stand captive within the reaches of your sensible sanity. Your life is different than mine. It stands apart from the absorption of TV's brutal mind-beating. It is a savage beating, whether plunged directly through human flesh and numbered muscle that is valued at $60,000 a season or carved out in living rooms for armchair kicks and C-note bets with the candy store bookie. Your niche includes Sylvia Plath, Simone deBeauvoir and T.S. Eliot. I have Howard Cosell on my side. You cannot understand the fathomless mania that a middle line-backer, a Viet vet to boot, feels for the whimsical human condition. Back in the jungles people spit on him and shunned him for killing his own kind. Now the field below his feet is mowed and fertilized regularly by a dozen professional lawn boys, and at ticker tape parades, people throw roses on him. His brutality is permanent. I have helped create him.

TV Roulette works thru the marvelous wizardry of cable television from two countries and the supple wrists of the players. The game plan is to monitor every game at periodic intervals called commercials. Each player at specified intervals denoted by slurred call of "changeachannel" spins the dial until a simple majority yells "lezwatchdis." At this point a spinner of average reflexes will have to move back one channel and serve a penalty by transversing the crowded living room (similar to a punt return) to fetch "dabrew."

When you and I leave the realm of sports and tubes, we talk about things that matter. Our bubble fills with actions that touch. Breakout smiles, fingertip caresses on the back of the hand, quiet strokes to take us far from this madness. Our moments are slowed down and fresh, armed with a sweet fever that pulls us through to Sunday. I am drawn back into the diversionary mainstream, the tide which you have fought against since you learned how to feel. It's true – it's a pinhead's view, but it is like charity to donate one day a week to the Machine. It is fascinating to watch the acknowledging smile it brings to the face of a TV ball junkie as the electrons weave their serene spell...I once got lost in a halftime daydream where I met these media wizzes called Network Sorcerors while they were having this gala social ball. Strictly formal. Complete with these little chitchats about how sports are fixed and manipulated by corporate owners and the CIA (after all, sports are a simple microcosm of the larger society). Downtrodden and in tears I left, shredding my tuxedo and stuffing it down a sewer grate. Immediately the action was replayed in slow motion in my head...

Of course this video life will take its toll. I am bound to be a little crazy. Presently it's only the first week in October still three months away from the terminal Super Bowl and eight months away from the Stanley Cup. Now you have come to entice me with a path (rte. 100) to natural salvation and Vermont spiritual awareness. I thank you for the navigation but first I'll have to cash in my empties to get some money for gas.

A Fuzzy Tale

Once upon a time, a long time ago, there lived two very happy people, called Tim and Maggie, with two children, called John and Lucy. To understand how happy they were you have to understand how things were in those days. You see, in those days, everyone was given at birth a small, soft, Fuzzy Bag. Anytime a person reached into this bag, he was able to pull out a Warm Fuzzy. Warm Fuzzies were very much in demand because whenever somebody was given a Warm Fuzzy, it made him feel warm and fuzzy all over. People who didn't get Warm Fuzzies regularly were in danger of developing a sickness in their back, which caused them to shrivel up and die.

In those days it was very easy to get Warm Fuzzies. Anytime that somebody felt like it, he might walk up to you and say, "I'd like to have a Warm Fuzzy." You would then reach into your bag and pull out a Fuzzy the size of a little girl's hand. As soon as the Fuzzy saw the light of day it would smile and blossom into a large, shaggy Warm Fuzzy. You then would lay it on the person's shoulder or head or lap and it would snuggle up and melt right against their skin and make them feel good all over. People were always asking each other for Warm Fuzzies, and since they were always given freely, getting enough of them was never a problem. There were always plenty to go around, and as a consequence everyone was happy and felt warm and fuzzy most of the time.

One day a bad witch became angry because everyone was so happy and no one was buying potions and salves. The witch was very clever and devised a very wicked plan. One beautiful morning, the witch crept up to Tim while Maggie was playing with their daughter and whispered in his ear, "See here, Tim, look at all the Fuzzies that Maggie is giving to Lucy. You know, if she keeps it up, eventually she is going to run out and then there won't be any left for you!"

Tim was astonished. He turned to the witch and said, "Do you mean to tell me that there isn't a Warm Fuzzy in our bag every time we reach into it?"

And the witch said, "No, absolutely not, and once you run out, that's it. You don't have any more." With this, the witch flew away on a broom, laughing and cackling all the way.

Tim took this to heart and began to notice every time Maggie gave up a Warm Fuzzy to somebody else. Eventually he got very worried and upset because he liked Maggie's Warm Fuzzies very much and did not want to give them up. He certainly did not think it was right for Maggie to be spending all her Warm Fuzzies on the children and on other people. He began to complain every time he saw Maggie giving a Warm Fuzzy to somebody else, and because Maggie liked him very much, she stopped giving Warm Fuzzies to other people as often, and reserved them for him.

The children watched this and soon began to get the idea that it was wrong to give up Warm Fuzzies any time you were asked or felt like it. They too became very careful. They would watch their parents closely and whenever they felt that one of their parents was giving too many Fuzzies to others, they also began to object. They began to feel worried whenever they gave away too many Warm Fuzzies. Even though they found a Warm Fuzzy every time they reached into their bag, they reached in less and less and became more and more stingy. Soon people began to notice the lack of Warm Fuzzies and they began to feel less warm and less fuzzy. They began to shrivel up and, occasionally, people would die from lack of Warm Fuzzies. More and more people went to the witch to buy potions and salves even though they didn't seem to work.

Well, the situation was getting very serious indeed. The bad witch who had been watching all of this didn't really want the people to die (since dead people couldn't buy his salves and potions), so a new plan was devised. Everyone was given a bag that was very similar to the Fuzzy Bag except that this one was cold while the Fuzzy Bag was warm. Inside of the witch's bag were Cold Pricklies. These Cold Pricklies did not make people feel warm and fuzzy, but made them feel cold and prickly instead. But, they did prevent people's backs from shriveling up. So, from then on, every time somebody said, "I want a Warm Fuzzy," people who were worried about depleting their supply would say, "I can't give you a Warm Fuzzy, but would you like a Cold Prickly?" Sometimes, two people would walk up to each other, thinking they could get a Warm Fuzzy, but one or the other of them would change his mind and they would wind up giving each other Cold Pricklies. So, the end result was that while very few people were dying, a lot of people were still unhappy and feeling very cold and prickly.

The situation got very complicated because, since the coming of the witch, there were less and less Warm Fuzzies around; so Warm Fuzzies, which used to be thought of as air, became extremely valuable. This caused people to do all sorts of things in order to obtain them. Before the witch had appeared, people used to gather in groups of three or four or five, never caring too much who was giving Warm Fuzzies to whom. After the coming of the witch, people began to pair off and to reserve all their Warm Fuzzies for each other exclusively. People who forgot themselves and gave a Warm Fuzzy to someone else would immediately feel guilty about it because they knew that their partner would probably resent the loss of a Warm Fuzzy. People who could not find a generous partner had to buy their Warm Fuzzies and had to work long hours to earn the money.

Some people somehow became "popular" and got a lot of Warm Fuzzies without having to return them. These people would then sell these Warm Fuzzies to people who were "unpopular" and needed them to survive.

Another thing which happened was that some people would take Cold Pricklies – which were limitless and freely available – coat them white and fluffy and pass them off as Warm Fuzzies. These counterfeit Warm Fuzzies were really Plastic Fuzzies, and they caused additional difficulties. For instance, two people would get together and freely exchange Plastic Fuzzies, which presumably should have made them feel good, but they came away feeling bad instead. Since they thought they had been exchanging Warm Fuzzies, people grew very confused about this, never realizing that their cold prickly feelings were really the result of the fact they had been given a lot of Plastic Fuzzies.

So the situation was very, very dismal, and it all started because of the coming of the witch who made people believe that some day, when least expected, they might reach into their Warm Fuzzy Bag and find no more.

Not long ago, a young woman with big hips, born under the sign of Aquarius, came to this unhappy land. She seemed not to have heard about the bad witch and was not worried about running out of Warm Fuzzies. She gave them out freely, even when not asked. They called her the Hip Woman and disapproved of her because she was giving the children the idea that they should not worry about running out of Warm Fuzzies. The children liked her very much because they felt good around her and they began to give out Warm Fuzzies whenever they felt like it.

The grownups became concerned and decided to pass a law to protect the children from depleting their supplies of Warm Fuzzies. The law made it a criminal offense to give out Warm Fuzzies in a reckless manner, without a license. Many children, however, seemed not to care; and in spite of the law they continued to give each other Warm Fuzzies whenever they felt like it and always when asked. Because there were many, many children, almost as many as grownups, it began to look as if maybe they would have their way.

As of now it is hard to say what will happen. Will the grownup forces of law and order stop the recklessness of the children? Are the grownups going to join the Hip Woman and the children in taking a chance that there will always be as many Warm Fuzzies as needed? Will they remember the days their children are trying to bring back when Warm Fuzzies were abundant because people gave them away freely?

D N 'G

by Gary Chilson

Scientists come in three general shapes: Good, Bad, and Excellent. If we include a second value, that of funding, on top of their quality of work, we can divide the three into six neat little categories. But I dislike half of them already, so I'll simply call them Sojourners, Plodders and Prostitutes.

Sojourners are men and women who travel into that region just beyond our comprehension. People like Einstein, Newton, Da Vinci, Watson and Crick, to name a few. They are theorists who give the world a new idea, show them the way into it and then leave it for the Plodders to follow along and solidify the Knowledge. No one ever remembers the names of the Plodders, for they aren't very significant. They spend their time collecting data that will prove or disprove a theory, but to develop any new theory is beyond their capabilities.

The Prostitutes are that class of Scientist which includes, to our collective shame, a few Sojourners – fallen angels as it were, who have succumbed to their greed foremost and their science last. Prostitutes, however, are usually Plodders, the rare exception included, for Prostitution is based on delivery, not style.

Now that you know that all Scientists aren't alike, despite their white coats and horn-rimmed glasses (found primarily on aspirin commercials), I will tell you a story.

The Society we live in is corrupt, undoubtedly insane, and heading for suicide. The words strung together you recognize, yet it is as if you live in a vacuum.

Thoreau, about one hundred years ago, pointed out our human failings, yet how many have read Walden? I could reiterate his teachings, but the time for that is past. Our failings have failed us too long, too seriously, for his amiable philosophizing. It is time now only for the coup-de-grace, or hopefully (and this is why I am an optimistic pessimist) the greatest rally about an Ideal mankind has ever experienced.

Stark Trees in the Forest

The majority of people, my readers included, are Plodders. They assimilate facts and figures, yet the coordination of those facts into concepts is left to the Sojourners. I will report to you the findings which a few of these Sojourners have amassed. I shall also attempt to generalize them so that you who prefer trees to forests will understand.

Physical Chemists, seeking the nature of Nature, devised a laboratory model of our upper atmosphere, in particular, the ozone layer. Using different techniques, they attempted to discern the chemical reactions to be found in that upper section of our stratosphere. They were forced to use models, for our technology is not quite capable of doing everything yet, such as creating a laboratory that would float amid the vapors. One of the reactions studied was the effect of chlorine compounds.

The abovementioned reaction had been well established. Chlorine acts as a catalyst; each atom of chlorine converts thousands of ozone molecules into molecular oxygen. ($Cl + O_3 - ClO + O_2$) Because the ozone layer acts as a protective shield against ultraviolet rays, everyone sighed in relief that there was no free chlorine in the upper regions to break down the ozone and weaken this shield.

But on July 28, 1974, the Scientific journal called Nature published the findings of two physical-chemists, from the University of California (Irving), F.S. Rowland and M.J. Molina. Their findings changed that sigh of relief to a screech of terror. Free chlorine existed in the ozone layer.

The Nature article contained the action of light energy (1,750 to 2,200 angstrom range) on the inert compounds called halomethanes ($CFCl_3$ and CF_2Cl_2). They are known commonly as Freon 11 and Freon 12. The chemical reactions studied were:

Freon uv Cl

$Cl + O_3 - ClO + O_2$

$ClO + O - Cl + O_2$)

With the limited data available to them, they estimated a 10% decrease in the ozone protective shield within 50 to 80 years. Freon is the propellent of America's favorite consumer products, the aerosols, and refrigeration, which it uses as a heat absorbing ingredient.

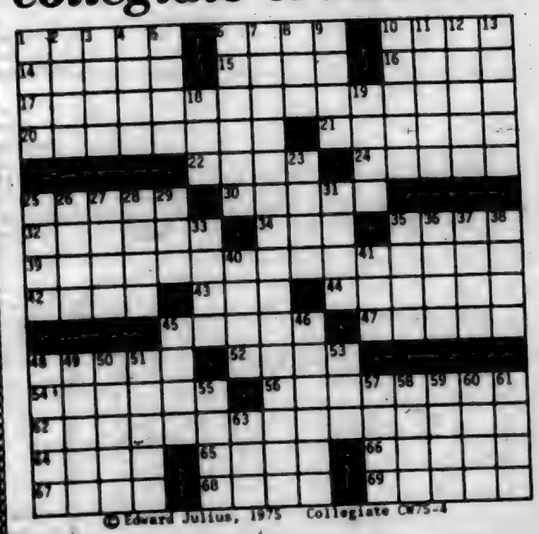
The Scientific community was quick to react. The report of freon destroying the ozone shield was tatamount to Revelations. The seriousness of the findings spurred a flurry of activity among the Sojourners, for the information was still theoretical. The next report was hurried out in two months.

R.J. Cicerone and R.S. Stolarski of the University of Michigan, reported their findings based on rough computer calculations of the chemical reaction. The September (1974) issue of Science published their findings. Rowland and Molina were drastically conservative in their estimate of the time needed to decrease the ozone shield! The 10% decrease would occur before 1990!

This second report, more frightening and urgent than the first, confirmed the theoretical basis of the concept, already amply supported by previous work in the field. The problem merited immediate concern and determination to describe the parameters of the crisis. Scientists, Sojourners, Plodders and Prostitutes, began an intensive examination. The findings after

(continued on page twelve)

collegiate crossword



© Edward Julius, 1975 Collegiate CW75-4

ACROSS

1 Grinding tooth
6 Outer layer
10 Chair
14 What's in ——?
15 Within: comb. form
16 Fix a street
17 Thomas Wolfe's "Of ——"
20 Miles ——
21 Those who grade
22 Look nervously
24 Actor —— White
25 Gaze intently
30 Soul
32 Miss Francis
34 Cool commodity
35 Social engagement
39 Some safes and bombs (2 wds.)
42 My goodness!
43 Kind
44 Table service (2 wds.)
45 "—— No" (Sinatra hit)
47 Miss Verdugo
48 Kept
52 At a distance
54 Boxing rings
56 Written agreements
62 Meanwhile (4 wds.)
64 Being: Lat.
65 Famous magazine
66 Novelist George ——
67 Prophet
68 "The Bad ——"
69 Trotsky, et al.

DOWN

1 Wrestling surfaces
2 "I wouldn't bet ——"
3 Himalayan holy man
4 Prayer part
5 Peruse
6 Body of water (2 wds.)
7 Opportunely (5 wds.)
8 To the —— degree
9 Active person
10 Malice
11 Roof edges
12 Affirms
13 Succinct
18 Drink of liquor
19 Hindu prince
23 Famous jazz drummer
25 Gratify
26 High school subject (abbr.)
27 —— Mater
28 Donna or Rex
29 Goal
31 Expensive food
33 Actor Jannings
35 "—— M for Murder"
36 African fox
37 Treasury agents
38 Como —— usted?
40 Miss Fitzgerald
41 Born
45 Esau's wife
46 Cultivated
48 Bank items
49 Got up
50 Poetry
51 Come in 53 Sandpiper
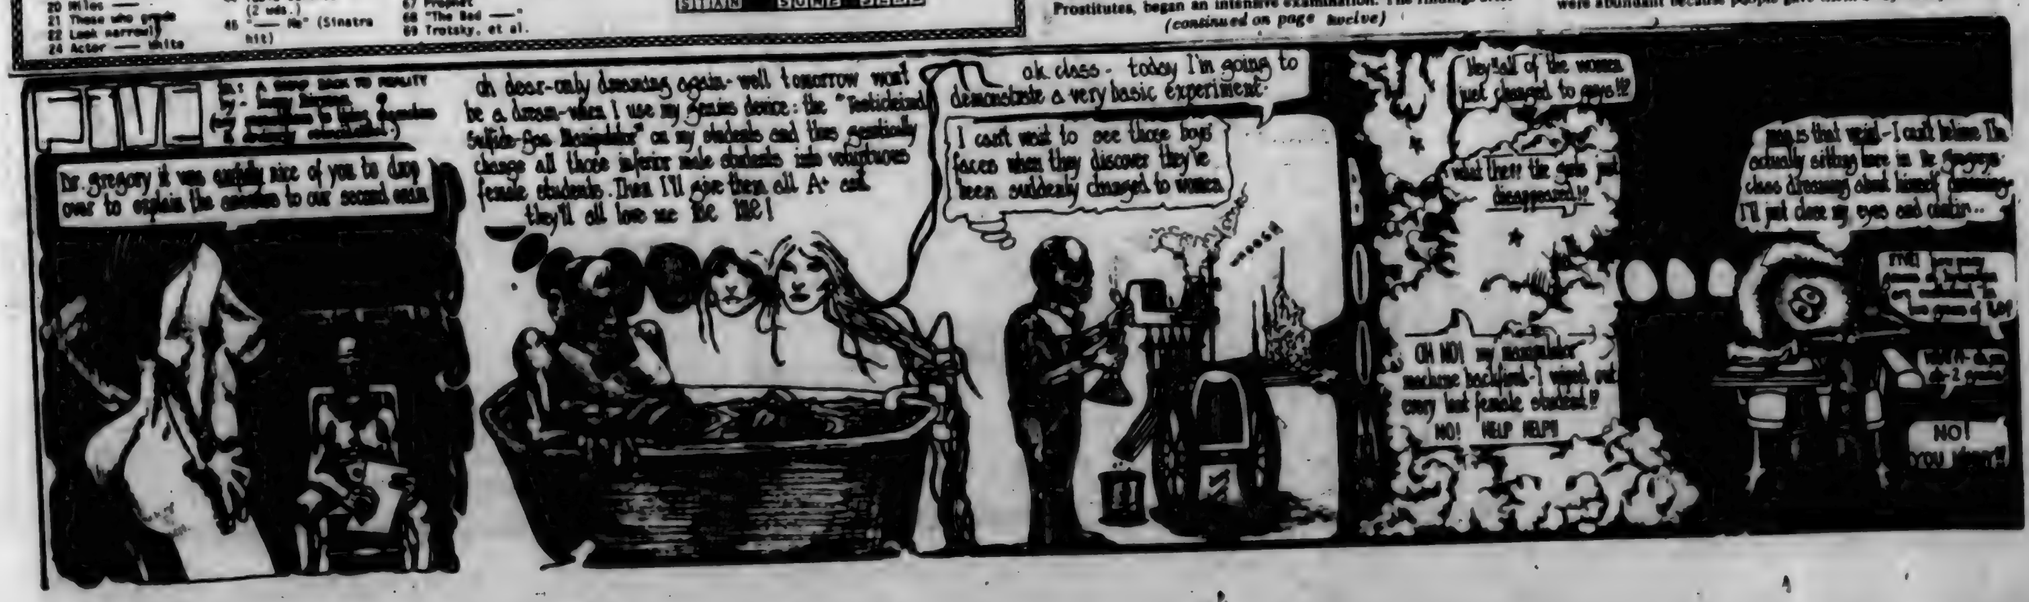
55 Tennis games
57 Cain's brother
58 Prefix: far
59 MCX
60 Biblical town in Samaria
61 N.C.O.s
63 Cravat

LAST WEEK'S ANSWER

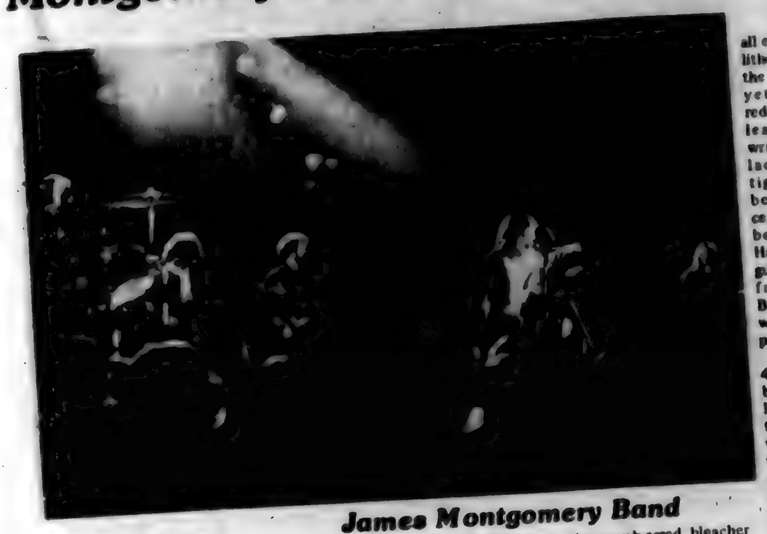
C	A	P	S		O	D	O	R			A	L	E	S
O	M	I	T		R	E	M	O	P		L	O	A	N
I	N	C	E		G	R	E	C	O		E	C	R	U
B	L	U	E	S			G	O	L	D	R	I	N	G
Y	E	L	L	O	W	J	A	C	K	E	T
			S	A	O		O	A	K		A	S	A
A	R	I	A			D	L	V			E	A	R	L	S
R	E	D	W	H	I	T	E	A	N	D	B	L	U	E
C	E	L	L	O			T	O	O		C	O	M	A
S	K	Y		K	E	A		N	A	P
			P	U	R	P	L	E	H	E	A	R	T	S
G	R	A	Y	M	A	R	E				G	R	E	E	N
R	A	I	L		S	O	N	A	R		A	N	N	E
I	N	D	O		E	N	T	R	Y		B	E	O	K
S	T	A	N			S	O	M	E		S	E	N	D



ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

SA Concerts

Montgomery Stars At Boogiefest



James Montgomery Band

by Berk Bennett

The line went from the side entrance door out to the semi-circle driveway of Patrick Gym. It was going to be a good night for music. The crowd was anxious to get in for a good time. Joints were passed and cans were dropped while wall-to-wall bodies waited for hyper ticket takers. Once inside the doorway, the stairs were filled with people whose arms were filled with shoes of all shapes and sizes. The shoe caretakers were repeatedly yelling above the crowd "Tie your shoes together!" Once inside, the crowd was anxious but calm.

The gym lights went off and stage lights went on as James Montgomery burst onto the stage. He played some great opening tunes which set the mood off right. He got the crowd ready for a hot night. He slowed it down a bit, tempered it, and built it up slowly until he let go again. He had a good harmonica and clarinet duel. The energy level rose. Montgomery left and everybody settled down again.

The Boogie King was next. James Cotton came on and brewed up a batch of boiling boogies. But the crowd refused to get excited. About a sixth of the people were dancing, but the overall feeling was one of simple appreciation of a very good band. The bubbling enthusiasm of watching an artist perform and being moved by it was simply not present. A melancholic stagnation permeated the entire gym, from the numb-assed bleacher warmers to stock still standing starers in front of the stage. This feeling affected James Cotton. After each song, only a ripple of applause filtered through to him. Compared to the size of the crowd, clapping was fractional.

But Cotton played on bravely. He wasn't at his best, though. His tunes were good but his need for crowd involvement was evident. It wasn't all gloom and doom, either. His harmonica duel with James Montgomery impressed everyone. Most songs were straight boogies tunes and they all had the same effect. They weren't hot, though, which is needed for a great concert.

They were just barely called for an encore and, after a really good number, were called again. It all ended at 11:50 and the mass ascended the bleachers for their shoes. Swearing was everywhere and numbers were yelled out futilely.

"Where are my fucking shoes?!"

"Number 45! Number 45!"

Confusion turned into chaos and it might possibly have been the most exciting part of the evening.

Tull At The Forum

by Dawn McGinnis

At the Forum on Sept. 29, all eyes were on Ian Anderson's lithe body as he moved about the stage, graceful as a dancer, yet not dancing. His wild reddish hair flew about as he leaped, crouched, sometimes writhed about the stage in high laced boots, blue and pink tights, and silver (chastity belt?). He commanded the center of the stage, standing between bass player Jeffrey Hammond-Hammond and lead guitarist Martin Barre, and in front of drummer Barrimore Barlow. Off to Anderson's left was John Evan, who played piano and organ.

The concert began with a 45 minute set by Gary Wright's band. He previously played Moog for Spooky Tooth and the music is laced throughout with its spacey sound. The vocals were grating at times and seemed out of place with the music, which would have gone better alone. The band was well received and was suitable as a lead-in for Tull.

After an intermission filled with frisbees, beach balls, popsicles, beer, and more dope than you could ever dream of, Jethro Tull came on for over an hour of music.

They opened with a condensed version of "Thick as a Brick." It lasted about ten minutes and at each tempo change the audience applauded wildly.

They moved into a song called "Minstrel in the Alley" which is from their new album. Like so much of their music, this song includes a section of soft, slow music and one which is fast and loud.

"Wond'ring Aloud" was followed by a cut from Benefit, then Anderson took over in a long flute solo which formed itself into "God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen." The rest of the band joined in, then they went into a song from Living in the Past. "Skating on Thin Ice" introduced one of their pets—a rabbit. Partway through the song, a person dressed up in a rabbit suit ran (or more appropriately scurried) across the stage.

Jeffrey Hammond-Hammond, bass player, is close to Anderson in energy. He bobbed and weaved and jumped around the stage through most of the concert, dressed in a black and white striped suit and playing a similarly striped guitar. He introduced his new found friend, a zebra of course, and, when he lifted its tail, three black and white striped balls came out. Just right for juggling of course!

Barrimore Barlow, the drummer, did a long, talented solo while the rest of the band took a break. Near the end of it, smoke started coming out of his drums.

The others came back and they did a song from their War Child album. The song was not particularly memorable, except for the exploding bombs. The whistles, bangs, and miniature explosions along the edge of the stage provided a nice touch.

John Evan, piano and organ player, was dressed in a white suit and sneakers. He did a long, almost classical piano solo. Once again the other band members left the stage.

After Evan's solo they returned for the finale. They played "Cross-Eyed Mary," "Bungle in the Jungle," and "Aqualung."

The audience went wild and applauded for several minutes before the encore. It began with Martin Barre, lead guitarist, alone in the spotlight in a red satin suit. His solo sounded more like hard rock, and was startling in its contrast to the rest of Jethro Tull's music. Then came the songs — four in all, including "Wind Up" and "Locomotive Breath."

Before the end of "Locomotive Breath," everyone left the stage except Anderson. He sang the end, then his eyes popped out of his head, he pointed a finger at the audience, and said, "See you later." The lights came up and Jethro Tull was gone.

Invisible Man, Docs, Cops On NBC

TELEVISION REVIEW

by Eloise M. Boyle

NBC has a wide variety of shows on television this season, ranging from disappearing men to Depression-Day ministers, and from detectives to divorcees. Of course, there are the usual stand-bys such as policemen and doctors.

Sunday 8:00. Glenn Ford stars in The Family Holvak, a story set in the Depression. Mr. Ford plays a minister trying to provide his family not only with food on the table, but with a good example to live by. Julie Harris co-stars as his wife, and Lance Kerwin as Ramey, their son. The problems young Ramey faces in trying to live up to his dad make for some solid family viewing. There's a lesson in this show for just about all of us.

9:00. McCoy is the newest addition to the Sunday Mystery Movie. It stars Tony Curtis as a con man (alas, another one) trying to con or earn enough money to pay off his gambling debts. The plots are complicated and elaborate, but always pay off.

Monday 8:00. The Invisible Man, starring David McCallum, is a surprisingly enjoyable show. It has just the right blend of comedy and secret agent fare. McCallum plays Dr. Dan Weston, a scientist who has discovered the secret of making himself invisible. Melinda Fee co-stars as his wife, who is also a scientist. They work undercover to fight adversaries and preserve Dan's secret. If you tune in and see a hat moving around with nobody inside it, don't adjust your set, it's only the Invisible Man.

Tuesday 10:00. Joe Forrester. Lloyd Bridges stars as a tough cop on an even tougher beat. Violence abounds on this Police Story offspring, but the plots are tight and suspenseful.

Wednesday 9:00. Doctor's Hospital stars George Peppard as a hard-nose doctor trying to run a hospital the "right" way (whatever that is). Of course, he runs into all kinds of problems while doing his job. He is plagued with suicidal patients, disturbed doctors, and infatuated nurses. This is a very ordinary medical show.

Thursday. All new shows for NBC. The programs are new, but unfortunately, the stories are not.

At 8:00 there's The Montefuscos. This situation comedy simply isn't funny. On Sundays Mama and Papa Montefusco have all the children over for a huge dinner. They include a would-be comic, a priest, a dentist and his wife and kids, and a daughter who is married to an Episcopalian. When the family gets together, they yell and hug each other and then sit down to eat. Joe Sirola and Naomi Stevens Star. A poor attempt at ethnic humor.

8:30. Fay, starring Lee Grant, started out in the 9:30 time slot. Her show then was fast-paced, saucy and witty, a sure success. But after NBC put her in the "Family Hour", here's what they got: Fay, a recent divorcee, lives in San Francisco. Her ex-husband is always hanging around and Fay's mother is persistently trying to reconcile the marriage. It all makes for soapy, silly, juvenile comedy.

9:00. Ellery Queen, starring Jim Hutton and David Wayne, takes us back to the year 1947. Ellery tries to solve seemingly unsolvable crimes, with the aid of his father (Wayne). He involves the viewer in the investigation by looking directly into the camera and asking, "What do you think?" This show is suitable for those who fancy themselves super-sleuths.

10:00. Medical Story. This show is based on the same concept that founded Police Story. Each week, in a different hospital, with different doctors, various emergencies occur. With the addition of Medical Story to the fall lineup, there are four hospital-doctor shows. This is definitely an overdose.

Well, there aren't too many thrilling shows on, are there? Stay tuned next week when I'll bring you last and probably least (quality wise anyway) ABC.

Winners In Vermont Photography '75

The Robert Hull Fleming Museum, UVM, is pleased to announce the winners in the juried exhibition "Vermont Photography '75." Five hundred and fifteen photographs by one hundred and thirty-one different Vermonters were entered in the competition. Out of these, the Judge selected ninety-six photographs by thirty-eight different people for the final exhibition which will be on view at the Museum through November 9th.

From among the thirty-eight people whose photographs were selected for the final exhibition, the Juror chose eight as winners of twenty-five dollar prizes, four of these also receiving Purchase Awards (where the Museum purchases a photograph). Twenty-five dollar prizes went to Kim Borsavage, from Winooski, Dicran Derderian, Montpelier, John Miller of Hinesburg, and Peartree, Plainfield. Twenty-five dollar prizes and purchase awards went to David Day, Cabot, Erik Borg, of Middlebury, Gillian Brown, Vershire Center, and John Owen, Winooski.

Judged by author/photographer, Nathan Lyons, who is Director of the Visual Studies Workshop in Rochester, New York, the exhibition contains a wide variety of subject matter photographed by professional as well as amateur photographers. Later in the year, an exhibition of 19th century and recent photographs of Vermont scenes (the recent photographs selected from "Vermont Photography '75") will travel throughout the State to art centers, museums, colleges, historical societies, etc.

This project is a joint effort on the part of the Fleming Museum, the Northern Vermont Artists Association, and the Vermont Council on the Arts, with the aid of a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. Museum hours are Monday Friday 9 a.m. – 5 p.m.; Sunday 1 p.m. – 5 p.m.; Wednesday 7:00 p.m. – 10:30 p.m.

Remember Baker
Rock Jazz
Fri and Sat
the TAJMAHAL
115 College Street
Burlington

2nd HILARIOUS WEEK!
YOU BET YOUR ASS IT IS!
Noone under 18 admitted

TOPAR FILMS, INC
SPD RELEASE
A CALLIE-LEVY FILM
7:15 & 9:10 PM
SEE THE MOST RIDICULOUS CAST OF CHARACTERS EVER ASSEMBLED. YOU'LL HOWL AT THE ANTICS OF:
"HARRY THE SEX MANIAC" • "USCH BAZZOOM"
"DO IT AGAIN MATILDA" • "SUSIE SUPER FAN"
"THE SWANEE RIVER KID" • "SCOTTY THE FIREFIGHTER"
...AND EIGHTY MORE CRAZIES WHO WILL KEEP YOU IN STITCHES FROM BEGINNING TO END!
BY MISTAKE THEY KILLED HIS WIFE AND CHILD THAT WAS A HELL OF A MISTAKE!
7 & 9:00 PM

ALAN ARKIN
NO WAY OUT
BURLINGTON PLAZA
CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

LUMS

LUMS
THE ONE PLACE TO GO WHEN EVERYBODY WANTS TO GO TO A DIFFERENT PLACE.
Good news for everyone who loves good food! There's a great LUMS in town — the big, growing family of Lums Restaurants.
LUMS is for your family, too. We serve gourmet burgers, steaks, roast beef, shrimp — everything from a snack to a meal. (Beers and wines, too. Come out to LUMS for a great treat.
LUMS No one else will give you more. more. more.
williston road
(NEAR THE AIRPORT)
open 11:00 am - 1:00 am 7 days a week

McDonald's BREAKFAST
FEATURING
SCRAMBLED EGGS & SAUSAGE... $.95
2 Grade A Eggs • Country Pork Sausage • Toasted English Muffin
HOTCAKES & SAUSAGE ..... $.90
2 Golden Brown Hotcakes • Country Pork Sausage • Syrup • Butter
EGG McMUFFIN® ..... $.75
Canadian Bacon • Cheese • Fried Egg On A Toasted English Muffin
DANISH PASTRY ..... $.35
ENGLISH MUFFIN ..... $.25
CITRUS CUP ..... $.35
JUICE ..... $.25
Orange • Tomato • Grapefruit
COFFEE Regular ..... $.15
Large ..... $.25
MILK ..... $.20
Tear Along Dotted Line
FREE
FREE COFFEE
First Cup Free With Any Purchase
Present this card at McDonald's. This special offer entitles you to a regular size cup of delicious, hot coffee to start your day off right with our compliments.
Redeemable only at: McDONALD'S® In So. Burlington
This Offer Good From 10-3-75 Thru 10-31-75
Between the hours of 7am-11am
CASH REDEMPTION VALUE ONE TENTH CENT
FREE

Utah & C... At St...

by Scott Curtis

Last Thursday night, U. Utah Phillips, Rosalie Sorrels and the John Cassel Band appeared in a benefit concert for the Shaker Mountain School. The billing had promised us Utah and John Cassel are accomplished in their styles, and Rosalie was rumored to be a fine singer-songwriter.

The evening contained some surprises and some disappointments. Utah Phillips came quacking on stage at quarter of nine. Since I'd arrived too early, I was anxious to hear him get started. Instead, he introduced a friend named Sparky Rucker. Sparky played acoustic guitar and spoons, and he sang old blues songs, mountain songs, and some originals. His talent was not outstanding enough to hold the audience for long. And then came Utah.

Utah called the crowd in back to come sit on the empty dance floor in front of the stage ("I don't play no boogie music.") The scene was like an old travelling Uncle calling the family clan around to hear the new music. Uncle Utah (that must be what the other 'U.' stands for) opened with a train song. In between verses he gave his commentary on current events. His set continued with more train songs and comic songs. In between the music, Utah announced his candidacy

Don't Be...

"More excitement per square inch than anything I've seen on stage" wrote the critic of New York's Village Voice after he had seen the musical Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope, which the Lane Series presents on Monday night, Oct. 13, in Memorial Auditorium. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

The multi-award winning and long-running Broadway musical is the result of the collaboration of two Black women, Vinnette Carroll, who conceived and directed, and Micki Grant, who composed the music and lyrics. The joint work is a piece of joy, full of rock, gospel, jazz blues and lots of dancing.

The original livel... choreography was done by George Faison, wh... choreographed the hit music The Wiz. The spirit of Cope in its dances and songs, wh... are performed in brassy ro... – raising style.

Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope is an all-black music... entertainment (or revue) w... 30 songs – producti... numbers: 18 in the first ...

N...
Fri.& ...
Sun. B...
Mon.- F...
Wed.- S...
Thurs. - ...
FOR A CO...

Utah & Cassel At Sting

by Scott Curtis

Last Thursday night, U Utah Phillips, Rosalie Sorrels and the John Cassel Band appeared in a benefit concert for the Shaker Mountain School. The billing had promised, as Utah and John Cassel are accomplished in their styles, and Rosalie was rumored to be a fine singer-songwriter.

The evening contained some surprises -- and some disappointments. Utah Phillips came quacking on stage at quarter of nine. Since I'd arrived too early, I was anxious to hear him get started. Instead, he introduced a friend named Sparky Rucker. Sparky played acoustic guitar and spoons, and he sang old blues songs, mountain songs, and some originals. His talent was not outstanding enough to hold the audience for long. And then came Utah.

Utah called the crowd in back to come sit on the empty dance floor in front of the stage ("I don't play no boogie music!") The scene was like an old travelling Uncle calling the family clan around to hear the new music. Uncle Utah (that must be what the other 'U.' stands for) opened with a train song. In between verses he gave his commentary on current events. His set continued with more train songs and comic songs. In between the music, Utah announced his candidacy for President, blew his bird whistle, and told stories about 'growing up out West.' ("A process which I arrested at a critical time.") Here lies the secret of Utah Phillips. A lot of people play better guitar and sing better songs, but few have Utah's enchanting, child-like personality.

Rosalie's set just didn't make it at the Sting. Hers was the third acoustic set, and it was hard to listen to. Her soft, lonely songs were not suited for the time and place. Her guitar playing is lacklustre, and she needs a listening audience. She got perturbed at the noise, and most everyone was glad to have the John Cassel Band come on.

Cassel opened with 'Hayshaker' and soon the dancing started, and all was well at the Sting. The talented band moved through a good light jazz repertoire. The trumpet, clarinet and saxophone were outstanding, with a good steady rhythm behind them. The lead guitarist's work was smooth and accomplished. Cassel played a fine keyboard, and his vocals were good, with the help from 'tis friends. In all, John Cassel leads a fine band, that is versatile enough to either dance or listen to. He capped off a good night of music, even though it was below expectations.

Monteverdi Chorus In Top Form

by Tricia John

Last Sunday night, Memorial Auditorium filled to see Jurgen Jurgens conduct the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra of Hamburg. Brilliantly performed was "Vespro Della Beata Vergine" (1610), a magnificent oratorio by Claudio Monteverdi (1567-1613). The choir, the orchestra and especially the soloist gave striking performances not soon to be forgotten by those who attended.

This oratorio is considered to be the first modern oratorio, that is, not written in the old polyphonic style. The orchestra consisted of many of the traditional Baroque instruments, most of which were played exceptionally well. These included the trombone-like sackbutts, wooden coronettos and recorders, a viola de gamba, and a theorboe lute, which is like a lute, only with an added series of bass strings stretched on a second neck. The theorboe lute contributed much color to the continuo in several of the sections.

The orchestra, in addition to the Baroque instruments, included a harp, organ and harpsichord along with the strings. It served as a marvelous accompaniment to the singers; the perfect balance of sound between the instruments and voices was attained. The "Deus in Adjutorium", which began the oratorio, was an example of Jurgens' tendency in this oratorio to subdue the full orchestra as to allow the chorus a fuller sound.

The chorus of fifty was in superlative form. All sections written for chorus were performed with great exuberance and drive. Psalm 109 serves as the best example of this driving force of the chorus. The clarity of their diction and intonation together with the strong bass line made this piece particularly exciting. All in all, the chorus continued throughout the entire oratorio to successfully create the intended Monteverdian effect of joy and praise to God.

Most stunning were the performances of the six soloists. All were impeccably brilliant in intonation and timbre, and all duets between sopranos, basses and tenors were clear and radiant. Particularly impressive were the two tenors, Nigel Rogers and Ian Partridge, who performed many of the soloist duets. The baroque ornaments they employed along with the dramatic melisma (an extended melody sung to one work or syllable) made each duet exciting to hear. Nigel Rogers, the leading tenor, was absolutely superb. The echo concerto between the two tenors was an interesting device Monteverdi used. One tenor (Nigel Rogers) was to sing melismatic passages of stage while the other (Ian Partridge) would imitate him softly from the front of the hall. This technique worked successfully and effectively Sunday night, even in the acoustically "odd" Memorial Auditorium.

The final piece, the "Magnificat" was most extraordinary. Chorus, soloists and orchestra performed equally well in each section of this extended piece. The violin duet, following an imitative form similar to the echo concerto, was lively and well-played. Soprano and bass duets were sung with their usual precision and sheen. The sopranos were Barbara Schlick and Ine Kollecker, and the basses were Berthold Possemeyer and Lieuwe Visser. The tenors followed them once again with their echo effect. The chorus sang vitally throughout with richness and resonance.

The "Magnificat" was tainted only by the performances of the two coronetto players, who played conspicuously careless with several mistakes in one section. Overall, the coronetto players did play well, as did the others who played the rather difficult Baroque brass instruments.

This performance of "Vespro" by the Monteverdi Choir was a major contribution to the Lane Series. Jurgen Jurgens presented the audience with an outstanding group of musicians who played and sang to the highest musical standards.

A music professor at UVM believes that there are three Western composers who have contributed most to music and have musically grown and developed throughout their lives, attaining tremendous achievements. These composers are Beethoven, Stravinsky, and Monteverdi. In the "Vespro della Beata Vergine" performance Sunday night, the greatness of Monteverdi's achievements are seen and heard in top form and through this electrifying concert, it was quite easy to understand the great contribution Claudio Monteverdi made to Western music. We thank the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra of Hamburg for this marvelous experience.

Lane Series Presents:
Charlie Chaplin Films

The Kid

The prestigious Charlie Chaplin film classics series, under the auspices of the Lane Series, presents its first presentation this Friday evening, Oct. 10, at Marsh Life Sciences Building in two showings, 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. The double-feature includes the great film star of the silent era in The Kid and The Idle Class.

Both films are set to music (by Chaplin himself) and will be preceded by a trailer that includes scenes from all the movies on the series. The Chaplin films are being presented for the first time in Vermont.

The Kid (1921), written and directed by Charles Chaplin, is essentially a dramatic story told with comedy. In the alley of a big city slum, the tramp (Chaplin) comes across an abandoned infant (Jackie Coogan) and unwittingly at first becomes the child's foster father. By the time the kid is five, Charlie has become a proud parent and his "son" a necessary component in the tramp's somewhat larcenous method of earning a living. The hilarious comedy running through The Kid is underlined by the pathos of the dramatic conflict. This combination of the funny and the sad, only fleetingly found in Chaplin's previous films, was to become uniquely associated with his later work.

As the kid, Jackie Coogan's performance served for years as the standard against which all subsequent child actors were judged. It is still nothing less than a revelation.

The Idle Class (30 minutes), an uninhibited lampoon of the country club set, features the great pantomimist in a dual role: Chaplin as both the familiar tramp and a wealthy alcoholic top. The central scene of the movie, a costume ball at the club, turns into a maze of mistaken identities.

As well as acting in both films, Charles Chaplin wrote and directed both.

Since the greatest living pantomimist, Marcel Marceau, is scheduled to appear on the Lane Series in person, viewers of the Chaplin films will have a chance to compare the two actors.

Tickets, $1 each, for the Friday evening shows are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at the door of the Marsh auditorium on concert night. A few season tickets, $5 for all six movies, are also available.

The series will continue with The Gold Rush and Boy, Oct. 17; City Lights, Oct. 24; Modern Times, Oct. 31; The Great Dictator, Nov. 14; and Limelight, Nov. 21. All films are presented on Friday evening in Marsh Life Sciences Building auditorium.

Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope

"More excitement per square inch than anything I've seen on stage" wrote the critic of New York's Village Voice after he had seen the musical Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope, which the Lane Series presents on Monday night, Oct. 13, in Memorial Auditorium. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

The multi-award winning and long-running Broadway musical is the result of the collaboration of two Black women, Vinnette Carroll, who conceived and directed, and Micki Grant, who composed the music and lyrics. Their joint work is a piece of joy, full of rock, gospel, jazz blues – and lots of dancing.

The original lively choreography was done by George Faison, who choreographed the hit musical The Wiz. The spirit of Cope is in its dances and songs, which are performed in brassy – roof – raising style.

Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope is an all-black musical entertainment (or revue) with 30 songs – production numbers: 18 in the first act and 12 in the second.

Some of the top songs include the title number "Don't Bother Me," "I Gotta Keep Movin'," "Good Vibrations," "They Keep Comin'," "My Name is Man," and "It Takes a Lot of Human Feeling."

The musical completes a three-year stay on Broadway, with companies in Chicago and the West Coast for a year each. Cope won four Tony nominations, two Obie Awards, two N.Y. Drama Desk Awards, four Los Angeles Drama Critics Awards, two Outer Critics Circle Awards, and the Grammy Award for Best Broadway Cast Album, as well as numerous citations of merit from groups all over the country.

Vinnette Carroll, conceiver and director of Cope, is the recipient of many theatre and arts rewards, including an Obie Award for Distinguished Performance, the Outer Circle Critics Award, the NAACA Image Award, as well as a Tony nomination for Cope. She is also the organizer of the Urban Arts Corps, a group in New York City that involves young blacks and Puerto Ricans in theatre.

Micki Grant, the author of Cope, has been seen in TV's Another World and many off-Broadway productions. Only last year she wrote the music and some of the lyrics for the off-Broadway hit musical Prodical Daughter. Speaking of Cope, she says the title can be taken as an angry statement, "but what Cope is relating to is the very human, humorous side of all situations and all done truthfully."

According to Richard Watts of the New York Post, Cope is "a revue that does 'cope' – and brilliantly so in an evening of moods – cheerful, humorous, refreshing – and for everyone."

Tickets, $3.50, $5.50, $6.50, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

Coming next on the Lane Series, Oct. 22, is the Harlem Dance Theatre in a program of classical ballet.

Give 'Em HELL Harry

by Barbara Macfarlane

It is too difficult and tenuous to try and bring the stage to the screen in the way Give 'Em Hell, Harry has been presented. It is like changing poetry to prose, neither is superior or inferior, but the power and artistry of the original is lost in the translation. Give 'Em Hell, Harry, starring James Whitmore, was the beginning of the Truman fad which materialized earlier this year. Chicago monopolized the A.M Bop with "America Needs You, Harry Truman", and stores across the country started carrying tee-shirts and posters. The play is a reincarnation of the political and moral ideals of a president that was not afraid of his country; who was strong and could not be led around by a big business ring in his nose. James Whitmore is Harry Truman, and as President Truman, he is nothing but totally convincing.

Whitmore is the only person on the stage throughout the play, and his world is set up with his office, his lawn, and the presidential podium all within walking distance. This idea is genius, because there are no bungling curtains or noisy stage changes to delete from total concentration on Whitmore. Unfortunately, people of my generation are not as familiar with Truman as our parents might be so for me, that subtracted from the impact of Give 'em Hell, Harry. Outside of my own experience, there were audible gasps of disbelief from the older generation when Whitmore looked and moved exactly like Truman. The difference must have been undiscernable. It is a pity that Whitmore has put so much artistic effort into Give 'Em Hell, Harryy only to have some money minded media wizard pervert his efforts by making it into a movie.

Give 'Em Hell, Harry is presented in movie form the exact way as it appears on stage. Of course, the movie audience has the advantage of close-up shots and varied camera angles, but the magic of the theatre, the magic and impact of Whitmore being right there and using his stage like a lion tamer uses his whip, is lost.

The film is an example of money concerns before art: mass media exposure verses artistic expression. This is a film for a specific audience, for fullest enjoyment, try to be over thirty and familiar with "Trumanisms." The wit is fast and funny, James Whitmore is a genius, and the stage structure of Give 'em Hell, Harry is inventive and eye-catching. However, do yourself a favor and see Give 'Em Hell, Harry like it should be seen: on a stage.

Monty Python: Charlie Chaplin
The Cream Of British Comedy

First, let's clear up the most obvious question–no, there is no person known as "Monty Python," and the show does not deal with any form of flying of any type of circus.

"Monty Python" is the name used collectively by six of Britain's brightest young comedy writers-actors–Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, and Michael Pallin. All are graduates of Oxford or Cambridge, with the exception of the lone Anglicized American, Terry Gilliam, who is responsible for the unique animations and artwork which is so vital a part of every episode.

Python comedy defies description. It's sophisticated, zany, fresh, irreverent. The sketches weave in and out of each other without beginning or end–a kaleidoscope of skits, sight gags, preposterous animations and just sheer zaniness.

Hailed as the "cream of British comedy," (Newsweek magazine) Monty Python began on BBC-TV in October, 1969. It soon became so popular that promoters were reluctant to book rock concerts on nights that Python was on the air! Canadian audiences staged mass demonstrations demanding re-runs when the show completed its first 13-week cycle.

Created expressly for television, Python humor has since branched out into other fields--stage, movies; recordings, books.

On Vermont ETV: Sunday 10:30 p.m.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS
OPEN DAILY
(At the rear of Frank's Texaco)

STEADY PART TIME AND SUMMER INCOME AT CUTCO SALES & SALES MANAGEMENT
–EXCELLENT TRAINING & EDUCATION
–$3–7000 & INCOMES TO STUDENTS WHO QUALIFY
–EXPERIENCE NOT REQUIRED; CAR IS
Write: Cutco, Box 902, Burlington, Vermont

NECTORS
Super Entertainment
Fri.& Sat. nites Caught In The Act
Sun. Brian Curry Band
SPECIALS
Mon.- Football Special $.60 Pitchers
Wed.- Sours & Collins Price
Thurs. - Dimie Nite 9-10
NECTORS
FOR A COMPLETE HOMECOMING WEEKEND!

ART PRINT SALE
U.V.M. Billings Ctr. Marsh Lounge
$ GALLERY 410
214 College St.
TODAY & FRI. 10 AM – 6 PM
+Old & Modern Masters
+Contemporary +Art Nouveau
25¢ 50¢ $1.00 $2.50
and a few higher.

WE'RE THE GREATEST
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Oct. 6-12 Wide Open
Oct. 13-19 Spoonfeather
Oct. 20-26 Triads
Oct. 27-Nov. 2 Hot Flash
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9 Mon. – Thurs.

SIZZLING STEAK
THE BEST STEAKS! GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
Next to Merrill's Show Case I & II on Williston Rd.
Easy Access to I-89
Comfortable And Leisurely Dining
1216 WILLISTON ROAD SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Review: Pleasure and Repentance

Delightful Look at Love

by Martha Hess

Feelings of great anticipation accompanied me as I entered Burlington Memorial Auditorium the evening of September 30. I wasn't sure quite what to expect and my curiosity was pleasantly piqued. I merged with the rest of the audience, took my seat, and prepared to enjoy The Royal Shakespeare Theatre Production of Pleasure and Repentance aptly subtitled "a lighthearted look at love."

Perusing the program I noticed a distinct lack of plot line. Instead, the play is a recreation of the ancient oral tradition of balladeers, troubadours, and story-tellers of courtly times. Rather than utilizing consistent characters and continuous, sequential action, the cast, using the techniques of oral interpretation, presents various views of love, ancient and modern, in a variety of literary and musical genres.

I wondered before the show began how the company could effectively combine such varied genres as song, letters, poetry, prose, and prayers by authors ranging from Sir Walter Raleigh to such moderns as D H Lawrence. My doubts were soon dispelled, however, when the performance began. The actors, Lynette Davies, David Suchet, and Hugh Sullivan, accompanied by their guitarist and balladeer, Bill Homewood, managed a smooth transition between each piece by virtue of their own poise and expertise. Credit must also be extended to Director Terry Hands, whose skillful arrangement of the pieces facilitated easy transition. Overall the acting was excellent, although there were a few moments of awkwardness, when for example, the actors accidentally lost their places in their scripts or ran into difficulties with the props.

The set itself was very simple. It consisted of enough chairs for all, a coffee table, and a wooden podium against a red backdrop. The actors themselves wore black and presented a striking contrast with the predominantly red set. Symbolically, and rather obviously, these colors represent love and death, passion and pain. The question was posed at the beginning of the play in the words of Sir Walter Raleigh: "What is love I prithee tell?" and answered; "It is that fountain and that well where pleasure and repentance dwell." And although love was the theme of the play, it was treated as an integral part of life, necessarily incorporating the joys and sorrows of life itself.

The play was divided informally into sections representing the major portions of life. Entitled, appropriately enough, "birth", the first section was marked by Ogden Nash's humorous poem of fatherly pride, "Song to be Sung by the Father of Infant Children."

From this point the play progresses through prepubescence with an amusing ditty "When I was a Little Wolf Cub" sung by Bill Homewood describing the amorous adventures of a Cub Scout and his Brownie girlfriend. This section, comprising the major portion of Part I, depicted the enjoyment of love. Other subjects in this category included the love between senior citizens in an excerpt from Charles Dicken's Pickwick Papers, the adoration of the beloved in a love letter written by John Keats, and the frustration of male fertility in John Donne's The Flea. Conversely, the frustration of female passion was depicted in a scene from a contemporary sensational novel by Mickey Spillane I the Jury. By exaggerating the ludicrous nature of the situation and dialogue the company was able to render extremely humorous a basically inferior piece of writing.

Perhaps some of the most enjoyable moments of Part I were delivered by Lynette Davies. In her rendition of a "Prayer to St. Catherine" she pays hilarious homage to a husband-hungry spinster, and in her dead-pan delivery of the Rolling Stones' "Satisfaction" she humorously portrayed the hum-drum life of a musician on the road and on the look-out for romance.

Although the first part of the program was the most satisfying, Part II made several very pleasurable offerings. When intermission ended, connubial bliss became the subject of the company's efforts. When looking at the lighter side of married life, the company's whimsical delivery of Charles Lamb's "A Bachelor's Complaint About Married People" comes to mind. As for tragedy, their dramatic delivery of "Victor," W.H. Auden's poem of married love betrayed, held the audience in suspense. The last section of the play concerned death and the love elicited by its occurrence. Superior in this category was a piece from a letter by George Bernard Shaw, delivered with appropriate humor and pathos. Here the author witnesses the cremation of his mother and realizes her spirit lives on, watching along with him the morbid ceremony and laug'ing.

I considered September 30 an evening well-spent. The quality of the performances and the universal appeal of its theme would have assured Pleasure and Repentance a successful run had it come to Burlington for a prolonged engagement. As it did not, it is only unfortunate that more students and residents of the area did not have a chance to see this delightful show.

Royall Tyler's Theater of the Absurd

Lisbet Hanson in Lysistrata

Leaving Pomeroy Hall last Tuesday evening, I noticed some "goings-on" across the way, outside of the Royall Tyler Theater. I walked over. Some student theatre artists were juggling ping-pong balls on the steps of the theatre; nothing unusual. I had the feeling something else was going on inside, something bigger!

The lobby was filled with much of the same; a few more daredevils juggling ping-pong balls; a group lounging around the piano in a side room singing Barbara Streisand melodies; and the night custodial engineer walking around saying nothing. I thought I'd go back stage. No one was around. I then ventured into the theatre proper. Lysistrata's rehearsal was breaking up; the cast members were putting their clothes back on. Director Susan Selig was commenting to the performers. After she finished giving notes, Paul Ugalde, President of the University Players, announced, "The cast of Lysistrata is invited to stay for a reception for the members of the Royal Shakespeare Company, who performed tonight for the Lane Series at the Memorial Auditorium...please help me cut the bread and bring up the cheese!" I ran over to him.

"Wata's going on?" I asked.

"We're having a reception for the Royal Shakespeare Company," he said.

"Why?" I asked.

"The Royal Shakespeare Company is one of the foremost Repertory companies in the world...We thought that because they're in town we'd take advantage of the opportunity to meet with them," he said, "knowing from first hand experience that actors and actresses enjoy unwinding and eating after a performance we thought a reception would be a nice gesture."

"What is there to eat?"

"Five loaves of different kinds of Nut breads...," Paul continued, "ten pounds of cheese and four different kinds of fresh fruit..."

"That's all?"

"Four big bowls of fruit, dummy...and...Um...six gallons of Burgandy Wine Punch."

"Can I have some?" I asked.

"Yes" he said.

We then went to the kitchen area where Paul began organizing a work detail to prepare the Craftsbury (RTT's upper lobby) for the reception. It was about 10:30. The Royal Shakespeare Company would arrive sometime around 11:00. The players had to work fast. Paul took charge. "Greg," he shouted "you take the upper Lobby (Craftsbury Room)" "Right Chief." "And put the candelabrum on the table...and take the chairs out of the way." Greg dashed away. "What are you doing, Joan Kennedy?" I asked.

"Slicing bread."

"What kind?"

"Date Nut bread." She was very busy.

Melinie Donavan was cutting the crust off of some other delicious looking bread. Suddenly, Paul discovered that the cups had to be washed. Sarah O'Neil, whose birthday was coming up soon, walked in.

"Sarah," Paul demanded, "Wash the cups!"

"How come I always get the dirty work?" she squeamishly inquired.

She washed the cups and carried them up the stairs to you know where.

"There's no butter," somebody screamed.

Time flew by; 11:00 crept up and much to everyone's surprise, everything was set-to-jet.

People began to dribble in. David Godkin was one of the first to arrive.

"How was the performance, David?"

"Excellent Absolutely fabulous...Fantastic." He was overwhelmed with joy.

I was so glad, we were all in for a treat. "Boy, was I lucky they let me hang around". I mingled around and talked to everyone. "McDeulini.. Why are you here?"

"I's here 'cause I loves cantaloupe, but it's disappointing that they don't have no swiss," she answered. Another woman, who refused to dévulge her identity, said she came because, after seeing such a great performance, she'd like to see the actors as human beings.

By this time, the Craftsbury Room was crowded. Not only with student theatre artists but somewhere in the crowded, candle lit room five very, very talented individuals were munching on cheese and crackers and sipping Burgundy Wine Punch. I could hear them. But could not see them.

Finally, that same mysterious women pointed them out to me. I thanked her with a smile, then approached them. They were actress Lynette Davies, David Suchet, and Hugh Sullivan, and guitarist Bill Homewood. In all due respect I introduced myself. I then explained to them the degree of Neophism which permeated my journalistic character. Understanding my dilemma, Mr. Suchet gave me a fabulous quote. He said, "It is very exciting that so many people should take the interest and show us the kindness they have done, while Mohammed Ali is fighting live on the screen just one-quarter of a mile away." Wasn't that fabulous? Mr. Suchet was a perfect gentleman. I'm sorry I missed the performance.

Lynette Davis, the charming blonde with whom I appeared in the Friday, Oct. 3 Lifestyles section of the Burlington Free Press – courtesy of Maggie Maurice, said that we at the reception were very nice beautiful people. "Here in the U.S. students are much more enthusiastic, interested and outgoing than in England," she said. She thought Americans on the whole were less concerned about their image, "less uptight."

Wild-eyed guitarist Bill Homewood said, "What can you say...you came down to eat after being on a plane and a coach bus all day. it's just fantastic to be offered a piece of cheese, bread and wine." He lives 17 miles west of London.

Hugh Sullivan, with whom I only spoke shortly, said "Super...it is rare that actors get to talk with their audiences." It was getting late. Their manager advised him to stop talking to me so that they could all leave. But I persisted; I forced him to talk; he couldn't leave; I wouldn't let him.

"American audiences respond more quickly than any other audience in the world, especially University audiences. We thought the auditorium was too large, but it turned out nice because it was so full and we received so many good reactions."

"Thank you very much," I said.

I totally agree with student theatre artist Peter Kurth who said, "It was very good to talk with professionals. These people in particular were very willing to talk about the show and the different conditions they have played under."

Student theatre artist Kevin Maconi, added that it was "a very informative get-together, a worthwhile experience."

Everybody, except Ed Tray, student theatre artist and director of You're a Good Man Charlie Brown, had something to say. Professor Nancy Haynes said, "It's an honor for us to receive four such distinguished artists." Also Mr. Phillips said, "We always enjoy showing hospitality to fellow theatre people." Lane Series director Mr. Jack Travithie added that he thought it was very good for a visiting company to mingle with students. "After all, the students are UVM," he said.

In all seriousness, it was given a very good spirit. In the words of Mr. Fiedner, "We here at the Royall Tyler, the players in particular, thought it would be great to welcome our fellow actors from across the sea." It was an enjoyable and pleasant evening given in a very good spirit. I can't wait until the next one.

The University Players is a group of active theatre students at UVM. They deal with events and problems that occur in the theatre program, both academic and extra-curricular.

Each year, the University Players, under the auspices of the Student Association and the Theatre Department, is alloted the time and money to produce a major production run entirely by students. This year's production will be The Chinese Well directed by senior Greg Purinton. To be presented on February 4th through 8th.

The Players are always looking for new members who have a dedication to the theatre experience and its growth. This year's executive officers are Paul Ugalde, President; Jon Bourne, Vice-President, Treasurer; and Karen Isler, Secretary-Historian. Feel free to contact any of them at the theatre for information regarding any aspect of the University theatre scene.

Happy Birthday ETV

For Programming Week of October 12, 1975
HIGHLIGHTS

There's a birthday later this week at Vermont ETV – the station's own. What better way to celebrate the beginning of a ninth programming season than with specials and special guests like Franco and Margaret Romagnoli?

The week begins with a topical concern on I'M 17, I'M PREGNANT. . .AND I DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO, Sunday at 5:00, (repeating Friday at 6:30). This true story of an unmarried girl facing the alternatives has provoked a variety of reactions from young viewers. Later Sunday, LOWELL THOMAS REMEMBERS (7:30), EVENING AT SYMPHONY (8:00), and MASTERPIECE THEATRE at 9:00 are into their second weeks.

Monday's offerings are AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A PRINCESS at 8:00, dramatizing the way of an exiled princess (Madhur Jaffrey) and an Englishman (James Mason) who once worked for her royal father remember imperial India. 9:00 brings THE JOB IS YOURS, a one-hour live discussion and phone-in show for women seeking a place in today's job market.

Two half-hour features on Tuesday are INDIAN SUMMER, a young boy's life in the pueblo (8:30) and THE ISFAHAN OF SHAH ABBAS, a look at the Iranian city that is a monument to its 17th century ruler (10:00).

Wednesday, a beautiful new BBC series begins. THE TRIBAL EYE at 8:00 is David Attenborough's study of 7 different "primitive" cultures and their art. The first program goes to America's Northwest Coast to find Indians who wear western clothing under their ritual costumes. The crew were allowed the rare privilege of filming a potlatch, a great chief's public display of generosity.

That is followed by the second installment of JENNIE: LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL at 9:00. At 10:10, THE ELLA FITZGERALD SHOW has the inimitable singer doing a one-hour special of popular favorites with the able assistance of Duke Ellington and Orchestra.

Thursday is the actual birthday, and there's an exceptional ROMANTIC REBELLION at 8:00, the life and work of Francisco Goya, plus a CLASSIC THEATRE THAT OFFERS A PLAY NEW TO TELEVISION – Paradise Restored, a dramatization of John Milton's later years with John Neville, that has been called "a triumph for the imagination." Join the BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR VERMONT ETV at 10:30 for surprises, entertainment, and a visit with Franco and Margaret Romagnoli, TV chefs of The ROMAGNOLIS' TABLE.

After MASTERPIECE THEATRE at 9:00 Friday, there is an hour of MARGOT FONTEYN (10:10 p.m.), as the prima ballerina rehearses with Ndreyev, talks about her life and work, and dances "The Rose Adagio" from Sleeping Beauty.

Avid makes the differences in speakers clear.

If you're a real stereo buff, you know that flat frequency response means flat, uncolored sound.

Like several other manufacturers, we too try to build the flattest, most linear frequency response we can into our speakers.

But we don't stop there. Because we know that great sound depends on more than just frequency response.

Transient response, for instance.

It's all in your head

To understand transient response, it's important to understand how you hear.

You see, you don't really hear with your ears. You hear with your brain.

For instance, it's the brain that helps you identify what you're listening to. The direction it's coming from. And that re-creates that illusion of "being there."

The thing is, every musical note is really a complex tone. A basic tone – the fundamental – plus subtle musical overtones – harmonics – that give very instrument a unique personality.

Not only that, musical notes are constantly starting and stopping. When they do, the number and intensity of the harmonics change.

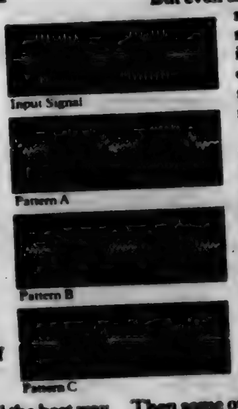
This basic tone, together with all those changing harmonics, is called a transient. The brain takes all of them into account in interpreting any sound the ear receives.

On making things imperfectly clear

It's when a speaker can't react quickly or accurately enough to all those changing musical notes, all those transients, that distortion can occur.

And distortion means muddy-sounding music. With little definition or clarity.

A bad situation made worse when a speaker over-reacts to all those changing tones. The speaker actually adds tones of its own. And that's bad.



Most experts feel the best way to measure transient response is with tone bursts. Pure tones of various frequencies are rapidly switched on and off to simulate the transient nature of voice and instrument signals.

In Pattern A, the speaker hasn't reproduced accurately. It's completely overshot the level of the input signal. And the result is a sizzling, hot sound. Tonally colored.

In Pattern B, the speaker has taken too long to react. This "hangover" can cause considerable blurring. So what you hear is dull and lifeless.

Now look at Pattern C. The speaker here has reacted both quickly and accurately. And the result is exceptional clarity and definition. The kind that Avid builds into all of its speakers.

The proof is in the hearing

Now you know there's a lot more to a speaker than just flat frequency response. Like good transient response.

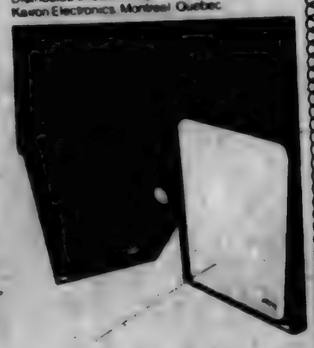
But even the best, most accurate transient response in the world isn't the be-all and end-all of a superb speaker. There's more.

The point is, we're a company that is committed to one thing and one thing only. The design and construction of the clearest, best-sounding stereo speaker systems in their price range.

But you've got to hear for yourself. So go to your hi-fi store and listen to an Avid. Then some other speaker in the same price category.

Then decide. We don't think you're going to have any trouble at all.

AVID CORPORATION
10 Tripps Lane East Providence RI 02914
Distributed in Canada by Kaeron Electronics, Montreal Quebec



Flannel Shirts from $4.79

Chambray Shirts $5.29

SHEPARDS PIE IN THE SKY

22 Church St. A Surplus Store

BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOMS

Serving You For Over a Century

88 CHURCH ST.
BURLINGTON, VT.

863-3210

One of the largest selections in Vt.

Records & Tapes

At Every Day Low Prices

news

Sit'in Back

Yes, We Are S

Where the

?

JOBS ON SHIPS! A... Foreign. No Experie... necessary. Excellent... Worldwide Travel. S... job or career. Send ... for information. SE... Dept. K-15 Box 20... Port Angeles, Washi... 98362.

CAREER IN MINIST...

...in HOLY CROSS, ... community of men ... community of ... teachers, counselo... priests, campus ... ministers of social c... overseas missions.

for brochure write

HOLY CROSS FA...
BOX C
835 Clinton Avenu...
Bridgeport, Conn. ...

RESEA...

Thousands of ...
Send for your up-t... pap, mail order cata... $1.00 to cover p... handling.
RESEARCH ASSIST...
11322 IDAHO A...
LOS ANGELES, CA...
(213) 477-...
Our research papers ... research purpos...

ppy Birthday

ETV

rogramming Week of ber 12, 1975
IGHTS

ere's a birthday later
k at Vermont ETV – tion's own. What better celebrate the beginning th programming season
th specials and special s like Franco and
t Romagnoli?
e week begins with a concern on I'M 17, I'M NANT. . .AND I DON'T
WHAT TO DO, Sunday
0, (repeating Friday at
This true story of an ried girl facing the atives has provoked a y of reactions from viewers. Later Sunday,
YELL THOMAS
EMBERS (7:30),
SING AT SYMPHONY
), and MASTERPIECE
ATRE at 9:00 are into econd weeks.
onday's offerings are
OBIOGRAPHY OF A
NCESS at 8:00,
atizing the way of an d princess (Madhur
y) and an Englishman
s Mason) who once
d for her royal father ber imperial India. 9:00
THE JOB IS YOURS, a
our live discussion and p-in show for women
g a place in today's job
l.
wo half-hour features on sday are INDIAN
MER, a young boy's life
pueblo (8:30) and THE
HAN OF SHAH ABBAS,
k at the Iranian city that monument to its 17th
ry ruler (10:00).
Wednesday, a beautiful
BBC series begins. THE AL EYE at 8:00 is David nborough's study of 7
rent "primitive" cultures their art. The first program to America's Northwest to find Indians who wear
ern clothing under their costumes. The crew were ed the rare privilege of ng a potlatch, a great f's public display of osity.
hat is followed by the d installment of JENNIE:
DY RANDOLPH
RCHILL at 9:00. At 10, THE ELLA
GERALD SHOW has the litable singer doing a hour special of popular orites with the able ance of Duke Ellington Orchestra.
Thursday is the actual hday, and there's an eptional ROMANTIC
ELLION at 8:00, the life work of Francisco Goya,
a CLASSIC THEATRE
T OFFERS A PLAY NEW TELEVISION – Paradise
ored, a dramatization of Milton's later years with n Neville, that has been ed "a triumph for the gination." Join the
THDAY PARTY FOR
MONT ETV at 10:30 for rises, entertainment, and a with Franco and Margaret agnoli, TV chefs of The AGNOLIS' TABLE.
After MASTERPIECE
ATRE at 9:00 Friday,
e is an hour of MARGOT
NTEYN (10:10 p.m.), as prima ballerina rehearses Nureyev, talks about her and work, and dances "The e Adagio" from Sleeping uty.

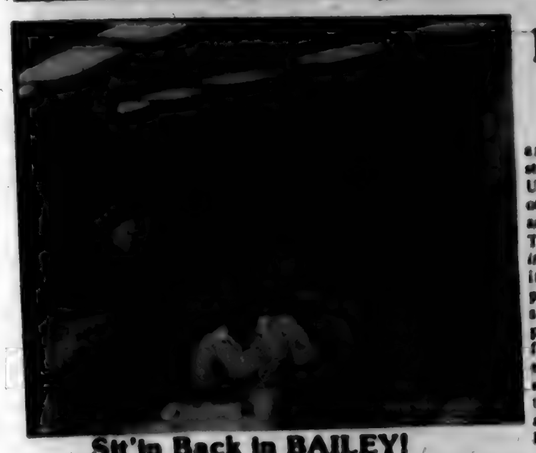
t selections in Vt.

& Tapes

Low Prices

news



Sit'in Back in BAILEY!

Yes, We Are Social Diseases...

Where the Hell Am I?

?✓□&★/!

Drink For Thought In Bailey Library

by Steve Brown

This past Sunday night, in an unprecedented show of student awareness, a group of UVM students delivered a keg of beer to the Bailey Library and proceeded to drink it dry. This was not a Ripley's Believe it or Not but without a doubt it was a first at UVM and probably the nation. The many students busy at work preparing for the upcoming first round of hourlies exhibited typical UVM self-discipline and dropped their books and underliners and charged headlong into the line surrounding the keg.

Initially there was a great deal of laughter and quiet giggling but one look at the books versus the people with the Macdonald's cups in their hands had the studious headlong towards the open fountain and into a gala spirit the likes of which Bailey has never witnessed. The numbers of people varied during the course of the 45 minute engagement but a fair estimate would be that between 45 and 70 people took advantage of the unique situation.

What motivates a group of individuals to act in such a fashion within the hallowed halls of academia's focal point? In this instance it could be described as a whim which turned into a goal. Seven students, Richard S., Ed S., Mark S. Mark D., Wendy K., Nancy K., and Susan W. held a dinner party in their apartment, the beer was tapped at this time. The group knew that it would be a physical impossibility to complete the task of finishing the keg and decided to invite some friends over to help. This reporter was one of those friends. Once we got to the party the novel thought had already been developed and psych was high to complete the project. It seemed an outlandish idea, one which could have had serious repercussions, My God, what would happen if this became a campus rage, could Camp Catamount handle such temptation in their last fortress of Solitude? You answer that one.

You can take a horse to water but can you make him drink? Well, if that analogy holds any strength as a comparison to this event the answer is yes. People obviously had a great deal of work to do that evening, but one beer to relieve the tension and add to the already congenial atmosphere which exists in the library was taken with open arms by many students that evening.

Whether or not what was done was appropriate is irrelevant. The fact is everyone maintained a library head. People were quiet, studious, and respectful to those studying. Admittedly, noise did grow loud as the numbers increased but that was for a very short time and seemed to bother no one.

There is no question in this reporter's mind that an event such as this will probably never happen again but be that as it may if you had been on the second floor of the library that night a sip of cold beer in that amazingly depressing atmosphere just possibly could have helped to spark the spirit and help one handle the books a little better.

Legal Abortion Questioned

by Mary D. Partridge

On June 5, the Vermont Women's Health Center (VWHC) performed an abortion on a fifteen-year-old girl without her parents' knowledge or consent. The parents found out and have filed a $520,000 civil damage suit against VWHC for "intentional battery" on their daughter, who we'll call Dorothy.

The VWHC maintains that Vermont has no law which regulates abortions on minors. "We feel that it is up to our discretion whether or not parental consent is necessary. If, in our opinion, the young woman has insufficient cause to keep her parents in the dark, we reserve the right to say we won't do it. In that event, we will refer her elsewhere."

According to the suit, a VWHC counselor advised Dorothy to have an abortion because Dorothy was afraid that her parents "might be angry, might make her keep the child and make her leave school to care for the child." But a spokeswoman for VWHC said, "That's crazy. We never have and never will advise someone to have an abortion."

VWHC policy states that abortion is only one possibility among several for an unplanned pregnancy. In the case of minors, the abortion procedure and the reasons for choosing an abortion are discussed in depth by the young woman, a center counselor and the doctor who is to perform the operation. The options of continuing the pregnancy and either keeping the child or putting him up for adoption are presented and the individual can choose the alternative best suited to her.

"The law in Vermont around whether minors can choose an abortion needs to be clarified," said VWHC. The state's only abortion law was revamped in 1972 by the Vermont Supreme Court. The law, 125 years old at the time, prohibited all abortions unless the expectant mother's life was in danger. The new law allows abortions on demand during the first 12 weeks of pregnancy. Dorothy's abortion, performed at her request in the

(continued on page ten)

News Analysis: Vermont Politics

by Randy Jansen

Governor Salmon's tax program, which is supposed to wipe out the six million dollar deficit facing Vermont, is coming under increasing fire from legislators. Republican leaders and several Democrats question the urgency of the deficit predicted by Salmon.

Objections to Salmon's tax raises stem from the belief that tax windfalls will take care of the deficit. There is no clear indication at this time as whether this will come about. The Governor's prediction of a serious deficit is more believable than the future increases seen by Republicans, because the recession has seriously affected Vermont's economy.

Unemployment was high in Vermont this summer, and at one point, topped 10 percent. Factories are only beginning to rehire the employees that were laid off. But, this process is continuing at a painfully slow pace and many workers are still on the unemployment rolls. In addition to this year-long unemployment, there is also the perennial season unemployment, especially those of summer tourism and construction. As the summer tourist season winds down, workers are laid off until the skiing season commences. Construction is always slow in winter, and as a consequence, construction workers are out of a job.

Skiing revenues are always undependable as winter weather, and can not be forecasted. If the disastrous 1974 winter is repeated, Vermont revenues will plummet.

Also, Vermont politicians are placed in a precarious position in relation to the proposed tax program. Elections will be held next year, and it is wise political strategy not to vote in new taxes. There is also widespread voter resistance to any new taxes, as Vermont taxpayers already have one of the highest tax-rates in the U.S.

Several Republicans plan to challenge Salmon's impoundment powers. These powers were given to Salmon in a previous legislative session. But, reducing the state's budget is becoming an increasingly popular method of balancing the budget. In this matter, legislators only infuriate special interest groups, instead of the state as a whole.

What does this mean for UVM? Several possibilities exist, depending on what the legislators do in the special legislative session. If they approve the Governor's tax proposal, then the $100,000 impounded by Salmon will be the only money UVM will have had deducted from its budget.

On the other hand, if the legislators don't pass Salmon's tax program, and fail to remove the Governor's impounding powers, then he will go through with his budget reductions. UVM's will then loose $600,000 from its state appropriation.

If the legislators fail to iniate the tax program, and strip Salmon of his power to impound funds, they will have to find alternate modes of balancing the state's budget. The Vermont legislators could propose their own programs, or they could suggest their own budget cuts. The decision to impound $600,000 from UVM may then seem like good fiscal sense to the legislators. It would be necessary for them to look at the budget as a whole and decide the priorities. Depending on the priorities that the legislators set, UVM's state appropriations may stay the same, minus the $100,000 already impounded or it may stand to loose the other $600,000.

The October 15 special session of the Vermont legislature may hold the future of UVM in its hand. The quality of education at UVM balances on the financial decisions of Vermont Legislators who must consider their voters back home. A wait-and-see attitude must prevail, as Vermont politics can be as unpredictable as Vermont weather.

GSU Vandalized

by Donna Lescoe

Thank you, whoever you are, for providing another example of the fear and hatred that exists toward Gay people. The Gay Student Union's phone was disconnected by someone ripping the line out of the wall. The GSU may be billed $15 for the repair of the phone line. The GSU apologizes to anyone who tried to call and did not get an answer.

This incident is reflective of the oppression Gay people face everyday. Gay people must be silent about their personal lives for fear of losing their jobs and friends. Gay people are not free to dance in public places for fear of being

(continued on page ten)

JOBS ON SHIPS! American, Foreign. No Experience necessary. Excellent pay. Worldwide Travel. Summer or job or career. Send $ for information. SEA-AX Dept. K-15 Box 2049, Port Angeles, Washington 98362.

CAREER IN MINISTRY

...in HOLY CROSS, a religious community of men serving the community of man as teachers, counselors, parish priests, campus ministers, ministers of social concern and overseas missions.

for brochure write:

HOLY CROSS FATHERS
BOX C
835 Clinton Avenue
Bridgeport, Conn. 06604

RESEARCH

Thousands of Topics

Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.

RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11322 IDAHO AVE., # 206
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474

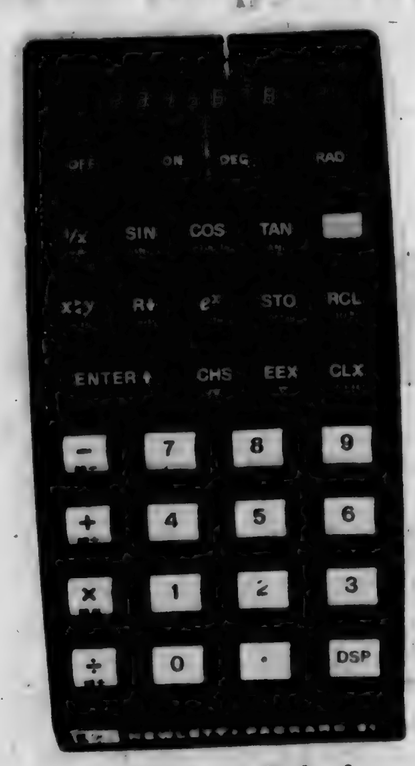
Our research papers are sold for research purposes only.

Introducing 'The Earth' Split' 'The Earth' Mate.'

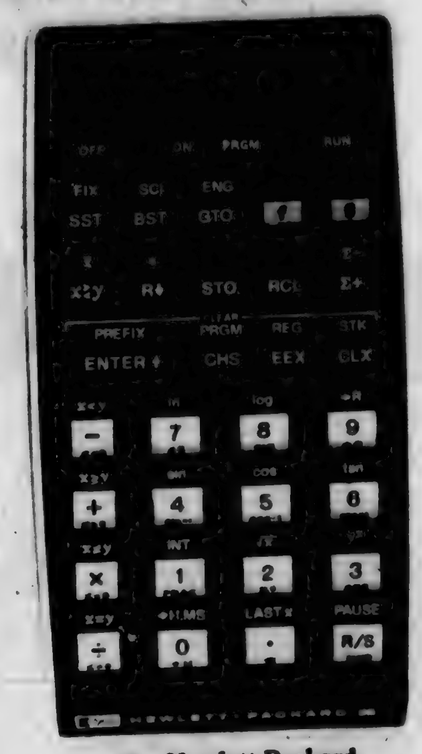
They're rugged, they're sturdy, they're comfortable, they're the Earth' brand shoe, the shoe that started it all, the first shoe with the heel lower than the toe, the shoe that's so unique it's patented.

Available only at 139 Bank St.

The uncompromising ones.



The Hewlett-Packard HP-21 Scientific $125.00*



The Hewlett-Packard HP-25 Scientific Programmable $195.00*

The calculations you face require no less.

Today, even so-called "non-technical" courses (psych, soc, bus ad, to name 3) require a variety of technical calculations—complicated calculations that become a whole lot easier when you have a powerful pocket calculator.

Not surprisingly, there are quite a few such calculators around, but ours stand apart, and ahead. We started it all when we introduced the world's first scientific pocket calculator back in 1972, and we've shown the way ever since.

The calculators you see here are our newest, the first of our second generation. Both offer you technology you probably won't find in competitive calculators for some time to come, if ever.

Our HP-21 performs all arithmetic, log and trig calculations, including rectangular/polar conversions and common antilog evaluations. It's display is fully formatted, so you can choose between fixed decimal and scientific notation.

Our HP-25 does all that—and much, much more. It's programmable, which means it can solve automatically the countless repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces.

With an HP-25, you enter the keystrokes necessary to solve the problem only once. Thereafter, you just enter the variables and press the Run/Stop key for an almost instant answer accurate to 10 digits.

Before you invest in a lesser machine, by all means do two things: ask your instructors about the calculations their courses require; and see for yourself how effortlessly our calculators handle them.

Both the HP-21 and HP-25 are almost certainly on display at your bookstore. If not, call us, toll-free, at 800-538-7922 (in Calif. 800-662-9862) for the name of an HP dealer near you.

HEWLETT hp PACKARD

Sales and service from 172 offices in 65 countries.
Dept. 658B, 19310 Pruneridge Avenue, Cupertino, CA 95014

*Suggested retail price, excluding applicable state and local taxes—Continental U.S., Alaska & Hawaii.

Panhel Works To Strengthen Greek System

Panhel (CSC: Greek Public Relations Group)

What is Panhel doing for UVM? Panhel consists of the five sororities on campus. Its purpose in the past has been to coordinate rush for the five houses and to strengthen the relationship between those houses. This latter purpose is even more important now since the Greek Coordinating Council has been started. The GCC consists of all twenty Greek houses, including fraternities and sororities. Panhel must work now to unify the sororities within this new council so everyone will be working towards the benefit of all. Panhel can achieve tighter communication and more efficient feedback within itself and then relate to all Greeks as a whole.

Panhel has its biggest job in coordinating rush. There is one concentrated month where all prospective rushees go to each house before making their decisions. Each house wants to fill their quotas but it is more important to all for a strong sorority system. Thus, Panhel works to create a strong unified Greek atmosphere.

The relationship between the sororities is strengthened by the philanthropic projects and working for the community. This year they hope to sponsor a dance in November for their first social event. Panhel also sponsors Award Night honoring the most outstanding Greeks and Greek houses.

As for the University, Panhel helps create a positive view in which to look at the houses. UVM may not hear about Panhel, persay, but it hears about the accomplishments of individual houses via Panhel's publicity.

This is the way a coordinating Council works. Panhel is doing its part to increase unity and strengthen the Greek System thru an efficient and well-coordinated rush.

Ohio Decriminalizes Marijuana

On Friday, August 22, Republican Governor James A. Rhodes signed into law a measure making Ohio the latest State to abandon jail penalties for minor marijuana offenses. Ohio joins Oregon, Alaska, Maine, Colorado and California in changing their public policy toward marijuana. The provisions of House Bill 300, a comprehensive drug bill which maintains strong criminal sanctions toward all other drugs, call for a maximum $100.00 find for possessing up to 100 grams of marijuana. Enforcement is by a citation, similar to a traffic ticket.

H. B. 300 was first introduced two years ago as Ohio Attorney-General William J. Brown's "law-and-order" drug bill. Later, over the objections of the Attorney-General, several legislators, including Representatives Ed Orlett (D.-Daton), Harry Lehman (D.-Cleveland), Charles R. Saxbe (R.- Machanicsburg), and Mike Stinziano (D. Columbus) and Senator Stanley Aronoff (R.-Cincinatti), were successful in amending the proposal to include the more moderate marijuana penalties.

When the reduced penalties become effective in three months, possessing up to 100 grams (about 3 1/2 ounces) of marijuana will be classified as a "minor misdemeanor" and specifically exempted from any criminal record. Lesser amounts of hashish (5 grams) and hashish oil (1 gram), both concentrates of marijuana, will also carry the maximum $100.00 fine.

Richard Wolfe, a Columbus businessman and Chairman of the Franklin County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board, called the new measure "a balanced bill that properly addresses both the so-called "hard" and "soft" drug problems." Wolfe recently testified before the state legislature in support of the bill along with Art Linkletter; University of Virginia Law Professor Richard Bonnie, former Associate Director of the National Commission of Marijuana and Drug Abuse (Shafer Commission); J. Pat Horton, District Attorney for Lane County, Oregon; and award winning science writer, Edward Brecher, author of Consumer Union's highly-respected book, Licit and Illicit Drugs.

NORML's Ohio state coordinator, Cleveland attorney David Weiner, called this latest legislation "a tribute to the people of Ohio." He praised the lawmakers for their willingness to incorporate sensible marijuana penalties into the bill at a time when the subject still raises emotions among many Ohioans. "They remained firm with the dangerous drugs, while adopting a realistic position for marijuana," said Weiner.

Under this new bill, criminal penalties are maintained, though reduced, for possession of larger amounts, and for cultivation or sale of any amount. A gift of less than 20 grams of marijuana, however, would subject the donor to a maximum $100.00 fine.

Ohio's old marijuana law, one of the toughest in the nation, treated possession of marijuana for sale with a minimum 10-year sentence, and sale of any amount with a minimum 20-year sentence. In a recent landmark federal court decision, Downey V. Perini, (July 3, 1975), the 6th Circuit Federal Court of Appeals ruled that the harshness of these penalties, in contrast with lesser penalties available for many crimes of violence, were "cruel and unusual punishment," in violation of the 8th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

VPIRG Petitions Public Service Board

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group, Inc. (VPIRG) petitioned the Public Service Board to require electrical utilities in the Southern Vermont area to include emergency nuclear evacuation instructions in monthly utility bills.

The petition, if granted, would require utilities to include the emergency plans once a year in the monthly billing statements of all customers living within forty miles of the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Plant.

VPIRG Director Whitey Bluestein filed the petition. He said: "Our concern is that the public is not prepared for an accident at Vermont Yankee. By including emergency evacuation instructions in monthly utility bills, the public will know what to do in the event of a nuclear accident."

Bluestein added: "This is the most efficient and effective way to get this potentially life-saving information to the public."

The utilities which would be required to distribute the emergency instructions include Central Vermont Public Service, Green Mountain Power, Vermont Electric Coop, and the municipal systems of Ludlow, Readsborough and Jacksonville.

Bluestein said: "Federal studies have spoken in terms of evacuating a twenty-mile area surrounding these nuclear plants. Other studies insist that a much larger area might be affected. The forty-mile figure ensures that all those affected by an accident at Yankee will have this valuable information."

Bluestein noted that "Although an evacuation drill is scheduled in mid-October, the lack of public participation guarantees that the public will be kept in the dark about emergency plants unless the petition is granted."

VPIRG Director Whitey Bluestein

ROTC Leadership Positions Announced

Cadet leadership positions for seniors with the University of Vermont ROTC program have been announced by Lt. Col. Alex A. Vardamis, UVM's new Professor of Military Science.

The first of three shifts in the Cadet Battalion's command structure include Cadet Lt. Col. and Battalion Commander, Jeffrey J. Rounds of Manchester Ctr. Rounds recently completed three weeks at airborne school at Fort Benning, Ga.

Appointed second in command as Battalion Executive Officer is Timothy G. Wansbury, a cadet major. Tim is from Shaftsbury.

Other staff positions, all cadet captains are: Kevin A. Murphy, Battalion S-1, Operations Officer, from Bennington, Douglas S. Jefferson, Battalion S-3, Operations Officer, from Arlington, Mass; Glenn A. Monrad, Battalion S-4, Supply Officer, from Wilbraham, Mass. and Robert H. Twitchell, Enlistment and Information Officer, from Burlington.

Commanding the Cadet Battalion's two companies are Company A. Commander Alan L. Moloff, a cadet captain from West Orange, N.J. and Company B. Commander Theodore P. Landry, also a cadet captain from Essex Jct. Both are graduates of the Army's Ranger School and are members of UVM's Pershing Rifles unit. Moloff is also a graduate of the Army Airborne School at Ft. Benning.

UVM Student Receives Air Force ROTC Scholarship at St. Michael's College

Lt. Col. Bernard A. Roque, Professor of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's College, recently announced that Mr. David P. Rancour, a UVM sophomore, received a three-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship covers full tuition, lab fees, books, plus a $100.00 a month tax free check. Mr. Rancour is an Electrical Engineering student who applied for the Air Force ROTC scholarship during his freshman year. In addition, Mr. Rancour is the first UVM student to receive an Air Force ROTC scholarship from the Department of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's College.

All UVM students are eligible to enroll in the Air Force ROTC program at St. Michael's College. The only requirement is that they attend the AFROTC courses at St. Michael's. Presently, there are 26 UVM students enrolled. Scholarships are available to both men and women in many areas. Interested students are asked to contact the Department of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's College by calling 655-2000, ext. 281. The Air Force has many different and interesting opportunities. It is still possible to enroll and compete for either a 3-year or a 2-year scholarship.

Assisting Moloff is Cadet First Lieutenant Kevin E. Love and Cadet Second Lieutenant James R. Lefebvre, with Lt. Love serving as the Company A Executive Officer and First Platoon Leader, while Lt. LeFebvre was assigned as the Second Platoon Leader. Cadet Love is from Baldwin, N.Y., while Cadet LeFebvre is a native of Montpelier.

Aiding Company B Commander, Landry, are Cadet Second Lieutenant Thomas R. Shanahan and First Lieutenant Kenneth R. Simmons. Cadet Simmons, Executive Officer and First Platoon Leader is from Shelburne, while Second Platoon Leader, Cadet Shanahan, is from Rutland.

Inspiration For Nurds

I felt like getting out and doing something non-academic regardless of the amount of studying I would have done. It was a beautiful day, the sun shone bright and blanketed me in warmth and inspiration. My suppressed energy was mounting to the surface, ready to burst forth in exclamation of joy that I am alive.

I felt sorry for those who were burdened by such trivialities as book learning. To spend a sunny, lively, day in the morbid atmosphere of a library with one's nose in a book is a punishment worse than death. Those whose primary concerns and time are regulated and aimed towards the world of academia live the life of the living dead.

As I sat and contemplated my thoughts I could not help but remember the simplicity and truth in the words of Mark Twain when he said, "don't let school get in the way of your education."

Feeling rather philosophical, I pretended my books were but ornaments for my desk. I was not to succumb to their inhibiting influences, their traditional power of responsibility and committment. Rather, a mountain I was going to climb on this mild, blue-skyed fall day. I, to use a cliche, was destined to be at one with nature; and my books I filed under, "For future use...maybe".

I felt proud and independent that I was not to let school control my thoughts and actions. I felt adventurous, alive and wanted to appreciate a beautiful day. Even so, I experienced not a little discomfort knowing that the day was not long enough to do everything I could have done but proud nonetheless that I had the balls to do something outside the walls of institutionalized education. My point is, get off your ass and out of your rut. Grab yourself by the bootstraps and live.

This man is freed from servile bands of hope to rise, or fear to fall; –Lord of himself, though not of lands, and having nothing, yet hath all.

Abortion Questioned

(continued from page nine)

ninth week of pregnancy by Dr. Judith Tyson, was legal.

If VWHC were to lose the case, their insurance would cover the suit but their premiums would rise tremendously. "It would make us re-examine all our goals," said a center counselor.

Established in September 1972 to provide abortions and a broad range of gynecological care for Vermont women, the VWHC performed about 60% of the nearly 2000 abortions in the state last year. (The rest were done by hospitals (6%), private physicians (15%), and the Rutland Women's Health Center (20%). The center sees between 120 and 150 women per week; 80% of their patients are from Vermont.

"As a self-sufficient women's cooperative with an able staff and good medical facilities, we feel we can adequately determine who we should give abortions to. The final decision is up to the woman and to us."

VWHC does not yet know when the case is to be heard; in the meantime they are functioning as usual. "We do not want to make an issue out of this," said a calm spokeswoman. "There are several precedents in other states where the respective Supreme Courts have ruled in favor of the minor's right to choose and have an abortion and other medical treatment."

If voices in support of VWHC wish to be heard, they should write letters to local newspapers and/or Vermont legislators in Montpelier or Washington.

GSU Vandalized

(continued from page nine)

beaten up and thrown out. Gay people must live in a society that doesn't even talk about homosexuality, except in medical communities as a hormonal imbalance, in confessionals as a sin, and in courtrooms as a crime.

If you think that Gay oppression is something that went out with the Charleston and our parents, you're naive. You might think this article is making a mountain out of a mole hill, but it all boils down to homophobia, acts of destruction, money, and human lives. The GSU will continue to speak about the development of human sexuality in a wholistic, non-sexist fashion. The Gay Student Union is trying to wipe out homophobia in your life time. Won't you please help.

mayfair HAS
the store with the green door Downtown, Burlington
THIS BONUS FOR YOU FROM
CLINIQUE
This special offer begins Monday October 13.
It expires Saturday, Oct. 25.

This is the Clinique "Special Loves" collection. It's yours with any Clinique purchase of 6.00 or more. Includes special take-with-you sizes of Colour Rub to glorify a complexion; Special Hand and Body Lotion; Touch-Stick dab on lotion; Transparency Powder in mirrored compact. Plus Meadow-Flower Honey Lip Gloss.

THE BASICS
Clinique's unbeatable skin care. 3 Steps.
3 Products. 3 Minutes.

1 CLEAN WITH CLINIQUE'S GREAT SOAP
Soap Mild, for tender or average skin 7.50
Soap Extra-Strength, for oily skin 7.50

2 CLEAR AWAY WITH CLARIFYING LOTION
Clarifying Lotion 1, mild lotion for very dry skin. 6 oz. 6.50 12 oz. 10.50
Clarifying Lotion 2, for partly-dry, partly-oily skins. 6 oz. 6.50 12 oz. 10.50
Clarifying Lotion 3, great for oil-troubled skins. 6 oz. 6.50 12 oz. 10.50

3 REPLENISH WITH DRAMATICALLY DIFFERENT MOISTURIZING LOTION
Genius product to drench the skin with vital moisture
2 oz. 7.50 4 oz. 12.50

Allergy Tested
100% Fragrance Free

Exclusively Yours for all Clinique Beauty Products.

Open 10-6
Open Fridays 'til 9
mayfair
The store with the Open door Upper Church Street Downtown Burlington

1975-76 Ski Equipment
is now in stock.
Ski: Rossignol, K-2 Kastle
Boots: Nordica, Raichle, K-2
BIKE SALE
20% off on all Bikes
30% off on all Parts & Accessories
OPEN 9 to 9 M-F
SAT. 9-5
Valuga Sports
1230 SHELBURNE, RD.
South Burlington, Vt.
862-1991

Emerald City of Oz, Ltd.
71 St. Paul St. Burlington, Vermont, 05401
802-862-4298
A Most Unique Furniture Shop
....and more

Panhel Works To Strengthen Greek System

Panhel (CSC: Greek Public Relations Group)

What is Panhel doing for UVM? Panhel consists of the five sororities on campus. Its purpose in the past has been to coordinate rush for the five houses and to strengthen the relationship between these houses. This latter purpose is even more important now since the Greek Coordinating Council has been started. The GCC consists of all twenty Greek houses, including fraternities and sororities. Panhel must work now to unify the sororities within this new council so everyone will be working towards the benefit of all. Panhel can achieve tighter communication and more efficient feedback within itself and then relate to all Greeks as a whole.

Panhel has its biggest job in coordinating rush. There is one concentrated month where all prospective rushees go to each house before making their decisions. Each house wants to fill their quotas but it is more important to all for a strong sorority system. Thus, Panhel works to create a strong unified Greek atmosphere.

The relationship between the sororities is strengthened by the philanthropic projects and working for the community. This year they hope to sponsor a dance in November for their first social event. Panhel also sponsors Award Night honoring the most outstanding Greeks and Greek houses.

As for the University, Panhel helps create a positive view in which to look at the houses. UVM may not hear about Panhel, persay, but it hears about the accomplishments of individual houses via Panhel's publicity.

This is the way a coordinating Council works. Panhel is doing its part to increase unity and strengthen the Greek System thru an efficient and well-coordinated rush.

Ohio Decriminalizes Marijuana

On Friday, August 22, Republican Governor James A. Rhodes signed into law a measure making Ohio the latest State to abandon jail penalties for minor marijuana offenses. Ohio joins Oregon, Alaska, Maine, Colorado and California in changing their public policy toward marijuana. The provisions of House Bill 300, a comprehensive drug bill which maintains strong criminal sanctions toward all other drugs, call for a maximum $100.00 find for possessing up to 100 grams of marijuana. Enforcement is by a citation, similar to a traffic ticket.

H. B. 300 was first introduced two years ago as Ohio Attorney-General William J. Brown's "law-and-order" drug bill. Later, over the objections of the Attorney-General, several legislators, including Representatives Ed Orlett (D.-Daton), Harry Lehman (D.-Cleveland), Charles R. Saxbe (R.- Machanicsburg), and Mike Stinziano (D. Columbus) and Senator Stanley Aronoff (R.-Cincinatti), were successful in amending the proposal to include the more moderate marijuana penalties.

When the reduced penalties become effective in three months, possessing up to 100 grams (about 3 1/2 ounces) of marijuana will be classified as a "minor misdemeanor" and specifically exempted from any criminal record. Lesser amounts of hashish (5 grams) and hashish oil (1 gram), both concentrates of marijuana, will also carry the maximum $100.00 fine.

Richard Wolfe, a Columbus businessman and Chairman of the Franklin County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board, called the new measure "a balanced bill that properly addresses both the so-called "hard" and "soft" drug problems." Wolfe recently testified before the state legislature in support of the bill along with Art Linkletter; University of Virginia Law Professor Richard Bonnie, former Associate Director of the National Commission of Marijuana and Drug Abuse (Shafer Commission); J. Pat Horton, District Attorney for Lane County, Oregon; and award winning science writer, Edward Brecher, auther of Consumer Union's highly-respected book, Licit and Illicit Drugs.

NORML's Ohio state coordinator, Cleveland attorney David Weiner, called this latest legislation "a tribute to the people of Ohio." He praised the lawmakers for their willingness to incorporate sensible marijuana penalties into the bill at a time when the subject still raises emotions among many Ohioans. "They remained firm with the dangerous drugs, while adopting a realistic position for marijuana," said Weiner.

Under this new bill, criminal penalties are mainthined, though reduced, for possession of larger amounts, and for cultivation or sale of any amount. A gift of less than 20 grams of marijuana, however, would subject the donor to a maximum $100.00 fine.

Ohio's old marijuana law, one of the toughest in the nation, treated possession of marijuana for sale with a minimum 10-year sentence, and sale of any amount with a minimum 20-year sentence. In a recent landmark federal court decision, Downey V. Perini, (July 3, 1975), the 6th Circuit Federal Court of Appeals ruled that the harshness of these penalties, in contrast with lesser penalties available for many crimes of violence, were "cruel and unusual punishment," in violation of the 8th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

VPIRG Petitions Public Service Board

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group, Inc. (VPIRG) petitioned the Public Service Board to require electrical utilities in the Southern Vermont area to include emergency nuclear evacuation instructions in monthly utility bills.

The petition, if granted, would require utilities to include the emergency plans once a year in the monthly billing statements of all customers living within forty miles of the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Plant.

VPIRG Director Whitey Bluestein filed the petition. He said: "Our concern is that the public is not prepared for an accident at Vermont Yankee. By including emergency evacuation instructions in monthly utility bills, the public will know what to do in the event of a nuclear accident."

Bluestein added: "This is the most efficient and effective way to get this potentially life-saving information to the public."

The utilities which would be required to distribute the emergency instructions include Central Vermont Public Service, Green Mountain Power, Vermont Electric Coop, and the municipal systems of Ludlow, Readsborough and Jacksonville.

Bluestein said: "Federal studies have spoken in terms of evacuating a twenty-mile area surrounding these nuclear plants. Other studies insist that a much larger area might be affected. The forty-mile figure ensures that all those affected by an accident at Yankee will have this valuable information."

Bluestein noted that "Although an evacuation drill is scheduled in mid-October, the lack of public participation guarantees that the public will be kept in the dark about emergency plants unless the petition is granted."

VPIRG Director Whitey Bluestein

ROTC Leadership Positions Announced

Cadet leadership positions for seniors with the University of Vermont ROTC program have been announced by Lt. Col. Alex A. Vardamis, UVM's new Professor of Military Science.

The first of three shifts in the Cadet Battalion's command structure include Cadet Lt. Col. and Battalion Commander, Jeffrey J. Rounds of Manchester Ctr. Rounds recently completed three weeks at airborne school at Fort Benning, Ga.

Appointed second in command as Battalion Executive Officer is Timothy G. Wansbury, a cadet major. Tim is from Shaftsbury.

Other staff positions, all cadet captains are: Kevin A. Murphy, Battalion S-1, Operations Officer, from Bennington, Douglas S. Jefferson, Battalion S-3, Operations Officer, from Arlington, Mass.; Glenn A. Monrad, Battalion S-4, Supply Officer, from Wilbraham, Mass. and Robert H. Twitchell, Enlistment and Information Officer, from Burlington.

Commanding the Cadet Battalion's two companies are Company A, Commander Alan L. Moloff, a cadet captain from West Orange, N.J. and Company B, Commander Theodore P. Landry, also a cadet captain from Essex Jct. Both are graduates of the Army's Ranger School and are members of UVM's Pershing Rifles unit. Moloff is also a graduate of the Army Airborne School at Ft. Benning.

UVM Student Receives Air Force ROTC Scholarship at St. Michael's College

Lt. Col. Bernard A. Roque, Professor of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's College, recently announced that Mr. David P. Rancour, a UVM sophomore, received a three-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship covers full tuition, lab fees, books, plus a $100.00 a month tax free check. Mr. Rancour is an Electrical Engineering student who applied for the Air Force ROTC scholarship during his freshman year. In addition, Mr. Rancour is the first UVM student to receive an Air Force ROTC scholarship from the Department of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's College.

All UVM students are eligible to enroll in the Air Force ROTC program at St. Michael's College. The only requirement is that they attend the AFROTC courses at St. Michael's. Presently, there are 26 UVM students enrolled. Scholarships are available to both men and women in many areas. Interested students are asked to contact the Department of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's College by calling 655-2000, ext. 281. The Air Force has many different and interesting opportunities. It is still possible to enroll and compete for either a 3-year or a 2-year scholarship.

Assisting Moloff is Cadet First Lieutenant Kevin E. Love and Cadet Second Lieutenant James R. Lefebvre, with Lt. Love serving as the Company A Executive Officer and First Platoon Leader, while Lt. LeFebvre was assigned as the Second Platoon Leader. Cadet Love is from Baldwin, N.Y., while Cadet LeFebvre is a native of Montpelier.

Aiding Company B Commander, Landry, are Cadet Second Lieutenant Thomas R. Shanahan and First Lieutenant Kenneth R. Simmons. Cadet Simmons, Executive Officer and First Platoon Leader is from Shelburne, while Second Platoon Leader, Cadet Shanahan, is from Rutland.

Inspiration For Nurds

I felt like getting out and doing something non-academic regardless of the amount of studying I would have done. It was a beautiful day, the sun shone bright and blanketed me in warmth and inspiration. My suppressed energy was mounting to the surface, ready to burst forth in exclamation of joy that I am alive.

I felt sorry for those who were burdened by such trivialities as book learning. To spend a sunny, lively, day in the morbid atmosphere of a library with one's nose in a book is a punishment worse than death. Those whose primary concerns and time are regulated and aimed towards the world of academia live the life of the living dead.

As I sat and contemplated my thoughts I could not help but remember the simplicity and truth in the words of Mark Twain when he said, "don't let school get in the way of your education."

Feeling rather philosophical, I pretended my books were but ornaments for my desk. I was not to succumb to their inhibiting influences, their traditional power of responsibility and committment. Rather, a mountain I was going to climb on this mild, blue-skyed fall day. I, to use a cliche, was destined to be at one with nature; and my books I filed under, "For future use...maybe".

I felt proud and independent that I was not to let school control my thoughts and actions. I felt adventurous, alive and wanted to appreciate a beautiful day. Even so, I experienced not a little discomfort knowing that the day was not long enough to do everything I could have done but proud nonetheless that I had the balls to do something outside the walls of institutionalized education. My point is, get off your ass and out of your rut. Grab yourself by the bootstraps and live.

This man is freed from servile bands of hope to rise, or fear to fall; –Lord of himself, though not of lands, and having nothing, yet hath all.

Abortion Questioned

(continued from page nine)

ninth week of pregnancy by Dr. Judith Tyson, was legal.

If VWHC were to lose the case, their insurance would cover the suit but their premiums would rise tremendously, "It would make us re-examine all our goals," said a center counselor.

Established in September 1972 to provide abortions and a broad range of gynecological care for Vermont women, the VWHC performed about 60% of the nearly 2000 abortions in the state last year. (The rest were done by hospitals (6%), private physicians (15%), and the Rutland Women's Health Center (20%). The center sees between 120 and 150 women per week; 80% of their patients are from Vermont.

"As a self-sufficient women's cooperative with an able staff and good medical facilities, we feel we can adequately determine who we should give abortions to. The final decision is up to the woman and to us."

VWHC does not yet know when the case is to be heard; in the meantime they are functioning as usual. "We do not want to make an issue out of this," said a calm spokeswoman. "There are several precedents in other states where the respective Supreme Courts have ruled in favor of the minor's right to choose and have an abortion and other medical treatment."

If voices in support of VWHC wish to be heard, they should write letters to local newspapers and/or Vermont legislators in Montpelier or Washington.

GSU Vandalized

(continued from page nine)

beaten up and thrown out. Gay people must live in a society that doesn't even talk about homosexuality, except in medical communities as a hormonal imbalance, in confessionals as a sin, and in courtrooms as a crime.

If you think that Gay oppression is something that went out with the Charleston and our parents, you're naive. You might think this article is making a mountain out of a mole hill, but it all boils down to homophobia, acts of destruction, money, and human lives. The GSU will continue to speak about the development of human sexuality in a wholistic, non-sexist fashion. The Gay Student Union is trying to wipe out homophobia in your life time. Won't you please help.

mayfair HAS
the store with the green door Downtown, Burlington
THIS BONUS FOR YOU FROM
CLINIQUE
This special offer begins Monday October 13.
It expires Saturday, Oct. 25.

This is the Clinique "Special Loves" collection. It's yours with any Clinique purchase of 6.00 or more. Includes special take-with-you sizes of Colour Rub to glorify a complexion; Special Hand and Body Lotion; Touch-Stick dab on lotion; Transparency Powder in mirrored compact. Plus Meadow-Flower Honey Lip Gloss.

THE BASICS
Clinique's unbeatable skin care. 3 Steps.
3 Products. 3 Minutes.

1 CLEAN WITH CLINIQUE'S GREAT SOAP
Soap Mild, for tender or average skin 7.50
Soap Extra-Strength, for oily skin 7.50

2 CLEAR AWAY WITH CLARIFYING LOTION
Clarifying Lotion 1, mild lotion for very dry skin 6 oz. 6.50 12 oz. 10.50
Clarifying Lotion 2, for partly-dry, partly-oily skins 6 oz. 6.50 12 oz. 10.50
Clarifying Lotion 3, great for oil-troubled skins. 6 oz. 6.50 12 oz. 10.50

3 REPLENISH WITH DRAMATICALLY DIFFERENT MOISTURIZING LOTION
Genius product to drench the skin with vital moisture
2 oz. 7.50 4 oz. 12.50

Allergy Tested
100% Fragrance Free

Exclusively Yours for all Clinique Beauty Products.

Open 10-6.
Open Fridays 'til 9
mayfair
The store with the green door
Upper Church Street Downtown Burlington

1975-76 Ski Equipment
is now in stock.
Ski: Rossignol, K-2 Kastle
Boots: Nordica, Raichle, K-2
BIKE SALE
20% off on all Bikes
30% off on all Parts & Accessories
OPEN 9 to 9 M-F
SAT. 9-5
Valuga Sports
1250 SHELBURNE, RTE.
South Burlington, Vt.
862-1591

Emerald City of Oz, Ltd.
71 St. Paul St. Burlington, Vermont, 05401
802-862-4298
A Most Unique Furniture Shop
....and more

uana

uana, however, would ect the donor to a um $100.00 fine.

Ohio's old marijuana law, of the toughest in the n, treated possession of uana for sale with a num 10-year sentence, le of any amount with a num 20-year sentence. In nt landmark federal court kon, Downey V. Perini, 3, 1975), the 6th Circuit al Court of Appeals ruled the harshness of these lties, in contrast with penalties available for crimes of violence, were uel and unusual hment," in violation of th Amendment to the U. stitution

Public

"Our concern is that the ic is not prepared for an dent at Vermont Yankee including emergency cuation instructions in thly utility bills, the public know what to do in the t of a nuclear accident."

Bluestein added. "This is most efficient and effective to get this potentially saving information to the lic."

The utilities which would required to distribute the ergency instructions include ntral Vermont Public rvice, Green Mountain wer, Vermont Electric Coop. l the municipal systems of dlow, Readsborough and Swanton.

Bluestein said: "Federal dies have spoken in terms of acuating a twenty-mile area rrounding these nuclear nts. Other studies insist that much larger area might be ected. The forty-mile figure ures that all those affected an accident at Yankee will ve this valuable formation."

Bluestein noted that Although an evacuation drill scheduled in mid-October, e lack of public participation arantees that the public will kept in the dark about mergency plants unless the ition is granted."

uestioned

preme Courts have ruled in vor of the minor's right to hoose and have an abortion nd other medical treatment."

If voices in support of WHC wish to be heard, they hould write letters to local ewspapers and/or Vermont egislators in Montpelier or Washington.

GSU Vandalized

(continued from page nine)

eaten up and thrown out. Gay people must live in a society that doesn't even talk about homosexuality, except in medical communities as a hormonal imbalance, in confessionals as a sin, and in courtrooms as a crime.

If you think that Gay oppression is something that went out with the Charleston and our parents, you're naive. You might think this article is making a mountain out of a mole hill, but it all boils down to homophobia, acts of destruction, money, and human lives. The GSU will continue to speak about the development of human sexuality in a wholistic, non-sexist fashion. The Gay Student Union is trying to wipe out homophobia in your life time. Won't you please help.

, Ltd.
mont, 05401
Shop

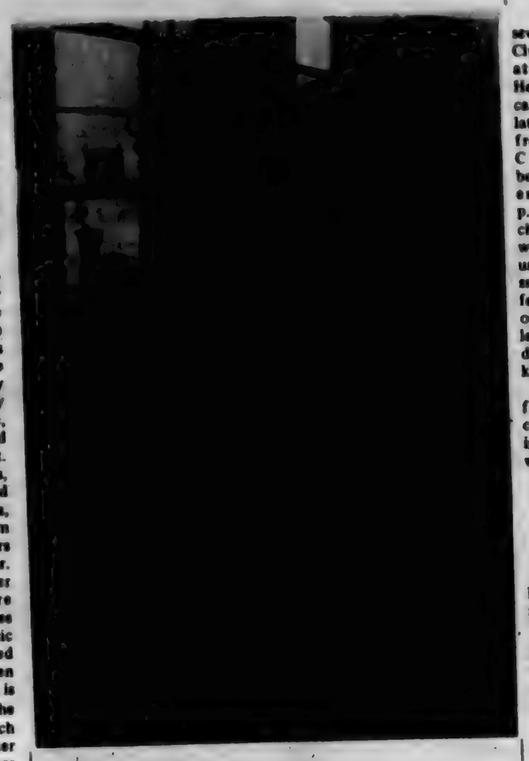
FEATURE

U V M Ice Cream

by Kathleen A Brown.

"I scream, you scream, we all scream for ice cream." Ice cream is the "most popular dessert in America" according to Dr. Duthie of the Agricultural School. He is an expert on the subject and he teaches the introduction to dairy technology course. In this course, one of the things students learn is the special process of making that delicious, cool dessert that everyone loves -- ice cream.

The most important step in making ice cream is proper blending. It is essential to the flavor and the texture. The proper amount of blending has been formulated by extensive experimentation which is why UVM ice cream is especially good. Milk solids, a fat source, sweetners, stabilizers and emulsifiers are blended first. The milk solids are milk fats, which are cream, milk, and butter, and milk nonfats, which are skim milk and skim milk products. The sweetners are corn syrup and cane sugar. Gelatin is used as a stabilizer and the emulsifiers are monoglycerines or diglycerines and lecithin. This is the basic mixture which is pasteurized and homogenized and then stored at 40 F. The ice cream is then poured into either the continuous freezer or the batch freezer. The continuous freezer offers the same process as does the batch freezer except the time required is considerably less. These freezers blend the flavor with the ice cream mixture and are essentially responsible for producing the final product. They take the fluid ice cream mixture and flavor, then blend and freeze them into a tasty, rich, not-quite-solid ice cream. The ice cream is then packaged and stored at -20 F. This storing is the final stage in production. It is when the water particles in the ice cream are at last frozen. The ice cream is then ready for sale.



FILLING CONTAINERS OF STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM

This is the batch freezer into which is added ice cream mixture, strawberry extract, and real fruit. Most ice cream manufacturers do not add this much flavoring. The recipe is blended together with air. Quantities of ice cream vary with the amount of air added to the final product. This is why manufacturers are legally obligated to sell their product by weight rather than by volume.

The UVM Dairy Bar has about seven regular flavors -- chocolate, vanilla, strawberry, coffee, chocolate chip, butter pecan, and maple nut. Last year they started a flavor-of-the-month, which means a special flavor is offered each month. Some of these flavors are blueberry, banana split, pumpkin, and this month it's apple strudel -- obviously not run-of-the-mill flavors. Some ice cream parlors advertise 30 or 40 different flavors. UVM finds it more practical to stick to the basics, but that's not because they haven't perfected other kinds. In the dairy technology, students experiment with all sorts of unusual flavors. Once they even made cucumber-flavored ice cream!

UVM has come a long way since its beginning, but one must recall that we started as an agricultural school. This is one reason why ice cream is a perfect symbol for UVM. The College of Agriculture has about 1250 students with 850 in Agriculture and 400 in Home Economics. These numbers are increasing each year. Ten years ago there were only about 100 students, most of whom were males. Today the increase in females is phenominal: 60% of the Agriculture School is female. Job opportunities in this field are increasing. Dairy Tech puts people in food plants and hospitals and these are often high-paying jobs. After all, people will always have to eat, and with the increasing world population and the marginal decreasing land production, new substances are continuously being researched so that our hunger and health needs will always be satisfied. The Dairy Department is currently researching a new flavor of yogurt. They would like to perfect a maple-flavored yogurt. If they did, there is a possibility of selling the formula to a commercial company. Right now there are about 30 or 40 flavors on the market but it would be a proud credit to UVM if there was one more which was created by our Agricultural School.

For People Who Like To Get Dirty

On Sunday, September 29, seven members of the Outing Club went spelunking. We met at Billings around 8:45 a.m. Helmets were passed out and carbide lamps filled. Two hours later we stood a short distance from the entrance to Morris Cave, located somewhere between Dorset and Danby. We entered the cave around 12 p.m. after a quick lunch and a change into old clothes which we were told "might never be usable again." It was a fairly small passage for the first 300 feet at which point the cave opened into a large room. At least the floor was a soft brown dirt, some consolation to one's knees.

We had gone about 200 feet, mostly crouching, crawling and sometimes even inching along on our stomachs when we came to the most psychologically challenging part of the cave. I was fourth in the line, so I could only hear the incredulous comments and laughter of those up ahead. The obstacle consisted of a tight crawl maybe a foot and a half high, with the added attraction of a large brown puddle directly beneath it! We passed our helmets through first and one by one we laid in the puddle and slopped through as quickly as possible. Once through I sat and watched the steam rising from my now sopping wet overalls.

By the time we reached the big room we were a bit chilly but glad to stand up. There was a stream in this room that disappeared into the rocks. The ceiling was quite high and the "floor" was extremely varied, consisting mostly of very large boulders piled on top of one another. It was really an incredible place, unlike anything I've ever seen above the ground. There were many branching tunnels off this room. We climbed down one of these using a rope which has been left in the cave permanently. Our intention was to see the lake which was a great deal higher than usual, due to a lot of rain the week before. The lake was confined between two walls of rock, creepy but compelling at the same time. After this we followed another branch for a long way, going down most of the time. At one point we could hear the rush of a great underground river or waterfall in the next room. Some say this waterfall can be reached, but no one seems to know how. It is definitely there however, probably only a few feet below the passage sounding like a huge furnace. As we continued we were able to "stand" in much of the passage but this was leaning to the side at quite an angle. It is always interesting to see a bat sleeping comfortably about six inches from your head as you slide along.

Eventually we reached what is called the corkscrew. This is a tunnel of about eighteen feet, which goes straight down and can be handled by bracing one's back and feet against the sides. Below this there is another room which was inaccessible due to fifteen feet of water which had collected here at the lowest part of the cave. We took turns climbing up and down the corkscrew. Perhaps the best description of what it was like was "I feel like I'm in a large blender."

After refilling our lamps for the third time, we began the crawl back out. Perhaps knowing we would soon be able to change into some warm dry clothes made the puddle less of a pain. One person was so enthusiastic she ended up tasting it on the way out!

When we finally neared the end of the cave we could smell the fresh air, and the steam that had filled the cave began to clear. (I was beginning to feel like a smoke-breathing dragon.) We were all out by 6 p.m. at which time we had a good time laughing at each other. I can't remember when I've seen so many absolutely filthy people. At least we had a good time getting that way and I look forward to doing it again.

Labor Power - A Commodity called Money

by M. de Totehill

Now I am interested in how the masses can remain ignorant of their own slavery and sleeping power or of the class conflicts and its recurring crises. I ask for a raise, I don't get one; I sacrifice my heart while a government official receives a 5% raise on his over 30,000 dollars salary; he competes with me for my land, I ask is it really my land or that of all mankind. Is it American intellectualism or the common heritage of man? Labor power, that which alone is mine, I inherited from feudal time. I sell it now from necessity. I have no other choice. I move to the city for my father's land has been appropriated by the capitalist; he made a large resort for his bourgeoise friends... what could be done? I again asked for a raise; I got one, but I was commanded to work faster. How does one earn one's money? It is hard to calculate more than a mere labor power exchange. I must calculate the job, the city life, the sort of existence I now lead. Is it worth it? Although such calculations are just as much a part of earning the money as toiling with one's body. MU MU... my thoughts fluctuate; I again am faced with my own self deception, my own ignorance; I go through the calculations on which my wages are based and find that it is not enough that I alone should work, but my wife as well (for free at home). The job, a gleaming masturbation of leaden fatigue, parched mouth, red urine, and ultimately, there is no way I can escape. I work! I hate it. I add the value of the hours suffered in slavery taken away from life, alienated from my essence, every minute of my day is so calculated -- that I will feel less, if I do not count my minutes as jobs.

I am told to believe that I can do one thing, make money, sell my labor power, give my sweat at the beginning of each day for the leisure of another. The limitless possibilities loom before me as a big flat zero rests in my pocket. Yet again I calculate; compulsion overtakes me, I raise my clinched fists; time runs out for the capitalist. But, alas, I know that it is I who remains cheated. But I refuse actively to participate in my own rape. I call out for help to others like myself, labor sellers unite! Instead, petty discriminations, injustice, or manipulations and fights result, in the belief that it is each man for his own. Money is all we know, money is the media of communication. I tell myself that I am not the dupe, but rather the victor; I am the dupe. I calculated wrong. We are fools to fight amongst ourselves. We are so deceived. Money is nothing but an abstraction. It is a commodity used to exteriorize the Others.

SOCCER
UVM
vs
Rhode Island
on WRUV-AM
SATURDAY
OCTOBER 11
1:00 pm
580 am
91.1 cable fm

Rape: W. A. R.

Rape. A problem? Yes. But how serious? What can we do about it? Who is affected? Why do rapes occur? What can we do to prevent them? How can we end the problem of rape once and for all? These questions concern women and men, both young and old, and the sooner we look into the problem, discuss it, and acknowledge its presence, the closer we come to the answers.

One of the hardest things we must do is detach ourselves from the fallacies and myths concerning rape. Rapes are not confined to dark alleys and unlit streets. As often as not, a woman alone in her house or apartment is a rape victim.

Another myth is that a rapist is some crazy sexual deviant who pops in and out of the shadows, never to be seen again. Wrong. No one thinks of a husband, boyfriend, old familiar friend, or the boy next door as a rapist, but he could be, over and over again. And is a woman always defenseless? It's a common belief that the best defense a woman has when attacked is to be calm and submit. This is true in some cases, but not all. Very often, if she can hurt the attacker enough to be able to run away, or try to talk to him, she can improve her situation or avoid it completely.

For too long, women have been hiding rape in the closet. They've been too embarrassed to seek help or too ashamed to realize that they had been wronged. It is another very pop/ar myth that if a woman was raped, "she deserved it." Think about this for a minute. What exactly does she have to do to deserve being raped? Wear a skirt that's too short? Look a man in the eye? Wink at him? Realistically, as a society, we must come to realize that it is impossible to justify the forcing of another person against their will to engage in sexual intercourse.

We really can't label the victim as the one who's guilty and excuse the rapist, accepting his behavior as normal and natural. According to police in many towns in all areas of the country, a woman out walking late at night is asking to be raped and any man that attacks her is doing his civic duty. Ridiculous? Not really, as many a woman has discovered. No wonder rape victims felt ashamed for so long! Just now, their guilt is being replaced by anger. Not anger against all men, or all society, but a realization that something wrong happened to them; someone violated the basic right a woman has to control her body. Once a woman can shed her "victim mentality" and replace it with self-recognition and some confidence, she can more objectively come to a decision about taking an affirmative action regarding her situation. Should she try to find and prosecute the rapist? Where does she go and what happens now?

Women Against Rape is a small organization in Burlington concerned with the problem of rape and trying to do something about it. WAR operates a hotline twenty four hours a day, and will give information and/or assistance to anyone interested.

What Goes In ... Fat Or Obesity ?

by Cindy Theall
and Ginny Sickles
Living/Learning Nutrition

Obesity is an American way of life. As the war on hunger reminds us of less fortunate nations, we fret, count calories, pop pills, and are often in a losing Battle of the Bulge. We adore fat babies, enlist our children in the Clean Plate Club, enjoy a Saturday night TV-to-refrigerator relay, and insist on driving the car two blocks to the grocery store. Aunt Bertha is thrilled you are finally putting on some weight; you looked so unhealthy. Life is fine until you look in the mirror with a bikini on and cringe. True to American lifestyle, that roll of ugliness has to go before the weekend. What can be done to lose a lifetime of habits, social customs, and ... fat?

First, there is a difference between an overweight and an obese person. An overweight individual just weighs more than the average for his or her size; an obese person has too much body fat. An obese person is always overweight but an overweight individual is not necessarily obese. Muscle weighs more than body fat and this may account for a heavier than average weight. Also, body type plays an important role in how fat is distributed. A willowly ectomorph may have fewer fat cells and a less muscular frame than a mesomorph who tends to be "big-boned" and could never resemble Twiggy. The endomorph tends to have a more fatty construction, with wider hips and rounder shoulders. Although most people are some combination of these three body types, one or two will dominate and may create a person who will be overweight on the scales but in actuality have good proportions. Heredity is a factor in what type of body you have.

Too much fat for your body type is what obesity is. Everything you consume is ultimately converted to energy, used as a metabolizing agent, stored as glycogen for immediate energy recall, excreted as waste, or converted to fat. Body fat, or adipose tissue, serves as an energy reserve, insulates the body, protects the body organs and is an essential part of each cell membrane, acting as a body regulator. Body fat can be formed from proteins, carbohydrates, and dietary fat. Body fat is stored in the form of triglycerides in parts of all cells and in specialized adipose cells.

Adipose cells are unique. The cell is mostly stored fat and when the cell is full, the nucleus and other cell parts are pushed to one side. It looks like an engagement ring and is called a "signet ring." When the triglycerides are needed, the cell shrinks somewhat in size but often is replaced with water. Thus, the number of adipose cells can make you fat or thin. If you do not have a great number of these cells, they may be filled and yet you will not look fat. This characteristic applies to the ectomorphic body type and may explain why the gangly runner can eat and eat and not become fat. It can also explain how an obese person gains

(continued on page twelve)

Pre-season
SKI CLOTHING and
SKI EQUIPMENT
SALE

SKI PARKAS — Men's Ladies' Children's — up to 50% off

SKI SWEATERS — Good Selection — up to 60% off

Last Season's SKIS — up to 50% off
by Rossignol, K2, Olin, Dynamic, Head, Volkl, Kneissel, Northland, Yamaha

Last Season's Ski BOOTS — up to 60% off
by Nordica, Hanson, Dolomite, Caber, Technica, Lange, K2, Henke, Humanic, Koflach, Rieker

Professional Wet Belt SKI TUNE UP — $7.95
Includes edge sharpening, bottom grinding, hot waxing, edge deburring, binding lubrication, etc.

ALPINE SHOP
WILLISTON ROAD, SO. BURLINGTON
OPEN DAILY 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.

Proposed ATO Chapter House

by Michael J. Cloutier

On Christmas Eve, 1974, the Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity house was destroyed by fire. The University provided the active chapter with housing at Fort Ethan Allen, and the Alumni Association went to work to decide what to do.

All avenues were explored in great detail, and in a spirit of brotherhood and a strong belief in the fraternity system past, present and future, it was decided to rebuild.

The new Chapter House for ATO will be rebuild on the foundation and within the brick walls of the former building. This will provide a number of benefits, among them: savings of the cost of a new foundation and first floor framing, provision of a high quality brick exterior at minimal expenditure, and preservation insofar as possible, of the exterior character of the original, a particularly important aspect for the neighborhood.

Thus, the plans for rebuilding include renovation of existing basement level and first floor, new second floor, new third floor and roof. New window sashes will be installed at all existing window openings. Entirely new heating, plumbing and electrical systems will be included as well as a complete sprinkler system and fire detection equipment.

The sprinklers and fire detection systems together with new fire rated exits and exit stairs ensure that the new Chapter House will provide the utmost in life safety and conform to the most recent fire codes and regulations.

All new construction will be timber, floors will be carpeted, or ceramic tiled. Exteriors will be designed for minimum maintenance.

The main level of the building is for the social use of the Chapter and its guests, for dining and fraternal use of the resident chapter members. It contains a main entrance, a foyer, cloak room, and a ladies' powder room. A formal living room composed of two spaces recreates the character of the original. The dining room with adjacent porch for mild weather gathering is also on this level. An ample pantry for preparation of simple meals and serving of major meals is also provided. Casual gathering and informal entertaining may take place in the den TV room. The main level is reached from the former South Williams Street entrance or an improved covered entrance porte cochere. A small room for the house telephone and mail completes the main floor.

A total of 24 members may be comfortably housed - a large increase over the previous building, and should ensure a healthy social and economic life for the future of the Chapter.

The second and third floors are devoted to living and study accommodations for resident chapter members. Two entirely new wash rooms are provided, one for each level. A skylighted lounge and sun deck are also included.

The lower floor is intended for service functions and for more informal chapter gatherings. Here is found the service entrance, building maintenance storage, mechanical equipment room, trash collection, and the main kitchen to prepare large meals. A dumbwaiter connects to the serving pantry above. The whole south portion of this floor is a renovated party room with bar. Additional features at this level include a men's room, laundry and recreation storage area. The lower floor may also be reached from the port cochere entrance by way of a half flight of stairs.

The old house was insured, and we realized $100,000 in insurance settlement. The total cost of reconstruction is in excess of $180,000. We hope to raise at least $50,000 from our alumni; the rest will be supplied by mortgage.

Presently, the brothers of Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity are housed at Fort Ethan Allen, 402 Dalton Drive, Winooski. We hope to move into our new house at 21 South Williams by Spring semester '76.

D N' G: Stark Trees In The Forest

(continued from page five)

the original findings have been increasingly disastrous.

M.B. McElroy, S.C. Wolfey, and Nien Dak Sze of Harvard University created a computer model utilizing the work of the previous findings and included annual growth rates in the production of freon. Their work was submitted to Science and includes the theoretical results of a ban on the production of freon.

Ray McCarthy, technical products manager of Dupont's freon products division, estimated an annual production growth rate of 10% worldwide. His figures are in serious question since the growth rate between 1960 and 1972 has been 22% annually. The cutback in production is unlikely, considering the present construction of larger freon plants.

At our present rate (22%), the Harvard team determined that a decrease in the ozone shield of 40% would occur by the year 1994! At Dupont's growth rate figure of 10% the decrease of 40% would occur by the year 2014. Even if we halt all production by 1978, the ozone shield would not return to normal levels until 2064.

Freon, inert until it reaches the upper atmosphere, is a gas that drifts slowly up through our breathable atmosphere to a level where it is composed by light energy. The light at this level is not the same as at lower levels; the concentration and intensity of the light is much higher and much stronger in the ozone levels. The existence of what was thought to be an inert, harmless chemical prompted researchers to study the effects of other chemicals systematically released without thought or consideration of their effects. The accelerative studies indicate that freon isn't the only villain.

Free bromine from Ch_3Br, used to fumigate agricultural land, is postulated as being more of an efficient catalyst. Ch_3Cl, which is used to treat sewage and drinking water, also contributes chlorine to the upper atmosphere. Oxides of Nitrogen (NO_x) released by the perfidious SST (banned in America, yet our FAA is considering British and Russian versions) and by nuclear tests have already had a measureable effect in reducing the ozone shield (Science 187: 1181 1975).

A catalyst, if you recall, facilitates the conversion of a chemical compound without itself being changed. Each atom of chlorine changes thousands of ozone molecules to oxygen. 5×10^9 kgs of freon have already been released into the atmosphere. Nearly 10^9 kgs will to released this year alone.

The relationship between ozone depletion and ultraviolet radiation varies, but on the average, the percentage increase in UV radiation is twice the percentage decrease in the ozone shield. Thus if the ozone is depleted by 10%, the increase in radiation will be 20%. At present, the ozone shield blocks out more than 95% of the UV radiation. Scientists agree that life did not begin on earth until the ozone shield was developed by chemical synthesis (Science, 186: 337 1974).

In 1973 the National Academy of Science published a study on the biological impact of the SST and the detrimental effect it had on the ozone shield. The study concluded that a 5% decrease in the shield would produce 8,000 new cases of skin cancer annually in the U.S. alone. This estimate was later admitted to be conservative. They also determined that the adverse change in solar radiation would effect the phytoplankton in the oceans. Which produces most of the world's oxygen. Many agricultural products would also suffer and famine already stares us in the face. Insects that see in the UV spectrum would lose their ability to distinguish their flower preferences. Pollination, necessary to the production of edible products, would suffer. They also determined that the insects would not be able to distinguish their mating colors and the insect populations would decline. Don't be misled by your petty indifference to insects. Our lives depend on them.

Ultra-violet radiation is even more serious than the NAS study would lead you to believe. UV radiation is a prime source of mutation. Geneticists regularly use it to mutate organisms in their attempt to learn the nature and function of the gene. It had been suggested that the magnetic force field shifts that our planet has undergone (the force field prevents some of the UV radiation from penetrating, much as the ozone shield does) had contributed to the extinction of the dinosaurs. Skin cancer is a mild danger in comparison to the wide spread mutational effects UV radiation would have on our species.

To give credit where credit is due, the US government has formed another bureaucracy to study the effects and the evidence of our diminishing ozone shield. Industry contributes vast sums to the project and is determined to prove the fallacy of our fears. If there is anything to trust about American Industry, we can be sure of their concern. The production of freon is one of America's biggest industries. Ray McCarthy (Dupont's lackey) estimated that one million Americans would be out of jobs and that the Nation's Economy could not stand the loss of the 8 billion dollar industry should the proposed ban go into effect.

Robert H. Abplanalp, inventor of the spray can valve and owner of Precision Valve Corp. (he reaps in 50% of the annual spray valve profits and alledgedly contributed to Nixon's funny-money fund), said in an interview in Barrons Business Weekly (appropriately named, if you remember my last article) that aerosol products have made "American lives healthier and easier. The success of the aerosol package has been no accident. (Aside to the reader: Certainly not, it was planned and promoted!). The consumer needs it and buys it." Barrons Weekly March 3rd, 1975.

A University of California (Berkeley) chemist, Harold S. Johnson, one of the early theorists of ozone destruction by Man's activities, believes the so-called controversy (whether to ban freon or not) is really philosophical. "When, if ever, is there enough data to confirm an unpopular scientific theory, one that could put a halt to a major industry and change the habits of millions of consumers?" Science News 107:322 1975.

McCarthy wants more time to conduct experiments. (These are the experiments of the Prostitutes, remember?). McCarthy emphasizes that the depletion models are hypothetical and no one has proven it conclusively. Rowland responds by saying, "Industry says it is just a hypothesis. But their position is just hypothetical, too. They have the hypothesis that it is safe to release flurocarbons, but no data to back up their hypothesis. We have a hypothesis that it is unsafe, but we do have some scientific data, and are coming up with more." Science News 106: 341 1974.

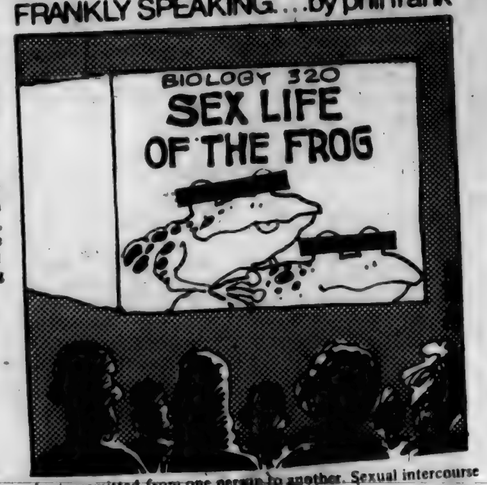
McElroy says, "We can't afford to wait the normal ten years (to verify the models), because if the theories are correct, by that time the effects will be pronounced." Science News 106:212 1974.

Think of this as you spray your pits. You can praise the Lord and thank the good Businessman for making your day safe from perspiration odor.

Included is a short reading list you might find interesting. All the publications can be found on campus.

Science News 103:101 F 17, '73
Science 180:735 My 18, '73
Science News 106:212 Oct. 5, '74
Nation 219:562 Nov. 30, '74
Science 186:335 Oct. 25, '74
US News 78:72 Ja 20, '75
Saturday Review, World 2:4 Oct. 5, '74
Science News 106:341 Nov. 30, '74
New Yorker 51:47 Apr. 7, '75
Chemistry 48:3 Ma '75
Chemistry 48:25 Ja '75
Science 187:1181 Mr 28, '75
Science News 107:100 F 15, '75
Business World pg. 50 F 17, '75
Nation 220:775 Je 28, '75
Science News 107:322 My 17, '75
Newsweek 85:63 Je 23, '75
Environment 17:6 Ap '75
U.S. News 78:41 My 5, '75

FRANKLY SPEAKING...by phil frank



THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by H. Spencer Turner, M.D.
Director, The Ohio State University Health Service
1875 Millikin Rd.
Columbus, Ohio 43210

QUESTION: This question is in regard to plastic surgery of the breasts. I would like to know how safe the surgery is involving enlargement and a little bit about how it is done.

Lately, I have been considering such an operation, partially out of vanity, but also to help rid myself of an overwhelming feeling of inadequacy. My gynecologist says I am "well developed" but my body is by no means proportional. My rib cage exceeds my bust measurement by a few inches and this is distressing, no matter what kind of clothing I wear.

One of my greatest fears concerning such an operation is its potential for affecting my ability to nurse a child. My husband doesn't make me feel inadequate, but he wouldn't mind if I had the operation either.

ANSWER: The shape, size and proportion of bodily structures vary so widely, yet our concept of what looks good is rather narrow. When an anatomic feature that can be modified by plastic surgery causes a large amount of distress and worry, such surgery becomes a worth while consideration. I advise caution about any cosmetic surgery when a person has unrealistic expectations about how their life will be changed by such surgery and when there is an insignificant cosmetic defect. Cosmetic surgery is also rather expensive and unless necessitated by injury or severe psychiatric difficulties, such surgery is not covered by medical insurance.

In regard to breast surgery itself, there are two types, the type which makes breasts larger and the type which makes breasts smaller. Breast augmentation is accomplished by inserting a silicone plastic mold between the breast and the chest wall. Such a procedure gives a natural appearance and keeps what breast tissue there is out in front. This type of surgery does not interfere with the mammary glands, which are not disturbed and will still respond to pregnancy. Therefore, women who have had such surgery are perfectly capable of nursing their children. In the case in which there are concerns about general proportions, you have to be careful that you don't end up with breasts larger than what feel comfortable or look attractive. Some women who have had breast augmentation surgery have had a hard time getting used to having larger breasts.

The other type of breast surgery involves changing their shape and/or making them smaller. Some women have one breast that is much larger than the other or have very large breasts which cause problems in terms of appearance, hygiene and confort. Other women who had firm breasts when younger, find their breasts badly misshappen after several pregnancies. In such cases, sophisticated surgery is necessary in which breast tissue is removed, skin shifted, and even the nipple relocated on the newly formed breast. This type of surgery very definitely interferes with mammary glands, which are often removed in the process, and it should not be done in a woman who intends to breast feed her children. Even so, some young women have such extraordinary enlargment of their breasts that such surgery is necessary.

A properly certified plastic surgeon is the type of person who does this work.

QUESTION: One of my favorite pasttimes is collecting different beer cans. However, to simply assemble various brands of beer containers is not my goal — my collection requires that I drink the beer in each can in order to save it. My question concerns what (if any) effect drinking old beer may have on my health. Some of the cans I have found and drank were slightly rusted and had a definite metallic taste. Can drinking beer out of such cans do me harm? (like death, blindness, impotence, etc.)

ANSWER: Beer can collecting has become a popular pasttime, but there are only a few purists, such as yourself, who insist on drinking the contents before they collect the can. One summer, while in college, I worked in a chemistry lab of a can company. One of my jobs involved analyzing cans and their contents after they had been stored for long periods of time. I determined if any corrosion of the can had taken place or if the contents had been damaged. One hot summer afternoon I sucked up 50 ml portions of beer from over 100 beer cans. In addition to recalling the one hell of a headache I got that day, I remember that the iron content of the canned beer was the same as bottled beer, although the cans were not as old as yours seem to be.

By and large, if the material going into the can is sterile in the first place (as it should be) and the can has not rusted through to the outside or in other ways had its seal broken, then the stuff should be safe. It may taste lousy, but the amount of iron or other minerals is harmless. The outside of the can should be clean before you open it to prevent contamination.

Perhaps you can solve the problem created by your ritual through the use of a little symbolism. Take a small sample of the beer you are collecting and mix it into a glass of fresh beer and drink that.

QUESTION: How are foot calluses caused? Do most people get them and is there anything you can do about them?

ANSWER: Calluses are caused by constant rubbing. Regardless of where they appear, it is some mechanical irritation which produces increased growth and hardening of the skin. The palms of the hand and the soles of the feet come equipped with slightly thicker skin and the development of mild callus formation serves a useful and protective function. However, tight fitting shoes, especially ones that scrunch up the toes, produce non-adaptive calluses which can be quite painful. Excessive crowding of toes can also produce bunions which are due to a deformity of the joint of the big toe due to pressure.

Painful callus formation on the feet can be avoided by wearing properly fitting shoes that do not slip excessively and do not crowd the toes. Once calluses are severe, it may be necessary to have some of the excess skin shaved off by a physician or a podiatrist. This is not a painful procedure.

QUESTION: I have a wart-like growth on my penis: It developed as a sore during a recent urinary infection. VD tests have been negative but the growth remains. A doctor treated it with a brownish corrosive which has caused it to scab and flake and instructed me to use something else if it didn't completely vanish from the treatment he administered. It does seem to be getting less protrusive, but the skin is left shiny and discolored. Would it not be possible to have this surgically removed?

ANSWER: The wart-like growth on your penis sounds like a wart. Warts, wherever they are, are caused by a virus and can be transmitted from one person to another. Sexual intercourse with frogs is not responsible, but you surely could have gotten it from intercourse with someone who had venereal warts (also known as condyloma acuminatum)

Approaching male or female genitals with a knife when simple procedures would suffice is considered poor form. Since the wart is improving, I would suggest following through on the advice the doctor gave you. The shiny discolored spots will improve with time.

Fat Or Obesity?

(continued from page eleven)

weight easily after going off a diet. The extra cells are eager for excess fat.

How can you get rid of too many fat cells? Unfortunately, fat cell number appears to be determined in the first few years of life. Recent evidence suggests that bottle-fed babies are doubling their weight in half the time as breast fed babies, perhaps preparing them for a life of excess fatness. Early infancy appears to be the most critical time for fat cells to grow and multiply. Once the cells are formed, they are permanent. Their size may increase or decrease but numbers will remain fairly constant.

Once cell number is determined, there are critical times for fat deposition. The first is weaning, followed by ages 7-11, puberty in females, a woman's first pregnancy, and ages 22-25, accelerating in the mid-40's. Although little can be done to alter our cell number or the critical time periods of the past, we can do something about the 22-25 critical period. During this time, we can become fat without ever gaining weight! It is especially true for men. A reduction of physical activity causes muscle to be replaced by fat. Fat weighs less than muscle so that we will appear to remain at a constant weight. This will happen to the finest physique if some exercise or physical fitness program is not incorporated into one's lifestyle.

We may also gain weight if we do not alter our diet because our resting body requires less energy as we age. The unit of energy is the calorie. In one pound of body fat, there are 3,500 calories. One would have to consume 3,500 calories over the daily need in order to gain one pound. Conversely, one would have to expend 3,500 calories to lose one pound. Body fat is somewhat like a warehouse of oil barrels. You can't decrease the number of barrels but you can decrease the amount of oil, either by not putting so much into each barrel or by burning some of it. Dieting and exercise are often easier said than done. Our next article will explore why people eat and eat, criticize some of the popular dieting fads and try to present a sound program of body consciousness.

We welcome questions. Send to: What Goes In, Box 512 L/L.

Forest

...eady had a measurable ...rease 187-1181 1975). ...ses the conversion of a ...ng changed. Each atom ...e molecules to oxygen. ...been released into the ...ased this year alone. ...pletion and ultraviolet ...e percentage increase in ...decrease in the ozone ...by 10%, the increase in ...ozone shield blocks out ...cientists agree that life ...shield was developed by ...1974)

...of Science published a ...SST and the detrimental ...e study concluded that a ...duce 8,000 new cases of ...e. This estimate was later ...also determined that the ...tion would effect the ...h produces most of the ...oducts would also suffer ...ce. Insects that use in the ...ility to distinguish their ...sary to the production of ...also determined that the ...guish their mating colors ...kline. Don't be misled by ...ur lives depend on them. ...ore serious than the NAS ...UV radiation is a prime ...gularly use it to mutate ...he nature and function of ...the magnetic force field ...(the force field prevents ...rating, much as the ozone ...o the extinction of the ...ger in comparison to the ...radiation would have on

...e, the US government has ...tudy the effects and the ...hield. Industry contributes ...mined to prove the fallacy ...to trust about American ...ncern. The production of ...industries. Ray McCarthy ...e million Americans would ...Economy could not stand ...ustry should the proposed

...of the spray can valve and ...reaps in 50% of the annual ...y contributed to Nixon's ...terview in Barrons Business ...f you remember my last ...ve made "American lives ...of the aerosol package has ...eader: Certainly not, it was ...umer needs it and buys it."

...(Berkeley) chemist, Harold ...nuts of ozone destruction by ...lled controversy (whether to ...sophical. "When, if ever, is ...unpopular scientific theory, ...ior industry and change the ...?" Science News 107:322

...e to conduct experiments. ...the Prostitutes, remember?). ...the depletion models are ...ven it conclusively. Rowland ...ys it is just a hypothesis. But ...etical, too. They have the ...se flurocarbons, but no data ...have a hypothesis that it is ...ntific data, and are coming up ...41 1974.

...fford to wait the normal ten ...because if the theories are ...will be pronounced." Science

...yous pits. You can praise the ...eesman for making your day

...list you might find interesting. ...d on campus .

...03:101 F 17, '73
...3 My 18, '73
...06:212 Oct. 5, '74
...Nov. 30, '74
...Oct. 25, '74
...Ja 20, '75
...World 2:4 Oct. 5, '74
...06:341 Nov. 30, '74
...47 Apr. 7, '75
...Ma '75
...5 Ja '75
...81 Mr 28, '75
...07:100 F 15, '75
...e. 50 F 17, '75
...Je 28, '75
...07:322 My 17, '75
...3 Je 23, '75
...7 6 Ap '75
...1 My 5, '75

Colonists Declare Their Independence

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

The members of the Committee called upon to draft the Declaration were: Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, and Robert Livingston. Jefferson was to be chairman; at age 33, he was one of the youngest members of the Congress. He said very little in the debates at Independence Hall, although he was an ardent patriot. He was not a skillful or effective speaker-but in pamphlets and documents he had written before 1776 he had gained the admiration of many for his clear thinking and what was called his "felicity of language." In short, like Tom Paine, he knew how to turn a phrase.

Jefferson was assigned the work of drafting the statement which was to explain and justify to the world and succeeding generations the action Americans took to declare independence from the English monarchy. His appointed task, as he saw it, was "not to find out new principles, or new arguments, but to place before mankind the common sense of the subject, in terms so plain and firm as to command their assent." The Declaration was to be, he wrote, "an expression of the American mind." Years later he explained to a friend that he consulted not books or highflung theories in his effort; he had only "looked into the hearts of the people and found it indelibly inscribed there."

Thomas Jefferson

The Declaration is really a statement in two parts. The first outlines the democratic theory of government and the right to revolution; the second records the grievances against the King. It is this first part that states the philosophical basis behind the American struggle.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, That all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its power in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

Contained within that one statement are three concepts about the individual and society that were the foundation of the patriotism of 1776.

1. Self-evident truths and inalienable rights. Jefferson looked back for the justification of the American Revolution not just into the experiences of the colonists, but into the entire history of humanity. Throughout the ages and in all countries, he found, there have been certain rights that all people have either enjoyed or fought to gain. These are birthrights and cannot be nullified by kings, legislators, or any other institution -- political, economic, religious or social. To violate these sacred and timeless principles is to stand in opposition to humanity and to the creator.

The first self-evident truth is that "all men are created equal." This was a very new idea. But as with the other principles in the Declaration, it was the vigor with which Americans pressed for concrete economic and political equality as the Revolution got under way that gave the phrase concrete meaning.

The second of the Declaration's self-evident truths is that every individual is endowed with certain God-given rights, among which are "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." The right of all to life had generally been accepted long before the Revolution, but the right of the non-titled and non-wealthy to liberty was new, and the right to the pursuit of happiness was something else again. The phrase first proposed for the Declaration had been "life, liberty and property," but this, it was decided, generally meant preserving things as they are (which, in turn, generally meant that the people with the most property refused to share it with those who had little or none). It was because the delegates, and specifically Jefferson, were unwilling to compromise their vision of the New World, that the phrase was changed. Had the Revolution been just an "independence" movement, "life, liberty and property" might have been sufficient. But this was a revolutionary movement, and to the radical patriots that meant not just breaking away from the monarchical system, but insuring that both political and economic democracy were the cornerstones of the new nation. By asserting that the pursuit of happiness was the right of all people, the Declaration proclaimed that a grim life of weary toil was not the only possible destiny. This new vision of humanity's potential was radically different from the Old World view. Acknowledging the "pursuit of happiness" as a God-given right propelled the Americans beyond the concept of independence to one of revolution.

2. The purpose of government is to secure the basic human rights, safety and happiness of the people. Not only was the government supposed to safeguard the people--the traditional role of feudal governments and their armies--but it was also to secure their rights. This was a forward-looking vision, one that spoke, again, of the dawning of a new age, with greater opportunities and hope.

3. The right of the people to alter or abolish their government. This was perhaps the most important statement contained within the Declaration, not only for the Americans of 1776, but for succeeding generations as well. It was really an extension of the argument Tom Paine had used in Common Sense: people make governments and institutions; people can end or change them.

For a long time, philosophers had debated the question of whether blind obedience was due to kings (the monarch having a "Divine Right" to rule), or whether the people had the right to resist tyrannical rulers. The proponents of this latter notion took as their motto, "Vox populi, vox dei"; "the voice of the people is the voice of God."

But for the first time, the question of the right of the people to rebel was taken out of the hands of the philosophers. The Declaration make this people's right the basis for the founding of the new nation. It was this idea that sent a shudder through royal courts around the world: what monarch would ever be safe, aristocrats wondered, if this radical notion caught on? The most important thing about the idea, as many saw it, was that by placing the concept in our founding document, Americans of all succeeding generations were granted the same right to alter or abolish their government. Fearing that even the new nation might one day stray from the path of democracy, Jefferson tried to guarantee that if tyranny ever again reared its head over America, posterity would have formal justification for confronting it. In a later part of the Declaration Jefferson went even further. Not only is it the right of the people to revolt against arbitrary, undemocratic rule, he wrote, but it is "the duty" of every patriotic American to do so.

To these three principles of democracy, the fifty-six delegates to the Continental Congress then pledged their "lives, fortunes and sacred honors." Patriots throughout the country also dedicated themselves to these ideals.

To strengthen the case of the Americans against English domination, Jefferson then listed eighteen grievances -- "A history of repeated injuries and usurpations," he called them, "all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these States." Some of these indictments against the King were particularly scathing:

He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harrass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies without consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation.

Jefferson ended the list of grievances with an eloquent denunciation:

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms: our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Jefferson's indictments against George III, like Tom Paine's Common Sense, are a classic piece of propaganda. There are no half-way points in a revolution, the grievances proclaim; either we are one hundred percent against the monarchy and all it represents, or we must be willing to live under the King and all the evils that involves. To counter the moderates' continued insistence that there was at least some small measure of benefit from the system of royal government, the radical patriots used the indictments to make the case that reform was impossible. The list of grievances was so extensive that the remaining reformers and apologists for the King found themselves confronted by a dilemma: how can such "abuses and usurpations" be redressed unless the King gives up the power to commit them? In other words, the case against the monarch was made so complete that the only way out for Americans appeared to be revolution.

Jefferson's condemnation of the King was so absolute that

Members of the Continental Congress leaving Independence Hall

(continued on page fourteen)

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

yarn cellar

Reynoldys "Lopi" 100% Wool Yarn imported from Iceland.. Solids & Tweeds

The Royal 90 Church St.

Comic Laminated Door Signs Made to Your Order. (3x8") Choice of Colors Ten Letter Maximum Only 3.00 per sign THESLING LAMINATIONS 2173 West Blvd. Cleveland, Ohio 44102

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies RACING SUITS
The Royal
90 Church St. Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5 P.M. Fridays 9:30 'til 9 P.M.

Syracuse University 1976
Spring Semester Abroad
FLORENCE
Italian, FineArts, History, Political Science
LONDON
English, Political Science, Drama,Art Communications
MADRID
Spanish, Language, & Literature, Economics, Anthropology
STRASBOURG
French Language & Literature, Religion, History
AMSTERDAM
History, Fine Arts, Anthropology, Dutch Culture, Sociology
"Applications Due Soon,"
Information & Application
DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS ABROAD
335 Comstock Avenue
Syracuse, New York
13210
(Tel. 315-423-3471)

$33,500,000 Unclaimed Scholarships

Over $33,500,000 unclaimed scholarships, grants, aids, and fellowships ranging from $50 to $10,000. Current list of these sources researched and compiled as of Sept. 15, 1975.

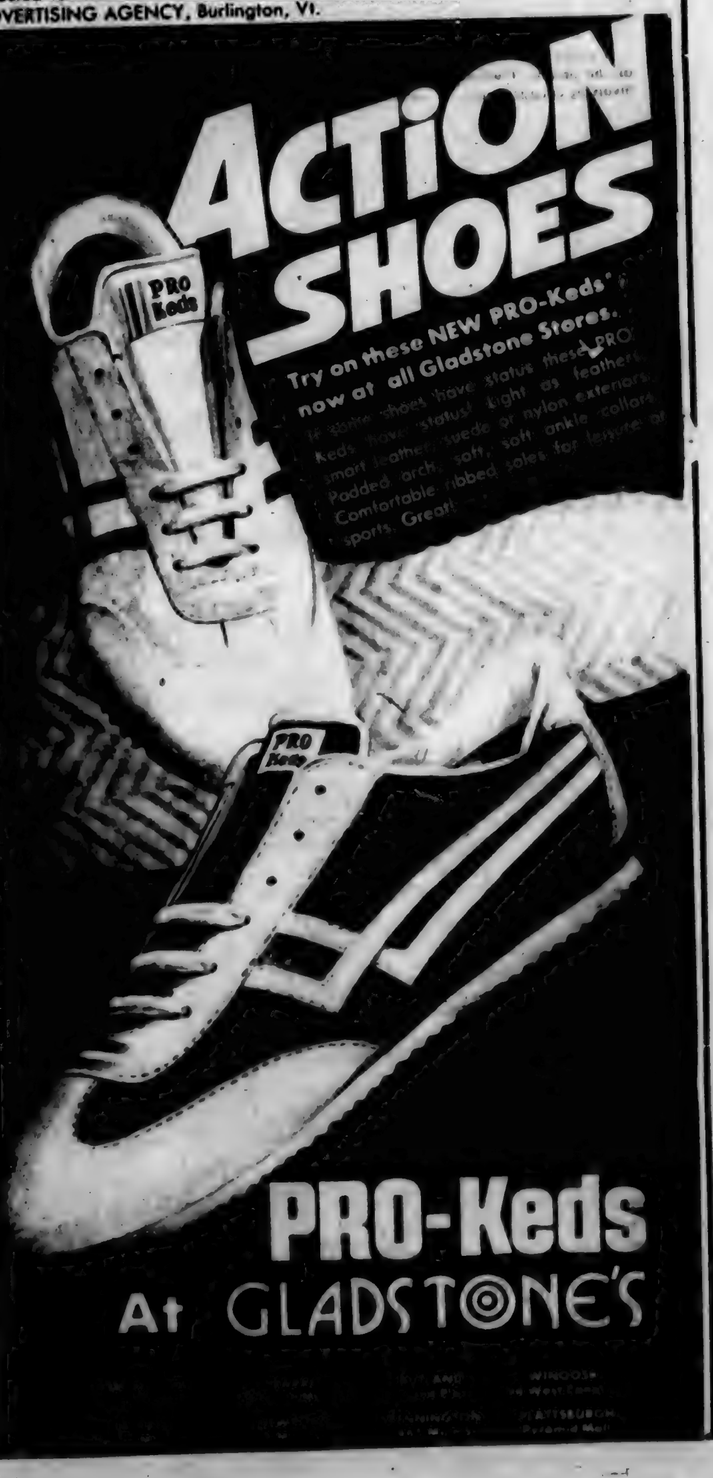
UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS
11276 Massachusetts Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90025

☐ I am enclosing $9.95 plus $1.00 for postage and handling.

PLEASE RUSH YOUR CURRENT LIST OF UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS SOURCES TO:

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____
(California residents please add 6% sales tax.)

GLADSTONE SHOES Is Proud To Announce:
From the thousands of shoe store ads, the PRO-Keds ad below has been selected towards nomination as SHOE AD OF THE YEAR. Created by HAYS ADVERTISING AGENCY, Burlington, Vt.



Colonists Declare Independence

(continued from page thirteen)

It even appears to have impressed the King. Years later, after the Americans had successfully completed the war; Adams and Jefferson went to London to meet with their ex-monarch. When told that the author of the Declaration of Independence was in the palace, King George locked himself in his bed chamber and refused to come out.

Reading of the Declaration

THE DECLARATION IS APPROVED

Even as Jefferson readied the Declaration for approval by the Congress, the debate over Richard Henry Lee's resolution of independence dragged on inside Independence Hall. Finally, on July 2, 1776, after months of debate, arm-twisting, compromises, and much high-pressured politicking, the vote on the Virginia Resolution – "that these colonies are, and of right, ought to be free and independent states" – was taken and unanimously approved. On July 3, John Adams noted the historic moment in a letter to his wife: "Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was decided in America, and a greater, perhaps, never was nor will be decided among men."

Once finished with the formal resolution of independence, the delegates quickly moved to the matter of the Declaration. Jefferson's original version remained virtually intact, with one notable exception. The most damning indictment against King George, one condemning him for fostering the slave trade in America – "He has waged cruel war against human nature itself, violating its most sacred rights of life and liberty in the persons of a distant people who never offended him, captivating and carrying them into slavery in another hemisphere..." – was struck. Some of the Southern delegations simply refused to sign the Declaration unless the deletion was made, while many others from the North realized that they were not particularly innocent in the whole sordid matter either: Northern merchants were the principal transporters of blacks from Africa to the Southern plantations. Needing the unqualified support of all the colonies to wage the Revolution successfully, the Congress sacrificed the passage. But the message of equality and inalienable rights still rang out in the Declaration, and generations of abolitionists and suffragists were to later base their own movements for justice on the "self-evident" truths of our founding document.

Finally, on July 4, the debate over, the vote was taken and the Declaration of Independence was approved. It was a bold step, and a treasonous one in the eyes of the King, one ranking right at the top of offenses against the Crown punishable by death.

The men who signed the Declaration realized that from that moment on they were hunted criminals. Benjamin Rush recalled that they had all signed "with a noose around our necks." Ben Franklin replied, half in humor, half in deadly earnest: "Yes, we must all hang together, or we shall all hang separately." Abraham Clark, a delegate from New Jersey, who had won fame by fighting for poor and working people in court, dryly noted, "Perhaps our Congress will be exalted on a high gallows." When little Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts went to the table to sign, portly Benjamin Harrison of Virginia remarked, "When we hang for what we're doing, from the size and weight of my body, I'll die quickly; but you're so light, you'll swing in the air for hours before you're dead." It was a big gamble these men were taking, and the stakes were the highest possible. Understandably, John Adams wrote, "Several signed with regret and several others with many doubts." But if some of the men who signed the Declaration had misgivings, people throughout the country showed enthusiastic support for the revolutionary document. Like Common Sense, the Declaration of Independence was read and discussed around the new nation.

Its first public reading came on July 8 in Philadelphia. John Nixon, a patriot leader in the city, stood in the State House yard and read the document to a crowd which (according to a Tory observer) contained "very few respectable people." John Adams observed the celebration that followed: "Three cheers rended the welkin. The batallions paraded on the Common and gave us a feu-de-joie, notwithstanding the scarcity of powder. The bells rang all day and almost all night."

Other demonstrations of support soon followed in other cities. In New York, General Washington had the Declaration read to his assembled troops, and followed it with a typically terse proclamation to his men:

> The General hopes that this important event will serve as a fresh incentive to every officer and soldier to act with fidelity and courage, as knowing that now the peace and safety of his country depends solely on the success of our arms.

Later in the day, the citizens of New York, along with a great many of the General's troops, assembled on the Bowling Green to hear the Declaration read again. With the last words, a cheer went up and the crowd marched off to a gilt-covered lead statue of King George atop his horse. A New York newspaper gave this account of the event:

> Tonight the equestrian statue of George III has, by the Sons of Freedom, been laid prostrate in the dirt – the just desert of an ungrateful tyrant! The lead wherewith the monument was made is to be run into bullets to assimilate with the brains of our infatuated adversaries.

Abigail Adams recorded events in Boston: "The bells rang, the privateers fired the forts and batteries, the cannon were discharged and every fact appeared joyful... After dinner, the king's arms were taken down from the State House and every vestige of him from every place... and burnt... Thus ends royal authority in this State, and all the people shall say 'Amen.'" Her friend and fellow revolutionary, James Warren, added, "Every one of us feels more important than ever. We now congratulate each other as freemen."

The tone was different, but no less patriotic, in Savannah, Georgia, where King George was buried in a mock funeral oration:

> We commit his political existence to the ground – corruption to corruption – tyranny to the grave – and oppression to eternal infamy, in sure and certain hope that he will never obtain a resurrection, to rule again over the United States of America.

The celebrations continued, even as Americans prepared for war. At the end of July a child in East Windsor, Connecticut, was baptized Independence.

Colonists listen to the reading of the Declaration of Independence and discuss its merits and faults.

Catch 22 At SA Films

The schedule of SA Films begins this week with the Marlene Dietrich film The Devil is a Woman, made in 1935 and directed by Josef von Sternberg. Foreseeing that this would be his last film with Dietrich, director Josef von Sternberg threw caution to the winds and created his most extreme exercise in style. The result has been hailed by many critics as the most beautiful film ever made, and its intense pictorial beauty is overwhelming. The story, based on the novel Woman and Puppet by Pierre Louys, tells of a femme fatale and the men who destroy themselves for her in 19th-century Spain. The film will be shown tonight at 7:30 in B-106 Cook.

On Friday night Catch 22, one of the funniest anti-war films ever made (based on Joseph Heller's novel of the same name), will be shown. This film stars Alan Arkin, Martin Balsam, Richard Benjamin, Jon Voigt and Orson Welles. It tells of the highly unusual adventures of Captain Yossarian, trying to be grounded from the madhouse flying routines of World War II. His attempts to escape are hindered by "catch-22", condemning those who are insane and those who are feigning insanity. The cartoons for this week are Apes of Wrath and Reel Pink. Show times are 7:30 and 10:00 p.m. in B-106 Cook. Admission is $1.

Gary Cooper continues on Saturday night with Sergeant York, a 1941 film directed by Howard Hawks and also starring Joan Leslie, Walter Brennan, Ward Bond, and George Tobias. This tells the famous story of a Tennessee hillbilly who became a World War I hero and captured over a hundred Germans singlehanded. Cooper received the Academy Award and the New York Film Critics Award for Best Acting, and the film received many other awards and/or nominations. Show time is 7:30 in B-106 Cook.

On Tuesday night the British Cinema series continues with A Taste of Honey, one of the most touching films of the series. Starring Rita Tushingham and Dora Bryan, this highly acclaimed film tells of Jo, an English schoolgirl who is excluded from her mother's life and is forced, perhaps prematurely, into finding a life of her own. She finds a love which gives her life new meaning, until it ends when he (a sailor) has to return to the sea. This film was the winner of four British Academy Awards. Show time is 7:30 in B-106 Cook.

Also on Tuesday night the Shakespeare Series continues with Henry the Fifth, a 1944 film directed by and starring Laurence Olivier. This film is in color and is one of the most spectacularly beautiful film versions of any of Shakespeare's plays. The pagentry is beautiful. The film will be shown at 7:00 p.m. in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

••• CLASSIFIED •••

Sunday – W.C. Fields entertains in "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man" at the Last Chance. Show Starts at 9:30. Free Popcorn for all Buffs.

Reward: – Ten Dollars for return of 1 lost opal ring – opal stone, gold band, and one H.S. ring – red stone, gold band – St Joseph High School – year 1975. Initials EMS on inside – No questions asked – Would be greatly appreciated – please contact Eileen Sheehan, 326 Wright Hall, Tel – 656–3093 as soon as possible. Thank You!

For Sale: 4-ply studded snow tires, size 14. Good condition. $25.00 pair. Call 863-3371 after 5.

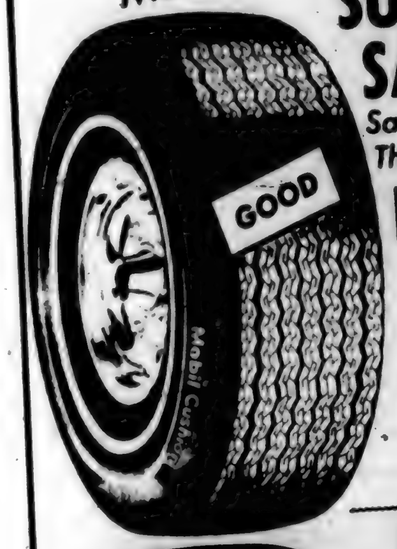
For Sale: Dunham Hiking Boots size 6½ worn only once. $40.00 or best offer. Call Lynn, 658–1905.

FOR SALE: Catania Carmelo Mandolin. Excellent condition, hardly used. Beautiful wood and inlays. Comes complete with case, picks and instruction manuals. Will sacrifice for $75.00 or best offer. Dial 863-6687 for further information.

Spillane's Mobil

OVERSTOCK SUMMER TIRE SALE . . . . !!

Save Now While They Last . . . !!



Mobil® Under Normal Conditions These Tires Will Run 15,000 to 20,000 miles
• MOBIL CUSHION •
E78x14
$24.95 *
Fits Pinto, Mustang, Mercedes, etc.
G78x14
$26.95 *
Fits Chev., Ford, Plymouth, etc.
• FREE MOUNTING •

Mobil® Under Normal Conditions These Tires Will Run 25,000 to 30,000 Miles
• PREMIERE 78 — BELTED •
E78x14
$29.95 *
Fits Pinto, Mustang, Mercedes, etc.
G78X14
$33.95 *
Fits Chev., Ford, Plymouth, etc.
• FREE MOUNTING •

Mobil® Under Normal Conditions These Tires Will Run 30,000 Miles or More • STEEL BELTED RADIALS •
ER70x14
$46.95 *
Fits Pinto, Mustang, Mercedes, etc.
GR70x14 or 15
$51.95 *
Fits Chev., Ford, Plymouth, etc.
• FREE MOUNTING •

* All Prices Subject to State & Federal Taxes

Plus Comparable Savings On All Other Sizes

• EARLY BIRD WINTER TREAD SPECIALS •

Mobil Polyester Super Traction	Mobil Super Traction Belted	Mobil Radial Polyester & Steel
• A78x13 $22.95 *	• A78x13 $29.95 *	• 165Rx15 $39.95 *
• E78x14 $25.95 *	• E78x14 $32.95 *	• FR78x14 $43.95 *
• G78x15 $29.95 *	• G78x15 $35.95 *	• GR78x15 $47.95 *

All Prices Include Mounting

Spillane's Mobil Servicenter
• 24 HOUR SERVICE •
863-2896
• Next to Gaynes on Williston Road •

adidas MILLS & GREER

New Shipment of Adidas Tournament Basketball Shoes

PUMA 'CLYDE' BASKETBALL SHOES
ADIDAS COUNTRY TRAINING SHOE

PUMA

VOIT RACKETS
PADDLEBALLS BY VOIT & VITTERT

SARANAC & TIGER HANDBALL GLOVES

JACK PURCELL COURT SHOES FOR MEN & WOMEN

TACKS, LANGE, BAUER AND HYDE SKATES

Wilson MILLS & GREER

Within Walking Distance to Campus-
East On Williston Rd. Across From Howard Johnsons

UVM

Vermont soccer expanded its winning streak Saturday against UMass. It was one of the closest contests for the Cats on a picturesque fall day in Amherst as the winning goal in the 2-1 game was headed in with fifty seconds to go in the final overtime period.

The team arrived Friday night for their biggest road trip of the season. Being the first morning game, head coach Paul Reinhardt took them on a pre-breakfast jog to prepare them for the 11 a.m. match. Actually they didn't really wake up until the second half when the minutemen were out shot 12–4.

Vermont's first goal was scored early in the first half by John Koerner on a penalty kick. The UMass goalie was called for pushing inside the penalty area. There was some discussion on the call as to whether the infraction was inside the area or not.

Koern

Behind a barage of 31 shots on goal, the University of Vermont Soccer team moved its record to 4-1 last Wednesday with a 4-0 thrashing of Norwich College.

The Catamounts totally dominated the game, especially the first half, as they outshot the Cadets 17-1 and held a 2-0 lead at the half.

Vermont had the aid of a strong wind in the opening stanza and had it not been for the excellent net minding of Cadet goalie Mike Stevenson the Cats would have broken all sorts of scoring marks.

Dick Whidden started things 19 minutes into the game when he got in close and slammed the ball past Stevenson from three feet out. Mark Heidrich got the assist.

The Cats kept the ball on the ground throughout most of the half, and did a good job of getting it close to the goal. They did have some problems finishing off their plays.

X-Countr

The University of Vermont Cross-Country Squad finished a dismal third in a three team meet last Saturday as they fell to the hands of Williams College and Williamstown, Massachusetts.

Williams gathered 23 points to second place Albany State's 43 and UVM's 48 points.

UVM Edges UMass 2-1 In Overtime

Vermont soccer expanded its winning streak Saturday against UMass. It was one of the closest contests for the Cats on a picturesque fall day in Amherst as the winning goal in the 2-1 game was headed in with fifty seconds to go in the final overtime period.

The team arrived Friday night for their biggest road trip of the season. Being the first morning game, head coach Paul Reinhardt took them on a pre-breakfast jog to prepare them for the 11 a.m. match. Actually they didn't really wake up until the second half when the minutemen were out shot 12-4.

Vermont's first goal was scored early in the first half by John Koerner on a penalty kick. The UMass goalie was called for pushing inside the penalty area. There was some discussion on the call as to whether the infraction was inside the area or not. Co-captain Bob Cleverdon discussed it with one referee and the second referee was brought in before the call was finalized.

UMass came back shortly after and tied it up. The score remained that way through out the first half. Neither side dominated the play. The stats for shots on goal in the first forty-five minutes of play were 10-9 Vermont. Perhaps it's because UMass doesn't draw like Vermont does for soccer or because it was our first big game on the road but the Cats played below potential in the beginning.

UVM picked up in the second half but failed to convert on several excellent scoring opportunities. Alot of credit should go to the minuteman goalie. Indeed the entire UMass team was excited about a shot at Vermont, who, since their win over UConn and BU, are still undefeated in Yankee Conference play.

The final seconds of regulation time play passed without a score. At that time the game goes into two ten-minute overtime periods after which if there is no score it remains a tie.

Co-captain Jim Taft in the goal came up with several good saves keeping the ball out of the Vermont nets. The UMass booters, playing in a manner not reflected by their 1-3 record, having lost to Keene earlier in the season in overtime, put pressure on the Vermont defenders several times during the game. This was in sharp contrast to the BU game on September 27, where Taft did not have to make any saves in the second half.

Despite the 5 man edge NCAA rules give home soccer teams (18 players may travel while 23 may dress for home games), Vermont demonstrated their superior conditioning by out running their opponents in the overtime. Those familier with our soccer program know this is a traditional asset.

It seemed only a matter of time until Vermont converted on one of their scoring opportunities. The suspense was maintained until less than a minute to go. It looked like the clock might run out when Brad Parker got the ball around mid-field, dribbled and passed to Koerner going down the wing. Koerner took the ball to the corner, beat the defender and crossed it in the air ten yards out from the goal mouth where it found Tim Beal's head. Tim directed it past the tough UMass goalie to put Vermont ahead for good. Koerner and Beal were also the doubles combination that clinched the Yankee Conference Tennis Championships last year for UVM.

Catamount High Scorer John Koerner

There was quite a sizeable following for Vermont last Saturday in Amherst. Anything I could write about their reaction to the final goal would be an understatement, and it was the first game Tim Beal's parents have seen him play.

Now 5-1 overall and 3-0 in Yankee Conference play Vermont is continuing to do the same things they did well in their 6-1 victory in a pre season scrimmage with Dartmouth. I am talking about fine team co-ordinated play and solid basic skills. This Saturday against Rhode Island they will be looking for their fourth conference win at one o'clock at Centennial Field.

Koerner Leads Cats Past Norwich

Behind a barage of 31 shots on goal, the University of Vermont Soccer team moved its record to 4-1 last Wednesday with a 4-1 thrashing of Norwich College.

The Catamounts totally dominated the game, especially the first half, as they outshot the Cadets 17-1 and held a 2-0 lead at the half.

Vermont had the aid of a strong wind in the opening stanza and had it not been for the excellent net minding of Cadet goalie Mike Stevenson, the Cats would have broken all sorts of scoring marks.

Dick Whidden started things 19 minutes into the game when he got in close and slammed the ball past Stevenson from three feet out. Mark Heidrich got the assist.

The Cats kept the ball on the ground throughout most of the half, and did a good job of getting it close to the goal. They did have some problems finishing off their plays, but their constant pressure paid off when Geoff Greig took a pass from Brad Parker and converted it into a 2-0 halftime lead.

John Koerner continued his hot scoring in the second stanza as he scored both second half goals for the Cats.

Koerner took a pass from Mark Heidrich from the right of the Cadet goalie and caught the left hand corner of the net to give Vermont a 3-0 lead.

Taft's shutout was not to be however, as All-New England forward Dan Shepardon got a pass from Carl DiPietro in front of the net and beat Taft to the left side.

Minutes later Koerner scored his sixth goal of the season on an indirect kick from 30 feet out. John's first shot beat Shepardson but because the goaltender moved prematurely it had to be taken over. The Catamount made no doubt about it the second time as he slammed it into the upper right hand corner.

Taft was called on to make 9 saves for Vermont while Shepardson held down the fort with 28. The Cats got good performances out of Marx Heidrich, Dick Whidden and many others as UVM was without the services of Gil Low, who was ill.

Lacrosse Team Active

by Tom Humphries

As anyone who has strolled by Southwick Green in the afternoon knows Lacrosse is alive and kicking at UVM. The Lacrosse Cats began practice four weeks ago in preparation for this past weekend double scrimmage against RPI and Albany State. Not only did UVM play two teams in simultaneous games, but they managed to humble both opponents and emerge with well deserved victories.

Coach Bruce Cassagrande called the performance "superb", and is predicting great things for the future. With a host of returning starters and a promising flock of freshmen, the team looks very very strong. Co-Captain Jeff Davis agrees.

The next, and final, opportunity to watch the UVM stickmen do their thing this fall, will be this Saturday at 11:00 a.m. on Southwick Green. The Cats will face Vermont rival Castleton in what could prove to be the highlight of Parents' weekend. The game promises to be fast, exciting, high-scoring, and most of all hard-hitting. So bring Mom and Dad and all the kids out to see the big sticks of the UVM Lacrosse Club stick it to Castleton this Saturday at 11:00.

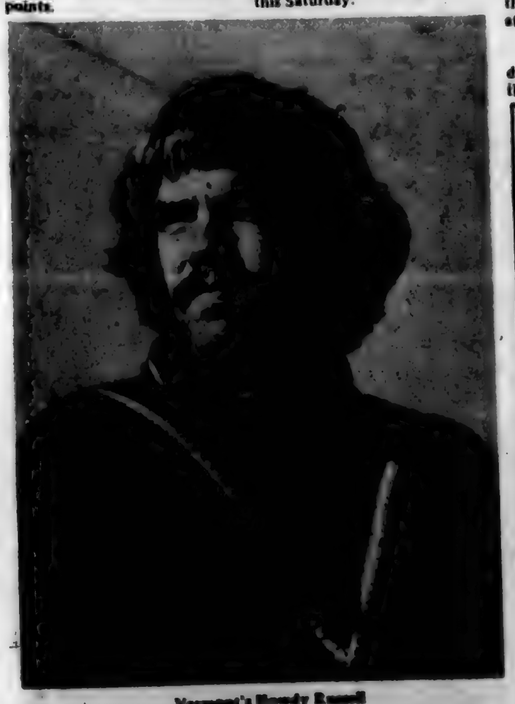
X-Country Finishes Third

The University of Vermont Cross-Country Squad finished a dismal third in a three team meet last Saturday as they fell to the hands of Williams College at Williamstown, Massachusetts.

Williams gathered 31 points to second place Albany State's 43 and UVM's 46 points.

Top runner for the Catamounts was Jim Capen, who finished fourth in a time of 25:28, good for fifth place.

Howdy Russell finished 11th, Peter Weiss 12th, and Bob Stoehr 14th for the Catamounts. The runners will meet Rhode Island at home this Saturday.



Vermont's Howdy Russell

Runners Drop Knights

Behind the performances of Howdy Russell and Dave Elliot, the University of Vermont Cross-Country crushed St. Michael's College by an 18-45 score. Russell and Elliot tied for top honors as they ran home in a dead heat at 26:43.

There was depth up and down the line for Vermont as they cleaned up seven of the first ten spots. Below are the official finishes.

1. Howdy Russell, Vt., 26:43; and Dave Elliot, Vt., 26:43; 3. Bill Remy, SM, 17:45; 4. Jim Vogelmann, Vt. 28:13; 5. John Byerley, Vt., 28:25; 6. Pete Kaplan, Vt., 23:32; 7. John Foster, Vt., 29:03; 8. Marty Black, Vt., 29:15; 9. John Balchunas, SM, 30:45; 10. Bob Mulhall, SM, 31:43.

Women's Tennis Crushes Opponents

After their initial loss against Middlebury College last week, the UVM women's tennis team put it together this week for two winning matches against Castleton State and Green Mountain College. The home match with Castleton State was a decisive UVM victory with a clean 7-0 sweep. The match against Green Mountain, held last Saturday in Poultney, Vermont was another clear win for the Vermont team. The 6-1 win saw only the number one singles of Vermont fall to Green Mountain in a close match.

The women's "B" tennis team played Trinity College (Burlington) in their first match this season. UVM won 6-1 against the young Trinity tennis squad.

The women's tennis team at UVM is supported by new freshman talent. Six out of the ten team members who traveled to Green Mountain last Saturday were freshmen: Hillman, Cordone, Palmer, Stanton, Rich, and Evans. Each of these strong tennis players brought home victories for Vermont. Two top team members, Jenny and Reineman are sophomore transfers to UVM who have added depth to this year's tennis squad. Bloom and Mullen remain as the only veterans from last season in the starting line-up for last week's matches.

The results of the Green Mountain match were as follows:

SINGLES

Bloom (UVM) vs. Marascioto 6-7; Mullen (UVM) vs. Lydecker 6-3, 6-3; Hillman (UVM) vs. Cullen 6-2, 6-1; Carbone (UVM) vs. Issac 6-0, 6-0.

DOUBLES

Jenny/Palmer (UVM) vs. Wave/McMullen 6-2, 6-2; Stanton/Rich (UVM) vs. Wave/Spratt 6-1, 6-3; Evans/Reineman (UVM) vs. Bates/Touhey 6-4, 6-1.

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

A sport that has been on the UVM scene for this, the twelfth season, is finally beginning to get some recognition – but not enough. Soccer has been on campus since 1964 and though few people know it, the program has won three Yankee Conference Championships and has been co-champions twice more.

This season, the Catamount booters have reeled off five consecutive victories after a heart-breaking defeat to Keene State (as of this writing) and hold a 3-0 Yankee Conference mark going into Saturday's Homecoming game with Rhode Island.

Having moved to Centennial Field, the Cats have begun the process of attempting to replace football as the number one fall sport. And well they might. The Connecticut game back on September 20, showed that soccer can be a drawing sport as several thousand fans showed for that crucial game.

So far, the season has been extremely bright. John Koerner has been scoring goals, at a record clip, seven in six games. He needs only seven in the last seven games to break the season record of 13 held by Peter Breen. Also, Jim Taft has been marvelous in goal for the Cats, having given up no more than two goals in a game since the Keene Contest. Other bright spots have to be co-captain Bob Cleverdon's consistent play along with outstanding performances from Carl Christensen, Mark Heidrich, Gil Low and many others.

One must emphasize, however, that soccer is a team sport and the entire squad has been responsible for the tremendous season so far.

Vermont soccer has not been Yankee Conference Champs since 1969, and Saturday's game could be a large stepping stone towards a championship in 1975. Many will be seeing Catamount soccer for the first time Saturday. Alumni, parents and students especially should, and in fact, must, support the soccer program if it is to succeed. (Lest one forgets one reason for the dropping of football.)

Soccer is an exciting and very fast game – yet easy to follow. I'm sure that most need to see the game only once to enjoy it. This year's edition has a chance to break several season marks such as most games won in a season (10) and longest win streak (7), plus win a championship as well.

The Cats are exciting, good, and Homecoming is the best day to prove that UVM supports their sports. Coach Reinhardt's groops can use your support – and its fun, and free!

Women's Soccer Now 3-0

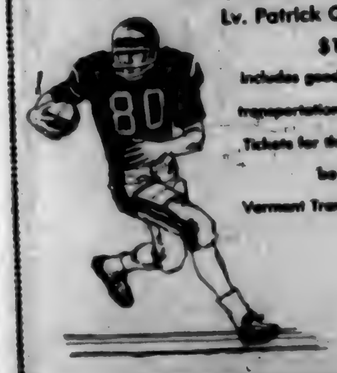
The UVM Women's Soccer team upped its record to 3-0 by dumping Keene State 2-0 on Saturday. Plagued by injuries and a lack of players, UVM still came out on top of a very physical contest on two goals by senior Barb Pulling.

In earlier action, UVM topped Castleton Tuesday, 1-0 in a thriller. For 59 minutes and 50 seconds, neither team was able to finish off a scoring drive as the defensive unit of Darlene Main, Sandy Lane, Mary Ellen Auger, and goalie Kerra Deseau turned back numerous Castleton attempts. But with 10 seconds remaining in the contest, freshman Hillary Engisch found the nets and captured the victory for UVM.

In the first game, UVM topped Champlain Regional College of Lenoxville, Quebec 3-2 after a slow start. Hillary Engisch had two goals and Rachel Elder added the third.

The next game is at home, on October 16th with the Canadians.

Special Bus to Hanover October 18
DARTMOUTH vs. BOB BATEMAN & CO. (Brown University)
Lv. Patrick Gym 10:15 AM
$13.50
Includes good game ticket and transportation to and from game.
Tickets for this trip package MUST be purchased at Vermont Transit Central Terminal



VERMONT TRANSIT LINES

Watts the problem? A Sony amplifier is the answer.

When an amplifier starts to add things to the music that wasn't there, that's bad. Or when it can't handle high's or low's that's bad too. With a Sony integrated stereo amplifier you get it straight... nothing added or taken away until you decide to. And when you do, there's a full array of tone and balance controls to let you do just that. So know what you're getting out of your amplifier. Get a Sony integrated stereo amplifier. It can make the difference between music and noise.

TA-4650 INTEGRATED STEREO AMPLIFIER

- Newly developed true complementary vertical FET power amplifier stage, for the natural, high definition triode sound
- Direct coupled power amplifier stage
- Inputs for 2 phono sources, tuner, 2 aux. sources, 2 tape playback sources and external adaptor
- Preamp outputs and power amp inputs
- Direct coupled FET amplifiers in tone control and buffer stages
- Phono stage with newly developed LEC (low emitter concentration) transistors coupled directly to a low signal V-FET
- Tape monitor for 2 recorders and independent tape dubbing switch
- Precision volume control with muting switch

"IT'S A SONY"

STORE NAME

DAKINS MOUNTAIN SHOP
227 Main Street

Portrait of Dick Dorworth by Sheridon Anderson

The X-C Ski SALE

"The Dakins Special"
40 pr.
Eiger Ski w/ Synthetic Bottom $34.50
*Reiber Boot 33.95
Sprint 3-Pin Binding 7.95
Bamboo Pole 7.50
$83.90
56.50

"The Waxless Special"
90 pr.
Splitkein Special w/ Mohair $75.00
*Reiber Low Boot 33.95
Sprint 3-Pin Binding 7.95
Bamboo Pole 7.50
$124.40
96.50

10% off all CROSS COUNTRY ACCESSORIES

* Add $6.00 for Hauger High Lined Boot

"The Fischer Special"
90 pr.
Fischer Special $69.00
Hauger Lined Boot 39.95
Sprint 3-Pin Binding 7.95
Bamboo Pole 7.50
$124.40
93.50

"The Lignostone Special"
115 pr.
Splitkein Light Touring $59.95
*Reiber Boot 33.95
Sprint 3-Pin Binding 7.95
7.50
$109.35
82.95

Oct 9,10,11, & 13
9AM - 9PM

QUANTITIES LIMITED

sports

Rugby Team Surprises McGill

The University of Vermont, Rugby Team, won its third game of the season defeating McGill Univeruty by a score of 23 to 6. UVM scored first with a three point penalty kick by Jeff Thomas, from 20 yards out. Neither team was able to sustain good field position as both backfields were able to kick the ball into the opposition's side of the field.

The kicking game backfired for McGill when they punted a ball into the corner and Wing-Forward Peter Gebbie picked the ball up on UVM's 15 yard line and ran along the side lines, 85 yards for a 4 point try; the conversion was missed. Several minutes later, Jim Cotrell, took the ball on his twenty and kicked the ball over McGill's forwards; Cotrell then ran through the McGill forwards to receive his own kick and raced down the side lines where he was knocked out of bounds at McGill's 3 yard line. UVM scored several minutes later when Charles Thorburn ran twelve yards for another 4 point try, the conversion was missed. UVM again moved the ball upfield with Thorburn scoring another try and Thomas making the 2 point conversion, leaving the score at half time 17 to 0.

UVM again experienced a second half let down and allowed McGill to score a 4 point try and 2 point conversion; in the past three games, UVM has allowed the opposition to score all its points in the first 15 minutes of the second half. UVM then retook charge of the game and scored the final try of the game when Bob Roman scored for 4 points and Jeff Thomas converted making the final score 23 to 6. In four games, UVM has scored a total of 91 points and has surpassed last year's scoring total of 83 points which were scored over a 10 game period.

'B' Team Defeated

The B Team lost its first game of the season when it was defeated by MacDonald A Team by a score of 20 to 15. MacDonald scored in the first minute of play with a three point penalty kick by Randy Freidman. While UVM was able to maintain good field position in the first half, they were hurt by inexperience and had several costly penalties assessed against them which ended scoring opportunities. MacDonald was able to capitalize on these mistakes and score 2 tries and a 2 point conversion making the score 13 to 3. With less than a minute left, Peter Shimkus was able to intercept a lateral and race forty yards for a try. Freidman converted making the score at half time MacDonald 13 and UVM 9.

MacDonald opened the second half with another 3 point penalty kick. UVM then scored another try when Peter Shimkus was able to kick the ball through MacDonald's backfield. Mick Morselli then picked up the ball and ran into MacDonald's end zone for another 4 point try. Freidman then kicked the 2 point conversion. Scoring ended when MacDonald was able to go across UVM's goal line for another try in the final 10 seconds of the game.

Both the A and B Squads are 3 and 1 and will face their stiffest competition of the season. The UVM Team will travel to Durham, New Hampshire for the first annual Yankee Conference Rugby Championship which will include the University of New Hampshire, the University of Massachusetts and Boston University, all of whom are ranked in the top 10 New England Rugby Teams. The UVM B Squad will face Mad River Rugby Club for its Home Coming Game at the Archie Post Field at 1:00 p.m. this Saturday.

WRUV Sports

WRUV-AM Sports director Les Schienfield has announced the third and final UVM soccer broadcast scheduled for Saturday when Vermont hosts Rhode Island at Centennial Field. Duke Eaton, Chris Brown and Charlie Brace will describe the action for those who can't attend the game.

Sunday night at 7 PM a new half hour sports talk show has been running featuring UVM and National Sports Topics.

UMass Defeats Vermont Tennis Team, 5-4

Co-captain, Tom Lenci

by Scott Curtis

The UVM tennis team suffered its first loss last Saturday at the hands of UMASS, 5-4. This was the final dual meet before the Yankee Conference Championships this weekend at UNH.

Freshman Alan Green of UMASS gave UVM's co-captain Kirk Dice his first loss of the year. The tall freshman was especially good at the net, and he pressured Dice to force shots. This loss indicates that Dice will be hard pressed to take the number one singles at UNH.

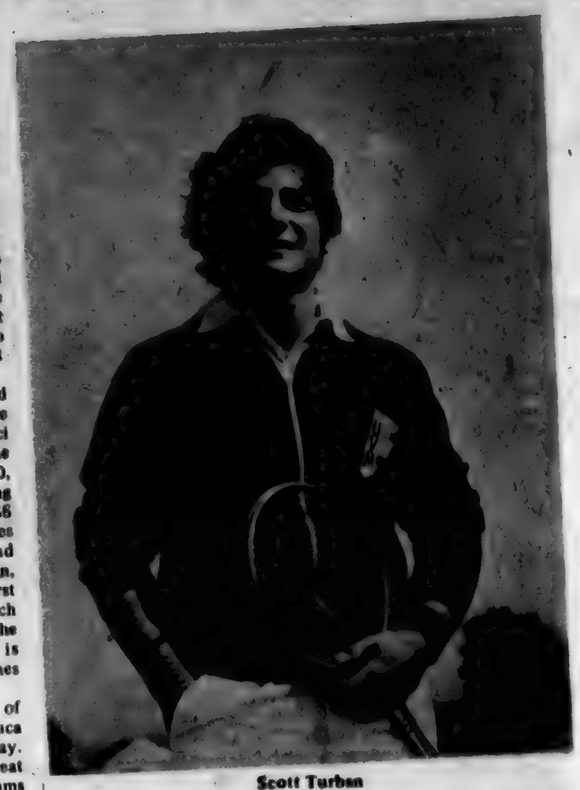
Co-captain Tom Lenci and Scott Turban captured the only UVM singles wins. Lenci was much improved as he handled Kevin Garahan, 6-0, 6-1. Turban was strong, beating Bill Karol, 6-2, 6-2. UMASS swept the lower three singles matches. Kevin DeLaney and Paul Weber were beaten again, and Jeff DeLuca lost his first match of the year. Coach Gregg is looking for help in the lower singles, as he is conducting challenge matches this week.

The doubles teams of Dice-Lenci and Weber-DeLuca had three set wins on Saturday. Turban and DeLaney were beat 6-2, 6-4. These doubles teams will remain intact for the weekend's championships.

The team will travel to UNH tonight to receive the seedings for Friday's preliminary rounds.

With UVM's strong dual meet showing, the team should be favorably seeded. The format has all the number one singles players in elimination rounds, and so on down the line.

Whichever team wins the most individual matches is the winner of the Yankee Conference. The championship is up for grabs. UVM, the defending champs, has not beaten UMASS or UCONN. UNH has beaten these two teams easily, yet UNH lost to UVM early this season. The championships at UNH should be close and exciting.



Scott Turban

YanCons This Weekend

"This week we're really going to have to work if we expect to win the conferences this weekend." inferred coach Greg. "I expect UNH, U Massachusetts and U Connecticut to be strong and tough competition for us this year." Even though Vermont beat UNH in regular season play, UNH has been cited as the toughest contender and most likely the favorite.

Vermont has won the Yankee Conferences for two consecutive years but this year they don't have the depth that they enjoyed in the past as they have lost 4 out of their top 7 players. However, even though Vermont isn't going to be a shoo-in, they still have a really good chance to capture the conferences again if they pull out of their present slump.

The racquetmen leave for Durham, New Hampshire on Thursday night, as the two day competition begins Friday morning.

'B' Soccer Chalks Up Two Wins

The UVM "B" Team chalked up two impressive wins against Norwich and St. Lawrence on Wednesday. The Baby Cats traveled to Northfield and registered their first shutout of the season.

UVM quickly dominated play and spent most of the day in the Cadet's half of the field. However it wasn't till the first overtime period that the Cats scored. Bill Yawney scored his first goal of the season with 8 minutes gone in the first overtime period. In the second overtime period it was Doug Powell's goal that assured UVM of their first regular season win, 2-0. Halfbacks Witt Hartt, John Ham, and George Varga kept the pressure on Norwich giving UVM a 51-7 advantage of shots on goal. The Cadets could manage only one shot in the second half.

On Friday goalie Peter Nostrand registered his second straight shutout as the "B" squad once again showed great poise in holding St. Lawrence to 14 shots on goal. "We are very strong up the middle of the field at the fullback positions. Gregg Bowering has done an excellent job of holding the defense together. Our wing fullbacks have been giving us help on offense which we needed."

In the St. Lawrence game, Kim Lowell scored his first goal ever with a hard drive from 30 yards out. Doug Powell later scored the second goal of the game on a breakaway, giving the Cats a 2-0 win. The "B" Team will play home on Monday Oct. 13 vs. Castleton State College.

THIS WEEK IN SPORT

MENS

TENNIS
Oct. 10-11 - Yankee Conference Championships (A).

CROSS-COUNTRY
Oct. 11 - Rhode Island (H) 11 a.m.
Oct. 15 - St. Lawrence (H) 3 p.m.

SOCCER
Oct. 11 - Rhode Island (H) 1 p.m.
Oct. 15 - St. Lawrence (A) 3 p.m.

RUGBY
Oct. 11 - Yankee Conference Tournament (A)

WOMENS

FIELD HOCKEY
Oct. 10 - Plattsburgh (H) 3 p.m.
Oct. 15 - Dartmouth (H) 3:30 p.m.

TENNIS
Oct. 15 - Dartmouth (H) 3:30 p.m.

PFG Schedule

Patrick-Forbush-Gutterson Recreation Schedule
Weekend of October 10, 11, 12

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 10
GYM - Faculty-Staff 7-11 p.m.
POOL - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m.; 7-8 under 15 years.
TENNIS - Faculty-Staff 7-11 p.m.
TRACK - Faculty-Staff 7-11 p.m.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11
GYM - Students 1-5 and 7-11 p.m.
POOL - Students - 1-5 and 7-10:30 p.m.
TENNIS - Students 1-5 and 7-11 p.m.
TRACK - Students 1-5 and 7-11 p.m. (If weather o.k.)

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 12
GYM - Students 1-5 p.m.
POOL - Students 1-5 p.m.
TENNIS - Students 1-5 p.m.
TRACK - Students 1-5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069. All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through FRIDAY
POOL - Students 7-8:30 (Monday) and 7-10:30 (Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday)
ALL OTHER FACILITIES - Students 7-8 p.m.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center, Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

DOWNHILL EDGE
862-2282
81 - 85 MAIN STREET
(next to the Ski Rack)

SKIS
Dynastar
Kastle
Kneissl
Olin

BOOTS
Nordica
Scott
Lange
Olin

APPAREL
C.B. Sport
Alpine Design
Tempco
Edelweiss
Hotgear
and more!

BINDINGS
Salomon
Look
Besser
Burt
Marker

★ Expert Repairs and Service
★ Wet Belt Refinishing
★ Trade-Ins Accepted
★ Demonstration Skis Available

The Sting
Burlington's No. 1 Spot For LIVE BANDS
GIANT T.V.
GAMEROOM
Gameroom open everyday at 11: PM
T.V. Room open daily at 4:PM
Sat&Sun. at 1: PM
HERE'S YOUR BIG CHANCE TO WATCH THE RED SOX WIN THE WORLD SERIES DON'T MISS IT !!!!!
125 PEARL STREET

The students car's best friend
TEXACO
CLOVERLEAF TEXACO
COMPLETE CAR CARE
1055 WILLISTON RD.
SO. BURLINGTON, VT.
ROAD SERVICE
862-2935

VERMONT CYNIC

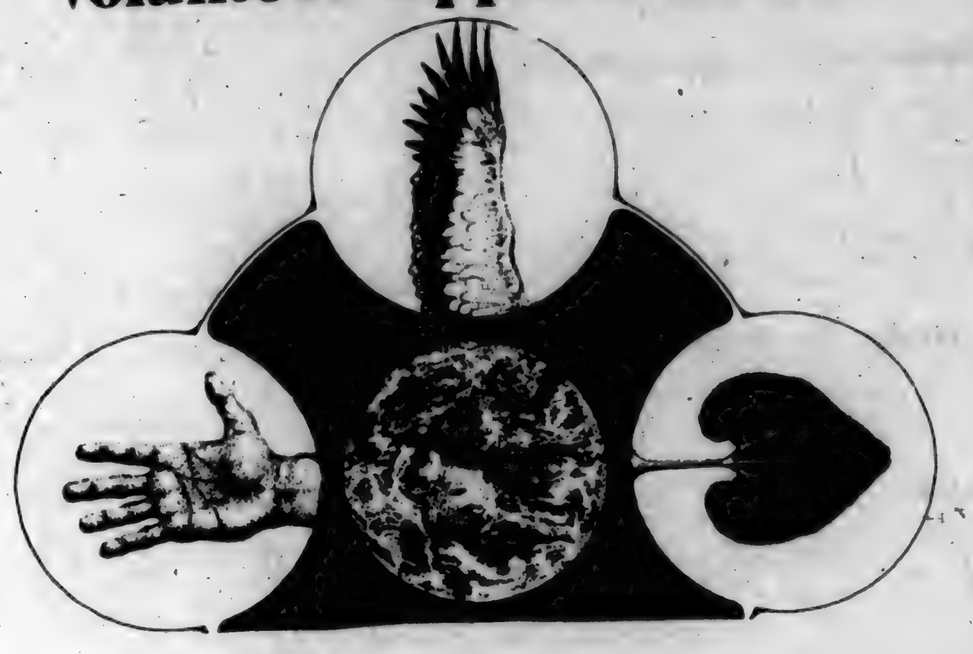
'Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont

FOUNDED IN 1883

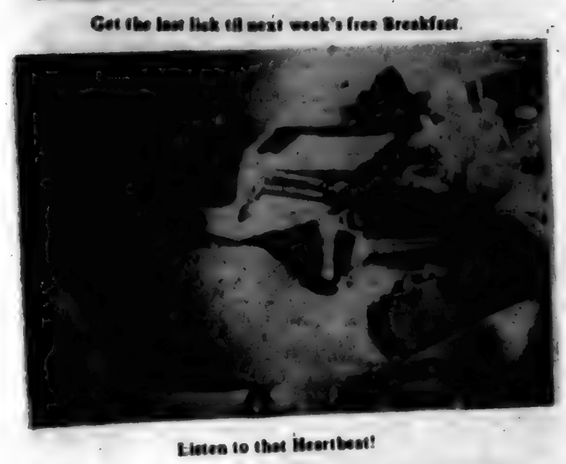
VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 21

OCTOBER 16, 1975

Volunteer Opportunities



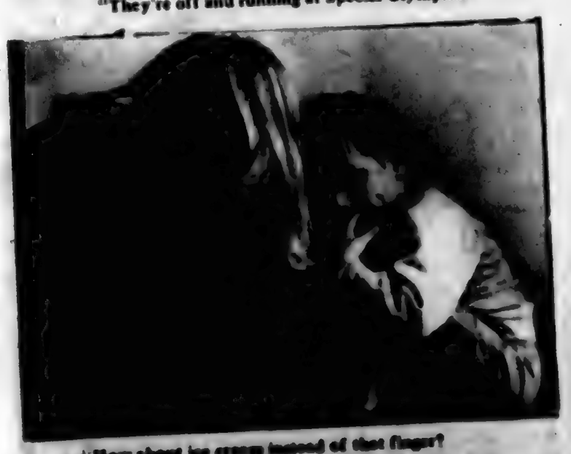
Get the last lick til next week's free Breakfast.



Listen to that Heartbeat!

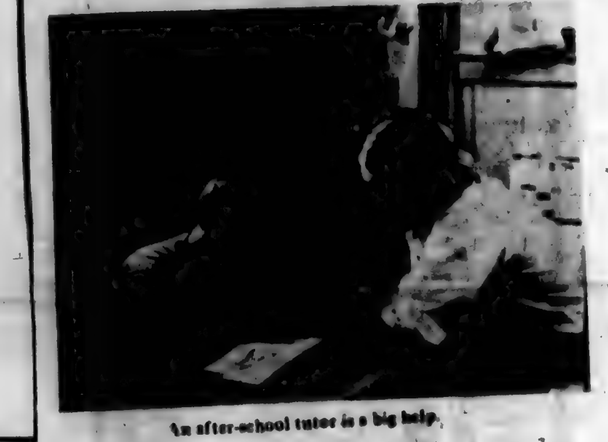
"Oh, I'm fine. I'm just waiting for my 'adopted grandchild'."

"They're off and running at Special Olympics."



"How about ice cream instead of that finger?

"Don't you dare do [illegible] of me! I know how hard you students work."



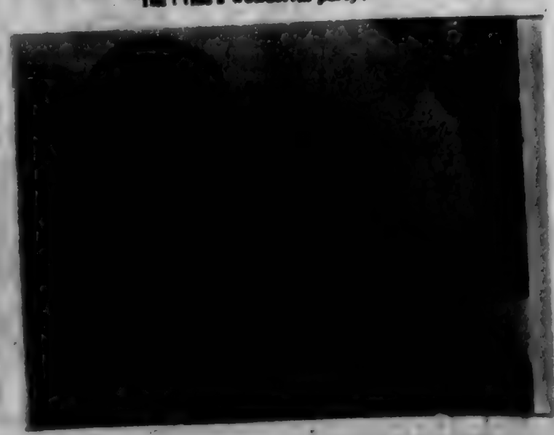
An after-school tutor is a big help.

"Oh, I get it now!"

Happiness is a tour through Discovery Museum with a [illegible] student.

UVM student helps 2 friends patch up argument.

"Isn't this a wonderful party?"



FLASH – CEC volunteer struggled by loving child!

Internships

ovp

Office of Volunteer Programs
Mansfield House
University of Vermont

calendar annoucements

Peace Corps Rep Here

On Thursday, October 23, the College of Education and Social Services Office of Career Planning and Placement will host a visitor from the Peace Corps. Beth Hitchcock, regional representative, will be available to talk with and supply any necessary information about teaching and working for the Peace Corps. The meeting will be held at 11:00 a.m. in Room 456 Waterman.

Any interested student should contact the office in room 237 Waterman, ext. 3477.

Film: Let's Do It Again

Let's Do It Again, a comedy starring Sidney Poitier and Bill Cosby, is this week's special $1 showing. The film will be shown Thursday afternoon at 4:00 at Century Plaza (Dorset Street).

Tickets were on sale Wednesday from 12:15 – 2:00 p.m. near the Billings Information Desk. Tickets will be on sale at the door after 3:30 p.m. on Thursday. A limited number can also be purchased from Mrs. Schwinn at the main office in Pomeroy Hall.

Next week: Check next week's Cynic.

White Water Slide Show

This Saturday evening a spectacular of kayaking and white water around New England will be presented by the L/L Wilderness Sports Program and Eastern Mountain Sports. Noted kayaker/photographer Mark Hatlee will be narrating his experiences, accompanied by some incredible slides of his exploits around our area. The show (which is free) will take place at 8:00 P.M. on Saturday night, Oct. 18th, in 115 Commons at Living/Learning. All are welcome!

Community Council Meets

TOPIC: "Is It Up To You John Q? – What are the unmet Social Needs in the Greater Burlington Area?
DATE: October 16, 1975 at 12:00 Noon
PLACE: First Congregational Church, 38 S. Winooski Ave.
PROGRAM: Louise Piche representing the Champlain Valley Information Service and Marselis Parsons, as a private citizen will be among those taking part. Pat Novotny will moderate.

P.S. Those who choose may bring their own brown bag lunch or just drop in for the program.

Attention Psych Majors

The psychology faculty would like to meet with all psychology majors to discuss graduate school programs and careers in psychology on Friday, October 17 at 3:15 p.m. in room 212, John Dewey Hall.

All majors are urged to attend.

Study In Scandinavia

Any student interested in the possibility of spending the academic year of 1976-66 studying in one of the four Nordic countries (Norway, Sweden, Finland, or Denmark) and receiving (with appropriate evaluation) academic credit for the experience from the University of Vermont, should plan to attend an orientation meeting and social hour at the Center for Area Studies, 479 Main Street, at 7:00 p.m. on Thursday October 23. A total of over 40 UVM students have studied in this program since 1971 and several of them will be on hand to discuss their experiences with you. If you have further questions, kindly contact Louise Beckerle at the Center for Area Studies, extension 4062, or come to the orientation meeting.

Where You're Needed At OVP

Urgent – People needed to design a comprehensive questionnaire to evaluate the health needs of children in Vermont and to administer this questionnaire on a door-to-door basis.

Wanted – People with woodworking skills to work afternoons in a local grade school class.

Wanted – People to work with a socialization club for mentally retarded adults. Individuals in this group will have a 1-to-1 relationship with a retarded adult and will participate in activities such as attending movies in the community.

Wanted – Person with skill in photography to work with OVP on the production of posters, slide shows, and newspaper articles.

Wanted – Person with counseling skills to work with 2 counselors and other volunteers on the running of a PEER Program which helps teenagers to learn better methods of communicating.

Wanted – People to work with mothers in a Burlington housing project. These women have indicated a desire for a series of meetings to improve their physique and posture, to work on hair styling and make-up, and to work on other personal needs items.

Wanted – People with carpentry skills to plan and construct a playschool and children's theatre at a local housing project. (Lumber and paint have already been donated.)

Information about any of the above positions is available at the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, 25 Colchester Ave., 656-2062. There are many other unlisted positions also waiting to be filled. Reach Out!

Hatha Yoga

There will be a Hatha Yoga Demonstration by Estelle Simons on Saturday, October 18, 1 p.m. and Sunday, October 19, 1 p.m. in room 115 Commons, Living/Learning Center. This is an excellent introduction to yoga, sponsored by the Living/Learning Yoga Study Program. Everyone is welcome, refreshments are free.

Help– Statue Stolen

Between Tuesday and Friday, Our Lady of Lords statue was stolen. The statue was white marble and stood 2½–3 ft. The statue had great sentimental value to the family and its return would be greatly appreciated. Anyone who can forward information concerning the whereabouts of the statue, or who can return it, please call Mrs. Rhea Bessette at 864-6642. Thank you.

Gala Dance At Redstone

This Saturday, October 18, from 9:00 p.m. until 1:00 a.m., Mason-Simpson-Hamilton halls will sponsor a gala dance with a live band and unlimited mixed drinks for $2.00 a person, in Simpson Dining Hall.

Music will be provided by Psyo, a ten piece outfit with brass, guitars, piano, and drums, accompanied by a light show.

Tickets will be available from hall representatives and at the main desks in Mason, Simpson and Hamilton. They will also be available at the main door in Simpson Hall during the night of the dance.

Work To Do? Rent A Greek

The Fall clean-up time is upon us again. Jobs need doing, but time is short; the house needs to be ready for winter.

Your troubles are over! The Greek Coordinating Council of UVM will come and do those jobs. Rake leaves, wash windows and cars, minor painting, putting storm windows on, or you name it. We'll do almost any job that would take a couple hours; all you supply is the necessary equipment.

DATE – October 25th; TIME – 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; COST – $2.00 per person per hour. For appointments, call Alpha Chi Omega: 863-3195, 863-6178, 863-3292.

A reminder that the next Lane Series Concert is "Dance Theatre of Harlem," on Wednesday, October 22, at 8 p.m. Tickets for it and the remaining concerts are available from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman; tel. 656-3418. Two happenings related are a workshop on Monday, Oct. 20 and a concert demonstration on Tuesday, Oct. 21.

At Fleming Museum through Nov. 9th: "Vermont Photography '75" a juried exhibition of work by Vermont Photographers. Through Spring of '76, "Collectors and Collections," which highlights the collections of six donors to the Museum, and "Traditional Africa," both in the second floor galleries.

Tickets are on sale Oct. 20–24 from 1 to 4 p.m. at Billings for a Friday dance at Wing-Davis-Wilks featuring the "Davis Brothers Garage" – live music. Tickets also on sale during dinner hours at the dining halls. Admission is $2.50, beer is free, and there will be no ticket sales at the door – Oct. 24, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at W-D-W. Details from Hank Meyer, ext. 3443.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 16

2 p.m., Personal Communications Group for Quiet People, an opportunity for quiet people to come together and share concerns, interests, problems, joys. To be held at the UVM Counseling and Testing Center every Thursday. For more information, drop by the Center, or call ext. 3440.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance Program lecture by Prof. Susan Swetzlitsch, English, on folk-themes in Dante and his illuminations; 216 Commons, Living/Learning. Everyone is welcome.

7:30 p.m., SA The American Actress Films present "Winochka" (1939) starring Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, and Ina Claire, B-106 Cook, free.

7:30-9 p.m., Living Literature "Oral Interpretation Showcase," 216 Commons, Living/Learning. Admission free, refreshments served.

7:30-9:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center Study Group "What Should Our Schools Be Doing?" Free. For further information, call ext. 4221.

8 p.m., "Lysistrata" – the first showing of the first major production of the season at Royall Tyler Theatre. For more information call the Box Office, 656-2094.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17

October 17-18 Trustees' Meeting has been postponed until Nov. 5-8.

12 noon, NAEC meeting, 115 Commons, Living/Learning Center.

12 noon, Open Lunch Hour with the Counseling Center staff. Come and get acquainted.

1 p.m., Mathematical Sciences Seminar, "Linear Model Computation," Dr. Bill Hammerle, University of Rhode Island. A talk geared toward undergraduate students. 108 Terrill Hall.

1-4 p.m., UVM apples are on sale at Horticulture Research Center, off Shelburne Rd.

3:15 p.m., Meeting of Psychology Majors and Faculty. 314 John Dewey Hall.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four" open house program at Royall Tyler Theatre, free.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., Lane Film Society Series presents Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush & Pay Day." Benedict Auditorium, Marsh Life Sciences Building. Tickets cost $1, and are on sale at the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, or call 656-3418.

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA "The Biggies" Film Series presents "Sunday, Bloody Sunday" (1972) starring Peter Finch, Glenda Jackson, and Murray Head. B-106 Cook. Admission is $1.

7:30 p.m., Open Poetry Reading at Church Street Center, 135 Church Street. No charge. Information, ext. 4221.

8 p.m., "Lysistrata" showing at Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office ext. 2094.

8 p.m., UVM Folk Dance Club meets at Southwick Ballroom. Instruction for all levels. Further information from Ben Bergstein at 863-6686.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 18

October 17-18 Trustees' meeting has been postponed until Nov. 5-8.

9 a.m., Church Street Center all-day workshop on "Spinning On a Spinning Wheel," taught by Theresa Bacon. Details, ext. 4221.

7:30 p.m., SA Films Mini Series will feature "High Noon," (1952), starring Gary Cooper, Thomas Mitchell, and Lloyd Bridges. B-106 Cook. Admission is free.

8 p.m., "Lysistrata" showing at Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office 656-2094.

8:00 p.m., New England White Water: a kayaking slide show, by Mark Hatlee, in L/L Center 115 Commons; sponsored by L/L Center Wilderness Sports and Eastern Mountain Sports.

9 p.m.– 1 a.m., Greaser Hop featuring Ken Barlow as D.J., Winooski High School, B.Y.O.B., set-ups provided. $2.50 per person, benefit of St. Francis Xavier School.

UVM hosts Vermont Geological Society meeting.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 19

10:30 a.m. Fun Day, Harris Hall, Council for exceptional children.

7:30 p.m., Slide show and report on work-study experience in a Shanghai factory and the North China commune of Tachi this past April-May, to be presented by Frances Uptegrove, former Chinese language student at UVM, at the Living-Learning Center, Commons 216.

8 p.m., "Lysistrata" showing at Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office is 656-2094. Hurry! This is the last performance.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 20

10:30 a.m., a session on her research on skin care and its application to nursing practice by Dr. Phyllis J. Verhonick, Professor, School of Nursing, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia. The meeting is open to students, faculty, and agency staff; Burgess Residence Assembly Room. See also 4 p.m.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center "Career Planning Awareness" program with Bill McNeil. Open to anyone with questions regarding occupational selection, choice of major, career planning. Admission free at 146 S. Williams St.

4 p.m., "Dance Theatre of Harlem" Workshop conducted by Author Mitchell at Southwick Hall. Interested persons should contact Miss Maggie Hayes, UVM physical education department, ext. 3240.

4 p.m., The second session on her research on skin care and its application to nursing by Dr. Phyllis J. Verhonick (see above at 10:30) will be held at 103 Rowell.

7:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center has one study group, "Small is Beautiful" – a community seminar. No charge.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Study Skills workshop at the Center (146 S. Williams St.) with Alice Outwater. Open to anyone with questions, problems, or concerns about study habits. Free.

3–5 p.m., Women's Caucus panel, "Being Feminine in 1976 – How is Social Change Affecting Female Sexuality?" Representatives from area resources which interact with women in various facets of their sexual lives. Memorial Lounge, Waterman.

3:30 p.m., College of EMBA faculty meeting. Votey Reading Room.

4 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal group of students, staff, townspeople, and professors who get together to speak in Spanish about anything of interest, B-380 Living/Learning. A high level of speaking ability is not required. Open to all who are interested. Sponsored by El Club Hispanico.

4:30 p.m., Concert Demonstration by "Dance Theatre of Harlem," conducted by Author Mitchell, at Memorial Auditorium. Tickets are $1 at door, or from Lane Office.

4:30 p.m., Faculty meeting. College of Arts and Sciences, B-106 Cook Bldg.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance Program lecture, Prof. A. Inskip Dickerson, English, on Chaucer as a transitional figure; emphasis on "The General Prologue." 216 Commons Living/Learning. Everyone is welcome.

4:30 p.m., there will be a meeting of the Student Advisory Committee in Memorial Lounge. All interested students welcome.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization meets to share healing experiences, Harris Hall recreation room. More information from Holly Aspden, ext. 3156.

7 p.m., Tuesday night figure drawing group. Second floor Williams Hall. $1 donation at the door to pay the model.

7:30 p.m., The British Cinema Series (SA Films) presents "Brief Encounter," (1946) starring Stanley Holloway and Trevor Howard. At B-106 Cook. Admission free.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a free "Relaxation and Meditation" program with Nancy Koch, a chance to learn some creative ways of dealing with daily tension and stress. At the Center, 146 S. Williams.

3:30 p.m., International Club: General Meeting and Coffee Hour at the Area and International Studies Building, 479 Main St. The Club especially welcomes foreign students and American students who have an interest in travel or study abroad, or who have just returned from an overseas experience and would like to share it with others.

7:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center "Deer Processing" workshop on the proper way to prepare a deer for table consumption. Call ext. 4221 for information and registration.

8 p.m., Lane Series Concert, "Dance Theatre of Harlem" at Memorial Auditorium. Tickets are available from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, telephone 656-3418.

8 p.m., "The F.S.A.: Photography as Social Comment in the 30's;" a public lecture by Judith Gerber, instructor in Art, Continuing Education. At Fleming Museum Marble Court.

8 p.m., UVM Church Street Center Study Group's "Politics Aren't Dirty: How to Run for Office." No charge. For more information, call ext. 4221.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23

First day of a two-day Workshop sponsored by Radiologic Technology Dept. on Automatic Radiographic Film Processors; co-sponsored by Kodak.

10:50 a.m., Chemistry Colloquium, Dr. Frederick Wedler, dept. of Chemistry, RPI, "New Insight to Chemical Intermediates and Mechanism of Glutamine Synthetase Enzymes," B-112 Cook Bldg.

12:15 p.m., Mechanical Engineering Seminar, "Internal Screw Threads," Mr. Willard E. Henderer. Votey Bldg., Room 231. Everyone is welcome.

Credit For OVP Project

How many times have you said, "I don't have time to volunteer?"

Why don't you relate your volunteering to your academic program? Did you know that there are courses in many departments that can be utilized in conjunction with projects in the community? Readings and Research, or the off-campus semester, are some examples of this. You may also be able to use your project as partial fulfillment of requirements for a related course you may be taking. Check it out!

2 DAYS ONLY!
Gaynes - Ear Piercing Clinic
Fri - 17 5-9
Sat - 18 11-5

FREE EAR PIERCING
with purchase of one pair of earring studs for 6.88
Your ears pierced by a Registered Nurse using a precision instrument . . . free with the purchase of a pair of sterile non-allergenic ear-piercing earrings for just 6.88! (Persons 6 to 18 must be accompanied by guardian. A consent form must be signed at counter.)
GAYNES
open daily 9:30 am 'till 9:30 pm

10% off all items with this ad! Oct. 16 - Oct. 23.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
SPECIALIST IN FOREIGN CAR REPAIR
ENGINE REBUILDING · TIRES · STEAM CLEANING · UNDERCOATING · ALIGNMENT · SPIN BALANCING

560X15 SNOW TIRES
29.95 ! inc. fet & mting
Fits most VW Bugs & Saab V4
862-7686
878-8607
ROUTE 2 WILLISTON, VT.
FUEL INJECTION ANALYZER
WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE
EXCLUSIVE YOKOHAMA DEALER FOR THE FINEST IN RADIAL TIRES

DAMAGE FREE TOWING SERVICE

PADDLE TENNIS
EXHIBITION
This Saturday Oct. 18 at Noon
SEE TOP PLAYERS PLAY
Join them in play
ITS FREE
PADDLE TENNIS CLUB—next to Cross Court
Behind the Olde Board Restaurant & Crossway
RT. 7 SHELBURNE RD.

OCTOBER 16, 1975

Archaeol

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Vermont Archaeological Society, Inc. will be held on October 18, 1975 at 12:00 noon at the Sheraton Motor Inn, Williston Road (I-89 & U.S. 2), Burlington. Meetings, speakers and exhibits will be at the Coach Room, on the second floor of the Sheraton.

PROGRAM

12 noon – registration ($1.00) and exhibits (including Ewing Site, flint manufacture and, replicas, Garrison House artifacts)

1 p.m. – Vergennes Chapter Report; 1:15 p.m. – Burlington Chapter Report; 1:30 p.m. – Garrison House Summary Report by Richard K. Adams and Marjory Power; 2:00 p.m. – Ewing Site Archaic Component by Edgar

Vermont W

On Saturday, October 18, at a mountain inn some 3,500 feet above sea level, any reader who wishes to may spend the day listening to and talking with a dozen distinguished poets and fiction writers who, as a group, have published over 50 books, won 13 prize awards, received the Prix de Rome and several Guggenheim Fellowships, appeared in numerous anthologies and in every quarterly journal imaginable, as well as such national magazines as Harpers, Esquire and The New Yorker.

The occasion is VERMONT WRITERS: 1975, a symposium sponsored by the College Stre

The College Street Congregational Church has scheduled its first fall concert for Sunday, October 19, 1975 at 8:00 p.m. The program will feature the church's new harpsichord, assembled during the summer by Jack Grebb, organist of the church. The performers will include Stephen Bloom (oboe), Jack Grebb (organ and harpsichord).

St.

Results of apple pie sale – We made $56 to donate to World Food Fast Day. Remember the Bottle Drive – bring your beer and soda bottles to St. Anselm's – again – we'll donate the money to World hunger.

Remember this Sunday – 1:30 p.m. – Wood gathering at Rock Point, 5:00 p.m. – Meet in the living room and learn the songs in the Protestant Worshipbook. Bring your guitars, voices, and determination.

Also – come to Mouthpiece, Thursday 7:30-9 p.m. It's a high class bull session.

PROTESTANT/EPISCOPAL MINISTRY
SCHEDULE OF EVENTS
SUNDAY
11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)
1:30 p.m. – Wood gathering at Rock Point.
6:30 p.m. – Service of Word and Communion (Protestant) with supper following.
5:00 p.m. – A chance to learn the songs in

Cunningham

Monday – 7 p.m. Scripture Study "Jesus in the Gospels." 8 p.m. Liturgy: Historical perspective (Se... tracing the development of Catholic Church's wor... experience)
Tuesday – 10 p.m. Student Liturgy.
Thursday – 7:30 p.m. Undergraduate F... Community Meeting.
Benefit Car Wash – Satu... October 18th from 9:00

KNOW IN ADVANC... BIORHYTM...

Archaeological Meeting

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Vermont Archaeological Society, Inc. will be held on October 18, 1975 at 12:00 noon at the Sheraton Motor Inn, Williston Road (I-89 & U.S. 2), Burlington. Meetings, speakers and exhibits will be at the Coach Room, on the second floor of the Sheraton.

PROGRAM

12 noon – registration ($1.00) and exhibits (including Ewing Site, flint manufacture and replicas, Garrison House artifacts)

1 p.m. – Vergennes Chapter Report; 1:15 p.m. – Burlington Chapter Report; 1:30 p.m. – Garrison House Summary Report by Richard K. Adams and History Power; 2:00 p.m. – Ewing Site Archaic Component by Edgar Bacon.

2:30 p.m. – BUSINESS MEETING

3:00 p.m. – Film The Mill Creek People, produced by the University of Iowa Motion Picture Unit for the State Archaeologist (26 min. color) Description – The 1965 excavations at the Wittrock site show structural evidence of a heavily fortified earth lodge village dating from about 1400 A.D. Part of the Mill Creek culture of northwest Iowa, it is comparable to the Middle Missouri Tradition of the Plains which subsequently gave rise to the Mandan of Historic times. Artifacts of bone, shell, stone, and pottery are explained against a background of artists' drawings based on ethnographic and archaeological data reconstructing the prehistoric village.

4:00 p.m. – Flint Manufacture – Charles Pacquin – Demonstration of flint knapping techniques and replica production.

5:00 p.m. – Sour Hour (executive meeting, announcement of new Board)

6:00 – DINNER – Reservations and pre-payment required by October 10, preferably.

7:30 p.m. – EVENING PROGRAM – "Tikal, Guatemala: an Ancient Maya City," an illustrated talk, an overall view of the major center of one of Native America's Civilizations, by Dr. William A. Haviland, Director of Settlement studies and Physical anthropologist for the project during his Doctoral and post-Doctoral research.

Career Planning and Placement

On campus interviews for graduating students being held the week of October 27–31 will encompass the following:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 28

Drew University, School of Theology, Madison, N.J. – information interviews for all related majors.

Ebasco Services, Inc., New York, New York – interviews for all engineering majors.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29

American Graduate School of International Management, Glendale, Arizona – information interviews for all majors.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30

Gordon & Sherman, Public Accounting, Montpelier, VT – interviews for Bachelors or Masters in Accounting.

Sign up for these interviews on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, October 20, 21, 22.

Reminder: Don't forget the Special Focus Workshops being held in the Placement Office Conference Room. Second Session: October 20 and 22 – 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Topic: Employment Interviewing or "How to prepare for and make the most of the employment interview."

The Exchange

by Alice D. Outwater
Counseling and Testing

This week there were many indignant comments concerning the Cougar skin over the fireplace in Billings (Marsh Lounge). "That gross carnage hanging in Marsh Lounge should be removed and hung in some trophy room of someone who can be proud of it. Personally, I abhor the advertisement of killing, especially of an endangered species." Or more delicately put: "It is no compliment to the meaning behind its use as a symbol or mascot for UVM," or "Certainly taking down the animal skin will not change the state of the animal – dead: however it is a symbol and it would be an important symbolic gesture to remove it." I went right over to view the animal skin in question, placed high over the fireplace. Apparently, he was found in some dusty place of storage given by a nostalgic alumni. Was he shot on a safari on a faroff continent or perhaps in the hills of Vermont? In a past age when this type of hunting was considered acceptable? Can he be viewed with this in mind, or is his presence in too flagrant opposition to our present views concerning the protection of these vanishing wild creatures?

And on another subject. Re: Student dining area in Billings: "No smoking signs are garish and unheeded. One large sign would be more appropriate at the no smoking area that says: STOP. Smoking endangers other people's health." If people won't take care of their own health, perhaps they will be courteous of ours?

To continue through our mail: "Recent studies on flourescent lighting should be disseminated, especially to library personnel. Working under them for more than a few moments makes one sleepy. They are about the cheapest form of lighting so this will be difficult." Interesting – I've always found that type of lighting hard on my eyes: tiring. We're passing these comments onto those who can do something about the situations. I like the sense of caring and community spirit I read underneath them.

Keep the comments coming. Drop in the Billings Box or call x2068.

Council For Exceptional Children

The University of Vermont's Council for Exceptional Children was started last October. When the Council was first organized, it had only twenty members.

Because of the enthusiasm shown by the volunteers and the participants, the group grew to one hundred volunteers by last May. This year, after our first meeting, we have approximately sixty-five volunteers.

The goals of the C.E.C. are to increase exceptional children's exposure to various events and people and to provide experiential learning. The Council also provides the student volunteers the opportunity to work with handicapped children. One of the many ways these goals are achieved is by the C.E.C.'s monthly "Fundays". The children and volunteers are brought together to enjoy arts and crafts, music and games.

Some of the volunteers spend extra time preparing the children for Special Olympics or working on the projects for the art show held each semester here at the school.

If you are interested and would like to know more about the Council, visit us on the third floor of the Special Education Building, next to John Dewey Hall, at 20 Colchester Ave. or phone 656-2936.

Vermont Writers '75

On Saturday, October 18, at a mountain inn some 3,500 feet above sea level, any reader who wishes to may spend the day listening to and talking with a dozen distinguished poets and fiction writers who, as a group, have published over 50 books, won 13 prize awards, received the Prix de Rome and several Guggenheim Fellowships, appeared in numerous anthologies and in every quarterly journal imaginable, as well as such national magazines as Harpers, Esquire and The New Yorker.

The occasion is VERMONT WRITERS: 1975, a symposium sponsored by the Vermont Academy of Arts & Sciences and assisted by a grant from the Vermont Council on the Arts.

According to Academy president George Clay of Manchester, no such gathering of first-rate resident Vermont authors has ever been undertaken before.

It will be held at the Stratton Mountain Inn and is open to the public free of charge. The program includes morning and afternoon readings, and two mid-afternoon discussion groups: one presided over by the poets, the other by the fiction writers.

Ticket Book Deadline

The deadline for picking up athletic coupon books for this year's hockey and basketball season was set at October 15. Many students, even though they have made a deposit, have not yet picked them up. We will extend the deadline to October 30, but request that you pick them up as soon as possible.

Any books not picked up by October 30 will be forfeited.

Pre-Law Meeting

There will be a meeting on Wednesday, October 22, in North Lounge, Billings Center at 4:15 p.m. for freshmen, sophomores, and juniors interested in the Student Pre-Law Association.

Campfire Girls Open Thrift Shop

The Champlain Council of Camp Fire Girls announces the opening of their new thrift shop at 73 Church Street, upstairs, Burlington. The time has come for Camp Fire, as it has for many other small agencies to fund themselves. Our local community services funding has been drastically cut, and from this emerges our new thrift shop. We serve many low income families. These children already know what it is like to be poor, but they have been able to participate in Camp Fire. We are not going to say to these children, "Sorry, no more Camp Fire, we have no more money." Instead, we will try to raise the money we need the best way that we can.

We need to have some students to volunteer to start a clothing drive for us at UVM. We also need customers, we already have a small, but nice selection of clothes.

The thrift shop is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. Closed for lunch 12–1.

We are also still looking for some students to volunteer their services to help lead a Camp Fire Group, two hours one day a week. We would also like to invite any sororities or fraternities to sponsor a low income or special education group. We have a truck available for clothing pick-up, if necessary.

Friday Afternoon Drinking Club

For those who have nothing to do Friday afternoons – come to the FADC this and every Friday from 5 to 9 at the Phi Delta Theta house, 439 College St., across from Waterman.

Phony Diplomas

The Attorney General's office has received information that an organization operating under the name Jackson State University is allegedly offering for sale phony university degrees to Vermont residents. These solicitations represent that the degrees are "full bonified academic degrees." The theme of the offering is that degrees are awarded on the basis of "life experiences" at a cost for "tuition" of $100–$250, depending on the level of degree requested. Do not confuse phony degrees with those from accredited institutions. Anyone receiving such an offering is requested to send it, if possible in the envelope in which mailed to the Attorney General's Office, Consumer Fraud Division, Box 981, Burlington, Vermont 05401. Attention: Ronald A. Fox.

College Street Concerts

The College Street Congregational Church has scheduled its first fall concert for Sunday, October 19, 1975 at 8:00 p.m. The program will feature the church's new harpsichord, assembled during the summer by Jack Grebb, organist of the church. The performers will include Stephen Bloom (oboe), Jack Grebb (organ and harpsichord), Victoria Scoones (flute), and the UVM Baroque Ensemble.

Tickets are available at the Everyday Bookstore, the College Street Congregational Church office (9–12 Monday through Friday) and from the Music Committee. General admission is $2.50, students $1.00. For more information, contact church office 864-7704. (9–12 a.m.)

UVM Hillel Activities

ISRAELI DANCING – Correction: the next dancing session will be on October 29th, not on October 22, in L/L A 131 at 8:00 p.m. If the group is under 10 people, dancing will be discontinued. If you ever wanted to come, do it on October 29th. Please call Marc Pollack at 4248 or come to tell me if you can come

BRUNCH – Every Sunday at 11:30 we get together at the Hillel House taking things easy and relaxing ourselves. Please come by and take part by all means! Take advantage of our beautiful Hillel House on 389 College Street while it's still open to us.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT – On October 20th, in B 150 L/L at 8:00 p.m. Prof. Ellen Cannon will speak on Yiddish Language and Jewish Politics in the 19th Century. Refreshments will be served. This will be an interesting and enjoyable session. Open to everyone, of course.

HEBREW CONVERSATIONS – Every Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 in the Hebrew Suite (B 230 L/L) there are informal sessions for anybody interested in brushing up on their Hebrew at all levels. Avi Gilam will be there!!!

EREV SHABBAT MEAL – Friday night (Erev Shabbat) should be a time for a nice quiet, more traditional meal. This is possible in the right hand side conference room (as you walk in) of the Living/Learning Dining Hall. Come there at 6:00 on Friday evenings, get your Saga Food, and join us in the conference room. This is a nice interlude!!! Wine and a quiet atmosphere are provided.

Bikecentennial Tours

Be a leader of our nation's Bicentennial celebration. Bikecentennial is seeking 1400 leaders to run the inaugural tours in 1976 of the first Trans-America Bicycle Trail. Leaders will receive food, lodging, and normal tour services as well as a small daily expense allowance, all part of an adventure of a lifetime.

Over 50 courses will be offered at four major training centers in Oregon, Colorado, the MidWest and the MidAtlantic regions. The seven-day sessions include classroom and field instruction in bicycling technique, safety, repair, group dynamics, touring and special bike and camping skills and first aid. In addition to the training centers, courses will be held at Pt. Reyes, N. California; Missoula, Montana; and in New England from April 10 through 16, 1976. Cost, including food, lodging, instruction, books and materials, is $75.00

BIKECENTENNIAL, a non-profit, charitable organization, is sponsoring the tours varying in length from 12 to 82 days, covering up to 4,500 miles of America's most historic and scenic regions. The establishment of the Trail marks the beginning of a long term commitment by Bikecentennial to develop a network of long distance bicycle trails criss-crossing the U.S.

For further details on Leadership Training Courses and an application write: BIKECENTENNIAL '76, P.O. Box 1034, Missoula, MT 59801.

'The Way' Meets

The Way – Biblical Research and Teaching – branch fellowship meetings, open to all who desire to know the accuracy of God's Word, will be held this and every Sunday at 7:00 p.m. in Living/Learning B-161.

Mechanical Engineer Seminar

The following Mechanical Engineering Seminars are scheduled for Thursday 12:15 Room 231 Votey Building:

October 16 Prof G.A. Marshall: Human Information Input process.

October 23 Mr. Willard E. Henderer: Internal Screw Threads.

October 30 Mrs. Delcie Durham: Properties of Unidirectionally solified metals.

November 6 Prof. A.F. Tuthill: Building Design for Disaster Control.

All are welcome – Bring Lunch.

Mathematical Sciences Seminar
Dr. Bill Hemmerle – "Linear Model Computation"
October 17, 1975 – 1 p.m. – 108 Terrill Hall – Undergraduates

October 17, 1975 – 4 p.m. – 305 Votey – Graduates and Faculty
Mathematical Sciences Seminar
Dr. Bill Fellinger – "A Fuzzy System Modelling Language"
October 23, 1975 – 3 p.m. – 229 Votey.

St. Anselm's Chapel

Results of apple pie sale – We made $56 to donate to World Food Fast Day. Remember the Bottle Drive – bring your beer and soda bottles to St. Anselm's – again – we'll donate the money to World hunger.

Remember this Sunday – 1:30 p.m. – Wood gathering at Rock Point, 5:00 p.m. – Meet in the living room and learn the songs in the Protestant Worshipbook. Bring your guitars, voices, and determination.

Also – come to Mouthpiece, Thursday – 7:30-9 p.m. It's a high class bull session.

PROTESTANT/EPISCOPAL MINISTRY
SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

SUNDAY
11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)
1:30 p.m. – Wood gathering at Rock Point.
6:30 p.m. – Service of the Word and Communion (Protestant) with supper following
5:00 p.m. – A chance to learn the songs in the Protestant Worshipbook. Bring your guitars and voices!

MONDAY
7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer
5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer
8:00 p.m. – Prayer and Share – informal worship

TUESDAY
7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer
5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer
8:30 p.m. – For Men only – informal discussions of Christian beliefs and faith for men who want to be more serious about their religion but find formal worship meaningless.
10:00 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

WEDNESDAY
7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer
5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer
10:00 p.m. – Compline – a brief service of prayers and songs to end the day.

THURSDAY
4:00-5:30 p.m. – Wine and Cheese
5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer
7:30-9:00 p.m. – A Time to Share – an informal opportunity to share feelings and experiences of being new at UVM
9:30 p.m. – Compline at McAuley Hall

FRIDAY
7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer
5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer
7:00-9:30 p.m. – Navigators use building on first and third Fridays of each month

Chaplins: Nancy Allen, Geoffrey Schmitt, X3882 – St Anselm's Chapel (Redstone Campus)

Cunningham Newman Center

Monday – 7 p.m. Scripture Study "Jesus in the Gospels." 8 p.m. Liturgy: Historical perspective (Series: tracing the development of the Catholic Church's worship experience)

Tuesday – 10 p.m. Student Liturgy.

Thursday – 7:30 p.m. Undergraduate Faith Community Meeting.

Benefit Car Wash – Saturday October 18th from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Williston Road branch of the Chittenden Trust Co. (next to Gaynes) – For the "Leap Program"

STAFF – Rev. Francis Holland, director; Rev. Normand Nadeau, associate director; Sr. Jeannine Mercure, campus minister; Sr. Clare Burgoyne, campus minister; Rev. Gerald Ragis, campus minister. Telephone – 862-8403.

KNOW IN ADVANCE YOUR GOOD AND BAD DAYS
BIORHYTM- YOUR BODY'S "CLOCK"

ONE WEEK ONLY SALE!

STOMPERS!

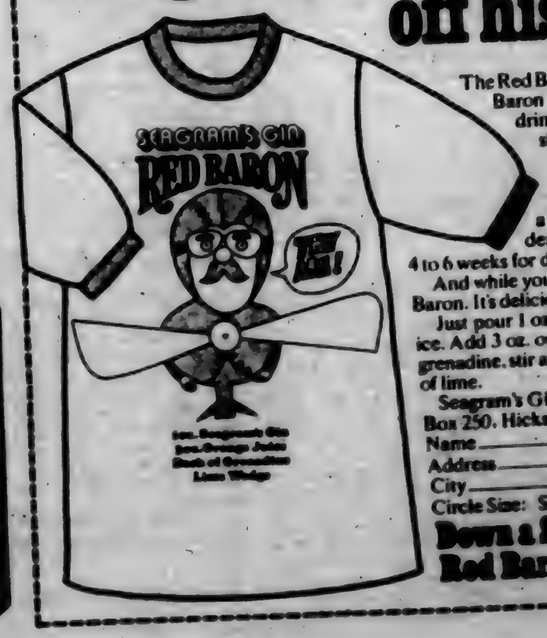
Rugged Italian all leather outdoor, all-season shoes for the whole family. Try and wear 'em out! Comfortable padded collar, sturdy cleated soles. Real values at these special ONE WEEK ONLY prices. First come!

MEN'S & WOMEN'S $21.99 Reg. $25 Suede
MEN'S & WOMEN'S $24.99 Reg. $28 Leather
CHILDREN'S $15.99 to $19.99 Leather & Suede

Nous parlons français & tous nos magasins

GLADSTONE'S
The North Country's Largest Independent Shoe Chain
BURLINGTON 11 Upper Church St. · BARRE 134 North Main St. · RUTLAND Rutland Plaza · WINOOSKI 98 West Canal St.
ST. ALBANS 38 North Main St. · NEWPORT 38 Main St. · SPRINGFIELD 445 Main St. · PLATTSBURGH Pyramid Mall

For $3 The Red Baron will give you the T-shirt off his back.



The Red Baron thinks The Red Baron is such a fantastic drink he's created a T-shirt in its honor. And getting one is very easy. Just fill out the coupon and send us a check or money order for $3. Allow about 4 to 6 weeks for delivery.

And while you're waiting, try a Red Baron. It's delicious.

Just pour 1 oz. Seagram's Gin over ice. Add 3 oz. orange juice, a dash of grenadine, stir and serve with a wedge of lime.

Seagram's Gin Red Baron, Dept. 51, Box 250, Hicksville, N.Y. 11802
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Circle Size: S M L XL

Down a Seagram's Gin Red Baron tonight.

Offer void where prohibited

Archaeological Meeting

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Vermont Archaeological Society, Inc. will be held on October 18, 1975 at 12:00 noon at the Sheraton Motor Inn, Williston Road (I-89 & U.S. 2), Burlington. Meetings, speakers and exhibits will be at the Coach Room, on the second floor of the Sheraton.

PROGRAM

12 noon – registration ($1.00) and exhibits (including Ewing Site, flint manufacture and replicas, Garrison House artifacts)

1 p.m. – Vergennes Chapter Report; 1:15 p.m. – Burlington Chapter Report; 1:30 p.m. – Garrison House Summary Report by Richard K. Adams and Plenary Power; 2:00 p.m. – Ewing Site Archaic Component by Edgar Beem.

2:30 p.m. – BUSINESS MEETING

3:00 p.m. – Film The Mill Creek People, produced by the University of Iowa Motion Picture Unit for the State Archaeologist (26 min. color) Description – The 1965 excavations at the Wittrock site show structural evidence of a heavily fortified earth lodge village dating from about 1400 A.D. Part of the Mill Creek culture of northwest Iowa, it is comparable to the Middle Missouri Tradition of the Plains which subsequently gave rise to the Mandan of Historic times. Artifacts of bone, shell, stone, and pottery are explained against a background of artists' drawings based on ethnographic and archaeological data reconstructing the prehistoric village.

4:00 p.m. – Flint Manufacture – Charles Pacquin – Demonstration of flint knapping techniques and replica production.

5:00 p.m. – Sour Hour (executive meeting, announcement of new Board)

6:00 – DINNER – Reservations and pre-payment required by October 10, preferably.

7:30 p.m. – EVENING PROGRAM – "Tikal, Guatemala: an Ancient Maya City," an illustrated talk, an overall view of the major center of one of Native America's Civilizations, by Dr. William A. Haviland, Director of Settlement studies and Physical anthropologist for the project during his Doctoral and post-Doctoral research.

Career Planning and Placement

On campus interviews for graduating students being held the week of October 27–31 will encompass the following:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 28

Drew University, School of Theology, Madison, N.J. – information interviews for all related majors.

Ebasco Services, Inc., New York, New York – interviews for all engineering majors.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29

American Graduate School of International Management, Glendale, Arizona – information interviews for all majors.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30

Gordon & Sherman, Public Accounting, Montpelier, Vt – interviews for Bachelors or Masters in Accounting.

Sign up for these interviews on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, October 20, 21, 22.

Reminder: Don't forget the Special Focus Workshops being held in the Placement Office Conference Room. Second Session: October 20 and 22 – 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Topic: Employment Interviewing or "How to prepare for and make the most of the employment interview."

The Exchange

by Allen D. Outwater
Counseling and Testing

This week there were many indignant comments concerning the Cougar skin over the fireplace in Billings (Marsh Lounge). "That gross carnage hanging in Marsh Lounge should be removed and hung in some trophy room of someone who can be proud of it. Personally, I abhor the advertisement of killing, especially of an endangered species." Or more delicately put: "It is no compliment to the meaning behind its use as a symbol or mascot for UVM," or "Certainly taking down the animal skin will not change the state of the animal – dead; however it is a symbol and it would be an important symbolic gesture to remove it." I went right over to view the animal skin in question, placed high over the fireplace. Apparently, he was found in some dusty place of storage given by a nostalgic alumni. Was he shot on a safari on a faroff continent or perhaps in the hills of Vermont? In a past age when this type of hunting was considered acceptable? Can he be viewed with this in mind, or is his presence in too flagrant opposition to our present views concerning the protection of these vanishing wild creatures?

And on another subject. Re: Student dining area in Billings: "No smoking signs are garish and unheeded. One large sign would be more appropriate at the no smoking area that says: STOP. Smoking endangers other people's health'." If people won't take care of their own health, perhaps they will be courteous of ours?

To continue through our mail: "Recent studies on flourescent lighting should be disseminated, especially to library personnel. Working under them for more than a few moments makes one sleepy. They are about the cheapest form of lighting so this will be difficult." Interesting – I've always found that type of lighting hard on my eyes: tiring. We're passing these comments onto those who can do something about the situations. I like the sense of caring and community spirit I read underneath them.

Keep the comments coming. Drop in the Billings Box or call x2068.

Vermont Writers '75

On Saturday, October 18, at a mountain inn some 3,500 feet above sea level, any reader who wishes to may spend the day listening to and talking with a dozen distinguished poets and fiction writers who, as a group, have published over 50 books, won 13 prize awards, received the Prix de Rome and several Guggenheim Fellowships, appeared in numerous anthologies and in every quarterly journal imaginable, as well as such national magazines as Harpers, Esquire and The New Yorker.

The occasion is VERMONT WRITERS: 1975, a symposium sponsored by the Vermont Academy of Arts & Sciences and assisted by a grant from the Vermont Council on the Arts.

According to Academy president George Clay of Manchester, no such gathering of first-rate resident Vermont authors has ever been undertaken before.

It will be held at the Stratton Mountain Inn and is open to the public free of charge. The program includes morning and afternoon readings, and two mid-afternoon discussion groups: one presided over by the poets, the other by the fiction writers.

Ticket Book Deadline

The deadline for picking up athletic coupon books for this year's hockey and basketball season was set at October 15. Many students, even though they have made a deposit, have not yet picked them up. We will extend the deadline to October 30, but request that you pick them up as soon as possible.

Any books not picked up by October 30 will be forfeited.

Pre-Law Meeting

There will be a meeting on Wednesday, October 22, in North Lounge, Billings Center at 4:15 p.m. for freshmen, sophomores, and juniors interested in the Student Pre-Law Association.

Council For Exceptional Children

The University of Vermont's Council for Exceptional Children was started last October. When the Council was first organized, it had only twenty members.

Because of the enthusiasm shown by the volunteers and the participants, the group grew to one hundred volunteers by last May. This year, after our first meeting, we have approximately sixty-five volunteers.

The goals of the C.E.C. are to increase exceptional children's exposure to various events and people and to provide experiential learning. The Council also provides the student volunteers the opportunity to work with handicapped children. One of the many ways these goals are achieved is by the C.E.C.'s monthly "Fundays". The children and volunteers are brought together to enjoy arts and crafts, music and games.

Some of the volunteers spend extra time preparing the children for Special Olympics or working on the projects for the art show held each semester here at the school.

If you are interested and would like to know more about the Council, visit us on the third floor of the Special Education Building, next to John Dewey Hall, at 20 Colchester Ave. or phone 656-2936.

Campfire Girls Open Thrift Shop

The Champlain Council of Camp Fire Girls announces the opening of their new thrift shop at 73 Church Street, upstairs, Burlington. The time has come for Camp Fire, as it has for many other small agencies to fund themselves. "Our local community services funding has been drastically cut, and from this emerges our new thrift shop. We serve many low income families. These children already know what it is like to be poor, but they have been able to participate in Camp Fire. We are not going to say to these children, "Sorry, no more Camp Fire, we have no more money." Instead, we will try to raise the money we need the best way that we can.

We need to have some students to volunteer to start a clothing drive for us at UVM. We also need customers, we already have a small, but nice selection of clothes.

The thrift shop is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. Closed for lunch 12–1.

We are also still looking for some students to volunteer their services to help lead a Camp Fire Group, two hours one day a week. We would also like to invite any sororities or fraternities to sponsor a low income or special education group. We have a truck available for clothing pick-up, if necessary.

Friday Afternoon Drinking Club

For those who have nothing to do Friday afternoons – come to the FADC this and every Friday from 5 to 9 at the Phi Delta Theta house, 439 College St. – across from Waterman.

Phony Diplomas

The Attorney General's office has received information that an organization operating under the name Jackson State University is allegedly offering for sale phony university degrees to Vermont residents. These solicitations represent that the degrees are "full bonified academic degrees." The theme of the offering is that degrees are awarded on the basis of "life experiences" at a cost for "tuition" of $100–$250, depending on the level of degree requested. Do not confuse phony degrees with those from accredited institutions. Anyone receiving such an offering is requested to send it, if possible in the envelope in which mailed to the Attorney General's Office, Consumer Fraud Division, Box 981, Burlington, Vermont 05401. Attention: Ronald A. Fox.

College Street Concerts

The College Street Congregational Church has scheduled its first fall concert for Sunday, October 19, 1975 at 8:00 p.m. The program will feature the church's new harpsichord, assembled during the summer by Jack Grebb, organist of the church. The performers will include Stephen Bloom (oboe), Jack Grebb (organ and harpsichord), Victoria Scoones (flute), and the UVM Baroque Ensemble.

Tickets are available at the Everyday Bookstore, the College Street Congregational Church office (9–12 Monday through Friday) and from the Music Committee. General admission is $2.50, students $1.00. For more information, contact church office 864-7704. (9–12 a.m.)

UVM Hillel Activities

ISRAELI DANCING – Correction: the next dancing session will be on October 29th, not on October 22, in L/L A 131 at 8:00 p.m. If the group is under 10 people, dancing will be discontinued. If you ever wanted to come, do it on October 29th. Please call Marc Pollack at 4248 or come to tell me if you can come

BRUNCH – Every Sunday at 11:30 we get together at the Hillel House taking things easy and relaxing ourselves. Please come by and take part by all means! Take advantage of our beautiful Hillel House on 389 College Street while it's still open to us.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT – On October 20th, in B 150 L/L at 8:00 p.m. Prof. Ellen Cannon will speak on Yiddish Language and Jewish Politics in the 19th Century. Refreshments will be served. This will be an interesting and enjoyable session. Open to everyone, of course.

HEBREW CONVERSATIONS – Every Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 in the Hebrew Suite (B 230 L/L) there are informal sessions for anybody interested in brushing up on their Hebrew at all levels. Avi Gilam will be there!!!

EREV SHABBAT MEAL – Friday night (Erev Shabbat) should be a time for a nice quiet, more traditional meal. This is possible in the right hand side conference room (as you walk in) of the Living/Learning Dining Hall. Come there at 6:00 on Friday evenings, get your Saga Food, and join us in the conference room. This is a nice interlude!!! Wine and a quiet atmosphere are provided.

Bikecentennial Tours

Be a leader of our nation's Bicentennial celebration. Bikecentennial is seeking 1400 leaders to run the inaugural tours in 1976 of the first Trans-America Bicycle Trail. Leaders will receive food, lodging, and normal tour services as well as a small daily expense allowance, all part of an adventure of a lifetime.

Over 50 courses will be offered at four major training centers in Oregon, Colorado, the MidWest and the MidAtlantic regions. The seven-day sessions include classroom and field instruction in bicycling technique, safety, repair, group dynamics, touring and special bike and camping skills and first aid. In addition to the training centers, courses will be held at Pt. Reyes, N. California; Missoula, Montana; and in New England from April 10 through 16, 1976. Cost, including food, lodging, instruction, books and materials, is $75.00

BIKECENTENNIAL, a non-profit, charitable organization, is sponsoring the tours varying in length from 12 to 82 days, covering up to 4,500 miles of America's most historic and scenic regions. The establishment of the Trail marks the beginning of a long term commitment by Bikecentennial to develop a network of long distance bicycle trails criss-crossing the U.S.

For further details on Leadership Training Courses and an application write: BIKECENTENNIAL '76, P.O. Box 1034, Missoula, MT 59801.

'The Way' Meets

The Way – Biblical Research and Teaching – branch fellowship meetings, open to all who desire to know the accuracy of God's Word, will be held this and every Sunday at 7:00 p.m. in Living/Learning B-161.

Mechanical Engineer Seminar

The following Mechanical Engineering Seminars are scheduled for Thursday 12:15 Room 231 Votey Building:

October 16 Prof. G.A. Marshall: Human Information Input process.

October 23 Mr. Willard E. Henderer: Internal Screw Threads.

October 30 Mrs. Delcie Durham: Properties of Unidirectionally solified metals.

November 6 Prof. A.F. Tuthill: Building Design for Disaster Control.

All are welcome – Bring Lunch.

Mathematical Sciences Seminar
Dr. Bill Hemmerle – "Linear Model Computation"
October 17, 1975 – 1 p.m. – 108 Terril Hall – Undergraduates

October 17, 1975 – 4 p.m. – 305 Votey – Graduates and Faculty
Mathematical Sciences Seminar
Dr. Bill Fellinger – "A Fuzzy System Modelling Language"
October 23, 1975 – 3 p.m. – 229 Votey.

St. Anselm's Chapel

Results of apple pie sale – We made $56 to donate to World Food Fast Day. Remember the Bottle Drive – bring your beer and soda bottles to St. Anselm's – again – we'll donate the money to World hunger.

Remember this Sunday – 1:30 p.m. – Wood gathering at Rock Point, 5:00 p.m. – Meet in the living room and learn the songs in the Protestant Worshipbook. Bring your guitars, voices, and determination.

Also – come to Mouthpiece, Thursday – 7:30-9 p.m. It's a high class bull session.

PROTESTANT/EPISCOPAL MINISTRY

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

SUNDAY

11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

1:30 p.m. – Wood gathering at Rock Point.

6:30 p.m. – Service of the Word and Communion (Protestant) with supper following

5:00 p.m. – A chance to learn the songs in the Protestant Worshipbook. Bring your guitars and voices!

MONDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

8:00 p.m. – Prayer and Share – informal worship

TUESDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

8:30 p.m. – For Men only – informal discussions of Christian beliefs and faith for men who want to be more serious about their religion but find formal worship meaningless.

10:00 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

WEDNESDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

10:00 p.m. – Compline – a brief service of prayers and songs to end the day.

THURSDAY

4:00-5:30 p.m. – Wine and Cheese

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

7:30-9:00 p.m. – A Time to Share – an informal opportunity to share feelings and experiences of being new at UVM

9:30 p.m. – Compline at McAuley Hall

FRIDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

7:00-9:30 p.m. – Navigators use building on first and third Fridays of each month

Chaplins: Nancy Allen, Geoffrey Schmitt, X3882 – St Anselm's Chapel (Redstone Campus)

Cunningham Newman Center

Monday – 7 p.m. Scripture Study "Jesus in the Gospels." 8 p.m. Liturgy: Historical perspective (Series tracing the development of the Catholic Church's worship experience)

Tuesday – 10 p.m. Student Liturgy.

Thursday – 7:30 p.m. Undergraduate Faith Community Meeting.

Benefit Car Wash – Saturday October 18th from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Williston Road branch of the Chittenden Trust Co. (next to Gaynes) – For the "Leap Program"

STAFF – Rev. Francis Holland, director; Rev. Normand Nadeau, associate director; Sr. Jeannine Mercure, campus minister; Sr. Clare Burgoyne, campus minister; Rev. Gerald Regis, campus minister. Telephone – 862-8403.

KNOW IN ADVANCE YOUR GOOD AND BAD DAYS
BIORHYTM- YOUR BODY'S "CLOCK"

[illegible]

ONE WEEK ONLY SALE!

STOMPERS!

ALL LEATHER

Rugged Italian all leather outdoor, all-season shoes for the whole family. Try and wear 'em out! Comfortable padded collar, sturdy cleated soles. Real values at these special ONE WEEK ONLY prices. First come!

MEN'S & WOMEN'S Suede $21.99 Reg. $25
MEN'S & WOMEN'S Leather $24.99 Reg. $28
CHILDREN'S Leather & Suede $15.99 to $19.99

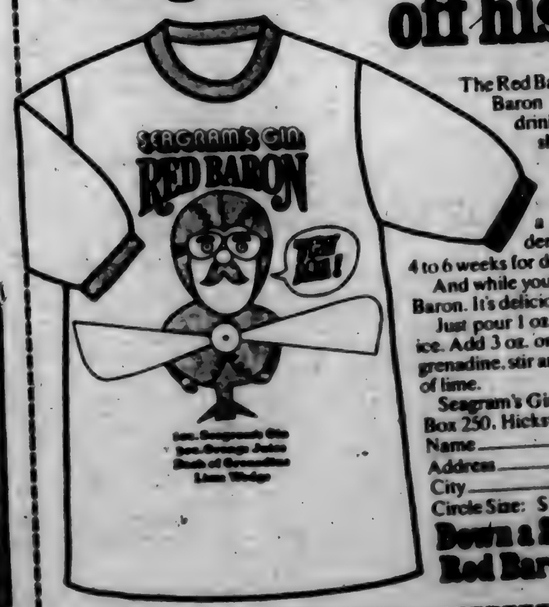
Mesur parfaum française & tous nos magasins

GLADSTONE'S

The North Country's Largest Independent Shoe Chain

BURLINGTON 11 Upper Church St. · BARRE 134 North Main St. · RUTLAND Rutland Plaza · WINDSOR 94 West Canal St. · ST. ALBANS 38 North Main St. · NEWPORT 38 Main St. · BENNINGTON 466 Main St. · PLATTSBURGH Pyramid Mall

For $3 The Red Baron will give you the T-shirt off his back.



The Red Baron thinks The Red Baron is such a fantastic drink he's created a T-shirt in its honor. And getting one is very easy. Just fill out the coupon and send us a check or money order for $3. Allow about 4 to 6 weeks for delivery.

And while you're waiting, try a Red Baron. It's delicious.

Just pour 1 oz. Seagram's Gin over ice. Add 3 oz. orange juice, a dash of grenadine, stir and serve with a wedge of lime.

Seagram's Gin Red Baron, Dept. 51, Box 250, Hicksville, N.Y. 11802

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Circle Size: S M L XL

Down a Seagram's Gin Red Baron tonight.

Offer void where prohibited

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Randy Jonsen '77 ..... Editor-in-Chief
David Ryan '77 ..... Assistant Editor
Mark Valle '76 ..... Managing Editor
John MacDonald '78 ..... News Editor
Sue Perkins '78 ..... Feature Editor
Sari Bodi '76 ..... Arts & Entertainment Editor
Norm Robinson '77 ..... Sports Editor
Amy Weinstock '78 ..... Copy Editor
Deborah Powell '76 ..... Advertising Manager

Take A Look Around You

Once when I was very young, I asked my father how he knew for certain that there was a God. He replied, "You don't have to go to China to know it's there."

There is a popular myth circulating that the nation's campuses have gone to sleep, and students are more interested in beer than in trying to make the world a better place. Those who were running scared in the 1960's sleep easier and some students go on their way excusing themselves because no one else is doing anything either.

Well, that is not true. All around you are examples of students getting involved and helping people to help themselves. The only difference between the 1960's and the 1970's is that the students are not talking about it. They're too busy doing it. There are people who still pollute our air, poison the fish that swim in our streams, and promote anti-humanitarian efforts designed to benefit only themselves and inflate their already over-inflated egos. To them and to those who will shortly join them, take this as a warning. No one has forgotten. The spirit of the 60's has not gone away. This is merely the calm before the storm.

You don't have to see what is going on to know it's there, but if you ignore it you'll have to answer to someone someday. You decide what side you want to be on.

As a fourth street poet once said, "It's a hard rain's a-gonna fall."

D.R.

letters to the editor

UVM's Doggy Business

To the Editor:

Apparently the new fad around college campuses these days is to flood them with dogs. UVM is no exception. When I transferred to this place of learning last year, it was referred to as "Camp Catamount." Why don't we change it to "Camp Doggiemount?" I'm not against animals, and dogs are fine as pets, but unless they are planning to get a degree at UVM, I find their presence disturbing – if not dangerous.

Let me explain. I was eating my lunch last Friday at the Den. Occasionally dogs run through the place, but this particular day featured a starving Doberman who managed to obtain a Saran-wrapped ham sandwich. (Any guesses as to how it got there?...) At any rate, said dog proceeded to devour this lunch gnashing his teeth through the wrapper. I felt slightly disgusted and even outraged having to listen to crunching, slopping, and growling as I tried to swallow and digest my hamburger. Not only did this dog "slop" the floor and spread who-knows-what germs around, but it had the nerve to intimidate students by growling and barking at them. No eating establishment should allow animals, not even the Den.

Besides this account, I have seen dogs disrupt bicyclists and obstruct the paths of students and faculty on campus. Those of us who are allergic to dogs and even afraid of them do not appreciate their presence in the classroom.

To conclude, I find UVM's "doggie-business" degrading and distasteful. Dogs belong at home with their owners, not annoying or terrorizing people at a public institution. Besides, has anyone asked his dog if he wanted to come to college, anyway?

Diana L. Gill

Another Bookstore Rip--off

To the Editor:

Let's have a round of applause from all of us serious students for the UVM Bookstore. Once again they have initiated measures that at first may seem drastic, selfish, and totally unnecessary, but then as we take a closer look, begin to appear wise and prudent methods of dealing with the situation.

How many times have the rest of you academicians tried to suitably equip yourselves in the pursuit of the elusive "A" only to find that someone on athletic scholarship had beaten you to it?

In my particular case, this involves the 11x17 or 17x22 regional maps, used, in my case, for Geography 11. These maps happen to be right in the center of human activity in the Bookstore, namely in the far left corner.

In the past, the maps have been priced within the range of anyone possessing a dime and consequently could be purchased by the extravagant for any crude purpose whatsoever. With the growing complaints of scholars in Intro-Geography who were not able to get a map because of inadequate supply for both extravagants and scholars, the Bookstore cracked down.

While mere future ordering would not end the rising problem of these extravagants, they hit at the heart of the matter by raising the price of these maps. Whereas a .06 map now costs .16 and an .08 map heaven- knows-what, the problem at last seems arrested. With the new prices ranged to steady some extravagants, the serious student is now almost assured of his or her own map, with the bookstore able to make a handsome profit to reinvest in making the spiralling costs of education a little easier for us to bear.

Again, cheers for this, though not novel, truly efficient answer to the current crisis.

Brad Bosley

VPIRG Column

I-93: A Waste Of Public Money

by Carl Bohlen
VPIRG Staff

Interstate 93 typifies a blind appreciation for new highways with no regard for the changing conditions and attitudes towards energy and transportation. I-93 stands out as one of the most unjustified and unnecessary roads planned for Vermont, and its proponents have failed to reasonably demonstrate the benefits of this four lane proposal. In August of 1974, VPIRG issued a report entitled I-93: A Question of Dollars and Sense exposing I-93 as a needless waste of public funds.

Running from St. Johnsbury for eleven miles to New Hampshire, Vermont's section of I-93 will cost $31.5 million. Since the issuance of the VPIRG report, a legislatively appointed committee, the Transportation Advisory Board (TAB), has developed a more suitable alternative to the original I-93 plan (For additional background on I-93 and the alternative route, see last week's issue). Let's examine the reasons VPIRG views I-93 as an over-ambitious and unreasonable solution to transportation needs.

ECONOMIC ARGUMENTS

The expenditure of over $30 million for merely eleven miles of road is sufficient reason to question the validity of such spending. Over $3 million is to come from Vermont tax dollars, and there are hundreds of miles of Vermont roads more deserving of this money than I-93. With I-93's cost jumping $9 million from 1973 to 1975, one must also wonder how high the cost will be when construction begins in the early 1980's.

The alternative recommended by the TAB would cost an estimated $6 to $10 million. If the federal government pays 90% of this cost as they did for I-189 in South Burlington, Vermont stands to save at least $2 million in construction costs alone. Another $50,000 will be saved in maintenance costs per year by having to maintain a four mile interstate spur instead of an eleven mile interstate.

Proponents of I-93 claim the road will be an economic boost to the St. Johnsbury area, and this argument lacks any justification. In fact, it appears that this might not be true at all. If any economic benefits however do materialize from interstate construction, I-91 through St. Johnsbury should be more than adequate to do so. It is interesting to note that I-89 in St. Albans has had little or no effect on reducing that area's high unemployment rate. It seems quite obvious that interstate construction in Vermont is not a key factor in providing employment opportunities.

ENGINEERING ARGUMENTS

I-93 will parallel Route 18 from the New Hampshire border for seven miles. However Route 18 is rated as one of the better roads in Vermont, and Vermont has over 950 miles of roads in critical condition. Why money should be spent supplementing Route 18 with I-93 when so many other roads need improvement is a question that has no satisfactory answer to date.

In addition, the projected traffic to travel Route 18 is not great enough to warrant a four lane I-93. With minor improvements Route 18 could efficiently handle the expected traffic. To build a four lane road simply because it was designated part of the National Interstate System makes no sense; and an interstate alternative route already exists. Travelers between St. Johnsbury and Boston will be able to travel I-91 to White River Junction and then take I-89 and I-93 through New Hampshire to Boston. The loss in travel time does not warrant the millions of dollars to be spent on I-93.

WHY WORRY NOW ABOUT I-93

This January to March, the Vermont Legislature will adopt the next ten year highway plan for Vermont, and there is no reason to include I-93 in it. However, because it was in the last highway plan, some legislators will question removing I-93. VPIRG is actively trying to prevent I-93 from being included on the next plan, and additional student and community help with our effort is welcomed.

One- Sided Show

To the Editor:

The expression of ideas and feelings that are highly individual is difficult for any one person to understand. Yet the current Photography Exhibition at the Fleming Museum reflects the opinion of a single judge. I did not enter this exhibit (although I have entered many before) so I have no personal axe to grind, but I did have the opportunity to view the so-called "rejects." By far, those rejected works exhibited more of the Vermont Life than many that were put on exhibit. In fact, the repetition of composition, formating, and darkroom technique of those on display do not measure up to the creativity that many of the "rejects" possessed. I am not flatly stating that all of those exhibited were of poor quality, but certainly the entire show speaks for itself in its conformity. As I understand it, it was one person who selected the photos for exhibition and thus, as is obvious in the result, it is a one-person, one-sided, one-eye, one-theme show. Too bad – because Vermont has some really beautiful sights which were carried off and never hung, not to mention a lot of viewers who were short-changed or talented photographers who go unnoticed.

Richard Crimmins

Exorbitant Fine

To the Editor:

As a full-time student living off-campus, it was necessary to decide whether or not to register my car this year. I decided against it for what I believe were practical reasons. I seldom drive my car to campus and when I do, it is parked at a friend's house nearby. I became uncomfortably ill one day and drove to the new infirmary. When I returned to the car, I discovered a $25 parking ticket. I had mistakenly parked in a restricted area. Restricted to whom? University students, of course. I maintain the "privilege" of being a registered student by an enormous out-of-state tuition, pay a health fee for use of the infirmary, yet receive what I consider an exorbitant fine for not having a registered car.

I'll concede that I should have registered my car for use on-campus when necessary. And I will do so for future visits to our on-campus infirmary (about as on-campus as Big Den's). But I am annoyed and disgusted at the $25 fine. I attempted to speak to our security police without success; $25 is a very stiff fine for a University student to pay for a parking spot without a registration.

A leech can only suck so much blood before it gets its fill and falls off its victim. It seems to me that the systems of this University never get their fill and their nonchalance in affixing fines and bills really pisses me off.

Lisa Massaro '77

Inmate Wants Correspondence

To the Editor:

I am an inmate at Attica Prison and would like to correspond with somebody as life here at Attica is very lonely..Would you kindly place the following ad in your paper for me:

Inmate at Attica Prison would like to correspond with a college-age girl. I'm 24, have black hair, brown eyes, and am very lonely. Please write Peter Neenos 75C275, Box 149, Attica, N.Y. 14011.

Once again I would appreciate this very much.

Thank you,
Peter Neenos 75C275
Box 149
Attica, N.Y. 14011

A Job Well Done

To the Editor:

B-PAC would like to make a change from its normal, critical letter to the Editor in favor of a thank you to a hard working group.

We would like to compliment and thank the Converse Renovation Committee for a job well done in restoring UVM's oldest and most gothic residence hall.

At a time when we are all too critical of our surroundings, B-PAC feels it is time to recognize a job well done.

Sincerely,
Richard King
Chairman

To The Keeper Of The Den

To the Editor:

After having accepted the fact that I had to arise very early on a moderately dismal Monday morning to spend nine hours on campus, I decided to saunter over to the Den, knowing that I would be forced to spend some hard earned money and treat myself to two meals during the course of the day.

After standing for about five minutes (there was only one person in front of me who had not ordered yet) the fellow behind the counter acknowledged my existance with an extended forefinger and a perfectly well pronounced, "Yeah?" "Two eggs over easy, bacon and toast, please," was my reply. I watched my two beautiful eggs born onto a glistening black and greasy grill, with bacon out to dry on an inclined egg carton. The fellow then scuffed back toward me, dropped two slices of soft, bleached white bread, slouched back to the grill and threw out two regals with cream cheese; all taking about seven minutes more. I then witnessed the whole procedure once again for the guy beside me, who at 7:55 a.m., was leading a pack of six hungry students.

After tossing out two orders of beautifully ground and oiled breakfast specials, the cook once again approached me, stopped at the toaster and popped up two wonderfully blackened slices of bleached white bread. He then very artistically grabbed his putty knife and mauled them with just enough butter to grease my middle finger. The next step was to chop both slices in two, stroll back to the grill, grab two mirror like 'yoks and whites', two strips of dried flesh and beautifully packaged all on a red, white and blue bicentennial paper china. I must have thought that I was in the hockey nets because I very coolly stuffed him as he attempted to slide the whole masterpiece past the edge of the counter and onto the floor.

"Thank you," I politely remarked. It was now about 8:06 but the first period of play had been very entertaining!

Returning to the Den at 9:35, I was surprised to find only two people in front of me. Glancing around, I found no sandwiches, a few well picked over remaining doughnuts, and one small, and looking guy with black hair and a mustache who seemed to hate his job dearly. When I asked for two hotdogs he bluntly replied that there were none. However, once he looked around a bit, he did indeed find two lying in some residence stool bin-one of which had either a chopped or bitten off end-and served them to me without warning. Then after ordering french fries about three minutes later (so I'd be sure that they would come off with the hotdogs) he reluctantly "did them up" for me. When I finally got hotdogs and fries together all were cold because he had allowed the fries to chill in the well fly-speckled atmosphere much longer than necessary. Not only that, but I had to ask for the fries twice after he had handed me the dogs (they were cooked and ready to go). At any rate, this only took twenty minutes, the only line being the one he had to professionally engineered due to his most insincere efforts of coordination, cooperation, and treating the public like any well-meaning individual in a service oriented business would expect to.

Now really sir, being a business major myself and having worked in a few fine and not so fine restaurants, I can appreciate the fact that you do have your share of problems, i.e. food loss, theft, soaring prices, long lines, profit margins and having to cope with over-cynical, fun loving, and spoiled college kids. However, I fail to understand how you can continue to employ such an individual as you have occupying space behind the counter right now. He is the slowest, most inept, disorganized, food dopping robot that I have ever seen.

Yet it is you people who complain about losses and making just enough money to get by. I do not know what that guy gets paid but he is not worth a penny of it. It is him who forms the lines, that get people mad, that make them steal and eat without paying. With just an average, run-of-the-mill cook behind there, who would take a couple of orders at a time (there is room for them on the grill and he could certainly be doing other things while stuff is cooking) you would cut that line down to nothing, even during rush hours. Your food loss due to bored, waiting people would be cut drastically - sure there will always be those who steal regardless, but there are ways of helping the situation and of doing a better job.

As off-campus students who have no other place of convenience to eat, we do not think it is too much to ask for you to clean up the place, fix tables that spill drinks all over our papers, serve us decent food with a little less grease, and get somebody who really wants to do the job. It will be a tremendous pleasure to all concerned.

I thank you kindly and appreciate your time and effort.

Gary R. Schwenkmeckl (Skunk)

To Our Readers,

The Vermont Cynic has initiated several changes this semester. You have probably noticed the de-emphasis of the news on the front page in favor of photo collages, features, artistic ventures, etc. We are also providing a greater variety of articles to satisfy a larger portion of the UVM readership.

But to turn out a high quality paper, we need your assistance. Perhaps you have a talent we can use, or a skill you want some help developing. We need photographers, writers, cartoonists, poets, lay-out help, artists etc. We will gladly assist you in your writing skills and help you develop a journalistic style.

Your experience on the Cynic staff will not be wasted. The skills you learn here will prove to be an asset when applying for a job. Many persons who have worked for the Cynic in the past are now involved in the field of Journalism. One former editor is currently a writer for the Times-Argus and the Rutland Herald. The editor for the Windsor Chronicle was a Cynic editor two years ago. Last year's assistant editor is now working in Alaska as a promotional writer. A former lay-out person is now doing full time lay-out for the Burlington Previewer. Often, these people were unable to find a job pertaining to their major, but were able to gain employment on the basis of their experience on the Cynic staff.

If you have an idea which you would like to see reviewed in the Cynic, come down and see us. We're in Billings Center opposite the Den. You're welcome to come in, look around and talk to us. We hope to see you there.

Sincerely,
The Cynic Staff

P.S. We must re-emphasize that our deadline for articles is Monday at noon. If we accept too many articles later than our deadline, it puts unreasonable pressure on the staff to put out the paper. So to insure that your article gets in, please submit it on time. Thank-you.

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in -- we are downstairs at Billings Center -- or call 656-4911.

NEWS: Margo Howland, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Peter Duquette, Steve Wells, Scott Curtis, Charles Rounton.
FEATURE: Appleton King, Paul Cain, Randy Gelberman a Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Mary Partridge
ARTS: Elaine Boyle, Cathy Brown, Martha Hess, Tricia Jeha, Barbara MacFarlane, Jane Santana, Kaye Tatro.
COLUMNISTS: Kos Cartoons – Matthew Miller
"Pinf" – Kenny Mirsane
Markowitz, Peter Cobb, Gary Chilson, Larry Selden.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Sarah Clay, John Lunde, Barb Parshis, Linda Mansfield.
SPORTS: Debi Bloom, Rita Bruce, Randy Briggs, Pat Taves, Chris Brown, Scott Curtis.
ADVERTISING: Steve Brown Susan Rau Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenik.
"Life with Perkenstef" – Jamie Pond

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 656-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

Looking For

by Gregory Katz

I could hear it down the street. Whispers. Laughs. Taunts. "Katz has lost lunch." "He can't make the plays anymore are gone." "Katz has a gut from here t crazy." "Katz beats his dog every night." beats his meat too." "Katz has slipped. "Katz was okay in high school, but Chri He's a walking corpse!"

I would slink along. Roll with it. But I heard. And there was nothing I cou

I went into Woolworth's, hungry, candies. The fuckin' Hershey bars, the paperbacks. Nothing good. I picked a p sat down at the lunch counter. I tried t my knee up on my other leg. Spread the The waitress came, a dead, saggy old wo balls – heavy, gray, and sinking.

"May I help you, sir?" She stood t over her pad. The simpering bitch, I sho me like this.

"Yes. I'll have a Burger Deluxe, p shake with a banana in it."

"I'm sorry sir, we don't have any ba

"Yes. Well, okay, skip the banana."

While they were cooking my slop place was crowded with people eating lu all had jobs. All had somewhere to go. it. Eating tuna salad plates, or grille waitress doubling as cashier at the exit And if I timed it right, it looked like I the paperback section and back out on

I concentrated on the paper, try Or who people said I was. I coul anymore. The paper was fine. Some City. Rockefeller is in Alabama kissi Freddy Lynn has 84 homers. My hor financial planning. That was a laugh finances of being broke? What did y waited for a change, for a break. Th plate. I looked down. The burger wa was cold from the freezer. There wa fries in one corner, and some gloopy cole slaw. And two pickle slices. I pu slaw stuff in the bun with the bu ketchup. Anything to cover up th meat. I took a big bite. It went do And finally I tried the shake. It wa like some cow had problems. Chr milkshake was ice cream, syrup, an devised such fantastic machin mucouslike crap, I'll never know. ketchup spurted out on my shirt. Stephanie would take me to any Chicken Cacciatore, Lobster. Steak Katzy. And Ericksen. Shit, he'd bri restaurant and give it to me. And I wanted it. Where were they now? rock-bottom by myself? Ste photographer in Connecticut, livi Ericksen's in jail finally, caught by in Iowa with a truckful of dope an

I was thinking about old Erik of the shake. I was done. I looked There now. The waitress was ta businessmen. She rang it up. No tea and muffins. When it was run someone some more coffee. Now?

I got up slowly, smoothly, fo mouth, and walked by the empty paperbacks. Smooth. I thumbed then walked out into the sun Quickly I started up Church Stree

I hated doing it when I had my pocket, bumming meals was pockets were empty, it was seric I wondered what I had really floating around my gut, for fre Church, looking for somethin windows. I looked at the girls w and pasty. So out-of-it. Having with their girlfriends. Buying s for a beer. And mentally calcula "It isn't my fault," I thought to people here. I am not responsibl walking. What a dull town Burl shouting in the streets. No po sausages and onions frying in pigeons and gulls, and the go What good did Lake Champlain lake was beautiful to look at, t it was ringed off. The Navy u used that shore. The electric down there. There was no plac in the water. The whole big subdivided. So I got sick of ev

I kept walking, killing tim just another lie. I lived with a girl, a woman put here to ma in together, things began det pregnant. Then she had strep disease. Then she got fevers ev Then it turned out she wasn't was an innocent bystander re smooth. I was looking for a some poor dame into accepti pleasure of it. God knows I c

Looking For Louise On A Cold Windy Day

by Gregory Katz

I could hear it down the street. Snickering in bars. Whispers. Laughs. Taunts. "Katz has lost it." "Katz is out to lunch." "He can't make the plays anymore. He's slow. His eyes are gone." "Katz has a gut from here to Tennessee." "He's crazy." "Katz beats his dog every night." "Yeah, and probably beats his meat too." "Katz has slipped; he's a dead weight." "Katz was okay in high school, but Christ! Look at him now. He's a walking corpse!"

I would slink along. Roll with it. Pretend I didn't hear. But I heard. And there was nothing I could do.

I went into Woolworth's, hungry, tired. Looked at the candies. The fuckin' Hershey bars, the M&M's. Then at the paperbacks. Nothing good. I picked a paper off the rack and sat down at the lunch counter. I tried to get comfortable. Put my knee up on my other leg. Spread the News in front of me. The waitress came, a dead, saggy old woman, eyes like matzoh balls – heavy, gray, and sinking.

"May I help you, sir?" She stood there, her pencil poised over her pad. The simpering bitch, I should kill her for treating me like this.

"Yes. I'll have a Burger Deluxe, please. And a chocolate shake with a banana in it."

"I'm sorry sir, we don't have any bananas."

"Yes. Well, okay, skip the banana."

While they were cooking my slop, I looked around. The place was crowded with people eating lunch. They are all busy, all had jobs. All had somewhere to go. They were busy fitting it. Eating tuna salad plates, or grilled cheese. There was a waitress doubling as cashier at the exit to the rest of the store. And if I timed it right, it looked like I could just slink out into the paperback section and back out on the street. Okay.

I concentrated on the paper, trying to forget who I was. Or who people said I was. I couldn't tell the difference anymore. The paper was fine. Someone got killed in Jersey City. Rockefeller is in Alabama kissing George Wallace's ass. Freddy Lynn has 84 homers. My horoscope suggested careful financial planning. That was a laugh. How could I plan the finances of being broke? What did you plan? You just kinda waited for a change, for a break. The waitress came with my plate. I looked down. The burger was stuck in a little roll that was cold from the freezer. There was a pile of skinny french fries in one corner, and some gloopy stuff that was probably cole slaw. And two pickle slices. I put the pickles and the cole slaw stuff in the bun with the burger and smeared on the ketchup. Anything to cover up the cardboard taste of the meat. I took a big bite. It went down easy. Then some fries. And finally I tried the shake. It was thick and aerated. Tasted like some cow had problems. Christ. All you needed for a milkshake was ice cream, syrup, and milk. How these fuckers devised such fantastic machines that turned out such mucousiike crap, I'll never know. I had another bite. Some ketchup spurted out on my shirt. And to think two years ago Stephanie would take me to any joint in town and feed me. Chicken Cacciatore, Lobster, Steak. Nothing was too good for Katzy. And Ericksen. Shit, he'd bring me shish-kebob from the restaurant and give it to me. And lend me his Benz whenever I wanted it. Where were they now? Why did I always sink to rock-bottom by myself? Stephie's living with some photographer in Connecticut, living high off the hog. And Ericksen's in jail finally, caught by the Feds. His spirit snapped in Iowa with a truckful of dope and no place to run.

I was thinking about old Erik when I gulped down the last of the shake. I was done. I looked up now, planning my move. There now. The waitress was taking some dough from two businessmen. She rang it up. Now some woman paid for her tea and muffins. When it was rung up, the waitress had to get someone some more coffee. Now!

I got up slowly, smoothly, folded up my paper, wiped my mouth, and walked by the empty cashier's desk. Out into the paperbacks. Smooth. I thumbed through a few love stories and then walked out into the sunshine without looking back. Quickly I started up Church Street. I was in the clear!

I hated doing it when I had to; when I had five bucks in my pocket, bumming meals was kind of a game. But when my pockets were empty, it was serious. And walking up the street I wondered what I had really gained. A lot of cardboard floating around my gut, for free. Big deal. I kept walking up Church, looking for something to do. I looked in store windows. I looked at the girls walking by. They were all so sad and pasty. So out-of-it. Having fun. Smiling. Laughing. Joking with their girlfriends. Buying sweaters and records. Stopping for a beer. And mentally calculating their checkbook balances. "It isn't my fault," I thought to myself. "I didn't put all these people here. I am not responsible." I felt better for it and kept walking. What a dull town Burlington is. No soul. No maniacs shouting in the streets. No poetic subway cars. No burning sausages and onions frying in grease. Just stores and people, pigeons and gulls, and the goddamn breeze from the lake. What good did Lake Champlain ever do anybody? The whole lake was beautiful to look at, but any time you got close to it, it was ringed off. The Navy used this shore. The oil tankers used that shore. The electric company had a big "facility" down there. There was no place to just walk and dip your toes in the water. The whole big beautiful lake was owned and subdivided. So I got sick of even acknowledging it was there.

I kept walking, killing time. I could go home, but that was just another lie. I lived with a girl. Ingrid. She was just another girl, a woman put here to make things tough. When we moved in together, things began deteriorating rapidly. First she was pregnant. Then she had strep throat. Then she had a kidney disease. Then she got fevers every day, and lay in bed delirious. Then it turned out she wasn't pregnant but had the clap. Me, I was an innocent bystander really, but things were not exactly smooth. I was looking for a new home. Which meant conning some poor dame into accepting me at face value for the pure pleasure of it. God knows I couldn't pay any rent.

Mike came at me down the street. A big Irishman, blood hair and a big smile. He's been living with the same girl for two years now, and he was looking for some male companionship.

"Hey, Katzy, come on, I'll buy you a brew."

"Sure, Mike, but I'll tell you out front. I'm broke and feel like shit. I ain't real good company today."

"That's cool man. We'll just sit somewhere and sniff the air."

In the bar Mike ordered a pitcher of beer with two fillips. The place was full of sawdust. I think that was what they meant by atmosphere here in Vermont. Shit, the bright lights, the Benz, the filet mignon. Well, what's gone is gone. Mike saw me staring into space.

"Drink up Greg, you'll feel better."

I put the liquid to my lips, and let it go down. Mike was right, it went down good and took the edge off that cole slaw in my gut. I took some good gulps. I was looking at the wall. They had the cover of the Saturday Evening Post from 1960. A portrait of Richard Nixon and one of Jack Kennedy. Both men were staring out at me, gazing straight into my eyes. They looked so young. Now here it was 15 years later...

I refilled my mug. I still couldn't talk to Mike. I really didn't like him a whole lot. He was too slick. He wanted to buy a movie theatre. I couldn't understand such a goal. But he was okay. Finally I told him it was all over.

"What's all over?"

"Me, this, this place, this life, this horseshit. Feeling sick all the time. Listening to the crap people call me. Watching everything disintegrate and die right in front of me."

"Hey man, you been staying up late with your Tolstoy? Shit, Greg, get loose, fly up there with me. Do something man, don't walk around all day thinking such shit."

"But Mike, it ain't just today. I feel like this on and off all the time. Sometimes something'll happen that makes me feel okay for a while. A basketball game, a shot I make. Maybe a basehit up the middle. Or a girl. A REAL girl. But then it just comes back and washes me away."

You're on a bummer, Katzy. I never heard you talk like this."

Then he started in with his standard rap. The same things he always said. The same viewpoint. I won't bore you with it. You can just pretend you were there. God, people were so small sometimes, so one-sided. I could hemorrhage here at this table, and Mike would be here tomorrow saying the same damn things.

I got up and left. Mike wouldn't notice for a few minutes anyway. Back on the street. My stomach felt good and big. I decided to visit Jeddyboy. He lived down the road from the bar, and it was easier than going home.

I walked into Jeddyboy's apartment. It was a holy mess; socks and paintings and books and records were strewn all around. The floor was oily from the drippings of his paints. I looked around. Brenda was sitting at the table absorbed in something. Jeddy looked out from behind a canvas.

"Hi Greg, watcha doin? When did you get here? Oh, you just walked in. Well now, how's the team? I sent out cosmic vibrations for you to hit good. We took your Bob Dylan records. Brenda's from Yugoslavia and never heard him before. It's part of her education."

"Hi Jeddyboy. I'm a pile of shit. We got rained out this whole weekend, and I can't understand it cause it's been sunny both days. The fields are all wet."

"Yeah, well do you want some tea?" He got up and

(continued on page nine)

Thought And Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

Funny how some things never change. The cry of "C'mon baby! No batter! No batter! Put it over! Swing!" still echoes down city streets. Kids still play stickball, halfball, three flies out, and any other kind of game imaginable. Rusty playground bubblers still gurgle forth water to be drunk, swished around and spit out. Tens of thousands of Earl Momoes and John Havliacks practice behind the back passes on tan courts. Asses still get sticky in the hot summer sun.

Times change though. The Gipper is gone. The Galloping Ghost has become one. The Babe won't hit another homer for Johnny Sylvester. Nuns don't pray for Notre Dame anymore. The Mick is touching forty and Willie Mays advertises for Brute. It is an era of pretty faces, pretty uniforms, pretty artificial turfs, and "Oops don't touch me, that may hurt." Sports has become a business, a multi-million dollar gimmick. It entertains such affairs as patty-cake bouts in Manila, wars between the sexes, and six million dollar contracts. It used to have an aura of sacredness, an oath of brotherhood where justice reigns supreme and bigotry has no place, but that idealism went out with Munich. Sports, after all, is no better than the people who play and observe it or the governments who watch over it.

But the game is different. It glides. It moves. It turns into a hundred different variations and goes on for centuries. People play whatever and feel better. Darkened faces beam. Cities keep cool. Towns laugh. For a brief interlude, taxes, inflation, the price of meats and the boss's harangues are forgotten. You smell, sweat, run, shuffle, jump obstacles, get covered with mud, smack, scream, and shout, because sometimes you lie, too. The odds are the thing. You play with them and against them. Occasionally you succeed in winning, and when you do, you never forget it.

Tom Sweeney, an author, once wrote, "Life is where you find it, on a streetcorner, on a hill in Da Nang, or in the toy world of sports." The game is a curious mixture of courage, determination, and joy. Life is a large slice of this, as is sports. Some have said that sports is a stage for overweight spectators to play their fantasies upon. Perhaps others have argued that it is absurd for grown individuals to hit and chase balls. This may be true except for the fact that some human beings hold far baser occupations. Still more have stated that sports is the last terrain in a technological society where virtues can be upheld. Pregnant women often show more courage than athletes.

Perhaps what is important is that every once in a while a group of aged veterans and green rookies get together for a season and somewhere inexplicably during it, forget themselves and the dollar bill for a brief time. They begin to hustle and play the game just like the kids on the street and the rest of us mortals, only better. When they do this, they are beautiful to watch and we smile. When we do this, we never grow dry and stale, no matter how old.

D N 'G

We are a truly miserable nation. Even more disgusting is the example we set for all the people of the world. The Third World countries see our extravagance and desire the same materialistic goals. I can't fault them for that, can you? They are worse than children deprived of a visible candy bar.

Yet, like children, they don't understand why they can't have the lollipop we continue to suck upon. The United Nations' Conferences of resource depletion, oceanic pollution, overpopulation, and the World Food Bank have all failed miserably despite the United States' firm resolution to solve these problems. Our "firm resolution" is interpreted by the Third World as being Imperialistic Determination to keep them at poverty levels simply as suppliers and consumers of our products.

Until we as a nation reduce our Materialism and its concomitant pollution, we can never expect the Third World to think intelligently about the problems that face the earth. We can't expect them to suffer our indulgence to save the world when we make no effort ourselves.

All revolutions in the past have merely put a curve in the road to Materialistic Security. A curve around the obstruction the masses of men construct to slow down the top, elitist class long enough to pass out chunks of Materialistic Security. For we all want Security, and Material Security is the only form of it we know and understand. So the masses occasionally arise in Righteous Indignation and demand a larger share of the cake. We have always succeeded in the past and the recent Communist Revolutions are simply a continuation.

Yet the Communists are as misguided as the masses of men generally. The too believe Materialism equals Security.

The Theme Once Again

The Communist system is obviously more just than is the Capitalist system since the Communist strives toward Material Security for all men rather than just for the few. Yet I personally would not wish to advocate Communism except as perhaps a bridge to World Government. The masses must desire something in order to revolt, and Communism offers them what they most desire. Yet the World Government I foresee, should we be so fortunate to live long enough, is based on Democracy and Communism. The two are not really dissimilar in the theory of Government by the People and for the People.

Yet Communism, with its present dictatorial form of Government, has many advantages as a bridge to World Government. It offers all men Material Security, and as a dictatorship, is efficiently directed toward World Domination. The free countries of the West (so called by their government, though not by their revolutionaries) are inefficiently directed toward World Domination through the money-grubbing of our major Industrialists. It's called Commerce and it benefits only the few who are already rich enough to play International Politics. The masses of men in the free countries only benefit in an indirect way and are forced to desire objects (artifacts of a Materialistic Society) that do not contribute even indirectly toward Security – above and beyond two cars, a dishwasher, and a television set.

Material Security is, in fact, the only form of security easily disseminated throughout the population of men by a Government. It should always be remembered that Security is protection from hunger and cold, disease, and, when possible, death. Food, shelter, clothing, and fuel constitute the material aspects of the Security from hunger and cold. Medical assistance and the expanding study of Biological systems fill the last category.

Communism supplies these securities. Capitalism makes them available, but not to everyone.

The fully indoctrinated Capitalist is one who manages to keep his and his family's health and comfort on an acceptable level. The Middle Class. The poor and starving are of no concern to him. They are obviously shiftless and lazy, even those unfortunate enough to have been born somewhere other than in the United States. Sure, you hear Mr. Middle complain about the High Cost of Living, food prices soaring, fuel prices mounting monthly, clothing and housing costing so much that

(continued on page nine)

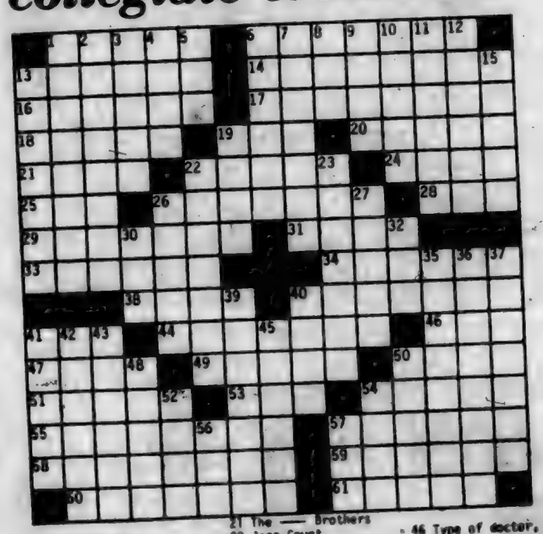
Women's Caucus

Although the cooler weather has arrived, along with the first waves of hourlys, parent and alumni weekend, and the deeper reflections on one's present and future, the semester is still young!

The Fall Program of the Women's Caucus is scheduled for Tuesday, October 21 at 3:30 p.m. in Memorial Lounge, Waterman. The program: Female Sexuality: Being Feminine in 1976. In past years the annual business/election/planning meeting has been held at the conclusion of the Fall Program. However, this year we feel the need for a general reorganization meeting to pull together and centralize the many women's groups and perspective activities on campus. We lose much of our energy and influence when our efforts are fragmented. We need to increase our awareness of ourselves, our work, our potential. We anticipate a women's organization which more accurately and comprehensively represents the ideas, needs, interests, and already active programs of campus/community women. If you are currently involved in a women's project (especially on campus, i.e. in the dorms), drop us a card so we can all have a clearer picture of what is being done, and what needs to be done. Moral support and financial support are available. Write through campus mail to: The Women's Organization, SA Office, Billings.

The time and place of the Reorganization Meeting will be announced at the Fall Program. We are expanding, this is an invitation and opportunity for all of us, for YOU.

collegiate crossword



ACROSS

1 Tom and ——
6 Requests made to God
13 Have another shou of hands
14 Press into thin layers
16 Flowers
17 Excessive self-conceit
18 Yields
19 Corpulent
20 "It won't cost you ——"
21 The —— Brothers
22 Jazz Count
24 ——a-tete
25 —— Tin Tin
26 Temple of —— at Ephesus
28 Soviet region
29 Repeated musical parts (2 wds.)
31 Vigor
33 City in Texas
34 Make evident
38 Children
40 Seesaws
41 Psychedelic drug
44 Adds spices
46 Type of doctor, for short
47 Nautical cry
49 Crosspieces
50 Lillian or Dorothy
51 Couple in marriage
53 Bill and ——
54 La —— Vita
55 —— Cooke's "America"
57 Golfer Johnny ——
58 W. —— Maugham
59 Eve, and family
60 Litterbugs
61 Leavening agent in baking

DOWN

1 Lamentation
2 Courtroom term
3 Wars of the ——
4 U.S. highways (abbr.)
5 "—— We Have No Bananas"
6 "We aim to ——"
7 Max Morath's forte
8 I love: Lat.
9 Persian dumigod
10 Make into law
11 Rajah's wives
12 Restricts
13 Mr. Montalban
15 Lotus-——
19 Stride pianist Waller
22 Wider
23 Soprano Farrell, et al.
26 Orbit point
27 Rescues
30 Query
32 Insect egg
35 Chamberlain and Brand
36 Emblem of Moslem power
37 Miss Williams, et al.
39 More impudent
40 Ham on rye ——
41 Buddhist priests
42 Israeli greeting
43 Serve a sentence (2 wds.)
45 Small drinks of liquor
48 Affirmatives
50 Mrs. Meir
52 Orchestra sections (abbr.)
54 Fateful
56 Ibsen character
57 Actress Edna —— Oliver

LAST WEEK'S ANSWER

M	O	L	A	R		R	I	N	D		S	E	A	T
A	N	A	M	E		E	N	T	O		P	A	V	E
T	I	M	E	A	N	D	T	H	E	R	I	V	E	R
S	T	A	N	D	I	S	M		R	A	T	E	R	S
			P	E	R		J	E	S	S	E
S	T	A	R	E		A	N	T	M	A
A	R	I	E	L		I	C	E		D	A	T	E
T	I	M	E	D	M	E	C	H	A	N	I	S	M	S
F	G	A	D		T	I	L	K		T	E	A	S	E	T
			A	I	D		O	F		E	L	E	N	A
S	A	V	E	D		A	F	A	R
A	R	E	N	A	S		T	R	E	A	T	I	E	S
F	O	R	T	H	E	T	I	M	E	B	E	I	N	G
F	S	S	E		T	I	M	E		F	I	N	O	T
S	E	F	R		S	E	E	D		L	E	O	N	S

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Lysistrata Has Arrived

Darrie Johnson and David Aune in Lysistrata — Photo by Dan Belgiole

Your chance to see this salacious celebration of life is finally come.

Lysistrata opens today, the 16th, at the Royall Tyler Theatre, and will run through Sunday, the 19th. Tickets are available at the Box Office from 10:00 to 4:30 every day. The number to call for information and reservations is 656-2094.

Hard Times Depression

by Dawn McGinnis

Hard Times is another Charles Bronson movie. He's the rage in Europe and here in America he is on the fringes of superstar status. He's almost fifty, yet when he takes off his shirt, he-thrills females from 15–100. And the males, well when he whomps somebody, they go crazy.

Hard Times is a Depression-style combination of Billy Jack with a little bit of Walking Tall thrown in for good measure. Bronson is a character named Chaney, a loner in every sense of the word. No one knows him, where he's from, or the good or evil he's capable of. Chaney lands in a town in the mid-30's with no money and no past. He joins up with Speed (James Coburn) and the two of them form a partnership. Chaney, it seems, is a good fighter. He is able to beat anyone Speed can put him against. They move on to New Orleans. He fights and wins and makes money. He has a relationship with a woman, bails Speed out of trouble, gives away half his money, and hops a train out of town telling his friends he's heading North.

That's the plot, give or take a few details. The main body of the film is showing the fights in which Chaney is involved. They are violent, excessively long, and pointless. One good fight scene could have sufficed for the whole movie, yet these fights are repeated over and over again. As Chaney's reputation as a fighter increases, the men he is pitted against are better and better, and each fight becomes more brutal.

Many of the people in this film are stereotypes. Ch a loner, therefore he neve anything more than he has and he never rationalizes his actions. His relationship with Lucy (Jill Ireland) allows him to, as a loner, be as inconsiderate as he wants. Every time she hassles him, he just leaves, without saying a word. Lucy is a stereotyped woman. When she can't have the man she wants, she takes what she can get — she becomes a "kept woman." Speed is the stereotype of the big-mouthed promoter who uses everybody for his own purposes.

Probably the only person in the film who isn't a stereotype is Poe (Strother Martin) who is a friend of Speed's. He is a soft spoken, fairly intelligent man who in his own words is "a student of comparative religions." He is the direct opposite of big-mouthed Speed. He and Chaney also are friends, and it seems as if Poe is saying some of the things Chaney can't say (because he is a loner).

Hard Times is just like so many other films of this type, it's hard to find anything new to say about it. If you like violence, it's great. If you like physically ugly people, you'll love it. No one in the film could be considered "good-looking," and many are downright grotesque, like Jim Henry, the bald-headed street fighter. If you like Charles Bronson when he's all action and no talk, then by all means don't miss Hard Times.

DBG

by Hank Meyer

Yes, fans, due to popular demand, the Davis Brothers Garage Band will return to the confines of groovie UV for a dance and keg blast on Friday, October 24 from 9 to 1 p.m. The Davis Brothers, fresh off a brilliant summer season in the Rockies of Colorado, are anxious to return to the best boogie artists around and show off their new sets. For those who saw them before, their new sound includes a medley of Elton John, Stevie Wonder's newest hits and the best of Emerson, Lake and Palmer. These new hits and many more make the Davis Brothers the best sound around.

The Davis Brothers are not new to UVM. Twice last year, they played to standing-room-only crowds in Simpson Hall and left those in attendance in awe of their great musical talent and showmanship. They enjoyed their dates here very much and are very anxious to return here to meet old friends and make new ones.

So remember, the date October 24, Friday night, from 9 to-1 in Simpson's dining hall. W.D.W. will sponsor the party to top all parties — the Davis Brothers and 20 kegs. Tickets will be sold at selected Dining Halls during the evening meal, at the W.D.W. main desk every night starting on October 13 and at Billings from 1–4 on October 20–24. No tickets will be sold at the door — so buy your tickets early and avoid the rush. All this — the best band, the best party, the best time — be there! For any questions or any information, call Hank Meyer, room 204 Wilks, x3443.

Jesse Colin Young

Jesse Colin Young makes a triumphant return to Burlington Memorial Auditorium on Thursday, October 23, at 8 p.m. Appearing with Jesse will be Jerry Corbett and Janis Ian.

JCY gained national attention as the leader of the Youngbloods during the late 1960's. After making three very well-received albums, the group disbanded. Get Together is probably the Youngblood's best known and greatest commercial success. Get Together became an anthem to the Young Generation torn with unrest during those unfortunate, Viet Nam War years.

JCY's music has not stagnated; it is always vibrant and appealing, from the kick-ass, fun-filled rock & roll of "Euphoria" and "Stagger Lee," to the funk of "Willie and the Hand Jive," to the tender "Song for Julia."

JCY's band has undergone some changes since his last appearance here. There is a horn section now, consisting of Pat O'Hare on the trombone and Bob Ferreinze on tenor sax, soprano sax, and the flute. The remainder of the band consists of JCY's wife, Suzi, on back-up vocals, Kelly Brian on bass, Jeff Myers on drums, and keyboard by Scott Lawrence.

Janis Ian is currently leading the music charts with her hit "Seventeen." Her performance may prove to be very interesting and surely a great bonus. Add to that Jerry Corbett, who describes his music as hard-driving, funk-filled power and all-out fun music, and you will find the price of admission well worth the show.

Dance Photos

by Jose Santana

The Royall Tyler Theater once again serves as a locus for artistic expression.

Photographs by Marbeth are on display in the Craftsbury room of the Royall Tyler Theater. She is the company photographer for the Dance Theater of Harlem.

Grace, vibrancy, and individuality flow from every photograph. Dance Theater of Harlem is blessed with a brilliant artist in Marbeth. In each photograph, she combines various images to convey the naturalness and spontaneity of a well-choreographed performance. The exhibit will run through October 22. Dance Theater of Harlem is the first black classical ballet company in the world.

The Typists and the Tiger

Murray Schisgal's award winning Broadway comedies The Typists and the Tiger will be presented in Burlington's City Hall Auditorium on October 23 and the production will run until October 27. Tickets are available now at the City Hall Box Office.

The plays, which were first produced in New York during February 1963, were the first major successes that Schisgal had, whose most popular play is Luv. The plays have both been filmed: The Typists with Anne Jackson and her husband Eli Wallach for television and The Tiger (as The Tiger Makes Out) again with Jackson and Wallach. While on Broadway, the plays won the coveted Vernon Rice Award and also the Outer Circle Critics Award.

Directing the play for the City Company is Betty Smith, who is a graduate of UVM. Smith has appeared at the Champlain Shakespeare Festival playing such roles as Cordelia in King Lear, Gertrude in Hamlet, Viola in Twelfth Night, and Cressida in Troilus and Cressida. She is a member of the singing group Crossroads and has sung in the Burlington area as well as New York City.

Playing the part of Sylvia/Gloria is Elizabeth Bernstein whose most recent role was Eleanor in the highly successful UVM Alumni production of The Lion in Winter. Among Bernstein's many credits is a touring production of The Diary of Anne Frank which starred Liza Minnelli.

Paul/Ben will be played by Budd Whitebook who will be remembered for his performances as Simon Gascoyne in the UVM production of Tom Stoppard's The Real Inspector Hound, and as Geoffrey in The Lion in Winter.

The City Company is a group of local residents dedicated to performing high quality theatre in the Burlington area. The Company chose the Auditorium at City Hall as the site for this first production because it is located in the heart of the Burlington business district. In the future the Company will be presenting a series of plays and theatrical events in Burlington as part of its efforts to make theatre an important part of the cultural life of downtown Burlington.

To obtain tickets, call the Box Office at 863-3773 and reserve your seats. All tickets are $3.00 and are reserved seats. If you reserve, please be sure to pick the tickets up at least one half hour before curtain on the night of performance. For those who want to buy at the Box Office, it is located on the main floor just outside the Auditorium in the City Hall.

Opening night of The Typists and the Tiger will be a benefit for the International Fund for Animal Welfare, an organization trying to stop the senseless slaughter of the baby seals all over the world.

Remember: October 23 through 27 at 8:00 p.m. The Typists and the Tiger at Burlington's City Hall Auditorium.

Chuck's Team Complete

Casting is completed for the November production of You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown, in the Billings Center Round Room. The play, a musical version adapted by Clark Gesner from Charles Shultz's comic strip, has bright songs and witty dialogue that together blend a solid evening of entertainment. The production is sponsored by the Billings Center Governing Board. The cast includes Kevin Meconi as C.B., Sari Bodi as Lucy and Peter Delorenzo as Snoopy. Jon Bourne, Steven Freeman, and Maria Papaioanou fill out the six member cast in the roles of Linus, Schroeder and Patty. The production opens in the Round Room Nov. 6 and will run until Nov. 9. The seating capacity is limited so it is advised to get tickets early. Tickets on sale starting Oct. 27 in Billings.

College Reading And Drinking

(CPS) - College newspapers are the most widely-read medium of college students, according to a survey of 500 students on 22 campuses across the country. The survey was conducted by a Chicago-based advertising firm last spring.

The survey found that 87% of the students polled had read their college newspaper within the last week.

Playboy was the favorite monthly magazine, followed by Reader's Digest and the National Lampoon.

The survey also delved into the drinking habits of college students and found that drinking is still a very popular preoccupation of students. Of the students polled, 48% had purchased beer in the last month, 29% wine and 25% some type of hard liquor. More than half - 57% - said they had purchased some type of alcoholic beverage in a bar or restaurant within the same month.

"IT'S THE KIND OF MOVIE BOGART WOULD HAVE STOOD IN LINE TO SEE. 'FAREWELL, MY LOVELY' IS TOUGH, HARD AND HYPNOTIC." Rex Reed, Syndicated Columnist

EVES AT 7 & 9:00 PM

★★★½★!

HAIL TO 'FAREWELL', IT'S LOVELY!

If you are as starved for entertainment (as I am) this is something you shouldn't miss. It's a very funny, engaging movie. It is Mitchum's movie, but that still leaves room for some fine character bits. They're all there - CHANDLER's thugs, his corrupt cops, his has-been chorus lines — ALL FOR OUR MOVIEGOING PLEASURE."

Farewell, My Lovely

ROBERT MITCHUM in A DICK RICHARDS FILM

"FAREWELL, MY LOVELY" ... DAVID SILVER ... GEORGE PAPPAS ... DAVID GRISBY

2nd HILARIOUS WEEK!

YOU BET YOUR ASS IT IS!

Noone under 18 admitted

IF YOU DONT STOP IT... YOU'LL GO BLIND!!!

TOPAR FILMS, INC. SPD RELEASE A CALLIE-LEVY FILM

7:15 & 9:10 PM

SEE THE MOST RIDICULOUS CAST OF CHARACTERS EVER ASSEMBLED. YOU'LL HOWL AT THE ANTICS OF:

"HARRY THE SEX MANIAC" • "VIRGIN BAZOOMS" "DO IT AGAIN MATILDA" • "SUPER FAST" "DEAR, GIRLS GREATEST LOVER" • "HEIDI, THE FIRST FEMALE" "THE SWANEE RIVER KID" • "SCOTTY THE SHUTTERBUG"

...AND EIGHTY MORE CRAZIES WHO WILL KEEP YOU IN STITCHES FROM BEGINNING TO END!

BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2

PHONE 862-2070 ANYTIME

SPECIAL SALE OF WEAVING YARNS

SAT., OCT 11, '75 10am - 5 pm ONE DAY ONLY

450 pounds of handweaving yarns from personal, professional stock. Wools, cottons, linens, silk, synthetics.

$.50 to $4 per pound

Also, Two spinning wheels

WEAVER'S WEB 39 BARRE ST. MONTPELIER, VERMONT 223-6889

NECTORS

Super Entertainment Friday & Saturday Brian Curry Band

SPECIALS

Mon.- Football Special $.60 Pitchers

Wed.- Sours & Collins Half Price

Thurs. - Dimie Nite 9-10

NECTORS CAFETERIA/BUFFET

BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOMS

Serving You For Over a Century

88 CHURCH ST. BURLINGTON, VT.

863-3210

One of the largest selections in Vt.

Records & Tapes

At Every Day Low Prices

Christmas in South America — $237 Round trip — 12th Dec. 1975 — 11th Jan. '76. Contact Pamella Regan, International Center, St. Michaels College, Winooski, 05404. Evenings: 899-3590; Afternoons: 655-2000, ext. 357. Deadline — 10th November '75.

Remember Baker Rock Jazz Fri and Sat the TAJMAHAL 115 College Street Burlington

PLATIGNUM ITALIC SET

Contains a fountain pen, five Italic nibs, and instruction manual all for only $5.00... At art material & pen shops, college book stores...or send check to Penalic Corp., 132 West 22 St., N.Y., N.Y. 10011 Add 50 cents for handling.

Lane Series: H

"Allegro Brillante" Lydia Ab

The internationally rec acclaimed Dance Theatre of cre Harlem, under the personal Co supervision of its founder and Sti director Arthur Mitchell, of performs in UVM's Lane Series be on Wednesday, Oct. 22, at 8 ac p.m. in Memorial Auditorium. the

This classical ballet company will offer four dances: "Allegro Brillante," with choreography by George Balenchine and music by P. Tschaikovsky; "Every Now and Then," with choreography by William Scott and music by Quincy Jones; the "Le Corsaire" pas de deux, restaged for Dance Theatre of Harlem by Karel Stook to music by Riccardo Drigo; and "Dougla," with choreography and music by Geoffrey Holder.

The company will spend three days on UVM's campus. On Monday, Oct. 20, at 4 p.m. in Southwick, Redstone campus, a workshop for advanced dancers will be given by Mr. Mitchell. Persons wishing to participate in the workshop should contact Miss Margaret Hayes of the Physical Education Dept. (Ext. 3240).

On Thursday, Oct. 21, at 4:30 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium, there will be a Concert Demonstration, at which Mr. Mitchell will discuss ballet steps and techniques, and his company will demonstrate. Also, excerpts from dances will be performed.

The Dance Theatre of Harlem was founded in 1968 by Arthur Mitchell, following the assassination of Martin Luther King. Then at the height of his career as premier danseur with the New York City Ballet, Mitchell wanted to prove to the world that "blacks can dance ballet."

The Theatre began in meagre surroundings: an empty garage in the heart of Harlem's hard-core drug area. Mitchell's former teacher, Karel Shook, gave up her position as ballet master and choreographer for the Netherland's National Ballet to join Mitchell as co-director.

During the first summer of classes the garage door wa kept open so that youn people passing by could hea the music and see the dancers practicing. In Arthur Mitchell' words: "We started with 3 kids and two professiona dancers, and by the end of th summer we had 400. They jus strayed in, sat on the floor an watched. That's how w

WE'RE TH BES ENTER IN THE N

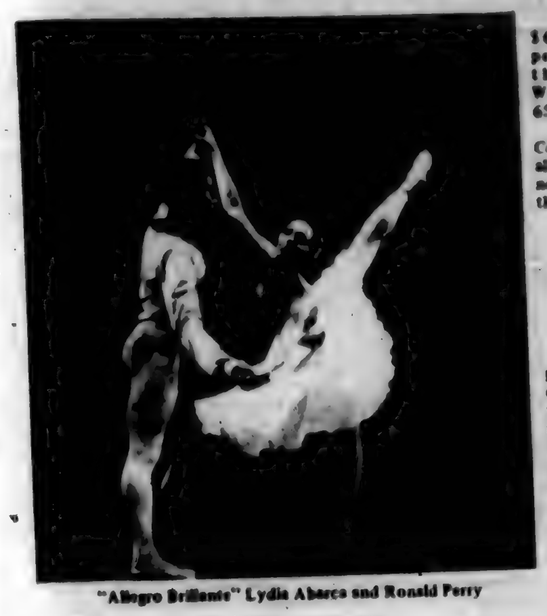
Oct. 13-19 Spoonfeather

Oct. 20-26 (Dyna

Oct. 2

THE SILVER KEG

Lane Series: Harlem Dance



"Allegro Brillante" Lydia Abarca and Ronald Perry

The internationally acclaimed Dance Theatre of Harlem, under the personal supervision of its founder and director Arthur Mitchell, performs in UVM's Lane Series on Wednesday, Oct. 22, at 8 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium.

This classical ballet company will offer four dances: "Allegro Brillante," with choreography by George Balenchine and music by P. Tschaikovsky; "Every Now and Then," with choreography by William Scott and music by Quincy Jones; the "Le Corsaive" pas de deux, restaged for Dance Theatre of Harlem by Karel Stook to music by Riccardo Drigo; and "Dougla," with choreography and music by G eoffrey Holder.

The company will spend three days on UVM's campus. On Monday, Oct. 20, at 4 p.m. in Southwick, Redstone campus, a workshop for advanced dancers will be given by Mr. Mitchell. Persons wishing to participate in the workshop should contact Miss Margaret Hayes of the Physical Education Dept. (Ext. 3240).

On Thursday, Oct. 21, at 4:30 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium, there will be a Concert Demonstration, at which Mr. Mitchell will discuss ballet steps and techniques, and his company will demonstrate. Also, excerpts from dances will be performed.

The Dance Theatre of Harlem was founded in 1968 by Arthur Mitchell, following the assassination of Martin Luther King. Then at the height of his career as premier danseur with the New York City Ballet, Mitchell wanted to prove to the world that "blacks can dance ballet."

The Theatre began in meagre surroundings: an empty garage in the heart of Harlem's hard-core drug area. Mitchell's former teacher, Karel Shook, gave up her position as ballet master and choreographer for the Netherland's National Ballet to join Mitchell as co-director.

During the first summer of classes the garage door was kept open so that young people passing by could hear the music and see the dancers practicing. In Arthur Mitchell's words: "We started with 30 kids and two professional dancers, and by the end of the summer we had 400. They just strayed in, sat on the floor and watched. That's how we recruited."

Only two years after the creation of the School, the Company made its debut. Since then the Dance Theatre of Harlem has been performing before sold-out audiences across the U.S., as well as in the Caribbean and Europe.

The Company has also been seen on nationwide television in "Rhythmetron with the Dance Theatre of Harlem and Arthur Mitchell." This one-hour prize-winning special may be seen on Vermont ETV on Monday, Oct. 20, at 9 p.m.

Today the Dance Theatre of Harlem is a source of pride for all New York. It is a 27-member company, 1200 students from this country, and a long waiting list. This year alone the troupe will visit over 30 U.S. cities and make a second European tour in 1976.

Arthur Mitchell began his classical dancing career with the New York City Ballet in 1955 as the first black dancer to become a member of a major ballet company. He received his early ballet training from Karel Shook, and under the direction of George Balanchine Mitchell rapidly became premier danseur with the New York City Ballet. During the more than 15 years he danced with the Company, his roles encompassed the entire range of its large repertoire.

The innovative Dance Theatre of Harlem has been lavishly praised by the critics. Clive Barnes of the New York Times wrote: "It is splendid how this solitary black classic dance company is steadily acquiring its own finesse and its own style."

And Michael Gavens of London's Evening Examiner wrote: "Black ballet arrived in London last night with the muscular impact of a sock on the jaw. It was, in fact, a knockout. The sinuous grace of the girls and the ebullient power of the men – shown variously in classical, abstract and ethnic forms – won them an impressive debut at Sadler's Wells Theatre."

The three-day residency of the Dance Theatre of Harlem is generously subsidized by the National Endowment on the Arts through its Arts Dance Touring Program, and made possible to the University of Vermont by the Vermont Council on the Arts.

Tickets, $3.50, $5.50, and $6.50 for the Oct. 22 performance, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. Telephone 656-3418 for reservations.

Tickets for the Oct. 21 Concert Demonstration are $1, all general admission. There is no charge for participation in the Workshop on Oct. 20.

Zoo Story

A Reader's Theatre presentation of Edward Albee's one act play The Zoo Story will be performed during the regularly scheduled "Friday at Four" on October 17, at 4 p.m. in the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Starring Tim Boisvert and Bill Kittell in the roles of Jerry and Peter, and directed by Keith Gaylord, this play was Albee's first serious attempt (with the exception of a three-act sex farce he composed when he was twelve), and through its success established him as a major American playwright. Some critics feel that The Zoo Story initiated the point and his following plays reinforced it, some of which include The Sandbox, The Death of Bessie Smith, The American Dream and Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf.

With the coming of The Zoo Story (1958), Albee was immediately recognized as a member of the Theatre of the Absurd, and through this work and those to follow, attacked with forcefulness and bitter irony through realism of dialogue and subject matter the very foundations of American optimism.

And what's "The Zoo" all about; communicating, or the inability to. It has been said the play is grossly overworked: Hardly. After all, when was the last time you saw, read or heard a Beckett, Ionesco, Genet, Pinter, Kopit, or Albee play?

ABC Losing in Ratings

by Elaine M. Boyle

Out of the 9 new shows ABC offers this season, two are hits. Once again, ABC is the biggest loser in the rating game.

Saturday 8:00 – Saturday Night Live with Howard Cosell offers some very good guests, such as Roberta Flack and Bill Cosby, as well as some unusual acts (Jimmy Connors singing?). If you can stand the utter obnoxiousness of Howard Cosell, you might find this an enjoyable show. But remember, Cosell is no Ed Sullivan.

10:00 – Matt Helm starring Tony Franciosa as the detective made famous by Dean Martin, is the victim of a bad time slot. Opposite the queen of Saturday night, Carol Burnett, this private eye, no matter how charming, hasn't got a chance.

Sunday, 7:00 – The Swiss Family Robinson is a wonderful show for children. The story of a family stranded on a desert island, it gives Irwin Allen a chance to use those special effects he's noted for. Although the episodes stray from the original story, it is still interesting enough to keep the tykes' attention for an entire hour. Martin Milner and Cameron Mitchell star.

Monday 8:00 – Barbary Coast. This show stars William Shatner and Doug McClure as two con-men turned government agents on the vast coast of the late 19th century. What might have been an enjoyable program was turned into a silly, undramatic farce. This was, of course, the result of a network order to create an amusing, non-violent show suitable for the whole viewing audience. So much for "Family Hour."

Tuesday 8:30 – Welcome Back, Kotter starring Gabe Kaplan, is one of ABC's hits. Kaplan portrays a Brooklyn school teacher who comes back to his Alma Mater to teach a group of "sweathogs" (hard to handle, tough, street kids). The comedy is quite good, but some of the students are too stereotyped.

Wednesday 8:00 – When Things Were Rotten. This is an outrageously funny, crazy comedy created out of the depths of Mel Brooks' mad mind. It's the story of Robin Hood (Dick Gauthier) and his never-ending duel with the Sheriff of Notingham (Henry Polic). With fine writing and a marvelous supporting cast, this program should be a hit. The only obstacle is the popular NBC show, Little House on the Prairie which airs at the same time.

10:00 – Starsky and Hutch is the story of two cops, (David Soul and Paul Michael Glaser) who are young, tough, but at times sensitive. There's plenty of action, which could help make Starsky and Hutch a hit.

Thursday, 8:30 – On the Rocks is a situation comedy set in a prison. The main character is a Puerto Rican inmate. Jose Perez is very good as Fuentes, but bad writing and The Waltons could spell the early end of On the Rocks.

Friday 8:00 – Moblie One stars Jackie Cooper as a television reporter on the go. The concept is different, but poor acting on the part of the supporting cast and the immense popularity of Sanford and Chico make this another new-season casualty.

Well, that's just about it for National Television. Next time, quality programs on ETV.

Space Odyssey

The Who By Numbers

by Paul Prior

Marpcas – a pinch of the cowbell, and heavy tom-tom accents – 12345678 counted out a British voice – add some fieren guitar chords, then Roger Daltry's distinctive vocal, Voila! You have "Slip Kid," the song which opens the latest release from England's finest, The Who by Numbers. The disc marks the return to an earlier era for the Who, an era when Pete Townshend was more concerned with writing three minute songs, and not two-hour epics such as Tommy and Quadrophenia.

It's been quite a year for the Who, mostly because of the movie version of Tommy and all of the members' budding solo careers. Pete Townshend was primarily working on the movie production and soundtrack of Tommy, as well as writing new songs. John Entwistle toured with his group OX and released a couple of albums of mostly rocked out material. Keith Moon appeared with his own album, a feat many thought implausible or impossible, with material ranging from re-worked Beach Boys tunes to plain unadulterated madness. Above anything else, this was and still is Roger Daltrey's year to shine. Aside from his excellent job of playing the title roll in Tommy, he released his second solo album, Ride a Rock Horse, which received critical raves for the cover as well as the music. He has never been in better voice. He also found time to film a second movie with Ken Russel, who directed Tommy, and within the week Lisztomania, a somewhat fictionalized biography of composer Franz Liszt, will be released. At any rate, the Who somehow found time this year to record their best album since Who's Next.

The album is not concerned with telling a story, something which got in the way of Quadrophenia. Many of the songs were good, but several were there merely as filler material. Side one is opened by the previously mentioned "Slip Kid," which features excellent rhythm work, guitar work, and a marvelous punk vocal from Daltrey. "However Much I Booze" is an ode to not being able to stay in control, very 'apropos' these days. 'Squeeze Box" is a return to the humorous Who songs, such as "Boris the Spider" or selections from The Who Sell Out – "Mama's got a squeeze box and daddy never sleeps at night." It took me a few listenings before I realized what it was about. "Imagine a Man" is a haunting tune highlighted by fine acoustic passages as well as electric guitar licks from Townshend. Real good chorus too. There's a minimum of overdubbing on the l.p., much less synthesizer than on Quadrophenia. In fact, most of the album sounds fairly live, a marked return to the basic rock elements. The only overdubbed parts I could detect were the fine acoustic flourishes that Townshend is famous for. Other standout tunes include "Success Story," a humorous tune written by John Entwistle, "Blue Red and Grey" sung by Pete Townshend, and "How Many Friends," one of my favorite all around songs, with very poignant lyrics. Nicky Hoplins is featured on keyboards on four of the selections. His work is always excellent, as is the production work by Glyn Johns, who, with Hopkins, also worked with them on Who's Next. In all, a fine album by a mainstay of rock and roll. I'm depending on their upcoming tour this Winter to be a killer, especially if they perform any of these selections.

Anticipation is overwhelming this reviewer in regard to The Last Record Album, the upcoming title due from Little Feat. A tour is also planned, but not due to hit Town as previously rumored. As for myself, I have strong inclinations to try to see them in New York on the 25th. Strong inclinations doesn't adequately describe my plans, perhaps more along the lines of a Fail-Safe Mission

TICKETS ON SALE FOR STUDENTS ONLY
until next Thursday
After that General Admission Tickets will be Available

SA CONCERTS presents
THE NEW RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE

Fri. NOV. 7
9:00 pm
UVM

Tickets
uvm students $4.00 gen public $5.00
UVM student tickets UVM BOOKSTORE 2 per ID starting Oct. 16
BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOM general public sales starting Oct. 22
VERMONT BOOKSTORE
MIDDLEBURY, VT.

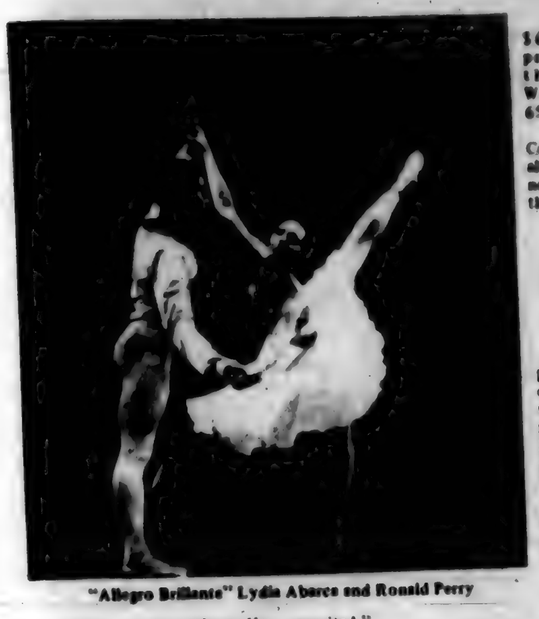
BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS
OPEN DAILY
(At the rear of Frank's Texaco)

NOTICIAS DE CUERVO
Recipe #J²
EL DORADO:
★ Add ice to a mixing glass or jelly jar, depending on your financial situation.
★ Pour in 2 oz. of Jose Cuervo Tequila.
★ The juice from half a lime.
★ 1 tbsp. of honey.
★ Shake.
★ Strain into a cocktail glass or peanut butter jar, depending on your financial situation.

JOSE CUERVO® TEQUILA 80 PROOF
IMPORTED AND BOTTLED BY C.W.I. REUBLEIN INC., HARTFORD, CONN.

WE'RE THE GREATEST
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Oct. 13-19 Spoonfeather
Oct. 20-26 (DynOmite) Tribde
Oct. 27-Nov. 2 Hot Flash
Nov. 3-9 Brahmin
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9 Mon. – Thurs.

Lane Series: Harlem Dance



"Allegro Brillante" Lydia Abarca and Ronald Perry

The internationally acclaimed Dance Theatre of Harlem, under the personal supervision of its founder and director Arthur Mitchell, performs in UVM's Lane Series on Wednesday, Oct. 22, at 8 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium.

This classical ballet company will offer four dances: "Allegro Brillante," with choreography by George Balenchine and music by P. Tschaikovsky; "Every Now and Then," with choreography by William Scott and music by Quincy Jones; the "Le Corsaire" pas de deux, restaged for Dance Theatre of Harlem by Karel Stook to music by Riccardo Drigo; and "Dougla," with choreography and music by Geoffrey Holder.

The company will spend three days on UVM's campus. On Monday, Oct. 20, at 4 p.m. in Southwick, Redstone campus, a workshop for advanced dancers will be given by Mr. Mitchell. Persons wishing to participate in the workshop should contact Miss Margaret Hayes of the Physical Education Dept. (Ext. 3240).

On Thursday, Oct. 21, at 4:30 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium, there will be a Concert Demonstration, at which Mr. Mitchell will discuss ballet steps and techniques, and his company will demonstrate. Also, excerpts from dances will be performed.

The Dance Theatre of Harlem was founded in 1968 by Arthur Mitchell, following the assassination of Martin Luther King. Then at the height of his career as premier danseur with the New York City Ballet, Mitchell wanted to prove to the world that "blacks can dance ballet."

The Theatre began in meagre surroundings: an empty garage in the heart of Harlem's hard-core drug area. Mitchell's former teacher, Karel Shook, gave up her position as ballet master and choreographer for the Netherland's National Ballet to join Mitchell as co-director.

During the first summer of classes the garage door was kept open so that young people passing by could hear the music and see the dancers practicing. In Arthur Mitchell's words: "We started with 30 kids and two professional dancers, and by the end of the summer we had 400. They just strayed in, sat on the floor and watched. That's how we recruited."

Only two years after the creation of the School, the Company made its debut. Since then the Dance Theatre of Harlem has been performing before sold-out audiences across the U.S., as well as in the Caribbean and Europe.

The Company has also been seen on nationwide television in "Rhythmetron with the Dance Theatre of Harlem and Arthur Mitchell." This one-hour prize-winning special may be seen on Vermont ETV on Monday, Oct. 20, at 9 p.m.

Today the Dance Theatre of Harlem is a source of pride for all New York. It is a 27-member company, 1200 students from this country, and a long waiting list. This year alone the troupe will visit over 30 U.S. cities and make a second European tour in 1976.

Arthur Mitchell began his classical dancing career with the New York City Ballet in 1955 as the first black dancer to become a member of a major ballet company. He received his early ballet training from Karel Shook, and under the direction of George Balanchine Mitchell rapidly became premier danseur with the New York City Ballet. During the more than 15 years he danced with the Company, his roles encompassed the entire range of its large repertoire.

The innovative Dance Theatre of Harlem has been lavishly praised by the critics. Clive Barnes of the New York Times wrote: "It is splendid how this solitary black classic dance company is steadily acquiring its own finesse and its own style."

And Michael Gavens of London's Evening Examiner wrote: "Black ballet arrived in London last night with the muscular impact of a sock on the jaw. It was, in fact, a knockout. The sinuous grace of the girls and the ebullient power of the men – shown variously in classical, abstract and ethnic forms – won them an impressive debut at Sadler's Wells Theatre."

The three-day residency of the Dance Theatre of Harlem is generously subsidized by the National Endowment on the Arts through its Arts Dance Touring Program, and made possible to the University of Vermont by the Vermont Council on the Arts.

Tickets, $3.50, $5.50, and $6.50 for the Oct. 22 performance, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. Telephone 656-3418 for reservations.

Tickets for the Oct. 21 Concert Demonstration are $1, all general admission. There is no charge for participation in the Workshop on Oct. 20.

Zoo Story

A Reader's Theatre presentation of Edward Albee's one act play The Zoo Story will be performed during the regularly scheduled "Friday at Four" on October 17, at 4 p.m. in the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Starring Tim Boisvert and Bill Kittell in the roles of Jerry and Peter, and directed by Keith Gaylord, this play was Albee's first serious attempt (with the exception of a three-act sex farce he composed when he was twelve), and through its success established him as a major American playwright. Some critics feel that The Zoo Story initiated the point and his following plays reinforced it, some of which include The Sandbox, The Death of Bessie Smith, The American Dream and Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf.

With the coming of The Zoo Story (1958), Albee was immediately recognized as a member of the Theatre of the Absurd, and through this work and those to follow, attacked with forcefulness and bitter irony through realism of dialogue and subject matter the very foundations of American optimism.

And what's "The Zoo" all about; communicating, or the inability to. It has been said the play is grossly overworked: Hardly. After all, when was the last time you saw, read or heard a Beckett, Ionesco, Genet, Pinter, Kopit, or Albee play?

ABC Losing in Ratings

by Elaine M. Boyle

Out of the 9 new shows ABC offers this season, two are hits. Once again, ABC is the biggest loser in the rating game.

Saturday 8:00 – Saturday Night Live with Howard Cosell offers some very good guests, such as Roberta Flack and Bill Cosby, as well as some unusual acts (Jimmy Connors singing?). If you can stand the utter obnoxiousness of Howard Cosell, you might find this an enjoyable show. But remember, Cosell is no Ed Sullivan.

10:00 – Matt Helm starring Tony Franciosa as the detective made famous by Dean Martin, is the victim of a bad time slot. Opposite the queen of Saturday night, Carol Burnett, this private eye, no matter how charming, hasn't got a chance.

Sunday, 7:00 – The Swiss Family Robinson is a wonderful show for children. The story of a family stranded on a desert island, it gives Irwin Allen a chance to use those special effects he's noted for. Although the episodes stray from the original story, it is still interesting enough to keep the tykes' attention for an entire hour. Martin Milner and Cameron Mitchell star.

Monday 8:00 – Barbary Coast. This show stars William Shatner and Doug McClure as two con-men turned government agents on the vast coast of the late 19th century. What might have been an enjoyable program was turned into a silly, undramatic farce. This was, of course, the result of a network order to create an amusing, non-violent show suitable for the whole viewing audience. So much for "Family Hour."

Tuesday 8:30 – Welcome Back, Kotter starring Gabe Kaplan, is one of ABC's hits. Kaplan portrays a Brooklyn school teacher who comes back to his Alma Mater to teach a group of "sweathogs" (hard to handle, tough, street kids). The comedy is quite good, but some of the students are too stereotyped.

Wednesday 8:00 – When Things Were Rotten. This is an outrageously funny, crazy comedy created out of the depths of Mel Brooks' mad mind. It's the story of Robin Hood (Dick Gauthier) and his never-ending duel with the Sheriff of Notingham (Henry Polic). With fine writing and a marvelous supporting cast, this program should be a hit. The only obstacle is the popular NBC show, Little House on the Prairie which airs at the same time.

10:00 – Starsky and Hutch is the story of two cops, (David Soul and Paul Michael Glaser) who are young, tough, but at times sensitive. There's plenty of action, which could help make Starsky and Hutch a hit.

Thursday, 8:30 – On the Rocks is a situation comedy set in a prison. The main character is a Puerto Rican inmate. Jose Perez is very good as Fuentes, but bad writing and The Waltons could spell the early end of On the Rocks.

Friday 8:00 – Mobile One stars Jackie Cooper as a television reporter on the go. The concept is different, but poor acting on the part of the supporting cast and the immense popularity of Sanford and Chico make this another new-season casualty.

Well, that's just about it for National Television. Next time, quality programs on ETV.

Space Odyssey

The Who By Numbers

by Paul Price

Maracas – a pinch of the cowbell, and heavy tom-tom accents – 12345678 counted out a British voice – add some fierce guitar chords, then Roger Daltry's distinctive vocal, Voila! You have "Slip Kid," the song which opens the latest release from England's finest, The Who by Numbers. The disc marks the return to an earlier era for the Who, an era when Pete Townshend was more concerned with writing three minute songs, and not two-hour epics such as Tommy and Quadrophenia.

It's been quite a year for the Who, mostly because of the movie version of Tommy and all of the members' budding solo careers. Pete Townshend was primarily working on the movie production and soundtrack of Tommy, as well as writing new songs. John Entwistle toured with his group OX and released a couple of albums of mostly rocked out material. Keith Moon appeared with his own album, a feat many thought implausible or impossible, with material ranging from re-worked Beach Boys tunes to plain unadulterated madness. Above anything else, this was and still is Roger Daltrey's year to shine. Aside from his excellent job of playing the title roll in Tommy, he released his second solo album, Ride a Rock Horse, which received critical raves for the cover as well as the music. He has never been in better voice. He also found time to film a second movie with Ken Russel, who directed Tommy, and within the week Listomania, a somewhat fictionalized biography of composer Franz Liszt, will be released. At any rate, the Who somehow found time this year to record their best album since Who's Next.

The album is not concerned with telling a story, something which got in the way of Quadrophenia. Many of the songs were good, but several were there merely as filler material. Side one is opened by the previously mentioned "Slip Kid," which features excellent rhythm work, guitar work, and a marvelous punk vocal from Daltrey. "However Much I Booze" is an ode to not being able to stay in control, very 'apropos' these days. 'Squeeze Box' is a return to the humorous Who songs, such as "Boris the Spider" or selections from The Who Sell Out – "Mama's got a squeeze box and daddy never sleeps at night." It took me a few listenings before I realized what it was about. "Imagine a Man" is a haunting tune highlighted by fine acoustic passages as well as electric guitar licks from Townshend. Real good chorus too. There's a minimum of overdubbing on the l.p., much less synthesizer than on Quadrophenia. In fact, most of the album sounds fairly live, a marked return to the basic rock elements. The only overdubbed parts I could detect were the fine acoustic flourishes that Townshend is famous for. Other standout tunes include "Success Story," a humorous tune written by John Entwistle, "Blue Red and Grey" sung by Pete Townshend, and "How Many Friends," one of my favorite all around songs, with very poignant lyrics. Nicky Hoplins is featured on keyboards on four of the selections. His work is always excellent, as is the production work by Glyn Johns, who, with Hopkins, also worked with them on Who's Next. In all, a fine album by a mainstay of rock and roll. I'm depending on their upcoming tour this Winter to be a killer, especially if they perform any of these selections.

Anticipation is overwhelming this reviewer in regard to The Last Record Album, the upcoming title due from Little Feat. A tour is also planned, but not due to hit Burlington-Town as previously rumored. As for myself, I have strong inclinations to try to see them in New York on the 25th. Strong inclinations doesn't adequately describe my plans, perhaps more along the lines of a Fail-Safe Mission

TICKETS ON SALE FOR STUDENTS ONLY
until next Thursday
After that General Admission Tickets will be Available

SA CONCERTS presents
THE NEW RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE

FRI NOV. 7
9:00pm
UVM

Tickets
uvm students $4.00 gen public $5.00
UVM student tickets UVM BOOKSTORE 2 per ID starting Oct. 16
BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOM general public sales starting Oct. 22
VERMONT BOOKSTORE
MIDDLEBURY, VT.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS
OPEN 10 DAILY
145 Allen
(At the rear of Frank's Texaco)

NOTICIAS DE CUERVO
Recipe #J
EL DORADO:
★ Add ice to a mixing glass or jelly jar, depending on your financial situation.
★ Pour in 2 oz. of Jose Cuervo Tequila.
★ The juice from half a lime.
★ 1 tbsp. of honey.
★ Shake.
★ Strain into a cocktail glass or peanut butter jar, depending on your financial situation.

JOSE CUERVO® TEQUILA 80 PROOF
IMPORTED AND BOTTLED BY © 1973, HEUBLEIN, INC., HARTFORD, CONN.

WE'RE THE GREATEST
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Oct. 13-19 Spoonfeather
Oct. 20-26 (DynOmite) Tribade
Oct. 27-Nov. 2 Hot Flash
Nov. 3-9 Brahmin
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9 Mon. – Thurs.

FEATURE

St. Mikes Offers Bartending Course

Students! Here it is again, a chance for you to earn another diploma during your college years.

In case you didn't know it, last year St. Michael's College was the location of the only bartending course taught on a college campus in upper New England.

In addition to learning how to make such arcane drinks as a Hop, Skip, Go Naked, and a Sloe, Comfortable Screw, one is introduced to a plethora of facts concerning the origins of, and the differences between, several liquors as well as liquors.

The material discussed in the lectures, given by Mark Gallagher, is unique. Did you know that it would take 14,931,430 six packs of 12-oz. bottles to float the U.S.S. Massachusetts; that the Babylonians were drinking beer in 600 B.C.; or that to this day only 5 members of the Cointreau family know the secret recipe for Cointreau, one of France's most popular liquers?

Mark's first experience behind a bar was at age 16. Over the years, he has completed two courses in bartending and holds a degree in Mixology from Harvard University.

The course takes only three nights, totaling approximately nine hours of class time. You begin on Tuesday and graduate on Friday. Upon graduation, you receive an 8 X 10" diploma, a wallet-size I.D. card, a hard-cover edition of Old Mister Boston's Deluxe Official Bartender's Guide, and a 21-page class syllabus. The course will be offered twice a month for the rest of the semester.

Last year, the mixology course did not begin until late in the year, yet amazingly enough, a total of 163 students graduated from the three sessions given.

Here are some comments from people who took the course last year and spent this summer bartending full-or part-time.

Peter Mullen, a sophomore bio major, worked this summer as a bartender at the Glen Terrace in Brooklyn, N.Y. He had no previous experience and feels as though the course was definitely the reason for getting the job. When asked if he considered it worth $15, he said, "Well, since I made $27 in tips and a salary of $21.00 the first night, I definitely would say yes.

Mike Long and Kevin Miller worked at Marble Island after taking the course, neither had any previous experience. "We thought it was worth it; we made our money back in one night!"

If you're interested and would like more information on registration for the next session to be held Oct. 21-24, simply drop a postcard to Mark Gallagher, P.O. Box 83, St. Michael's College; include your name, address, and phone number and he will contact you as soon as possible, or call evenings at 879-7561.

Senior Recital

Sister Monique Couture, soprano, and Lorraine Routhier, mezzo-soprano, will present their Senior Recital at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, October 25th, at the New Music Building. Included in the program will be selections by J.S. Bach, Schubert, Brahms, Grieg, Faure, Berlioz, and Saint-Saens. Works by Schumann, Wolf, Debussy, Prokofieff, Barber and Copland will also be offered.

See Him Run

by Seedy

See him run to catch what he cannot see;
He feels it, may yet touch it,
And the madness of it all says
Run, always run.

Something there is in the pursuit
That buries his soul
and makes the life a wonder;
Sprint, turn; stop, leap –
You nearly had it in the palm of your hand;
You nearly had it, try again!

Yet, if it's caught, the joy's gone,
The beauty held is beauty calmed,
Tamed, still beauty but sadder.
While it flies, there's wonder, awe,
The awe of a new-born child discovering two thumbs and an elbow
On the same day.

But why, one asks, the run,
the mad pursuit,
when the temptress always wins?
It's all absurd, yes, what's the point,
when it all comes to the same end.

Well, it's said, 'tis not the end, nay, nor the beginning, where the toll is taken;
The wind's the reason, the rush,
the thrill, the pain and pull,
The living now he's taking.
Seeing dark end, you despair;
Seeing bright present, he must celebrate the careless joy of nothing.
The blazing pointless spaces that are all meaning for the void.

See him run, run to catch what he cannot see,
Breathless, with triumph
Always a touch away,
Reaching out for the light from his own eyes.

VPIRG Busy Channeling Energy

This fall a number of students are spending their free time trying to make Vermont a better place to live. Volunteers, working with the Vermont Public Interest Research Group, are channeling their energies into a number of projects geared towards constructive social change. Projects include research on such topics as health care, consumer affairs, and highway building.

HEALTH CARE SURVEY:

VPIRG researchers are preparing a questionaire that will be distributed state-wide, concerning children's health. The purpose of the project, according to Rebecca Brock, one of the student directors, is to determine what kinds of health services Vermont children are receiving and to what degree they are getting the care. "We would like to know," said Brock, "whether or not the state's children are getting good health care."

Working closely with officials from the State Health Department, VPIRG researchers have designed a questionaire that is geared towards identifying children's health needs. "We are especially interested in preventive care," said Brock. She added that although Vermonters spend nearly 220 million on health care each year, less than 3% is spent on preventive services.

According to Brock, Vermonters spend $.11 on every dollar on health care, 40% more than the national average. There is no indication however that because of these higher expenditures Vermonters are any healthier than other people in the country.

The VPIRG survey closely follows a bill that was introduced in the last session of the Vermont General Assembly. The program entitled H.365, would set up a comprehensive health screening program for the children of Vermont's working poor and lower middle income families. One of the problems with lobbying for the program, according to the VPIRG researchers, is there is no accurate record outlining whether or not children are getting good preventive care.

In order to do a proper job Brock believes that researchers must survey towns throughout the state. "We need volunteers so that we can do a good job," she said. "Anyone interested should contact me at Jeanne Mance Hall or come to the weekly VPIRG meetings in Conference Room C, Billings Center at 5 pm."

HIGHWAY RESEARCH

Student volunteers are also trying to line-up support against plans to complete I-93, an inter-state road planned for Vermont's Northeast Kingdom. The work follows a VPIRG report that was issued last year which revealed an extravagant plan by the State Highway Department to complete the superhighway through some of the state's best forest, farm and wildlife regions.

The proposed third interstate, according to VPIRG staff member Carl Bohlen, would cost over $31 million dollars, the state's share going over $3 million. The road will also tie in with the Littleton, New Hampshire section which will make alternatives to bulldozing the superhighway through Franconia Notch and the Old Man of the Mountain less likely.

Project organizers are hoping to line-up support by contacting state-wide conservation, environmental and consumer organizations. VPIRG student researchers feel that broad-based grass-roots support can stop the road. "In order to stop the unnecessary road," said Bohlen, "We must generate state-wide opposition to it." Volunteers interested in working on the project are urged to contact John Henrikson, 209 Marsh Hall, ext. 2906.

GCC Unifies Efforts

by David Lott

The Greek Coordinating Council (GCC) has been at UVM for about 2 years now. It is an organization of all 20 fraternities and sororities designed to create a united effort in presenting the greek system to the campus and the public. No house is required to be active and membership in GCC is not mandatory, but the council right now represents over 800 students. It is close to being the biggest student organization on the campus.

The Greek Council organizes many of the major social functions such as: Winter Week, dances, Greek Week and a couple of cook-outs every year. In 1976, the council is bringing the "UP WITH PEOPLE" cast to perform in Burlington. Many of these social functions are for the benefit of such organizations as the United Fund or Heart Fund.

What the council tries to do is unify the efforts of all the houses to provide a greater service than any one house could possibly do alone. Watch the Cynic for what the Greeks at UVM are doing. You'll be hearing much more!

Reality In The Autumn Of Youth

by Appleton King

In the Autumn of Youth walk confidently in search of Knowledge. The path will be long and tiring. If you must, ask for directions and a stiff drink at The Last Chance. When you come to two roads diverging in a wood take the one least tread upon. It'll probably say South Prospect or Spruce.

Move slowly; be wary. Conserve your resources. Give to all men, take from none. Don't waste money on practical pleasures and necessities. Only on fussball. Take heart from friends and a free toke when possible.

In work, be productive. Listen patiently and fondly to those wiser than yourself. In the end you will feel the glow of fulfillment from their lessons. And besides, you'll get a better grade.

Conformity is a weakness. If you are pre-law, practice and perfect it.

When achieving the satisfaction of learning and living, look both ways or you'll be mooshed like a racoon.

Spend friendship freely and unsparingly. After a month or two of bar-hopping, it's all you'll have left.

Hide your innermost thoughts. Keep tabs on your emotions and a lock on your bike.

Run, fly, swim, but God – don't let those food coupons fall out of your back pocket.

Be ambitious. Strive for the best, whatever it may be. Have faith in yourself and your ability, and you will succeed (Pre-vets might need a little extra).

Remember: Animosity is something you save for your roommate and your little sister.

Avoid petty-theft, cheating, and graft. Shoot for the big time.

Vote for VPIRG again and again.

Look away and when you turn around again, maybe the tuition hike will have vanished.

Plan ahead and look to the future. Six weeks of winter break is a long time.

Don't be misinformed. Buy the paper, listen to the news, and read the bathroom graffiti.

When wandering alone in darkness, take heart and a .45 Magnum. If a .45 is too big, there are plenty of lighter handguns available.

Give to all men, take from none. I already said that. Know where your assets lie. That goes for your girl-friend or boyfriend too.

Above all things, know that love is the ideal. It will bring happiness and peace of mind. It can also bring pregnancy.

Go forth into the world knowing one sure thing if nothing else: You are a fluke of the Administration; you have no right to be here. Especially if you're on Scholarship. And whether you know it or not, the Administration is laughing behind your back.

Avid makes the differences in speakers clear.

If you're a real stereo buff, you know that flat frequency response means flat, uncolored sound.

Like several other manufacturers, we too try to build the flattest, most linear frequency response we can into our speakers.

But we don't stop there.

Because we know that great sound depends on more than just frequency response.

Transient response, for instance.

It's all in your head

To understand transient response, it's important to understand how you hear.

You see, you don't really hear with your ears. You hear with your brain.

For instance, it's the brain that helps you identify what you're listening to. The direction it's coming from. And that re-creates that illusion of "being there."

The thing is, every musical note is really a complex tone. A basic tone – the fundamental – plus subtle musical overtones – harmonics – that give very instrument a unique personality.

This basic tone, together with all those changing harmonics, is called a transient. The brain takes all of them into account in interpreting any sound the ear receives.

On making things imperfectly clear

It's when a speaker can't react quickly or accurately enough to all those changing musical notes, all those transients, that distortion can occur.

And distortion means muddy-sounding music. With little definition or clarity.

A bad situation made worse when a speaker over-reacts to all those changing tones. The speaker actually adds tones of its own. And that's bad.

Most experts feel the best way to measure transient response is with tone bursts. Pure tones of various frequencies are rapidly switched on and off to simulate the transient nature of voice and instrument signals.

In Pattern A, the speaker hasn't reproduced accurately. It's completely overshot the level of the input signal. And the result is a sizzling, hot sound. Totally colored.

In Pattern B, the speaker has taken too long to react. This "hangover" can cause considerable blurring. So what you hear is dull and lifeless.

Now look at Pattern C. The speaker here has reacted both quickly and accurately. And the result is exceptional clarity and definition. The kind that Avid builds into all of its speakers.

The proof is in the hearing

Now you know there's a lot more to a speaker than just flat frequency response. Like good transient response.

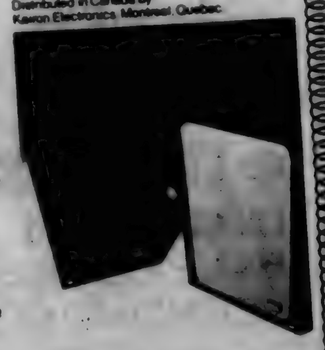
But even the best, most accurate transient response in the world isn't the be-all and end-all of a superb speaker. There's more.

The point is, we're a company that is committed to one thing and one thing only. The design and construction of the clearest, best-sounding stereo speaker systems in their price range.

But you've got to hear for yourself. So go to your hi-fi store and listen to an Avid. Then some other speaker in the same price category.

Then decide. We don't think you're going to have any trouble at all.

Not only that, musical notes are constantly starting and stopping. When they do, the number and intensity of the harmonics change.



AVID CORPORATION
10 Tripps Lane, East Providence, RI 02914
Distributed in Canada by Kairon Electronics, Montreal, Quebec

AUDIO DEN DORSET STREET PLAZA

royal christy

BURLINGTON'S ONLY SKI EQUIPMENT SPECIALISTS

SKI REFINISHING
on our
SKI TUNER

Ski Refinishing that rivals a factory refinishing without spending $20 and 6 weeks, weeks. Bring your skis in & watch our wet belt work wonders!

ONLY $8.00

IMPROVE YOUR PERFORMANCE

royal christy WITHIN THE SKI SHOP 388 SHELBURNE RD., BURL. 862-7472 royal christy

First Na

Herbal Essence Shampoo (8
Prell Shampoo (7 oz.)
Johnson's Baby Shampoo (
Ban Roll-on (1.5 oz.)
Right Guard Deodorant (7
Arrid Deodorant (5 oz.)
Vaseline Intensive Care (6
Dial Soap (3.5 oz.)
Trac. 2 Razor Blades (pkg.
Colgate Toothpaste (7 oz.)
Crest Toothpaste (7 oz.)
Pepto Bismol (8 oz.)
Listerine Mouthwash (14
Scope Mouthwash (12 oz.
Bayer Aspirin (50 tablets)
Contact Cold Capsule (10
Dristan Tablets (50)
Johnson's Off (7 oz.)
Lemon Pledge (7 oz.)
Arm & Hammer Laundry
Kotex (12 regular)
Tampax (10 regular)
Nabisco Triscuits (9½ oz.)
Cringle Potato Chips (4½ Lipton Cup of Soup (one
Sanka (9 oz.)

by Bob Zorn

During the brief span between a meeting with one of my professors and my Art History class, I took a survey of prices in our own beloved Bookstore and First National supermarket located on Rt. 2 next to Gaynes. Although this survey is by no means thorough, I think it is indicative of the Bookstore's pricing policies.

The twenty six items

THE DO

by H. Spence
Director, The Ohio State
1875 Mi
Columbus,

QUESTION: I have been goin constipation. All they do is te give me Peri-Colace. I was al sounds silly, but I've tried eve
ANSWER: Constipation does movements, since a daily bow every individual. Rather, it re bowel movements. The medi stool softeners and sometimes lots of water is also good.

However, the bland diet since one of the ways to hel have a diet which inclu particularly brans, frui sometimes the problem can time for bowel movement a successful the first few days time should be maintained.
the morning, following b
despite appropriate bowel h proper diet, then it is wise to QUESTION: Is a dog's m mouth? Dear Abby has sta has fewer germs in its mou she says – I'm not going t over it and I'm not going
I'm not going to let a dog continue washing my hand
I'm nuts, because I would germs are more likely to they? Is Abby wrong in he do like dogs – it's just tha
ANSWER: Dear "Lucy" dealing revolve around bi type of bacteria which ar being by being bitten by and type which are more would a simple dog bite.
as rabies – unless, of cou
a human's bite would be While it is possible dog to a human by dog
by "slobbering," it is jus transmitted from one hu mechanism. With a transmission of disease particularly serious unacceptable to certain

First National Wins Over Bookstore

	UVM Bookstore	First National	Percent (%) Difference	Monetary Difference
Herbal Essence Shampoo (8 oz.)	1.57	1.59	(1.2)	(.02)
Prell Shampoo (7 oz.)	1.29	.89	44.9	.40
Johnson's Baby Shampoo (7 oz.)	1.33	1.29	3.1	.04
Ban Roll-on (1.5 oz.)	1.29	.79	63.2	.50
Right Guard Deodorant (7 oz.)	1.49	1.42	4.9	.07
Arrid Deodorant (5 oz.)	1.29	1.07	20.5	.22
Vaseline Intensive Care (6 oz.)	1.09	1.29	(15.5)	(.20)
Dial Soap (3.5 oz.)	.26	.23	13.0	.03
Trac. 2 Razor Blades (pkg. of 9)	2.19	1.89	15.8	.30
Colgate Toothpaste (7 oz.)	1.19	.99	20.2	.20
Crest Toothpaste (7 oz.)	1.03	.99	4.0	.04
Pepto Bismol (8 oz.)	1.35	1.23	9.7	.12
Listerine Mouthwash (14 oz.)	1.17	.99	18.1	.18
Scope Mouthwash (12 oz.)	1.31	1.19	10.0	.12
Bayer Aspirin (50 tablets)	.91	.69	31.8	.22
Contact Cold Capsule (10)	1.77	1.35	31.1	.42
Dristan Tablets (50)	2.77	2.59	7.4	.18
Johnson's Off (7 oz.)	1.39	1.19	16.8	.20
Lemon Pledge (7 oz.)	.95	.99	(4.0)	(.04)
Arm & Hammer Laundry Detergent (30 oz.)	.65	.61	6.5	.04
Kotex (12 regular)	1.04	.79	31.6	.25
Tampax (10 regular)	.57	.50	14.0	.07
Nabisco Triscuits (9½ oz.)	.69	.59	16.9	.10
Cringle Potato Chips (4½ oz.)	.50	.57	(12.2)	(.07)
Lipton Cup of Soup (onion)	.55	.58	(5.1)	(.03)
Sanka (9 oz.)	1.55	1.29	20.1	.26
	$31.19	$27.59	17% average (arithmetic mean) of difference in %	18.9 c. Average (mean) money difference in cents

by Bob Zorn

During the brief span between a meeting with one of my professors and my Art History class, I took a survey of prices in our own beloved Bookstore and First National supermarket located on Rt. 2 next to Gaynes. Although this survey is by no means thorough, I think it is indicative of the Bookstore's pricing policies.

The twenty six items compared are products widely used by students and represent well known brands. The Bookstore charged higher prices on all but four of the items. Of the remaining twenty-two items, price differences ranged from 3 cents more for a 3.5 oz. bar of Dial soap, to 50 cents more for a 1.5 oz. stick of Ban roll-on. In almost half the cases the Bookstore charged over 15 cents more per item than did First National. Overall, shopping at First National represents a net saving of twelve per cent.

It is easy to say that if you don't like the Bookstore, go somewhere else. However, on many items, like books and school supplies, most students have no other supply sources and secondly, with the advent of winter, those of us without cars are less likely to trek downtown or to a nearby shopping center in sub-zero weather to buy a package of Contact Cold Capsules. We are likely to go to the convenient administration-sponsored monopoly on campus and pay 42 cents more for ten cold capsules.

In the face of increased tuition costs along with cuts in departmental budgets and teaching staffs, the Bookstore's pricing policy of charging what the traffic will bear spits insult in the face of injury.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by H. Spencer Turner, M.D.
Director, The Ohio State University Health Service
1875 Millikin Rd.
Columbus, Ohio 43210

QUESTION: I have been going to doctors since last July for constipation. All they do is tell me to drink lots of water and give me Peri-Colace. I was also on a bland diet. I know this sounds silly, but I've tried everything. What would you advise?

ANSWER: Constipation does not refer to infrequent bowel movements, since a daily bowel movement is not necessary for every individual. Rather, it refers to hard, painful and difficult bowel movements. The medication to which you refer is a stool softener and sometimes is helpful. The advice to drink lots of water is also good.

However, the bland diet may well be part of the difficulty since one of the ways to help the process of elimination is to have a diet which inclu[illegible]equate amounts of roughage, particularly brans, fruits and vegetables. Additionally, sometimes the problem can be helped by developing a regular time for bowel movement and even though one may not be successful the first few days, the pattern of trying at a regular time should be maintained. The best time for most people is in the morning, following breakfast. If constipation persists despite appropriate bowel habits, drinking plenty of fluids and proper diet, then it is wise to consult a physician.

QUESTION: Is a dog's mouth less germy than a human's mouth? Dear Abby has stated a number of times that a dog has fewer germs in its mouth than a human. I don't care what she says – I'm not going to eat food after a dog has slobbered over it and I'm not going to kiss a dog like some people do. I'm not going to let a dog lick me in the face and I'm going to continue washing my hands after I pet a dog. By her standards I'm nuts, because I wouldn't act like this around humans, but germs are more likely to be in animals than in people, aren't they? Is Abby wrong in her attitude or am I just funny? I really do like dogs – it's just that I don't want their germs.

ANSWER: Dear "Lucy" – The concerns with which you are dealing revolve around bites. It is probably correct that the type of bacteria which are apt to be introduced into a human being by being bitten by another human being are of a number and type which are more apt to cause a serious infection than would a simple dog bite. Obvious exceptions to this exist, such as rabies – unless, of course, a human has rabies, in which case a human's bite would be just as serious as a rabid dog's bite.

While it is possible for disease to be transmitted from a dog to a human by dog licks or by a dog contaminating food by "slobbering," it is just as likely that human disease can be transmitted from one human to another by precisely the same mechanism. With a healthy animal, the likelihood of transmission of disease from a dog to man is not considered a particularly serious problem, but may be aesthetically unacceptable to certain individuals.

QUESTION: Since the beginning of humankind, MANkind has been creating birth control devices which have had a questionable effect on the woman's reproductive system. Since we all know it takes two to tango (Editorial comment – I assume "tango" is used loosely as a synonym for sexual intercourse), why must it always be the woman's responsibility, short of the use of prophylactics, vasectomy, castration or those cute little golden valves we all saw in Life magazine a couple of years ago? If we can send MEN to the moon or make a good tasting coffee without caffeine, why oh why have the medicine men (Editorial note – and women) been unable to come up with a viable method of male contraception? It is our understanding that the male reproductive system is far less complicated than the female's and it seems to follow that it would be easier to research and devise a male contraceptive.

ANSWER: Birth control devices can take several forms. One of these is mechanical and includes those diaphrams and condoms which can be used by either sex. Another form of birth control is the spermicidal jellies or foams which, because of the nature of the female anatomy, lend themselves to placement in the vaginal vault, but do not lend themselves to effectively cover the male genitalia. Since a fertilized egg must be implanted in a uterine wall for pregnancy to occur, obviously a device such as the IUD, which interferes with implantation (or nidation), can be used only in the female – again because of the difference in male/female anatomy and since it is within the female that the uterus exists for pregnancy to develop.

Your real concern, I think, has to do with the question of chemical or, more correctly stated, hormonal contraceptions of which, of course, birth control pills are the prime example. While in one sense the male reproduction system is far less complicated than the female's, it is the complicated, step-wise, hormonally influenced process of ovulation in the female which allows several possible specific points at which to interfere with this process and by "fooling the pituitary gland," prevent ovulation from occurring. In the male, the process of spermatogenesis – i.e., sperm production – is continuous, without the specific hormonal cycles which occur in the female; thus there are not available the number of alternatives to interrupting sperm production as there are for interrupting ovulation.

Interfering with male production of sperm has been the subject of extensive research and would either amount to essentially eliminating sperm production (or at least effective sperm production) or interfering with sperm motility so that fertilization could not occur. To this point, although, as I have stated, research is extensive in this area and has been for a number of years, no effective method has yet been developed.

Four Roses And A Buttercup

by Jim Bennett

PART ONE: DREAMS

ONE

It was strange how I met her. The Eldest had, at one time, instructed myself to speak of love. This I had learned to do well. He had done much for me and I was grateful. He asked me to read something he wrote a long time ago. I obeyed.

"Four score and seven years ago...," it went from my mouth, "our Fathers brought forth on this continent...," then I saw her "...a new Nation..." She smiled at me "...conceived in Liberty and dedicated..." I said no more.

We walked toward each other saying nothing. It was a ritual. It was all a ritual. She smiled again and so did I. All podium and personal aside then disappeared in simultaneous reappearance of the Elder. He was not visibly angry with my incompetence and pronounced us man and wife. We made solemn vows to despise all that conformed. For that fact we despised each other.

Her bridal bouquet, brought by the eldest, consisted of four roses and a buttercup. "Twas a most lovely floral and smelled of honeydew." She tossed it to the madame who smiled and ate the roses one by one, leaving the buttercup. Then all vanished.

TWO

My quill was certainly on end. It was now dark and my amourous fantasies were preceding realities as usual. Perhaps it was the other way around. I neither could be nor can be sure of such trivia, but it was a long drive to Boston and we were still mute.

"Where do we go now?" I blundered. She pointed to the rooftop. All was dark but the stars managed somehow to squeeze a small amount of their particles between the tightly woven darkness. There were no lights on inside the house, and she smiled at this. The moon seemed to be surrounded by a corolla, and her eyes were yellow and waxy.

Oddly enough, we did not enter the house at all. She seemed to be afraid. Instead, she directed me to a wooden ladder and began to climb. Unfortunately, my acrophobia exceeded my quill and my feet turned to ice. I gave her my apologies briefly and caught the next bus to Cleveland for a divorce. No fuck in the world was worth sixty-nine rungs.

THREE

I had always imagined Cleveland as a rather large city, with a lot of smoke and garbage. To my total amazement, Cleveland was actually none of these things. Cleveland did not exist.

I asked some of the natives where it was... they knew nothing. They just gave me a dirty look and told me to go back to where I came from. I would have, except that there were no buses there. So I walked to Pittsburgh.

Some institutional quarry lay on the outskirts of Pittsburgh. It was like an oasis amidst the asphalt desert. It was here that my walk ended.

From the strangest mahogany, double-console floor phone booth, I called the bus terminal for times. If it weren't for the for-a-good-lay numbers carved in the wall, I wouldn't have known it was a phone booth. I certainly felt at home there.

Afterward, I roamed about the green to kill time. I wasted a good deal of it contemplating the attitude of a nuthatch. I supposed he would eventually pass out with all the blood rushing to his head but he just didn't.

"Nim" Huh? I looked around and saw Paula, a girl I'd not seen in several years sitting there on the marble steps of some monolith. I conversed with her in perfect Latin for many ticks when, after looking around for the time on top of some watch tower, I found her no longer there. Oh well, "easy come, easy go," I thought to myself. I began walking to the bus station.

On the bus, I began to account the day's happenings as a bit unusual, but I soon surrendered that train of thought to the Sandman.

FOUR

When I arrived, the Eldest was not there. His caretaker and the caretaker's wife were there to ask me where I'd been. I told them, but perhaps I'd have been better off not. She told me that perhaps I should pay another visit to my doctor and she went so far as to insist that I was a somnambulist.

I paid very little attention to them though. They were mere peasants. They didn't appear to be very concerned either, for he went back to pruning his roses and she to baking bread. I went back to my room only to find my red bandanna and my tennis shoes lying on my floor where I'd left them the night before. I went back to bed.

PART TWO: SINS

ONE

There were little sticky dots all over the windshield that wouldn't come off. I got out and tried to scrape them off with my ice scraper but they only streaked further. So I left the car and went back to the beach house.

My Barbara was sitting on the veranda sunning herself. I asked her where Peter and Maggie were and she replied sleepily that they had gone to town to buy some provisions. I told her it was too cold to sit in the sun, to which she answered me with an obscene gesture which I didn't catch. I just knew it was coming and turned away.

The inside of the house was dark, so I lit a candle and picked up a three week old Newsweek which immediately put me to sleep.

TWO

I was awakened by a college of hollers and whimpers. Peter was now yelling at me and all of a sudden he started punching me like a moron. All I did was fall asleep in his chair. So I wrinkled his Newsweek? So what?

All I picked out of his indictment were a few words such as friend, girl, pregnant, fuck, kill, and shit. I had no idea how to put them together though, and before I knew it Peter and Barbara had left the room and driven away, leaving me behind with a sobbing Maggie. She told me they weren't coming back, so we hopped into my Lamborghini, salt drops and all, and drove into Boston. I was totally dumbfounded, to say the least.

I don't believe that stupid dreg never stopped crying all the way to Boston. I knew nothing of the goings-on except for the fact that I was, somehow, to blame.

THREE

The Eldest had told me, at one time, of a couple in Boston whom I could go to in case of sudden emergency. The sunshine had penetrated Boston's purple haze and managed, somehow, to pass through their opaque windowpane. They stared at me in estranged disbelief as I showed up with Maggie at their door. It had been eons since they'd seen me. I gave them my name and he smiled.

"Abe's ward, aren't you?"

"Yes," I admitted.

"A good man...The best."

"To be sure."

Such exchanges continued. It had surely been a long time. He had a friendly smile, a moustache, and curly hair. She was a sort of jolly-rotund. I enjoyed their company and they, mine.

Eventually, I explained my predicament to them, as much of it as I knew. They merely laughed in a comforting sort of way. I loved them.

They re-introduced themselves as Maggie's parents. They then told me to be about my way––that they would take care. I knew and I obeyed.

Nobody bought cigarettes anymore anyway. They just bummed them.

REALITY

It was Autumn. Autumn means pretty leaves, pretty girls and football.

There was a hush about the locker. They were all there, all of them – classmates and teammates. I was starting at split end for the first time all year, since the starter had broken his ankle and the second-stringer had contracted some horrible disease. I donned jockstrap, hip-pads, pants, shoes, shoulder-pads and jersey (in that order) and departed with my teamies through the chute.

After calisthenics, we'd all get in line and when the announcer called our names we'd trot out to midfield and smile at the girls in the stands. Shortly before my name was coming up, I glanced down at my feet and noticed that one shoe was black and the other red. Realizing that this was no way for a starting end to dress, I returned to the locker – all glory aside.

After taking several minutes to decide on the color (I finally decided on black as red clashed with green and yellow) I went back to the chute. I felt more and more like a debutante as the cheering grew louder.

The stadium was empty. There was no one to play with and no one to cheer me on. The silence was silent. I wandered toward midfield looking around in disbelief. A cool Autumn breeze was blowing through my hair and the midday sun reduced my helmet to a black patch upon the grass. My uniform lay at the 50-yard line and on top of that were four roses and a buttercup, casting no shadow.

D N' G: The Theme Once Again

(continued from page five)

one can easily go into debt just trying to live. Yet Mr. Middle continues to buy all the superflous do-dads and gimmicks he sees on television, striving always to ornament his life, decorate the outside surfaces only, yet recognizes no resource depletions, no world famines, nothing. Just the selfish determination to improve the cover of the book while leaving the pages of his soul blank. Middle-class Americans are a truly despicable group.

It is our Middle Class and their "middle-class values" that must be changed. Materialism for decoration and prestige, in short, all non-life-support products and services, must be curtailed if not eliminated. The masses of men, the world over, still want the basics: the security from hunger, cold, disease and death.

We Americans are a pretty smart bunch of fellows. We know full well that if everyone had the basics of life, everyone would probably fare poorly. Eating grain instead of beef, suffering through air-conditioned-less summers, pedaling bicycles instead of driving automobiles – to be brief, we would be as well-off as the average Chinese, if we're lucky. There simply isn't enough World left for everyone to live as extravagantly as we do now. So we pay lip service to the poor and starving and rape their countries of their resources while smugly disguising our greed as philanthropy and self-improvement.

Where is this all leading us? Can you expect the billions of people of the world to tolerate the piggishness of a few million Americans? If Communism doesn't come soon, equalizing the benefits of life, the security from hunger, cold, disease and death, all people will die.

Our fellow citizens, after half a century of experience and prosperity, continue to approve the choice we made. May it be to the world what I believe it will be (to some parts sooner, to others later, but finally to all) the signal of arousing men to burst the chains under which monkish ignorance and superstition had persuaded them to bind themselves, and to assume the blessings and security of self-government. The form which we have substituted restores the free right to the unbounded exercise of reason and freedom of opinion. All eyes are opened, or opening to the rights of man. The general spread of the light of science has already laid open to every view the palpable truth that the mass of mankind has not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately, by the grace of God. These are the grounds of hope for others. For ourselves, let the annual return of this day forever refresh our recollections of these rights, and an undiminished devotion to them.

Looking For Louise

(continued from page five)

shoved some teabags in a pot and soaked em and put em on a flame. That was all the food in the house. Jeddyboy was broker than me, if there are shades to that sort of thing.

My tea was good and hot. I set on the speaker and asked him what was up. "I'm getting my show together, but I gotta find a place to live in ten days. The rent is up here and we're busted. Brenda burnt up the counter and blew the fuses in the whole apartment house. The landlord's pissed and there ain't nothing I can do. I wish I could buy another month." I liked Jeddyboy; he was up against it, but still felt good. He kept on talking. "Like all I need is more time, man, to paint. I'm trying to build up a permanent reservoir of speed in my body so I can push a button and turn on. All I do is drink coffee, smoke cigarettes, and drink tea. I'm running on low, then I shift into overdrive."

I helped him hang a few paintings. They looked like the rest of the room, but a little more focused. Jeddy had it, but sometimes it got away. I looked at Brenda. She was dark and quiet. Totally absorbed. I finally figured out what she was doing. She was sitting in front of a tiny checkerboard. On the other side of the board was a gold statue of Buddha. He wasn't any noisier than she was.

"Are you playing checkers with Buddha?"

"Yes," she said, looking up at me for the first time since I came in.

"Buddha does everything around here," said Jeddyboy. "We have it easy."

"Yup," I said. I was glad somebody did.

First National Wins Over Bookstore

	UVM Bookstore	First National	Percent (%) Difference	Monetary Difference
Herbal Essence Shampoo (8 oz.)	1.57	1.59	(1.2)	(.02)
Prell Shampoo (7 oz.)	1.29	.89	44.9	.40
Johnson's Baby Shampoo (7 oz.)	1.33	1.29	3.1	.04
Ban Roll-on (1.5 oz.)	1.29	.79	63.2	.50
Right Guard Deodorant (7 oz.)	1.49	1.42	4.9	.07
Arrid Deodorant (5 oz.)	1.29	1.07	20.5	.22
Vaseline Intensive Care (6 oz.)	1.09	1.29	(15.5)	(.20)
Dial Soap (3.5 oz.)	.26	.23	13.0	.03
Trac. 2 Razor Blades (pkg. of 9)	2.19	1.89	15.8	.30
Colgate Toothpaste (7 oz.)	1.19	.99	20.2	.20
Crest Toothpaste (7 oz.)	1.03	.99	4.0	.04
Pepto Bismol (8 oz.)	1.35	1.23	9.7	.12
Listerine Mouthwash (14 oz.)	1.17	.99	18.1	.18
Scope Mouthwash (12 oz.)	1.31	1.19	10.0	.12
Bayer Aspirin (50 tablets)	.91	.69	31.8	.22
Contact Cold Capsule (10)	1.77	1.35	31.1	.42
Dristan Tablets (50)	2.77	2.59	7.4	.18
Johnson's Off (7 oz.)	1.39	1.19	16.8	.20
Lemon Pledge (7 oz.)	.95	.99	(4.0)	(.04)
Arm & Hammer Laundry Detergent (30 oz.)	.65	.61	6.5	.04
Kotex (12 regular)	1.04	.79	31.6	.25
Tampax (10 regular)	.57	.50	14.0	.07
Nabisco Triscuits (9½ oz.)	.69	.59	16.9	.10
Cringle Potato Chips (4½ oz.)	.50	.57	(12.2)	(.07)
Lipton Cup of Soup (onion)	.55	.58	(5.1)	(.03)
Sanka (9 oz.)	1.55	1.29	20.1	.26
	$31.19	$27.59	17% average (arithmetic mean) of difference in %	18.9 c. Average (mean) money difference in cents

by Bob Zorn

During the brief span between a meeting with one of my professors and my Art History class, I took a survey of prices in our own beloved Bookstore and First National supermarket located on Rt. 2 next to Gaynes. Although this survey is by no means thorough, I think it is indicative of the Bookstore's pricing policies.

The twenty six items compared are products widely used by students and represent well known brands. The Bookstore charged higher prices on all but four of the items. Of the remaining twenty-two items, price differences ranged from 3 cents more for a 3.5 oz. bar of Dial soap, to 50 cents more for a 1.5 oz. stick of Ban roll-on. In almost half the cases the Bookstore charged over 15 cents more per item than did First National. Overall, shopping at First National represents a net saving of twelve per cent.

It is easy to say that if you don't like the Bookstore, go somewhere else. However, on many items, like books and school supplies, most students have no other supply sources and secondly, with the advent of winter, those of us without cars are less likely to trek downtown or to a nearby shopping center in sub-zero weather to buy a package of Contact Cold Capsules. We are likely to go to the convenient administration-sponsored monopoly on campus and pay 42 cents more for ten cold capsules.

In the face of increased tuition costs along with cuts in departmental budgets and teaching staffs, the Bookstore's pricing policy of charging what the traffic will bear spits insult in the face of injury.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by H. Spencer Turner, M.D.
Director, The Ohio State University Health Service
1875 Millikin Rd.
Columbus, Ohio 43210

QUESTION: I have been going to doctors since last July for constipation. All they do is tell me to drink lots of water and give me Peri-Colace. I was also on a bland diet. I know this sounds silly, but I've tried everything. What would you advise?
ANSWER: Constipation does not refer to infrequent bowel movements, since a daily bowel movement is not necessary for every individual. Rather, it refers to hard, painful and difficult bowel movements. The medication to which you refer is a stool softener and sometimes is helpful. The advice to drink lots of water is also good.

However, the bland diet may well be part of the difficulty since one of the ways to help the process of elimination is to have a diet which inclu[illegible]equate amounts of roughage, particularly brans, fruits and vegetables. Additionally, sometimes the problem can be helped by developing a regular time for bowel movement and even though one may not be successful the first few days, the pattern of trying at a regular time should be maintained. The best time for most people is in the morning, following breakfast. If constipation persists despite appropriate bowel habits, drinking plenty of fluids and proper diet, then it is wise to consult a physician.

QUESTION: Is a dog's mouth less germy than a human's mouth? Dear Abby has stated a number of times that a dog has fewer germs in its mouth than a human. I don't care what she says – I'm not going to eat food after a dog has slobbered over it and I'm not going to kiss a dog like some people do. I'm not going to let a dog lick me in the face and I'm going to continue washing my hands after I pet a dog. By her standards I'm nuts, because I wouldn't act like this around humans, but germs are more likely to be in animals than in people, aren't they? Is Abby wrong in her attitude or am I just fussy? I really do like dogs – it's just that I don't want their germs.
ANSWER: Dear "Lucy" – The concerns with which you are dealing revolve around bites. It is probably correct that the type of bacteria which are apt to be introduced into a human being by being bitten by another human being are of a number and type which are more apt to cause a serious infection than would a simple dog bite. Obvious exceptions to this exist, such as rabies – unless, of course, a human has rabies, in which case a human's bite would be just as serious as a rabid dog's bite.

While it is possible for disease to be transmitted from a dog to a human by dog licks or by a dog contaminating food by "slobbering," it is just as likely that human disease can be transmitted from one human to another by precisely the same mechanism. With a healthy animal, the likelihood of transmission of disease from a dog to man is not considered a particularly serious problem, but may be aesthetically unacceptable to certain individuals.

QUESTION: Since the beginning of humankind, MANkind has been creating birth control devices which have had a questionable effect on the woman's reproductive system. Since we all know it takes two to tango (Editorial comment – I assume "tango" is used loosely as a synonym for sexual intercourse), why must it always be the woman's responsibility, short of the use of prophylactics, vasectomy, castration or those cute little golden valves we all saw in Life magazine a couple of years ago? If we can send MEN to the moon or make a good tasting coffee without caffeine, why oh why have the medicine men (Editorial note – and women) been unable to come up with a viable method of male contraception? It is our understanding that the male reproductive system is far less complicated than the female's and it seems to follow that it would be easier to research and devise a male contraceptive.
ANSWER: Birth control devices can take several forms. One of these is mechanical and includes those diaphrams and condoms which can be used by either sex. Another form of birth control is the spermicidal jellies or foams which, because of the nature of the female anatomy, lend themselves to placement in the vaginal vault, but do not lend themselves to effectively cover the male genitalia. Since a fertilized egg must be implanted in a uterine wall for pregnancy to occur, obviously a device such as the IUD, which interferes with implantation (or nidation), can be used only in the female – again because of the difference in male/female anatomy and since it is within the female that the uterus exists for pregnancy to develop.

Your real concern, I think, has to do with the question of chemical or, more correctly stated, hormonal contraceptions of which, of course, birth control pills are the prime example. While in one sense the male reproduction system is far less complicated than the female's, it is the complicated, step-wise, hormonally influenced process of ovulation in the female which allows several possible specific points at which to interfere with this process and by "fooling the pituitary gland," prevent ovulation from occurring. In the male, the process of spermatogenesis – i.e., sperm production – is continuous, without the specific hormonal cycles which occur in the female; thus there are not available the number of alternatives to interrupting sperm production as there are for interrupting ovulation.

Interfering with male production of sperm has been the subject of extensive research and would either amount to essentially eliminating sperm production (or at least effective sperm production) or interfering with sperm motility so that fertilization could not occur. To this point, although, as I have stated, research is extensive in this area and has been for a number of years, no effective method has yet been developed.

Four Roses And A Buttercup

by Jim Bennett

PART ONE: DREAMS

ONE

It was strange how I met her. The Eldest had, at one time, instructed myself to speak of love. This I had learned to do well. He had done much for me and I was grateful. He asked me to read something he wrote a long time ago. I obeyed.

"Four score and seven years ago...." it went from my mouth, "our Fathers brought forth on this continent...," then I saw her "...a new Nation..." She smiled at me "...conceived in Liberty and dedicated..." I said no more.

We walked toward each other saying nothing. It was a ritual. It was all a ritual. She smiled again and so did I. All podium and personal aside then disappeared in simultaneous reappearance of the Elder. He was not visibly angry with my incompetence and pronounced us man and wife. We made solemn vows to despise all that conformed. For that fact we despised each other.

Her bridal bouquet, brought by the eldest, consisted of four roses and a buttercup. "Twas a most lovely floral and smelled of honeydew." She tossed it to the madame who smiled and ate the roses one by one, leaving the buttercup. Then all vanished.

TWO

My quill was certainly on end. It was now dark and my amourous fantasies were preceding realities as usual. Perhaps it was the other way around. I neither could be nor can be sure of such trivia, but it was a long drive to Boston and we were still mute.

"Where do we go now?" I blundered. She pointed to the rooftop. All was dark but the stars managed somehow to squeeze a small amount of their particles between the tightly woven darkness. There were no lights on inside the house, and she smiled at this. The moon seemed to be surrounded by a corolla, and her eyes were yellow and waxy.

Oddly enough, we did not enter the house at all. She seemed to be afraid. Instead, she directed me to a wooden ladder and began to climb. Unfortunately, my acrophobia exceeded my quill and my feet turned to ice. I gave her my apologies briefly and caught the next bus to Cleveland for a divorce. No fuck in the world was worth sixty-nine rungs.

THREE

I had always imagined Cleveland as a rather large city, with a lot of smoke and garbage. To my total amazement, Cleveland was actually none of these things. Cleveland did not exist.

I asked some of the natives where it was... they knew nothing. They just gave me a dirty look and told me to go back to where I came from. I would have, except that there were no buses there. So I walked to Pittsburgh.

Some institutional quarry lay on the outskirts of Pittsburgh. It was like an oasis amidst the asphalt desert. It was here that my walk ended.

From the strangest mahogany, double-console floor phone booth, I called the bus terminal for times. If it weren't for the for-a-good-lay numbers carved in the wall, I wouldn't have known it was a phone booth. I certainly felt at home there.

Afterward, I roamed about the green to kill time. I wasted a good deal of it contemplating the attitude of a nuthatch. I supposed he would eventually pass out with all the blood rushing to his head but he just didn't.

"Nim" Huh? I looked around and saw Paula, a girl I'd not seen in several years sitting there on the marble steps of some monolith. I conversed with her in perfect Latin for many ticks when, after looking around for the time on top of some watch tower, I found her no longer there. Oh well, "easy come, easy go," I thought to myself. I began walking to the bus station.

On the bus, I began to account the day's happenings as a bit unusual, but I soon surrendered that train of thought to the Sandman.

FOUR

When I arrived, the Eldest was not there. His caretaker and the caretaker's wife were there to ask me where I'd been. I told them, but perhaps I'd have been better off not. She told me that perhaps I should pay another visit to my doctor and she went so far as to insist that I was a somnambulist.

I paid very little attention to them though. They were mere peasants. They didn't appear to be very concerned either, for he went back to pruning his roses and she to baking bread. I went back to my room only to find my red bandanna and my tennis shoes lying on my floor where I'd left them the night before. I went back to bed.

PART TWO: SINS

ONE

There were little sticky dots all over the windshield that wouldn't come off. I got out and tried to scrape them off with my ice scraper but they only streaked further. So I left the car and went back to the beach house.

My Barbara was sitting on the veranda sunning herself. I asked her where Peter and Maggie were and she replied sleepily that they had gone to town to buy some provisions. I told her it was too cold to sit in the sun, to which she answered me with an obscene gesture which I didn't catch. I just knew it was coming and turned away.

The inside of the house was dark, so I lit a candle and picked up a three week old Newsweek which immediately put me to sleep.

TWO

I was awakened by a college of hollers and whimpers. Peter was now yelling at me and all of a sudden he started punching me like a moron. All I did was fall asleep in his chair. So I wrinkled his Newsweek' So what?

All I picked out of his indictment were a few words such as friend, girl, pregnant, fuck, kill, and shit. I had no idea how to put them together though, and before I knew it Peter and Barbara had left the room and driven away, leaving me behind with a sobbing Maggie. She told me they weren't coming back, so we hopped into my Lamborghini, salt drops and all, and drove into Boston. I was totally dumbfounded, to say the least.

I don't believe that stupid dreg never stopped crying all the way to Boston. I knew nothing of the goings-on except for the fact that I was, somehow, to blame.

THREE

The Eldest had told me, at one time, of a couple in Boston whom I could go to in case of sudden emergency. The sunshine had penetrated Boston's purple haze and managed, somehow, to pass through their opaque windowpans. They stared at me in estranged disbelief as I showed up with Maggie at their door. It had been eons since they'd seen me. I gave them my name and he smiled.

"Abe's ward, aren't you?"

"Yes," I admitted.

"A good man...The best."

"To be sure."

Such exchanges continued. It had surely been a long time. He had a friendly smile, a moustache, and curly hair. She was a sort of jolly-rotund. I enjoyed their company and they, mine.

Eventually, I explained my predicament to them, as much of it as I knew. They merely laughed in a comforting sort of way. I loved them.

They re-introduced themselves as Maggie's parents. They then told me to be about my way––that they would take care. I knew and I obeyed.

Nobody bought cigarettes anymore anyway. They just bummed them.

REALITY

It was Autumn. Autumn means pretty leaves, pretty girls and football.

There was a hush about the locker. They were all there, all of them – classmates and teammates. I was starting at split end for the first time all year, since the starter had broken his ankle and the second-stringer had contracted some horrible disease. I donned jockstrap, hip-pads, pants, shoes, shoulder-pads and jersey (in that order) and departed with my teamies through the chute.

After calisthenics, we'd all get in line and when the announcer called our names we'd trot out to midfield and smile at the girls in the stands. Shortly before my name was coming up, I glanced down at my feet and noticed that one shoe was black and the other red. Realizing that this was no way for a starting end to dress, I returned to the locker – all glory aside.

After taking several minutes to decide on the color (I finally decided on black as red clashed with green and yellow) I went back to the chute. I felt more and more like a debutante as the cheering grew louder.

The stadium was empty. There was no one to play with and no one to cheer me on. The silence was silent. I wandered toward midfield looking around in disbelief. A cool Autumn breeze was blowing through my hair and the midday sun reduced my helmet to a black patch upon the grass. My uniform lay at the 50-yard line and on top of that were four roses and a buttercup, casting no shadow.

D N' G: The Theme Once Again

(continued from page five)

one can easily go into debt just trying to live. Yet Mr. Middle continues to buy all the superflous do-dads and gimmicks he sees on television, striving always to ornament his life, decorate the outside surfaces only, yet recognizes no resource depletions, no world famines, nothing. Just the selfish determination to improve the cover of the book while leaving the pages of his soul blank. Middle-class Americans are a truly despicable group.

It is our Middle Class and their "middle-class values" that must be changed. Materialism for decoration and prestige, in short, all non-life-support products and services, must be curtailed if not eliminated. The masses of men, the world over, still want the basics: the security from hunger, cold, disease and death.

We Americans are a pretty smart bunch of fellows. We know full well that if everyone had the basics of life, everyone would probably fare poorly. Eating grain instead of beef, suffering through air-conditioned-less summers, pedaling bicycles instead of driving automobiles – to be brief, we would be as well-off as the average Chinese, if we're lucky. There simply isn't enough World left for everyone to live as extravagantly as we do now. So we pay lip service to the poor and starving and rape their countries of their resources while smugly disguising our greed as philanthropy and self-improvement.

Where is this all leading us? Can you expect the billions of people of the world to tolerate the piggishness of a few million Americans? If Communism doesn't come soon, equalizing the benefits of life, the security from hunger, cold, disease and death, all people will die.

Our fellow citizens, after half a century of experience and prosperity, continue to approve the choice we made. May it be to the world what I believe it will be (to some parts sooner, to others later, but finally to all) the signal of arousing men to burst the chains under which monkish ignorance and superstition had persuaded them to bind themselves, and to assume the blessings and security of self-government. The form which we have substituted restores the free right to the unbounded exercise of reason and freedom of opinion. All eyes are opened, or opening to the rights of man. The general spread of the light of science has already laid open to every view the palpable truth that the mass of mankind has not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately, by the grace of God. These are the grounds of hope for others. For ourselves, let the annual return of this day forever refresh our recollections of these rights, and an undiminished devotion to them.

Looking For Louise

(continued from page five)

shoved some teabags in a pot and soaked em and put em on a flame. That was all the food in the house. Jeddyboy was broker than me, if there are shades to that sort of thing.

My tea was good and hot. I sat on the speaker and asked him what was up. "I'm getting my show together, but I gotta find a place to live in ten days. The rent is up here and we're busted. Brenda burnt up the counter and blew the fuses in the whole apartment house. The landlord's pissed and there ain't nothing I can do. I wish I could buy another month." I liked Jeddyboy; he was up against it, but still felt good. He kept on talking. "Like all I need is more time, man, to paint. I'm trying to build up a permanent reservoir of speed in my body so I can push a button and turn on. All I do is drink coffee, smoke cigarettes, and drink tea. I'm running on low, then I shift into overdrive."

I helped him hang a few paintings. They looked like the rest of the room, but a little more focused. Jeddy had it, but sometimes it got away. I looked at Brenda. She was dark and quiet. Totally absorbed. I finally figured out what she was doing. She was sitting in front of a tiny checkerboard. On the other side of the board was a gold statue of Buddha. He wasn't any noisier than she was.

"Are you playing checkers with Buddha?"

"Yes," she said, looking up at me for the first time since I came in.

"Buddha does everything around here," said Jeddyboy. "We have it easy."

"Yup," I said. I was glad somebody did.

Budget Needs Creativity

by Sidney B. Pogo

The John Dewey Federation feels the Administration of the University of Vermont has not applied enough creative thinking to the present budgetary crisis. The Administration sees budgetary constraints as a way of cutting the education quality and integrity at UVM rather than as a challenge to hold the quality of education at a level in difficult times. During last year's crisis, President Andrews claimed that the University of Vermont budget had been cut to the bone; there was no fat remaining in the budget. He claimed that there could be no further cuts without decreasing the quality of the University. The state of Vermont cannot afford a cut in quality because such a cut would short-change our children and their futures.

We wish to emphasize the following points:

1. UVM is not a state university. The state contributes a comparatively small proportion of the University's budget and lacks direct control over the university or its budget. In fact, the state's contribution to UVM has been declining despite the so-called level funding because of the rapid growth of inflation.

2. The state is currently buying 60% of the classroom space at UVM for 20% of the cost. Education at UVM has been comparable to that of upper-middle level private colleges in the East. The state has been getting a terrific bargain. But there's no such thing as a free lunch. Increased costs at the University have been passed on by:

a. Increasing the price of education for both in-state and out-of-state students. UVM's in-state students pay more for tuition at their university than those in any other state in the country.

b. Increasing the work load of faculty and staff by putting more students in the same number of classes and by decreasing the number of teaching faculty, which probably will result in a lowering of standards.

c. Decreasing the real wages of most employees at UVM.

To sum up: IT'S NOT THE PRESIDENT OR THE TRUSTEES WHO EAT INFLATION AT UVM: IT'S THE PEOPLE WHO WORK HERE -- THE FACULTY AND STAFF -- AND THE STUDENTS.

The quality of education at UVM, already compromised, will deteriorate sharply and may not recover for years. The reason is simple: the administrators at UVM no longer make educational decisions; they make economic and political ones. Administrators claim they cut back to essentials, but what they do, in fact, is cut back on unpopular courses, (no matter how essential they are!) and on powerless faculty members.

As the quality of education at UVM declines, so will the quantity and quality of applicants. As the volume of out-of-state applications declines, the state, even though it pays a relatively small proportion of UVM's budget, and Vermonters who still want to come to UVM, will be paying more and more for less and less. Universities all over the country will be competing during the 1980's for applications from a smaller pool of potential applicants. We cannot compete with lowered standards and higher prices. Universities which can maintain quality at reasonable prices will survive as viable institutions; others may very well die. We believe UVM may survive if other alternatives are considered and the proper decisions are made now.

There are several ways to meet the current operating deficit at UVM, which will probably amount to $500,000 in FY 76 and $1,000,000 in FY 77 under the Governor's "Gloomsday Plan" or $1,000,000/$1,600,000 under his "Doomsday Plan."

1. Tuition can go up even more, real wages can be cut back, and more faculty, staff, and non-academic employees can be fired. This is what the administration did this last year, and we consider it the route to disaster, immediate or in the long run.

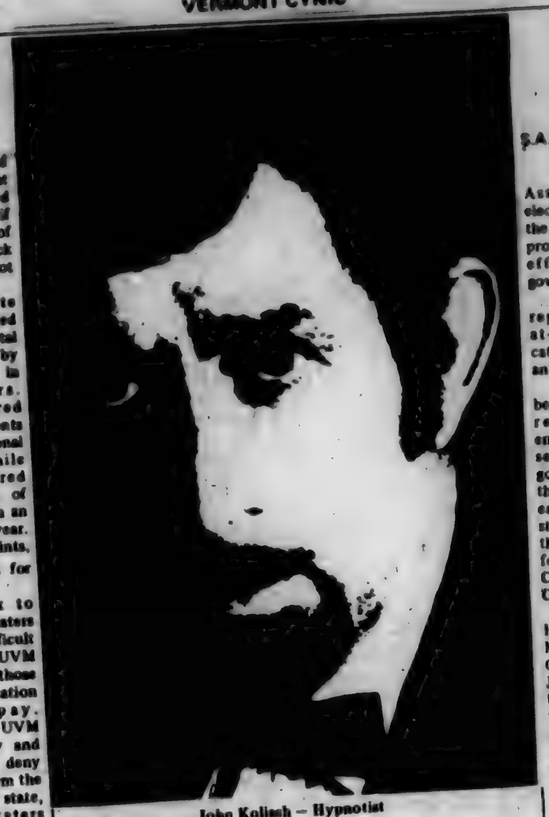
2. The state could increase its appropriation to UVM. This course appears unlikely given the current revenue situation outlined by the Governor.

3. UVM could cut back sharply on certain necessary expenditures for a limited period of time, such as eliminating the travel and library purchasing budgets and following a 50% replacement policy for employees who leave UVM over a twelve month period. This can be done only once, under the direst emergency conditions, and with the understanding that this policy would be reversed very quickly. This policy, if followed for any period of time, would lead to a quick death for the University, not the slow one we have now.

4. More out-of-state students could be admitted either by increasing the total number of students or by admitting out-of-staters in place of Vermonters. Admitting one hundred additional out-of-state students would bring in an additional $300,000 per year while admitting one hundred out-of-staters in place of Vermonters would bring in an additional $200,000 per year. Under the worst constraints, these could be combined for $500,000 per year.

Changing the mix to include more out-of-staters would make it more difficult for Vermonters to attend UVM but would not steal from those who do attend the education for which they pay. Vermonters who attend UVM expect a certain quality and variety of courses; to deny them these is to deny them the education they, and the state, need. With out-of-staters paying more in tuition, programs vital to the education of Vermonters can be preserved. Those who cannot attend UVM can attend the state colleges, which have been improving in quality, and at state-supported tuition rates. This may also help the state colleges by strenthening their enrollments.

We believe this last to be a more practical approach than the present one; we believe it will maintain a level of quality at UVM which will best serve the students and the rest of the citizens of the state. UVM must renegotiate its fiscal relationship with the state government in Montpelier. Its long-range relation to the state must be redefined. The state must recognize that, without a strong university, Vermont would be a less attractive place for business to locate. In order to better serve the citizens and students of Vermont, the quality and integrity of UVM must be maintained; the present course charted by the administration does not promise any such maintainence. We call upon the Administration to put first priorities first and support the education of its students.



John Kolisch -- Hypnotist

The amazing John Kolisch, world's fastest hypnotist, upon popular demand, will be reappearing at Ira Allen Chapel, this coming Saturday, the 18th, at 8:00 p.m.

Tickets are available at Billings Information desk or at the door at a cost of $.75 with student I.D. or $1.50 without I.D.

Senators Elected

S.A. Senators Elected
by Paul Ajamian

The new Student Association Senate has been elected for 1975-76, marking the beginning of what should prove to be a unique and very effective form of student government.

On October 7, 8, and 9, 37 representatives were chosen at-large from one of three categories: on-campus, Greek, and off-campus.

The voter turnout was at best a disappointment, but the results were extremely encouraging. All those elected seem most anxious to do a good job, and they will with the support and suggestions of each and every member of the student body. The winners and their places of residence are as follows:

COMMUNICATIONS COMMITTEE

Julie Cilley – 404 Christie Hall; Alan Conrad – 8 Mansfield Avenue; Cynthia A. Gardner – 115 McAuley Hall; Jayne Piekenpol – 250 So. Union Street; Amy Powell – 273 Colchester Avenue; Mark Rheault – 500 Pine Street, Apt. 7B; Peter Votey – 224 Millis.

FINANCE COMMITTEE

Tim Carney – RR1, Charlotte. Mark Skinner Clarke – 25 Robinson Hall; Elise Fishman – 215 South Prospect Street; Frederick Lux, III – Box 332, L/L Room 151E; David Salce – 119 No. Willard Street; Rick Thomas – 320 Millis.

SPECIAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

Bob Barker – 402 Austin Hall; Liz Bock – 8 Lafayette Place; Elizabeth Burke – 612 Jeanne Mance Hall; L. Rancy Gridley – 216 Simpson Hall; Dennis Meany – 210 Wright Hall; Sandra A. Meyer – 103 McAuley Hall; Ita Moriarty – 400 No. Converse; Robin Sesan 109 Summit Street; John J. Zajac – 313 Austin Hall.

STUDENT ACTION COMMITTEE

Frank Cioffi – 211 Simpson Hall; Butch Crandall – 10 Hungerford Terrace, Apt. 3; Joy DiLorenzo – 316 South Willard Street; Karen Jansen – 225 Davis Hall; Lawrence S. Landry – 1185 Shelburne Road; Robert Millman – 121 Harris Hall; Linda Purdy – 321 Simpson Hall; Laurie Rapp – 363 So. Willard Street; Mark W. Saba – 307 Buckham Hall; Rick Warner – Longmeadow Drive, Shelburne.

STUDENT ACTIVITIES COMMITTEE

Adam L. Alpert – Harbor Road, Shelburne; Ginger Crittenberger – 77 North Union Street; Donald Hannibal – 371 Main Street-Sig Ep; Laura Kaye – 414 Patterson Hall; Lars E. Nielson – 410 Chittenden.

Each senator has been placed on one of five committees according to preference and percentage of vote captured. A meeting of the newly elected representatives was held last night to organize those committees and get the full senate underway.

Subsequent to this, meetings will be held (most often on a committee basis) to investigate and recommend resolutions that will eventually be acted upon by the student body (General Assembly). It is the responsibility of each and every student to attend these meetings and protect his or her own interests.

Don't hesitate to get in touch with the senator(s) in your area – they are depending on your support.

Multiple Choice Exams

by John McDonald

There was very little time left. I struggled to finish the remaining questions, or were they statements? Time was running out and so was my patience; was it A,B,C, or D, or 1,2,3,4? Or is the teacher going to prove himself a moron by giving you the option of "all of the above?" My eyes start to wander to the left and to the right, searching frantically for that small black graphite rectangle. What is the answer to all this ambiguity and confusion? The answer is that multiple-choice testing is the lamest testing method conceivable.

First of all, multiple-choice provides the only opportunity I know of for you to know exactly what the answer is but yet get it wrong. This can happen in two different ways. The answer is either hidden behind lengthy, unnecessary bullroar, or in choosing the right answer in all the confusion and haste to finish, you fill in the wrong space on the separate answer sheet.

And then there is the length of the test. For example, it took a test this week which had 60 multiple choice questions. All of these had 5 possible answers. Now 60 times 5 possible answers plus the 60 questions themselves makes for 360 individual phrases, sentences, double negatives, absurdities, senilities, or whatever which must be read, thought about, thrown out, mentally weighed, sworn at, and all in the space of fifty minutes! The creator of this madness must be lacking in some area, which brings me to my next point...

Any teacher who gives multiple choice exams is running away from his job. Admittedly, reading a hundred or more essays is difficult, but merely checking to see if the pencil mark was appropriately parked has got to be the easiest way of correcting exams. In other works, it is a lazy teacher who gives multiple choice exams.

Also, the way these tests were designed squashes any hope of showing what you really know. It's what you don't know that counts. Just count up the X's and multiply by the value of each question and there you are, sucker!

And then there is the eenie-meenie-minie-moe factor involved in multiple choice tests. Time is running out...you know you cannot possibly finish in the time left. Rather than leave them blank, you scratch out at random, hoping that the odds may save you. I once knew of a student who, experiencing the pains and anxiety of futility, knowing that there was no possible way to finish, labeled his five knuckles A,B,C,D, and E and proceeded to whack them randomly. Which ever one hurt the most earned the honor of becoming that black rectangular mark on the answer sheet.

If teachers are to continue this impersonal, "untesting" exam method, I think that each test should come equipped with this one final question.

61. What do you think of my test?

A) You're a lazy slob
B) My knuckles hurt like Hell
C) I cheated my nads off
D) The answer sheet is wrong
E) All of the above

How could you help but answer E, "all of the above?"

Filmmaker's Festival

Are Vermont filmmakers alive and well? The Burlington area will be given a chance to find out on the weekend of October 17 and 18 at the Vermont Filmmakers and Friends' Festival. This unusual event – an area 'first' – is being sponsored by the Vermont Council on the Arts and Orchid Films. The program, to be held at the Old Arena Theater in the Fleming Museum, Burlington, Vermont, will consist of the following film screenings: Friday, October 17 at 7 p.m.; Saturday, October 18 at 9:30 a.m. and 1 p.m., with super-8 films and videotapes at 4 p.m. Three judges will be present to make a 2 to 3 hour selection of 'outstanding films' from the above to comprise a 'Critic's Choice' screening, Saturday evening at 7 p.m. The public is cordially invited to attend all showings without charge, with the exception of the 'Critic's Choice' on Saturday evening, for which a one dollar donation is requested. This latter selection of films will be offered to ETV for broadcast and may tour various college campuses throughout Vermont.

The organizers of this event, Robin Lloyd and Doreen Kraft; describe the audio-visual menu as a varied one, ranging among 'personal documentaries on Vermont individuals and events; experimental animation, films by children, nature poems, surrealistic fantasies, film memories of the 60's... etc.' As all of the makers of the films are from the Vermont area, many will be in attendance, and ample opportunity will be provided for filmmakers to meet and talk.

Cynic Annual Photo and Writing Contest

The CYNIC announces the Fifth Annual CYNIC Photography Contest. The rules are as follows:

1. The contest is open to all students of the University of Vermont who are amateurs. (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking pictures.)

2. The pictures will be divided into the three following categories: faces, landscaping, and other subjects. The category of other subjects will include any picture not included in the categories of faces and landscapes.

3. All photographs will be black and white and will be approximately 8 X 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.

4. The picture submitted will be the property of the Vermont Cynic, which will have the consent of the photographer to publish them in the newspaper.

5. The Vermont Cynic has the right to request the photographer to submit a subject release form signed by those people who may appear in the photograph.

7. Pictures entered in the Fifth Annual Cynic on the back of each photograph submitted, along with a title, if any.

12. Deadline for entries will be November 27, 1975.

13. One winner will be chosen from each category and the winners will be announced in the December 12 issue of the Cynic.

14. The winner in each category will receive $25.00.

15. All questions should be referred directly to the Cynic Office.

Photography Contest could not have been entered in any other photography contest sponsored by the Cynic.

8. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition by a board of judges.

9. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.

10. All photographs should be placed in the Cynic office or in the Cynic box at the main desk in Billings Center.

11. The photographer's name, address, and telephone number should be lightly printed in pencil

Deadline: Thursday, Nov. 27, Noon

RULES

1. Three categories - short story, essay and poetry.

2. All UVM students, full and part time, may enter.

3. All entries must be typed, double spaced.

4. All entries to be handed in to Cynic office with name and address on separate paper.

5. Limit of 15 pages on short story, 7 pages for essay.

6. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.

7. Winners will be announced in the December 12 issue.

8. First prize in each category: $25.00.

Editor's Note: If anyone did not receive a prize from last semester's contest, please contact Nancy Jansen at the Cynic Office as soon as possible.

Lane Series Presents Chaplin Films

The Gold Rush and Pay Day, both starring Charlie Chaplin, will be the next double-feature movie bill to be presented on Friday evening, October 17, by the Lane Series.

There will be two showings of the classic films, at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium.

The Gold Rush, with special musical score and narration by Chaplin, was voted "the Best Comedy of All Times" by the International Film Critics Poll. The movie was written, produced and directed by Charlie Chaplin.

From the standpoint of sheer production The Gold Rush remains the most ambitious of all the Chaplin films. To tell this story of the turn-of-the-century Klondike gold fever entailed 14 months of filming. Most of the extensive were photographed in the Nevada mountains, to which were brought hundreds of extras for the impressive opening scenes.

Such elaborate production is not to be found in Chaplin's other works, which are by nature more intimate. But The Gold Rush was to be told in the setting of an epic, and no effort or expense was spared.

When released in the summer of 1925, The Gold Rush immediately supplanted all previous Chaplin films in popular acceptance. It is not difficult to understand why, for this film easily rates as one of the most nearly-perfect motion pictures ever made. There are other Chaplin films with more laughs and others that are more moving, but the blending of comedy, drama and excitement is unique.

Pay Day, also written, produced and directed by Charlie Chaplin, was released in 1922, with music score, composed by Chaplin, added in 1971.

This charming essay on a day in the life of a mud-beleaguered construction worker was to be Chaplin's last short comedy. Starring in Pay Day, which is now being released for the first time in 50 years, is Chaplin's brother, Sydney Chaplin.

Tickets, $1 each, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at the door. For reservation, telephone 656-3418.

The next movie on the Chaplin Classics Series will be City Lights, October 24.

IRA Sponsors Blood Donations

The Red Cross Blood Center is opening its doors to welcome the University of Vermont!

Yes, we need you!

The Inter-Residence Association is sponsoring a competition between the dorms to stimulate blood donation among UVM students. Prizes will be awarded at the end of the semester after all floors have had the opportunity to donate.

All residents planning to donate on the scheduled day should sign up at specified sign-up areas in the dorm the week preceeding scheduled dorm blood donating times. This is extremely important in maintaining the quick processing and smooth system the mini-drawings enjoy now.

If for some reason, you are unable to donate on the day your floor is scheduled, please call 864-4541 for an appointment at a more convenient time. All blood is donated at the Red Cross on Mansfield Avenue. Dorms scheduled for drawings will be published monthly in the Cynic. October dates on which dorms are scheduled to give are:

Monday, October 20 – 9-11 a.m. L/L A Building;
Tuesday, October 21 – 12-2 p.m. L/L B Building.
Wednesday, October 22 – 9-11 a.m. L/L C Building;
Thursday, October 23 – 12-2 p.m. L/L D Building;
Friday, October 24 – 9-11 a.m. L/L E Building;

30's Photography

On Wednesday, October 22 at 8 p.m., the Robert Hull Fleming Museum, UVM, presents the second in a series of free public lectures. The subject of the slide illustrated presentation will be The F.S.A.: Photography as Social Comment in the 30's

During the Depression, many artists were provided with jobs by the Works Progress Administration, resulting in a proliferation of murals on public buildings, public sculpture, architecture, and the publication of photography books which made significant social statements about the era. Documentary photographs of such lauded photographers as Walker Evans and Dorothea Lange will be discussed in the Wednesday evening lecture. The photographs chosen for this discussion are also important in the aesthetic development of photographic history. Vermont Photography '75, a juried exhibition of current work by Vermont photographers, will be on display in the Front and Main Galleries.

The speaker will be Judith Gerber, instructor in Art at UVM. Ms. Gerber recently moved to Burlington from her position on the Emerson College faculty in Boston. She studied Fine Arts at the Boston Museum School, and at Tufts University. She is currently director of the Museum Studies course offered by the UVM Evening Division in conjunction with the Museum's public lecture series.

••• CLASSIFIED •••

For sale – old fashioned cast iron single bed – $20 – matress included if desired. Call Alison Trules, 863-1260.

For Sale – 1967 Datsun R411 – low milage, new brakes & exhaust system, 2 snow tires – automatic, various spare parts $500. Nancy x2045 or after 5 at 482-2027.

For Sale – 1 pr. Dynamic Skis 337, 200 cm; 1 pr. Kneind – white star supers, 190 cm, USED ONCE; 1 pr. Rossignol ST 650, 195 cm. Call 863-3200.

8 room country house for rent January–June. 4 bedrooms, 2 wood-burning stoves and fireplace, 9 acres and barn. Family preferred. $300 per month, plus utilities. Seybolt, Underhill, 899-3371.

For Sale – 10 speed bike – Paris sport 19" frame – $95 (price if new); 1 year old – barely used, excellent condition. Call Sara 656-2449 and leave message.

Apt. to share – starting Nov. 1. Female grad. student or working independent preferred $107/mo. Beautiful new, sunny – Mallets Bay.

Wanted – 2 roomates – male or female. Own bedroom $34 a month. At present time $25 a month due to some inconveniences, but in month or so will break to $34 because inconveniences will no longer exist. If interested, stop by at 53 North Champlain St. and see Tom or Danny.

Lost: one star sapphire ring, pink stone set in silver. Lost near Williams Science Hall or surroundings. Tremendous importance and sentimental value. Extremely generous reward offered. Contact Pam Rodman at 656-4255.

For Sale: Beautiful pony hunter. Guaranteed sound & very gentle. Excellent mover and safe jumper. All attributes of a horse packed into a pony package. Ready to carry a child into the ribbons & perfect pony club prospect. Asking $500. Call Geoff or Kathy at x2638 or 862-9226.

Hockey Goaltender's Equipment: CCM super-pro pads, cooper GC 10 mitt, chest protector, pants, equipment bag, etc. Cost about $200 new – asking $65. Call Geoff at x2638 or 862-9226.

Free to good home – a large pinto shetland pony. Drives well, very safe & gentle. Coggins tested & very healthy. Loving home a must. Call Geoff at x2638 or 862-9226.

Tires for sale: Excellent condition Pirelli snows – 13" – used on Toyota. Best offer. Call Richard at 862-3913.

For Sale – Dolomite Sintesi Comp. ski boots, fits 9–10, good condition $55; Look Nevatic –55 bindings $30; best ST-650's $15; Solomon 40 toes $10. Ext. 2289. Ask for Robert, evenings.

Earn up to $1800 a school year or more posting educational literature on campus in spare time. Send name, address, phone, school and references to: Nationwide College Marketing Services, Inc., P.O. Box 1384, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106. Call (313) 662-1770.

For Sale: Skis 200 cm. Volkyl Wedelin – almost brand new with Look Nevada toes + Marker Rotomat heels mounted $40 – worth if for bindings alone – Pete Lachowsky 214 Millis, ext. 3807.

For Sale: Ice Skates size 6 CCM tacks ($100 new) $20, will fit men's size 8-9, Bill Spino, Box 365, Med. School, 644-5339

news

Oktoberfest

by Sari Bodi

Redstone Campus, transformed into a German Village, attracted approximately 5,000 people for its annual Oktoberfest last Saturday. The transformation was due in part to Redstone's dorm competition which provided a pretzel factory with instructions for baking pretzels on Hamilton's windows; Mount Cristie, complete with a daring mountain climber scaling its treacherous facade; Wright Hall's giant beer stein for the chugger's delight; and Robinson's Black Forest with a goat to add to its authenticity.

Students, parents, and alumni were informed of the many events of the day by fraulein emerging from a cuckoo clock atop the Wing-Davis-Wilks Complex. The announcers, attired in outfits from German folk dress to pink shaggy showercaps, also translated proverbs into English and German.

Pasteboard alpine costumes with cut-out heads for picture-taking and pumpkin peddlars sat outside the WDW complex while numerous Vermont craft vendors lined its

Presents Thrilled by Mountain C

SLEEPING BAGS
10 Gerry Yosemite (reg
Gerry Camper Sleeper
13 Regular
23 Large
8 Gerry Backpacker (Re
30 EMS Teton
35 EMS Blueridge
EMS Mt. ROBSON
15 Regular
15 Large
40 Hunter Dacron Slee
10 Hunter Aurora (Pola

This is partial many on sal

news

Oktoberfest Provides Festive Spirit

by Sari Bodi

Redstone Campus, transformed into a German Village, attracted approximately 5,000 people for its annual Oktoberfest last Saturday. The transformation was due in part to Redstone's dorm competition which provided a pretzel factory with instructions for baking pretzels on Hamilton's windows; Mount Cristie, complete with a daring mountain climber scaling its treacherous facade; Wright Hall's giant beer stein for the chugger's delight; and Robinson's Black Forest with a goat to add to its authenticity.

Students, parents, and alumni were informed of the many events of the day by fraulein emerging from a cuckoo clock atop the Wing-Davis-Wilks Complex. The announcers, attired in outfits from German folk dress to pink shaggy showercaps, also translated proverbs into English and German.

Pasteboard alpine costumes with cut-out heads for picture-taking and pumpkin peddlars sat outside the WDW complex while numerous Vermont craft vendors lined its interior. Feather jewelry, quilts, hand candles, and carved wooden chairs were among the goods which could be purchased.

The festive spirit was maintained throughout the day, especially through the use of the $1.50 beer mugs which were frequently replenished in the Beer Garden (a blue and white striped tent.) A German band and the UVM band contributed to the robust atmosphere. Hardy appetites could be appeased at the food stands stocked with knockwurst and sauerkraut, brown bread and cheese, apples, pastries, and German chocolate cake.

One of the main attractions was an act by members of the Bread and Puppet Theatre of Glover. Peter Schuman and Mike Romanyshyn danced on stilts, precariously careening to fiddle music. With the help of John Bell, paper mache puppets told the story of "The Blue Lady That Fell in Love."

The UVM Folk Dance Club garbed in peasant costumes, gayly clomped, clapped, and shouted as they entertained on a platform in front of WDW. One of the more intricate dances formed the shape of the King of Clubs.

Two contests drew several entries and many spectators. The first, an egg-dropping contest, sponsored by the UVM Society of Civil Engineers, required the entrants to design a structure which would allow an egg to drop from a distance of at least 30 feet without breaking. Diane Greene won the contest and a calculator by using three helium balloons to carry the egg.

The second contest, a Bavarian Cream Pie-eating contest, earned the winner, Dick Stewart, a wooden plaque proclaiming this honor and a pie-encrusted face. The contest ended with the usual pie-throwing among the losers and the involvement of near-by spectators.

The crowds began dispersing after 3:30 in the afternoon, probably to the relief of a seemingly indifferent cow and a caged piglet, who had been brought from the UVM Farm for display.

Mountain Climber scales Mount Christie Photo by David Jaffe

Free Press Enjoys Large Circulation

by Steve Brown

In the year 1827 the Burlington Free Press began operation in the State of Vermont. Today it is Vermont's largest newspaper and in its 9 county service area reaches, as of March 18, 1975, 285,300 individuals. The Free Press bills itself as Vermont's No. 1 Salesman and as the state grows so will the newspaper and its effect on the buyer in Northern Vermont.

The fact is that for every 3 families that moved into Vermont in 1974 only one family moved out. Vermont was the Nation's leading "Magnet" state for the third consecutive year.

Circulation is the key to the success of any newspaper. If many people are going to see your paper everyday, then the power of advertising in your paper will be enhanced to the businessman. The Free Press daily circulation reaches 285,300 people. That number equates to 87,100 households with an effective buying power of $1,016,638,000 according to the Sales Management Survey of Buying Power in March of 1975. The paper is read daily by 3 out of 5 families in Northern Vermont. In its 9 county district (Chittenden, Addison, Lamoille, Franklin, Grand Isle, Washington, Orleans, Caledonia and Essex), the Free Press has 52 percent overall coverage. These statistics are impressive by anyone's standards and that is why the Burlington Free Press is a successful daily paper. Its power as a salesman and an informer is awesome in Northern Vermont.

Over a seven day period, Sept. 9-13, 15, 16, the length of the paper averaged 37 pages. According to William Hyvonen, a Free Press advertising representative, 45 percent of that space was devoted to advertising. Mr. Hyvonen said that the paper is "economically very sound.... if it wasn't we wouldn't make the financial commitment involved in putting out our new Sunday Edition." The first issue of the Sunday Burlington Free Press will be out Oct. 26. It is expected to be between 75 and 100 pages in length and will contain 3 separate magazine sections. Mr Hyvonen said that at least 15 more employees have been hired to produce this new effort and that the total employee count for the Free Press at this time is probably two hundred. It is through advertising revenues and the daily sale's average of 47,000 papers at $.20 a paper that those two hundred employees make a living.

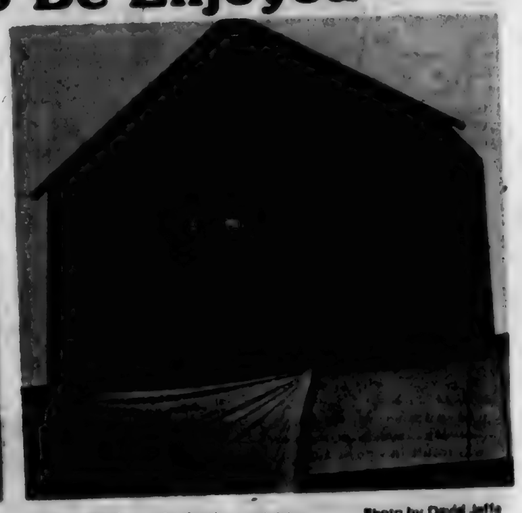
Advertising and Sales revenue also pays for the Free Press' liberal use of news services. For the seven days examined, the first section of each issue was clearly dominated by Associated Press Stories. The only exceptions were purely Vermont related stories and the obituaries. Extensive use of large

(continued on page twelve)

...And Many Activities To Be Enjoyed

Parents Thrilled by Mountain Climbers Photo by David Jaffe

UVM Folk Dance Club perform peasant dance. Photo by David Jaffe



Cuckoo Clock overlooks the festivities. Photo by David Jaffe

ANNUAL FALL SALE 1975
Oct. 15, 16, 17 & 18

CROSS-COUNTRY SKI PACKAGES

Asnes Turiangrenn (Hickory Bottom with Lignostone edges)	$ 56.00	EMS 2000 Light Touring Ski (Hickory Bottom with Lignostone edges)	$54.50
Cross-Country Boot	38.50	Cross-Country Boot	38.50
Three-pin Binding	8.50	Three-pin Binding	8.50
Bamboo Poles	9.95	Bamboo Poles	9.95
Total Suggested Retail Price	112.95	Total Suggested Retail Price	111.45
FALL SALE PACKAGE PRICE	79.50	FALL SALE PACKAGE PRICE	79.50

EMS Introduces the new Lovett Fiberglass Cross-Country Ski

	Ski only	EMS Package Price
Lovett Touring Ski	$69.50	$109.50
Lovett Mohair Ski	74.50	114.50
Lovett Mountain Ski	89.50

All Sale Items Reduced An Extra 5% On Saturday!

	Sale Price	Suggested Retail
SLEEPING BAGS
10 Gerry Yosemite (regular)	$73.95	115.50
Gerry Camper Sleeper
13 Regular	71.95	110.00
23 Large	74.95	115.00
8 Gerry Backpacker (Regular)	76.95	118.50
30 EMS Teton	67.95	89.50
25 EMS Bluebridge	40.25	47.50
EMS Mt. ROBSON
15 Regular	74.50	99.50
15 Large	79.95	106.50
40 Hunter Deuxen Sleeper	26.00	28.50
10 Hunter Aurora (Polarguard)	47.50	55.00

This is only a partial listing, many more items on sale !

PARKAS
20 Alpine Designs Alpinist Parka (seconds)	32.50	49.50
15 Alpine Designs Cirque Down Parka (seconds)	34.50	52.50
10 Alpine Designs Expedition (limited sizes)	74.95	115.00
8 Alpine Designs Glacier (limited sizes)	64.95	99.50
55 EMS Mansfield Polyester Parka w/ Hood	46.25	57.50
8 Western Trail Town & Country	39.50	49.50
15 Alpine Designs Super Sweater (Lg. & XLg.)	25.50	39.50
19 Gerry Makalu	49.95	79.00
50 EMS Wabun Polyester Parka w/ Hood	38.25	47.50
175 EMS Patagonia w/ Hood	52.50	57.50
150 EMS Yeti w/ Hood	58.50	64.50
40 Camp 7 Cascade	42.00	52.50
5 Camp 7 Pemir	48.50	64.50
150 EMS Bugaboo Parka w/ Hood	47.50	52.50

CLOTHING
20 Alpine Designs Mountain Parka (seconds)	28.50	43.50
22 EMS Packboard Poncho	16.50	20.50
20 pr. EMS Corduroy Knickers (Men's & Women's)	24.50	27.50
60 EMS 60/40 Parkas	29.95	39.50
40 Western Trails 65/35 Parka	24.00	34.50
31 EMS El Cheapo Rain Parka (Adult's)	11.50	14.00
17 EMS El Cheapo Rain Pants (Adult's)	8.95	11.00
13 EMS El Cheapo Rain Parka (Child's)	9.50	11.00
10 EMS El Cheapo Rain Pants (Child's)	6.00	7.50
15 Grott Child's Knickers	9.95	18.00
75 pr. Raichle Hiker Boots	44.50	52.50
100 pr. EMS Super Down Gloves	15.95	20.50
100 pr. EMS Deluxe Down Mittens	14.95	19.50

PACKS
9 Gerry Assault w/o pockets	37.50	50.00
50 Kelty Basic	32.50	37.00
20 Canyon Divided (Lg. & Sm.)	29.50	34.50
21 Alpine Designs Senior Day Pack	15.95	19.50
100 EMS Day Pack (Adult)	8.95	12.00
20 EMS Day Pack (Child's)	7.00	8.00
16 Cannondale Frame Packs	30% off
TENTS
24 Gerry Yearround II (Old Model)	108.00	135.00
4 Gerry Lodgepole (Old Model)	58.50	73.00
7 Alpine Designs Timberline	99.50	120.00
7 Eureka Mt. Katahdin (3 man)	76.95	84.95
36 EMS Mosquito Net	67.95	85.00
BICYCLE ACCESSORIES
27 Fletcher Racks	3.95	4.95
3 pr. Cannondale Fenders	21.50	26.50
13 Cannondale Handlebar Packs	7.50	9.50
MISCELLANEOUS
94 Gerry Ministove w/ Cartridge	12.50	16.00
20 Gerry Tourist Cook Kit	4.95	11.50
1 Hollowform Kayak	240.00	299.00

Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.

SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY, LIGHTWEIGHT CROSSCOUNTRY, CAMPING AND MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT

100 DORSET STREET SOUTH BURLINGTON, VERMONT 05401

Tel. (802) 864-0473

Red China Slide Show At L/L

Frances Uptegrove will be on campus this coming Sunday to visit with her friends and show slides of her recent trip to the People's Republic of China. A student of Chinese language for the past two years here at UVM, Ms. Uptegrove spent April and May studying and working in the famous Tachai Commune and an electrical factory in Shanghai. Visiting China with a group of 24 Americans, she had an opportunity to gain insights into the everyday life and working conditions of ordinary Chinese peasants and workers. This opportunity is rarely afforded visitors from the outside. A letter which Ms. Uptegrove sent in April, to her Chinese teacher, John Berninghausen, and the University who wish to be candidates are invited to write Professor James Howe, Chairman of the Search Committee, at the English Department by October 24. A slide show of her trip will be presented Sunday, Oct. 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the Living/Learning Center, Commons 216. Her visit is being sponsored by the Chinese language program and the Asian Cultural Exchange.

In her letter to her students with whom she had studied Chinese talks of her stay at the Tachai Bridge in Shanxi Province. "...I think it's important to realize that China is still a very poor country. We are now in an area where centuries of human habitation have practically denuded the land of any living thing and the great projects underway are all aimed at undoing this damage--stabilizing the soil through reforestation, terracing, reservoirs and rechanneling of rivers, etc. The amount of human labor that has gone into these projects just since '66 is astounding."

All members of the UVM Community and the public are invited to attend Ms. Uptegrove's report on China on Sunday evening, Oct. 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the Living/Learning Center, Commons 216. Her visit is being sponsored by the Chinese language program and the Asian Cultural Exchange.

Peasants working at Tachai Commune in China.

Students Linked To Campus Crime

by Mary D. Partridge

"95 percent of crimes which occur on campus are committed by UVM students," said Richard Scott-Smith, chief of the UVM Security Services.

"Theft and minor assault have been the major problems since school started. There has already been $8000 worth of theft, not including two cars which are still missing. So far, we have been able to recover $1800 worth," said Scott-Smith. The favorite theft items are desk calculators, stereos, dorm lounge furniture and an occasional car when the keys are left in it.

The minor assaults range from women getting pinched or grabbed, to men found naked in women's shower-rooms. Upon occasion, said Scott-Smith, the violators are caught.

"These incidents occur in well-lit areas which are regularly patrolled. One way to help prevent them is for women not to walk alone at night, and although it is a contradiction, they should walk on the well-lit pathways," Scott-Smith said.

"The three main areas where problems occur," he continued, "are on Main Street between the reservoir and the Living/Learning walk, in back of Coolidge Hall, and by the front of the gym. These are all well-lit places and, with the exception of Main Street, they are within 100 feet of 1000 people."

At night, there are three or four walking patrolmen, two cars and a sergent, and a student is hired by Security to walk the Redstone path. In addition, three city police cruisers cover the UVM area.

There are 30 trained policemen on the Security force, including three women. (One woman, a sargent, was one of the first female patrolmen in the state, as opposed to the more common female "patrolwomen.") A dispatcher is in the Waterman office at all times. There are ten work-study students employed as well.

"We would like more people," said Scott-Smith, "but right now there is a freeze on hiring at UVM. This also means that if we lose anyone from the force, they cannot be replaced."

Work-study students were first employed by Security three years ago in a program initiated by Scott-Smith. He considers them "good people who are familiar with the University," and said that "having students on the force has made a difference in the attitude of the regular people towards students."

Scott-Smith pointed out that the University security system has become more centralized in the past few years. Formerly, he said, night clerks in the dorms were outsiders hired by the individual dormitories. "These people didn't know who was supposed to be there and who wasn't; or who was supposed to be moving furniture out..."

Now desk clerks are students hired by Security and if possible they work in their own dorms.

By centralizing the force, Scott-Smith hopes that Security will hear about more of the crimes which are committed on campus. "In the past we sometimes didn't hear about an act of violence until several hours or even days after it occurred," he said.

"Crimes which are committed off-campus against students should be reported to the city police and/or to Security," said Scott-Smith. "We have direct communication with all emergency facilities."

Scott-Smith stressed the importance of reporting incidents. "Students are afraid that if they blow the whistle on another student, the guy will have to go to jail. But there is a very good judicial system through the Dean's office. We aren't terribly interested in punishing the person. We want to teach him not to steal or commit other crimes. We want to turn him into an honest, productive person."

Free Press

(continued from page eleven)

photographs also play an important role in the Free Press, especially the first pages of each section. Along with the A.P., the Free Press uses the Free Press - Gannett News Service, the Washington Post News Service, Reuters, and the N.Y. Times News Service.

There seems to be little question regarding the continued success of the Free Press. Mr. Hyvonen said that the likelihood of another paper succeeding in the Burlington area is "very poor...and the financial obligation to pull it off would be in the millions of dollars." With that in mind any aspiring young publisher ought to think twice before making the dive into the Burlington market. The Burlington Free Press is Vermont's largest newspaper and as Vermont grows so will its strength both as a news informer and a salesman.

Sigma Phi Admits Women Pledges

by Dan Haslam

Five University of Vermont co-eds have become the first females ever to join a men's fraternity on a co-equal status on this campus.

Sigma Phi Epsilon, the third largest Greek fraternity at UVM, established the Order of the Golden Hearts last semester with a cross-section of girls as charter members, whose task it has been to draw up plans to achieve an equal footing with the forty-plus male stronghold at 371 Main Street.

"Boy, that was a really nice ceremony," one of the girls commented after initiation was over. All of the girls agreed that they were nervous prior to initiation and seemed relieved when it was over and they could talk about their new status as Golden Hearts. The five initiates, Joy Kearney of Danbury, Conn., Paula Erickson of Montpelier, Kim Meyer of Wrentham, Mass., Kim Nitskey of Hershey, Penn., and Sue Parkhurst of Winchester, Mass., have big plans for their organization in the year ahead.

"First we want to get our constitution approved," Miss Nitskey volunteered, "and then out into the dorms to 'rush' new members." 'Rush' is the process of attracting new members to a fraternity or sorority.

The girls have organized themselves into five skeleton crews, each covering a specific function of their program for the year. Joy Kearney will represent the Golden Hearts as a liason with the brothers in the fraternity, and Kim Meyer will coordinate and chair the weekly meetings of the girls. Sue Parkhurst, a member of a sorority in addition to being a Golden Heart, will take care of communications for the organization, and Kim Nitskey, also a sorority member, will coordinate rush efforts. Paula Erickson, a nursing student, will act as treasurer for the group.

The concept of an Order of Golden Hearts was founded by the national organization of Sigma Phi Epsilon in Richmond, Va. in response to a Supreme Court ruling two years ago which prohibited organizations from sex discrimination in admitting new members. Rather than challenge the ruling, Sigma Phi Epsilon created an associate organization of female helpmates, the Golden Hearts. At the beginning, the Golden Hearts operated under a separate-but-equal status, but gradually the idea caught on and Golden Hearts groups began to appear at Sig Ep chapters throughout the country. At present, the Order of the Golden Hearts is an autonomous group, subject to advice from the host chapter brotherhood, but this advice is generally only offered to keep the missions of the Golden Hearts consistent with chapter and national policies.

For the Vermont Gamma chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon, the Golden Hearts program has brought about some useful changes in the fraternity's operation. Friday night's social event, "Katchabuz," now features a female bartender, and the girls are planning on joining the chapter in the athletic competition at the Greek games later in October. The girls will also be present for many of the social events of the chapter, assisting with the brothers' rush, cocktail parties and Homecoming events later this fall.

"It's just good having them around," one of the brothers commented. "We have opened our doors just a little bit and have found that the roof didn't cave in by having girls join us."

But everyone at the Sig Ep house on Main Street agrees the fraternity's image is changing. Next year's photographic composite of membership will add a new wrinkle--female faces--and that, the brothers agree, is something to smile about.

Geological Society To Meet

Is the Champlain Valley a high earthquake risk area?

Did 1830 flood waters from the Alder Brook have a major impact on the Winooski River Basin with long term results showing up today in recent suburban development?

Discussion and study of those questions will form the basis for the annual meeting of the Vermont Geological Society (VGS) Saturday, Oct. 18, to be hosted by UVM's department of Geology. The meeting, which will feature two field trips that address the above questions, is open to all interested persons and to members of the Society.

Dr. Dallas Rhodes, UVM assistant professor of Geology and president of VGS will lead the Saturday morning field trip. The trip will be concerned with a July 26, 1830 event which changed the course of the Alder Brook. Starting point will be the parking lot at UVM's Perkins Geology Building, at 10 a.m.

UVM Geology Department Chairman Rolfe Stanley will also lead a trip starting at 10 a.m. from the east parking lot of UVM's Gutterson Field House to consider "recently discovered high angle faults" in west central Vermont.

The trips will be followed Saturday evening by a 6 p.m. social and 7 p.m. dinner at the Sheraton Motor Inn in South Burlington.

Advance registration (required for the social and dinner) may be made until Oct. 13, by writing Dr. David Bucke, department of Geology at UVM, Burlington, Vt. A registration desk will also be set up at UVM's Perkins Geology Building on Friday, Oct. 17, from 7-9:30 p.m.; and from 8-9:30 a.m. on Saturday Oct. 18.

Until July 26, 1830, Alder Brook was a tributary of Browns River. On that day flood waters overtopped a small dam and sought a new course southward through a small tributary of the Winooski River. Within minutes, according to Dr. Rhodes, the Winooski tributary acquired additional drainage area nearly five times larger than the size of the original basin, and Alder Brook shortened its previous course by more than one mile, establishing a new local base level approximately 185 feet lower than its previous position.

The stream has been making adjustments to compensate for the past 145 years. Recent suburban developments, however, have conflicted with the new stream regimen.

The Champlain Valley may be an earthquake risk area. Detailed mapping during the last several years has uncovered a system of major, north trending normal faults along the Eastern limb of the Hinesburg synclinorium (in geology, a syncline is a fold of stratified rock inclining upwards in opposite directions from both sides of its axis).

The Monkton thrust, mapped by Wallace Cady, is part of this system and is reinterpreted as a "west dipping normal fault which isolates the Cheshire Quartzite of Monkton Ridge and East Monkton as a horst (in geology, a raised rock mass between two faults)."

Although one of the splinter faults is cut by a late Mezozoic era dike, the system is thought to have developed earlier in the Mezozoic in conjunction with the early opening of the Atlantic.

Although most major faults in Western Vermont are quite old and are not likely to be a source of earthquakes, the new system of faults recently discovered is more likely to be an earthquake source, Dr. Stanley said.

The field trip will discuss the application of this information to such environmental problems as groundwater and earthquake hazards.

20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices

LOOK

sweaters for now and later

90% WOOL SWEATERS

TURTLENECK reg. $11.99 NOW $5.99
CREWNECK reg. $10.95 NOW $4.99
"V" NECK reg. $10.95 NOW $4.99

DENIM IS DYNAMITE!

PRE-WASHED CARTER Jeans

SANFORIZED CARTERS PAINTERS PANTS plus NOW 9.95 with $10.95

MORE OF THE BEST FOR LESS

IF YOU FIND IT INCONVENIENT TO BUY NOW USE OUR LAYAWAY PLAN!

THE STORE FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

FACTORY PRICES YOU CAN'T HELP BUT SAVE AT THE CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE

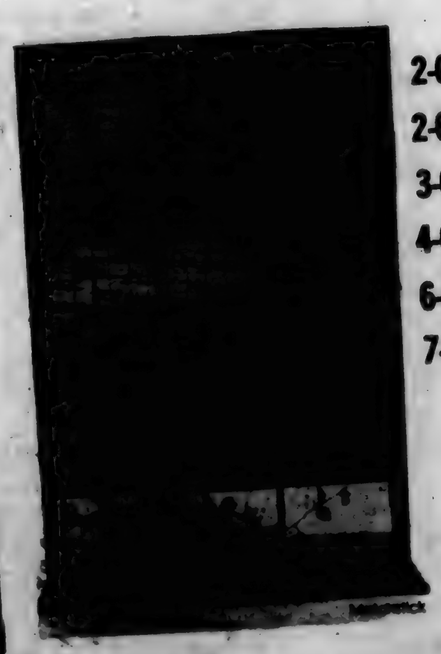
Layaways

Phone 862-1849
65 MAIN ST., BURLINGTON, VT.
OPEN DAILY 9-9 SAT. 9-5

20,000 Sweaters at Factory Prices

MAGRAMS It's an Experience

Introducing with saving of 1/3 off on Matchstick Roll-Up Blinds.



2-0 x 6-0	reg 5.00
2-6 x 6-0	6.00
3-0 x 6-0	7.00
4-0 x 6-0	10.00
6-0 x 6-0	14.00
7-0 x 6-0	17.00

Visit soon our new Wicker Shop for baskets, hampers, tables, and more from all across the world.

Wicker Shop – Fifth Level.

Watts the problem? A Sony amplifier is the answer.

When an amplifier starts to add things to the music that wasn't there, that's bad. Or when it can't handle high's or low's that's bad too. With a Sony integrated stereo amplifier you get it straight...nothing added or taken away until you decide to. And when you do, there's a full array of tone and balance controls to let you do just that. So know what you're getting out of your amplifier. Get a Sony integrated stereo amplifier. It can make the difference between music and noise.

TA-4650 INTEGRATED STEREO AMPLIFIER

- Newly developed true complementary vertical FET power amplifier stage, for the natural, high definition triode sound
- Direct coupled power amplifier stage
- Inputs for 2 phono sources, tuner, 2 aux. sources, 2 tape playback sources and external adaptor
- Preamp outputs and power amp inputs
- Direct coupled FET amplifiers in tone control and buffer stages
- Phono stage with newly developed LEC (low emitter concentration) transistors coupled directly to a low signal V-FET
- Tape monitor for 2 recorders and independent tape dubbing switch
- Precision volume control with muting switch

"IT'S A SONY"

CREATIVE SOUND

NEXT TO K-MART • S. BURLINGTON, VT.

OVP: What It Can Do For You

The Office of Volunteer Programs is a link between the University and the surrounding community through PCC projects, UVA projects and other long and short-term community placements. The PCC consists of approximately fifteen student-run volunteer projects working in the areas of health, education, youth, social issues, and the elderly. UVA projects are in similar areas as PCC projects but differ in that a full-time year commitment on the part of the student is required. Short and long-term community placements exist in numerous and varied community agencies, schools, and programs.

Our initial service to you as a student or community volunteer is to assist you in finding experiential learning opportunities. We will aid you in seeking alternatives to the classroom, in making rewarding use of leisure times, in short, developing a total learning experience which meets your needs. You can look to OVP as a personal resource, a place to air new ideas and a supportive atmosphere for self-directed education and services.

Our staff consists of part-time volunteers, full-time University Year for ACTION (UYA) interns, and experienced professionals, all more than willing to sit down and talk with you, helping channel your energies into a valuable volunteer internship experience.

The volunteer internship you choose may be a structured project that requires the same time commitment each week or an unstructured one in which you design your own schedule. You can work a few hours or many, depending upon your own interests and the needs of your host agency. You may also work on one-shot or short-term projects that do not involve an ongoing commitment.

STEADY PART TIME AND SUMMER INCOME AT CUTCO SALES & SALES MANAGEMENT

–EXCELLENT TRAINING & EDUCATION
–$3–7000 & INCOMES TO STUDENTS WHO QUALIFY
–EXPERIENCE NOT REQUIRED; CAR IS

Write: Cutco
Box 902
Burlington, Vermont

PCC- What Is It ?

"Volunteering," as the dictionary states is "to offer oneself or one's services for some undertaking or purpose." At the Office of Volunteer Programs our "undertaking or purpose" is to make the community better by helping those who need help while at the same time providing a unique educational experience.

The Project Coordinators Council of the Office of Volunteer Programs was developed to assist students with planning and implementation of the volunteer projects serving specific needs in the Burlington Community. Presently, the PCC consists of approximately fifteen student-run volunteer projects working in the areas of health, education, youth, social issues, and the elderly. Students who are individual Project Director/Coordinators serve on the council. Coordinators take the responsibility for coordinating the work of the project volunteers, and maintain a liaison with professionals.

Another primary concern of the PCC is to facilitate the learning process which volunteers experience. Resources such as workshops and seminars related to voluntary work, experiential learning, and personal growth will be offered to all volunteers. We believe these PCC sponsored programs will enhance the volunteer's experience in learning and, in turn, augment the services being offered to the community.

The following are examples of PCC projects: Actionfest; Adopt-A-Grandparent; Big Brother/Big Sister; H.O. Wheeler Tutorial Program; King Street Area Youth Program; North Park 4-H Youth Center; Pine Ridge School Radio Station; and Vermont Special Olympics.

UYA-An Alternative

University Year for Action is an off-campus, student-intern program jointly funded by the University of Vermont, the Vermont State Colleges, community agencies, and ACTION (the agency which sponsors Peace Corps and VISTA). U.Y.A. projects primarily serve the needs of low-income Vermonters. The program is one of a number of community service-learning programs administered by the Office of Volunteer Programs at UVM.

The Office of Volunteer Programs staff solicits new project proposals from human services agencies throughout Vermont. Typically, projects are developed in the areas of legal services, corrections, business, housing, environmental protection, consumer protection, health care, social services, and education. Final proposals are selected on the basis of such criteria as 1. the learning potential for the student intern, 2. availability of qualified agency supervision 3. clarity of job description 4. ability of agency to cost-share on project support.

Students are then recruited for available positions (usually between 50-60), go through an interview and application process, and visit potential internship sites. Any undergraduate or graduate student who is a full-time student in a degree program is eligible to apply for U.Y.A.

A U.Y.A. volunteer makes a commitment to serve full-time for twelve months; to integrate the internship year with his/her academic program and personal learning goals; to live, in so far as is possible, the community where he/she serves; to bring university resources such as faculty

(continued on page fourteen)

Put Your Ideas To Work

Have you ever toyed with the idea of starting a project to fill an unmet need that you have discovered? Have you and your friends been doing volunteer work on your own but now find that you need financial and organizational assistance? If so, the staff at OVP is available to help you set up or expand your program. The following is the account of how one UVM student, Debbie Hoffman, saw the need for a Council for Exceptional Children, and decided to make it become a reality:

"I entered Keene State in New Hampshire as a freshman special education major and was the assistant head of the C.E.C. chapter there. Then in my sophomore year I took over as head of that chapter. Last year, I transferred to UVM because of the special ed. program here. When I arrived, I realized the pressing need for an organization like the C.E.C., and I felt that I had enough experience to begin a new chapter. After talking with the special ed. department and going through the appropriate channels, we received recognition and approval from UVM, SA, OVP, and the PCC. We also obtained funding from the PCC which will be a great benefit to our program.

The object of C.E.C. is to supply special children with the same opportunities that "normal" children have. The C.E.C. does this by sending college students to various special schools and by providing the children with diverse activities that they can participate in. Thus, they all learn from each other both inside and outside the classroom.

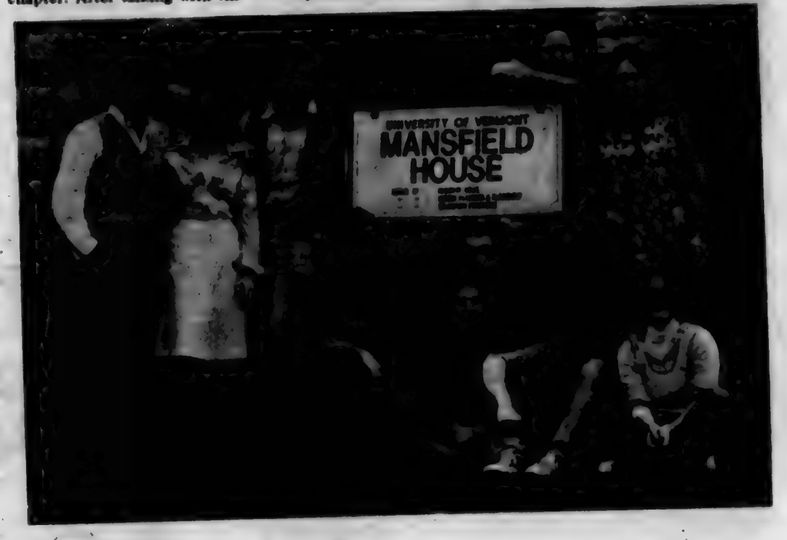
Our goals include increasing the children's exposure to various events with people, providing student volunteers with the opportunity to work with handicapped children, and providing parents with a needed and welcome resource. Our overall goal is to facilitate awareness of these children and to increase the opportunities available to them."

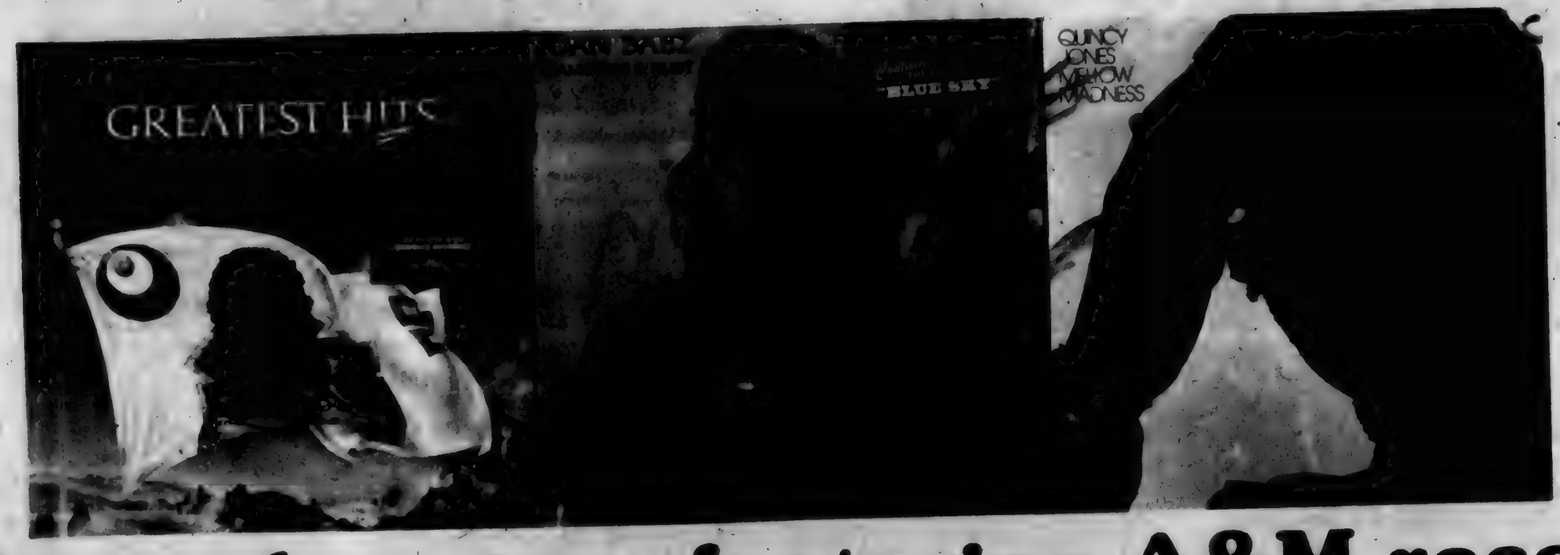
If you would like to get your project rolling, give us a call at OVP, or stop in to see us. We're located in Mansfield House and our telephone number is 656-2062.

Can You Dig It?

Milutin Veljkoute of Yugoslavia set the endurance record for staying in a cave for 463 days in the Surljig Mountains from June 24, 1969 to September 30, 1970.

Harold Wordon, of London, Ontario, holds the record for most bricks broken by a karate chop, with 3,773 in 2 hours, 59 minutes.





This week we are featuring A&M records

These 3 are on sale for 3.93 !!!

A&M records carry quality performers and give quality sound.

We are going all out to get your business —

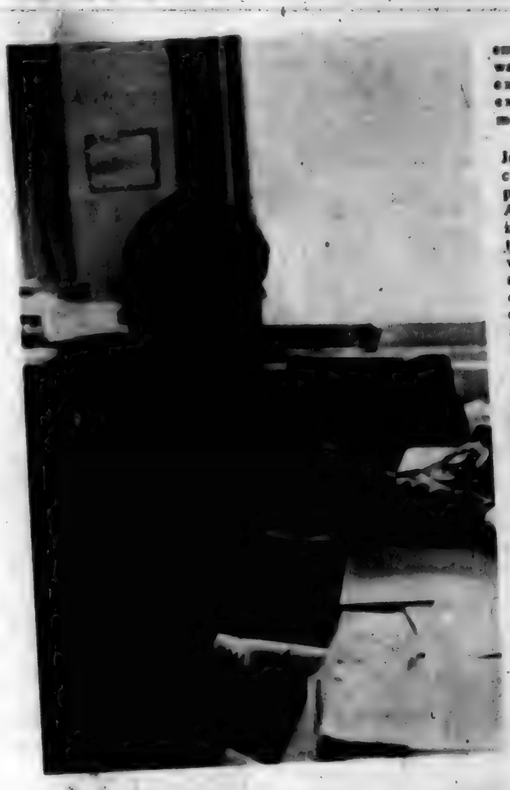
if you want to save money on records, come to

44 CHURCH ST THE UPSTAIRS RECORD SHOP

We are going to be giving away free things forever!

This week, FREE poster with purchase of any album.

Profiles Of Current UYA Students



"Academically, emotionally and physically, it was the most demanding and exhausting year I have ever experienced. It was also the most rewarding"

— A UYA Volunteer

Jerry Webster's project involves coordinating a basic literacy program for adults through the Adult Basic Education program in Winooski. His major goal is to train forty tutors this year who will then work with forty adults in Chittenden County on a one-to-one basis. This experience fits in well with his academic work towards a Master Degree in Education.

Sue Eisenstadt is currently working with the Advocacy Rights Council (ARC) which is an agency that provides legal rights/information and assistance to young people under eighteen. Throughout the year, she will be conducting presentations and workshops on legal rights at local schools and is also trying to implement a legal rights course at the Weeks School.

Another aspect of her job involves counseling individual youths who may have a problem involving school suspension, or expulsion, police arrest, discrimination because of sex or age, or placement outside the home. Sue is a social welfare major and is interested in child and family counseling. She is obtaining experience relevant to these areas, and has also developed new interests in the fields of law and of youth and student rights.

UYA projects are many and varied. Included here are profiles of just a few of the numerous people, projects, and academic interest areas that are represented in UYA.

Bartie Hyde and Mike Astles are both UYA students who work at the Consumer Fraud Division of the Attorney General's Office. They spend their time talking with consumers who have complaints, investigating business practices, and conducting consumer education courses in local schools. They also enjoy working for the only agency in town that requires its employees to read the paper everyday!

Their time on the telephone is spent dealing with problems ranging from complaints about car purchases and repairs (3/4 of all calls) to talking with the woman who thought she had been cheated while playing bingo at the Catholic church. Complaints tend to occur in seasonal cycles, and with the Vermont winter now fast approaching consumers are particularly concerned about construction-related problems. For example, a complaint was received last week from a consumer whose newly painted house was dripping!

Bartie and Mike also investigate businesses when issues such as fraudulent advertising arise. Consumers often report bait and switch advertising and lack of rainchecks when an advertised item is not in stock. Since taking this job, both Bartie and Mike have become more skeptical about business practices in town, and are looking forward to engaging in more investigative work as they become increasingly skilled as consumer advocates.

Another aspect of their job involves them as consumer educators in the community. They visit local schools to talk about consumer fraud, small-claims court, and to give information in general on how not to get "ripped- off" as a consumer.

Both Bartie and Mike are finding that their UYA program fit in well with their personal and academic goals. The skills they are acquiring are many and varied. They include interviewing, decision-making, diplomacy, understanding the legal aspects of business, and acting as consumer educators.

Mike, who is a psychology major, has found particularly relevant the skills he is learning related to dealing with people and appreciates the chance to apply psychological principals in the real world. Bartie is a social work major, and has benefitted from the opportunity to learn about aspects of social behavior that one doesn't learn in a classroom setting.

UYA-An Alternative

(continued from page thirteen)

expertise, media materials, and part-time volunteer assistance to bear on the project; to remain full-time, tuition-paying student in a degree program.

The Office of Volunteer Programs staff will do their best to make the best match possible between a student's learning needs and skills on the one hand and an agency's needs on the other; to provide pre-service training for all U.Y.A. interns and, in-service training for student interns and host-agency supervisors alike; to assist U.Y.A. students in integrating their internships with an appropriate, academic component; provide field support for interns; to provide a living allowance and other support thereby enabling students to make a year's commitment.

At UVM, U.Y.A. students earn some of their credit through special, field-related seminars run by OVP Staff and associated faculty. The remaining credit is usually earned through the student's major department, or related department, via independent study arrangements negotiated directly between the student and sponsoring faculty members. In all cases students earn a year's academic credit for their year of service.

University Year for Action offers participants the chance to nourish personal growth and learning needs; to develop mutually supporting relationships with those with whom they work; to supplement their academic major with field experience; to work with students and faculty from a variety of disciplines; to participate in designing their own education; to test out career and graduate school options; to gain valuable job experience in a competitive economy; to better understand Vermont, its people, and their needs.

For further information, stop in or call us at Mansfield, Colchester Ave. Telephone— 656-2062.

Thoughts Of A Big Sister

by Jill Flanagan

"And in the sweetness of friendship let there be laughter and sharing of pleasures..." like a hike up Camel's Hump, the Christmas party, or riding up and down the escalator at Penney's.

It would be easy to talk about the Big Brother/Big Sister Program from a statistical and organizational viewpoint (yes UVM - we still need 83 more Big Brothers/Big Sisters), but that's not why I'm a Big Sister. Basically what it's all about is Star, my little sister.

Each relationship is unique. Mine is very special. To me, it's a challenge to get to know a child from a background very different from my own. Many of the things Star contends with every day stagger my mind. But, with our relationship has come a clearer understanding of myself and the crazy world in which I live.

Staf and I share confidences with our ice cream cones (we both detest math, we both need friends), and that's what cements the friendship.

Of course it has frustrations. Many times my values and priorities are in opposition to hers. At times limits must be set on behaviors and rights discussed. These, too, are part of the growing.

My goals are to share who I am with Star and encourage her to do the same, simultaneously building a feeling within her that she is a good person, someone special, someone who can do anything she wants with her life. This all goes back to the challenge our program offers to you "give an approving nod to a doubtful friend, an encouraging work to a timid child, a feeling of worth to a lonely person."

MICHELIN
Xm+s STEEL-BELTED RADIALS

If you're not satisfied with the brand of snow tires you've been riding on, buy a set of Michelin 'Xm+s' steel-belted radials. The 'Xm+s' is designed to deliver accurate steering control, precise handling and sure road-grip mile-after-mile.

MICHELIN Xm+s steel-belted radial tires for mud and snow make a big difference in the way your car handles and stops in both light and hard-packed snow. For superior road-grip and traction, let Michelin 'Xm+s' take you thru winter.

Winter driving got you in a spin? Experience a confident feeling with a set of Michelin 'Xm+s' steel-belted radial snow tires. Michelins are designed to stop sure and grip tough to help pull you thru both light and hard-packed snow. Let Michelin 'Xm+s' take you thru winter.

REILLY TIRE COMPANY
We Will Mount and Balance Your Winter Tires for $5.00
864-0133
Easily accessible to Campus

McDonald's BREAKFAST

FEATURING

SCRAMBLED EGGS & SAUSAGE... $.95
2 Grade A Eggs • Country Pork Sausage • Toasted English Muffin

HOTCAKES & SAUSAGE ..... $.90
2 Golden Brown Hotcakes • Country Pork Sausage • Syrup • Butter

EGG McMUFFIN® ..... $.75
Canadian Bacon • Cheese • Fried Egg On A Toasted English Muffin

DANISH PASTRY ..... $.35
ENGLISH MUFFIN ..... $.25
CITRUS CUP ..... $.35
JUICE ..... $.25
Orange • Tomato • Grapefruit
COFFEE Regular ..... $.15
Large ..... $.25
MILK ..... $.20

Tear Along Dotted Line

FREE FREE COFFEE FREE
First Cup Free With Any Purchase
Present this card at McDonald's. This special offer entitles you to a regular size cup of delicious, hot coffee to start your day off right with our compliments.
Redeemable only at: McDONALD'S® In So. Burlington
This Offer Good From 10-3-75 Until 10-31-75
Between the hours of 7am-11am
CASH REDEMPTION VALUE ONE TENTH CENT

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
96 Church St.
Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5 P.M.
Fridays 9:30 'til 9 P.M.

INTERNATIONAL CAREER?
A representative will be on the campus
WEDNESDAY
OCTOBER 29, 1975
to discuss qualifications for advanced study at AMERICAN GRADUATE SCHOOL
and job opportunities in the field of
INTERNATIONAL MANAGEMENT
Interviews may be scheduled at
CAREER PLANNING & PLACEMENT OFFICE
AMERICAN GRADUATE SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL MANAGEMENT
Thunderbird Campus
Glendale, Arizona 85306

Women's X

The UVM Women's Cross-Country Team swept the Vermont State Championship hills in an exciting meet held last Wednesday, the 8th, at Middlebury College. The UVM Women took the first five odd places, for a team score of 25 points. Other teams competing were Johnson, Middlebury and Castleton.

Captain Carol Degan blazed the course in 21:04, taking 1½ minutes off the old record. A Middlebury runner took second place, with Jeannie Crane from Vermont placing third. Sophomore Kathy Glenney placed fifth, with Junior Jane Griffith taking seventh. Other Vermont finishers were freshman Mo Horan (9th), sophomore Bev Howell (10th), and Pam Weiss (11th). Senior Martha Hoffman, running her first race, finished with glee in 12th

Basketball Preseason

Three pre-season games, two of them intra-squad affairs and the other against RPI, have been announced by the UVM athletic department. Vermont will have intra-squad games at Barre's Auditorium, Nov. 6, and Rutland H.S., Nov. 18. The RPI game is set for the Bellows Falls H.S. gym, Nov. 13. All games are set for 7:30 p.m. More information on the games will follow. Varsity practice begins Oct. 15.

PFG S

Patrick Forbush Gutterson
Weekend of October 17
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17
GYM – Faculty-Staff
POOL – Faculty-Staff
TENNIS – Faculty-Staff
TRACK – Faculty-Staff
SATURDAY, OCTOBER
GYM – Students 1–5
POOL – Students 1–
TENNIS – Students
TRACK – Students
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 19
GYM – Students 1–5
POOL – Students no
TENNIS – Students
TRACK – Students
HANDBALL AND S
only. Call 656-3069. All varsity activities or specia
MONDAY Through THU
POOL – Students
(Tuesday, Wednesday, T
ALL OTHER FACI

M.B.A. RECRUITM
The School of Mana
Syracuse New York
applicants for the
1:30 - 4:30 PM The
M.S. in Accounting
in Media Administra
For further informa
Career Coun

40 Church St.
Burlington
Joseph Jet. Shopping Center
Essex Junction

Women's X-Country No. One

The UVM Women's Cross-Country Team swept the Vermont State Championship title in an exciting meet held last Wednesday, the 8th, at Middlebury College. The UVM Women took the first five odd places, for a team score of 25 points. Other teams competing were Johnson, Middlebury and Castleton.

Captain Carol Degan blazed the course in 21:04, taking 1½ minutes off the old record. A Middlebury runner took second place, with Jeannie Crane from Vermont placing third. Sophomore Kathy Glenney placed fifth, with Junior Jane Griffith taking seventh. Other Vermont finishers were freshman Mo Horan (9th), sophomore Bev Howell (10th), and Pam Weiss (11th). Senior Martha Hoffman, running her first race, finished with glee in 12th place, followed by Joan Griffin in 13th place and Bizzy Kellman in 14th.

All the runners placed in the top half of the field, and seemed pleased with the victory. The course was 5 kilometers, roughly equal to 3.25 miles. The terrain was varied - fields, woods, and a par 5 golf course. According to Martha Hoffman from Missouri, the view of the mountains and foliage was dazzling, as were the Middlebury boys' teeth.

The champs are looking forward to their next meet at Dartmouth College this Friday. Coach Perry Bland has high hopes for the upcoming race, and was quoted saying "Jesum Crow! My women are fast!"

Outing Club News: Plans Weekend

The newly reorganized UVM Outing Club has planned the first of their annual outings for the weekend of October 25-26. Preparations are underway for an overnight campout in Underhill State Park, at the foot of Mt. Mansfield. The trip is open to all UVM students and will include several organized events throughout the weekend.

Beginning on Saturday morning, transportation will be provided for students from campus to the Park. The daily events will include bicycling from UVM to the Park (for those interested), a picnic lunch, rock-climbing instruction session, various hikes around the mountain, orienteering demonstrations, bird watching, field first-aid, nature hikes and much more. Others are encouraged to organize friends on hikes of their own, toss frisbees, and play football or volleyball. For the evening, a picnic supper is planned to be followed by star gazing. A roaring campfire will finish off the day (anyone for somores?). Food will be provided for either coupons or cash (yet to be finalized). Instructors will be on hand to lead the various events. For those wishing to leave after the campfire, transportation back to UVM will be provided. For those wishing to stay, shelters will be available (bring sleeping bags). Sunday will be spent leisurely with more activities. We plan to leave the Park Sunday in the early afternoon, and once again, transportation will be provided.

Needless to say, the weekend should be enjoyable for all. Check bulletin boards throughout the week for flyers and posters regarding the trip. Sign-ups will be available at our meetings through dorm representatives (names to be announced), and hopefully by the beginning of next week, at various dining halls throughout campus. Final details and information regarding various other club activities will be available at our weekly meeting of Wednesday, October 22nd (7:30 P.M. 108 Terrill Home Economics Building). For more information, please feel free to call me (Skip Hemschot) at x 4259, or John Nininger or Dave Williams at x 3010. See you there!

...'B' Soccer Wins

(continued from page sixteen)

Largo. Castleton was unable to penetrate a solid defense led by fullbacks Gregg Bowering, Phil Belivean and Keith Buesing. Late in the half, Castleton was called for tripping and Dan Crocker scored his first goal of the season on a penalty kick. With only two minutes left in the game, Crocker again scored on a breakaway. Coach Casagrande feels the turning point in the season took place when the "B" team scrimmaged the Varsity two weeks before. "We needed some confidence to pull the team together and tying the Varsity 2-2 in a scrimmage gave us a big boost. The Baby Cats play on Wednesday at St. Lawrence. Thursday we play at home, against Norwich and Saturday at Middlebury."

Cats Come From Behind To Win

Bruce Norton, Mark Stevens, Mark Heidrich, John Koerner and Rick Whidden in action against St. Mike's. SPS Photo Robin Shilen

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont soccer team ran up against a psyched up St. Michael's College team last Wednesday, but managed to pull off a 5-2 win after a first half score. The Catamounts trailed by a 2-1 score at the half, and it appeared as though they were looking past the Purple Knights to Rhode Island on Saturday.

Vermont looked lackluster in the early going, and fell behind 1-0 when Greg Costes got the ball from Doug Padgett after it deflected off a Catamount defender and drove a hard liner past UVM goalie Jim Taft.

Rough play dominated the middle of the half, as the ball was in the center field area much of the time. The Cats were having a tough time finishing their plays, which is nothing new. They also ran into some tough luck as Bruce Norton, Dave Verrier, and Carl Christensen all hit the post.

The Catamounts got back into the game at the 38:45 mark when goal-tender Chris O'Brien lost a footrace with Mark Heidrich, and Heidrich's shot evaded the Knight goalie to tie the score at one. John Koerner got the assist.

With about five minutes left in the half, St. Mike's got a break when Dan Bryant accidentally headed the ball into his own net to give the Knights a 2-1 halftime lead. Kevin Curran was the nearest man to the ball, and thus was given credit for the goal.

Whatever coach Reinhardt said at the half, it worked. The Cats stormed out and got three goals before the three-quarter mark.

John Koerner continued his hot scoring, with his eighth goal of the year just six minutes into the second period. Tim Beal led Koerner perfectly in front of the net, and the sophomore slipped one past O'Brien, giving the Cats a 2-2 tie.

The second half was like night and day for Vermont. The Catamounts outshot the knights 13-6 in the first half, a good margin, but totally dominated the second half with a 19-3 shot margin.

Tim Beal stole the ball in front of the St. Mike's net and fired a low shot past the surprised O'Brien to give UVM a lead they would not relinquish. Beal played a tremendous game throughout, and his constant hustle paid off in the third Vermont goal.

Geoff Greig and Dave Verrier put the game out of reach on two long-range goals. Greig got UVM's fourth goal when Gil Low hit a long shot that Greig ran under and beat O'Brien to the right side. Verrier's goal came when he picked up a loose ball, dribbled in a ways, and hit a long blast to the left side corner.

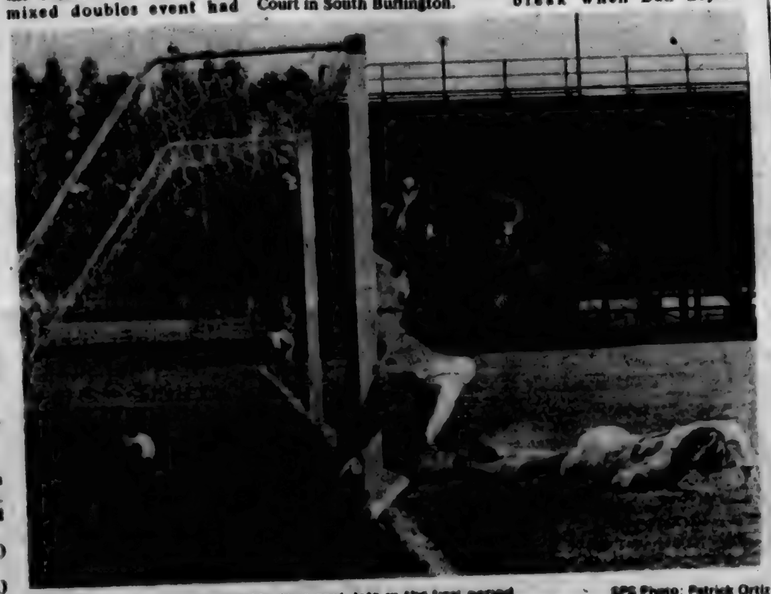
Vermont looked sloppy in the first half, again having trouble finishing passes, but as usual, the better team won out. Although St. Michael's goaltender, O'Brien, had an excellent afternoon, the UVM offense was just too much.

Final statistics showed the Catamounts with a 32-9 shot advantage and Taft and Jeff Jonas were called on to make only two saves to O'Brien's 17.

The Cats' next game is on the 17th at New Hampshire and their next home game is against Middlebury on the 22nd.

First Burlington Paddle Event

On Saturday, October 4, Lisa Madeira of Middlebury College and Neal McNealus of UVM overcame Dave Robison and Sherre Wellins of Cross Court 6-0, 6-4 to win the first paddle tennis tournament to be held in the Burlington area at the Paddle Tennis Club. The mixed doubles event had sixteen teams competing in a lively and enthusiastic fashion. A men's paddle tennis tournament was held last Saturday, October 11, at the Paddle Tennis Club of Burlington. The public is invited to participate and those interested may register at Cross Court in South Burlington.



Mark Heidrich celebrates UVM's first goal, late in the first period. SPS Photo: Patrick Ortiz

Basketball Preseason

Three pre-season games, two of them intra-squad affairs and the other against RPI, have been announced by the UVM athletic department. Vermont will have intra-squad games at Barre's Auditorium, Nov. 6, and Rutland H.S., Nov. 18. The RPI game is set for the Bellows Falls H.S. gym, Nov. 13. All games are set for 7:30 p.m. More information on the games will follow. Varsity practice begins Oct. 15.

THIS WEEK IN SPORT

PFG Schedule

Patrick Forbush Gutterson Recreation Schedule
Weekend of October 17, 18, 19

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17
GYM – Faculty-Staff 7–11 p.m.
POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.; 7–8 under 15 yrs.
TENNIS – Faculty-Staff 7–11 p.m.
TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–11 p.m.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 18
GYM – Students 1–5 and 7–11 p.m.
POOL – Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.m.
TENNIS – Students 1–5 and 7–11 p.m.
TRACK – Students 1–5 and 7–11 p.m.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 19
GYM – Students 1–5 p.m.
POOL – Students none.
TENNIS – Students 1–5 p.m.
TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069. All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY Through THURSDAY
POOL – Students 7–8:30 (Monday) and 7–10:30 p.m. (Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday)
ALL OTHER FACILITIES – Students 7–8 p.m.

MENS
SOCCER
Oct. 17 vs. New Hampshire (A)
Oct. 22 vs. Middlebury (H) 3:00 p.m.
CROSS COUNTRY
Oct. 18 vs. New Hampshire and U. Mass (A)

WOMENS
FIELD HOCKEY
Oct. 18 vs. Middlebury (A)
Oct. 21 vs. Colby-Sawyer (H) 3:30
TENNIS
Oct. 21 vs. Colby-Sawyer (H) 3:30
SOCCER
Oct. 16 vs. Champlain Regional College (H) 4:30 p.m.
Oct. 18 Emma Willard Soccer Tourney (A)
Oct. 22 vs. Castleton (A)
CROSS COUNTRY
Oct. 17 vs. Dartmouth (A)
Oct. 21 vs. Williams (A)

Dive In With Your Pledge- Support The UVM Swim Team Swim-A-Thon

Pledge your support to team members prior to this weekend

M.B.A. RECRUITMENT - SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
The School of Management of Syracuse University, Syracuse New York, will be interviewing interested applicants for the Graduate Program on 11/14/75 1:30 - 4:30 PM The programs include the M.B.A., M.S. in Accounting joint program with Law, M.P.A. in Media Administration and the Ph.D. Program. For further information, inquire at the Placement Career Counseling Office on campus.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

Friends... students... and countrymen. Lend us your ears!
13 October 1975 ____ Mark this date down. Or better yet, tear out this advertisement and stick it in your pocket. This is the day that could change your life for the better.
This is the day the Air Force ROTC counselors will be visiting your campus to explain the AFROTC programs . . . the benefits . . . the scholarships . . . the $100 a month allowance . . . your future as a commissioned officer in the Air Force. And with that, the pride and prestige of the job and its financial security.
Come alone . . . or bring a friend. Ask questions. Ask us about the housing on an Air Force base. Ask us about the graduate education available, some paid for by the Air Force. You won't know the answers unless you ask the questions. Stop by and ask us.
Air Force Representatives from St. Michael's College will be in Room 413, Waterman Building at 7:00PM
Put it all together in Air Force ROTC.

galandriel
OPENING SATURDAY OCTOBER 18th. AT 10 A.M.
FASHIONS FOR MEN AND WOMEN CLOTHED AT REASONABLE PRICES.
LOCATED IN THE SHERATON SHOPPE AT 16 AUSTIN BLVD., BURLINGTON.
COME HAVE A GLASS OF CIDER WITH US AND CHOOSE SOME FRIENDS TO HAVE THE CLOTHES YOU LIKE FOR SELLING LESS.
Radstone Campus St. Prospect

CAREER IN MINISTRY
...in HOLY CROSS, a religious community of men serving the community of men as teachers, counselors, parish priests, campus ministers, ministers of social concern and overseas missions.
for brochure write:
HOLY CROSS FATHERS
BOX C
835 Clinton Avenue
Bridgeport, Conn. 06604

yarn cellar
Unger's
"The Fabulous Four"
9 color yarn comes in 9 variegated fashion colors.
The Royal
96 Church St.
Burlington

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11322 IDAHO AVE., # 206
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474
Our research papers are sold for research purposes only.

Orange Blossom
Symbol of a Dream

There is a time for love.
There is a time for peace.
There is a time for joy.
And for you the time is now.
Come in and try on Orange Blossom's "Soft Touch" wedding bands, the most comfortable wedding rings in America.
You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.
A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1944
E.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street

INTERNATIONAL CAREER?
A representative will be on the campus
WEDNESDAY
OCTOBER 29, 1975
to discuss qualifications for advanced study at AMERICAN GRADUATE SCHOOL
and job opportunities in the field of
INTERNATIONAL MANAGEMENT
Interviews may be scheduled at
CAREER PLANNING & PLACEMENT OFFICE
AMERICAN GRADUATE SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL MANAGEMENT
Thunderbird Campus
Glendale, Arizona 85306

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
96 Church St.
Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5 P.M.
Fridays 9:30 'til 9 P.M.

sports

UVM Tennis Champs !

by Scott Curtis

Paul Weber and Jeff DeLuca came through to beat the U Mass team of Beals and Cloutier in the last match of the last round of the Yankee Conference Championships at UNH on Saturday. The win gave the defending champion, UVM, a 17-16 win over U Mass in the tournament. The host team, UNH, placed third with ten points in the six-team contest.

Kirk Dice overcame a poor seeding to become the conference's number one player. After getting by Stein of URI, Dice took revenge on U Mass Freshman Alan Green. Green had given Dice his only dual meet defeat last week at Amherst. This time Dice was on top, 7-6, 6-3. In the finals, the UVM co-captain beat Andy Harrison of UNH, 6-3, 6-2.

Tom Lenci was spectacular in his return to form. Lenci had been playing sluggishly, partially due to a bad cold. In this tournament he was aggressive and sharp, taking three two-set victories. The final match was a 6-3, 6-1 drubbing of UNH's Weber.

UVM took the top three singles spots, as Scott Turban once again had to overcome first set horrors. The top-seeded Turbon beat U Mass' Barnhart 7-6, 6-4, and UNH's Krause, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5.

The lower three singles belonged to U Mass. Ouellet beat Kevin DeLaney in the finals, 6-0, 6-2. Delaney had picked up two points for UVM by making the finals. Cloutier and Fentin won the fifth and the sixth singles flights, as UVM's Delaney and Weber were shut out.

At the end of the singles flights, UVM was tied with U Mass, 9-9. Co-captains Lenci and Dice went to work and took the top doubles spot over U Mass' Green and Barnhart, 6-3, 0-6, 6-2. Together, Dice and Lenci took nine of UVM's 17 points. Harrison and Krause of UNH were the second doubles champs. In the first round of that flight, Turban and Delaney beat the URI team to gain a point.

Going into the final doubles, it was all tied, 14-14. Weber and DeLuca, who were shut out in their singles flights, redeemed themselves with crucial wins, including the 6-2, 6-2 win over Beals and Cloutier. This gave them the doubles championship and gave UVM the team championship.

This is the third year in a row UVM has taken the conference. The team will have a good spring schedule. With John Koerner and Tim Beal returning, UVM will have more depth to continue its little tennis dynasty.

The team's final scores were: UVM 17; U Mass 16; UNH 10; UConn 8; URI 5; and U Maine 2.

Lacrosse Cats Win 12-10 Over Castleton

by Tom Humphries

It was a rather bleak October afternoon when the UVM Lacrosse Club faced Castleton State College. The Lacrosse Cats, coming off of two victories last weekend, were psyched for action. In a meeting two years ago, the Cats were trounced by Castleton, so the Cats had something to prove and before a crowd of several hundred, prove they did. The team started off sluggishly: the score was 6-4 Castleton at the half.

The big sticks of UVM did not show their real class until the second half. The action, which could only be described as brutal, saw the third quarter end 9-6 Castleton. With their work cut out for them, the Cats rallied under the expert leadership of Curt "The Motor" Duane. The UVM stickmen virtually bombarded the goal with shots. Six of those shots found their mark, including the go ahead goal by John "The Rocket" Lombias. Some hard-nosed defensive play held Castleton to all but one goal and the Cats emerged with a superlative 12-10 comeback victory. Co-captain Jeff Davis said it best, "If you weren't there, you missed the game. Smart boy!

Look for the Lacrosse Club to do big things this Spring, right Drakos?

Geoff Greig heads the ball as Tim Beal and others look on. SPS Photo: Patrick Cruz

Women's 'B' 'Tennis Wins

by Debi Bloom

The UVM "B" tennis team increased their season's record to two wins by defeating Lyndon State College last week, 5-2. This is the first year that women's tennis has carried a "B" team schedule, allowing ten to twelve extra tennis players the experience of competitive matches. In their first match, the "B" team defeated Trinity College 6-1, and this win against Lyndon State last Wednesday held up the "B" team's winning stretch. In last week's match, the UVM singles players were: Caswell, Stephens, Landolt, Craver, and Benson. The doubles players for UVM were: Roberts/Meyers, along with Beals/Primm playing number two doubles. The existence of the "B" tennis team will be helpful in maintaining strong players for next season's team.

Hockey Tryouts

All students interested in trying out for the Varsity or Junior Varsity Hockey Team should report to Room 201 of Patrick Gym.

The try-outs will begin at 6:00 p.m. on October 27th. In order to try out, you must have had a physical and your eligibility cleared.

Koerner Leads Booters Over R.I.

by Rita Bruce

Sophomore lineman John Koerner netted two goals to give the University of Vermont a 2-0 victory at Centennial Field, Saturday over the University of Rhode Island. The victory extended UVM's winning streak to seven games as they remained undefeated in Yankee Conference play.

The first goal was scored on a direct kick by Koerner. It came unassisted to make the score 1 to 0 in favor of the Catamounts. Except for this score, the goaltending was superb on both ends of the field. Also, brilliant defensive plays from the Rams and Catamounts kept the game as close as it could be. At the close of the first half the score remained 1-0 with the UVM Cats in the lead.

The second half opened with both teams playing equally well defensively. Vermont seemed to be more aggressive than in the first portion of the game, but Rams goalie Bob Auletta didn't let anything get by him. Then, being pressured by the Cats, Auletta came out of the net to make a defensive play and UVM's Koerner took advantage of it and scored his second goal of the day. It was assisted by half back Mark Stevenson and made the score 2 to 0 in the Catamounts favor. That was Koerner's tenth goal of the season for Vermont.

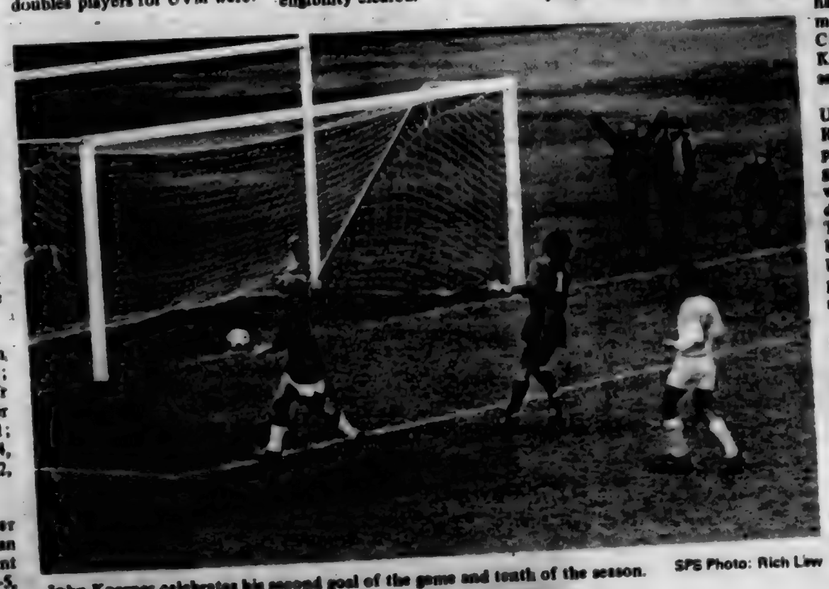
The final score was the UVM Catamounts 2 and URI Rams 0. This game was the perfect one for homecoming. A great crowd turned out to watch one of the most exciting defensive games of the season. The score could have easily been the other way around, but with a couple of lucky plays for the Cats, they surfaced as the victors.

UVM's goalie Jim Taft made ten saves with the Ram's Auletta stopping six shots. The shots on goal for both teams were very close. URI had thirteen and the Cats had eleven.

This is the first year that the homecoming game has been soccer instead of football, but the fans didn't seem to mind very much. They enthusiastically cheered on the Catamounts, and showed that soccer can be an equivalent substitute for football.

Outstanding players of the 1975 homecoming game were John Koerner, with his two goals, and UVM's goalie Jim Taft, with his outstanding tending of the net. The URI Ram's goaltender Bob Auletta should also be mentioned for his defensive stops on the Cat's shots on goal.

The next game that the Catamounts play will be in Canton, New York, on October 15th against St. Lawrence. Then they travel to Durham, New Hampshire, to take on UNH on the 17th of October. Their next home game will be on the 22nd of October against Middlebury College. Let's hope that the fine crowds keep showing up to cheer on the super UVM Catamounts!



John Koerner celebrates his second goal of the game and tenth of the season. SPS Photo: Rich Liew

Women's Tennis Team Splits

The UVM women's tennis team split their road trip matches last week with a close 4-3 win at Plymouth State and a tough 3-4 loss to Albany State. At Plymouth State, Debi Bloom, Nancy Mullen and Sissy Steinbreder in the top singles positions lost their matches on a windy New Hampshire afternoon. These losses were helped by four consecutive wins in the other matches to secure the Vermont victory. The depth of talent on the women's tennis team proved itself with this important win over Plymouth State.

At Albany State (SUNY), Vermont's number one singles, Bloom, lost in a disappointing three set match, along with singles losses by Hillman and Sears. Another upsetting 3-set match was played by the number-two doubles team of Rich/Stanton. This loss to Albany last Friday still leaves the women's tennis team with a winning season's record of 3 wins, 2 losses. On Thursday, October 16, Vermont meets Middlebury for the second time this season in an important rival match. Vermont fell to Middlebury 5-2 in their opening match in mid-September, but with the experience of 5 matches behind them, Vermont is hoping for a comeback victory. This home match can be watched on the indoor courts at Patrick Gym, beginning at 3:30 p.m. this Thursday. It should prove to be a close and exciting tennis match for the UVM women's tennis team.

The results of the upset against Albany last Friday were as follows:

Singles – Malloy over Bloom (UVM) 3-6, 7-5, 6-4; Steinbreder (UVM) over Corvitt 1-6, 6-1, 6-0; Kamistner over Hillman (UVM) 6-3, 6-1; Joyce over Sears (UVM) 6-4, 6-4; Dee (UVM) over Boch 6-2, 6-0;

Doubles – Jenny/Palmer (UVM) over Sausville/Lenehan 6-0, 6-1; Zimmerman/Present over Stanton/Rich (UVM) 7-5, 1-6, 7-6.

Baby Cats Continue To Roll

The UVM "B" soccer team continued to roll this week, registering their third straight shut-out of the season in as many games. On Monday, Castleton became the latest victim, falling by a score of 4-0. The score at the half was 0-0, as UVM outshot Castleton 18-9, but couldn't score. It looked as though the game would go into overtime until Darrell Grout headed the ball in late in the second half. Less than a minute later, Bill Yauney scored his third goal of the season. UVM kept the pressure on as once again they got excellent play from halfbacks [illegible] Lowell, John Harrow, and George

(continued on page fifteen)

10% Discount on Repairs and Oil Changes for Students & Faculty With I.D.

The students car's best friend

TEXACO

CLOVERLEAF TEXACO
COMPLETE CAR CARE
1055 WILLISTON RD.
SO. BURLINGTON, VT.

ROAD SERVICE
862-2935

The Largest Selection Of Lee In New England!

19½ CHURCH STREET
(Over Joanna Town)
Mon.-Sat. 10-5:30
Fri. 10-9:00

JEANS NORTH

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

VERMONT CYNIC

-'Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont-

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 22 FOUNDED IN 1883 OCTOBER 23, 1975

1975 International Women's Year

Kenny Hirman

calendar annoucements

Raffle Winners

The UVM Men's Gymnastic Club is pleased to announce the two winners of their raffle drawing.

Karen Mactutre, 24 Tupper Hall

Scott London, 414 Chittenden Hall

Both will receive one Athletic ticket book as their prize. The UVM Men's Gymnastic Club would like to thank all those who supported the fund-raising drive. Proceeds will help pay for a part of this year's operating budget.

Away With All Tests

A film about health care in China will be shown on Wednesday, Oct. 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the First Unitarian Church, 141 Pearl Street and on Friday Oct. 31, at 12 noon in Room 1-214 of Given Medical Building. Both screenings free and open to the public. The sixty minute film is sponsored by the Dept. of Epidemiology and Environmental Health and Sociology, the Vermont Women's Health Center, the Chinese American People's Friendship Ass., and an ad-hoc group of medical and nursing students.

The film features Dr Joshua Horn, a British surgeon who lived in China from 1954-1969. Among other things, the film describes and illustrates the concept of "serve the people" and its practical application in the training of present doctors and the resettlement of trained city doctors to bring medical care to China's vast rural population.

March Of Dimes Walk-a-Thon

The Vermont March of Dimes will be sponsoring a walk-a-thon on Sunday, October 26, 1975. UVM students are invited to walk the 15 miles along with walkers from other schools in the Burlington area. This is an excellent opportunity to get some exercise, compete for prizes, and help fight birth defects all at the same time.

Further information and registration forms are available at the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, Ext. 2062.

Banner Stolen!

Some time before Monday October 20th, the Student Association Banner was removed from the University Bookstore. The Banner was advertizing an upcoming concert to be held at UVM. The banner is canvas and measures approximately 3'x8'. If anyone has any information on its whereabouts please call the SA office at 2053, 2054. A reward is offered.

Go Bananas Today

The special showing this Thursday afternoon at Century Plaza (Dorset Street) is Woody Allen's Bananas. This film is "full of hilarious comic ideas and lines" and it is "slightly about a revolution in a banana republic".

Tickets are $1 and they are available at the door or in the main office of Pomeroy Hall. This special showing is from 4:00-6:00 p.m. on Thursday.

Next week Check next week's Cynic Announcement Page.

Old Articles Needed

Articles such as old wine bottles, yarn, string, scraps of cloth, old jewelry, sequins, etc. are needed for an arts and crafts program at Weeks School. If you have any of these items to donate, please bring them to the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, UVM.

The Urban Center Pre-School in Burlington needs donations for their school. If you have toys, books, paper, old clothes, furniture, lamps, records, paint, tools, or anything else along these lines that you no longer need, they want to put them to use. Please bring items to the Center on the corner of North Street and North Winooski Ave. or call 656-2291.

Blood Donation Schedule

Blood donation schedule for next week

Tuesday, October 28th from 9 - 11 a.m. Buckham Hall.

Wednesday, October 29th from 9 - 11 a.m., Wills Hall.

Thursday, October 30th from 12 - 2, Chittenden 2, 3, 4.

Friday, October 31st from 9 - 11 a.m., Chittenden 1 and Converse N, S.

Women's Caucus

The Women's Caucus will hold a reorganizing meeting at 7 p.m. on Monday, October 27, in North Lounge, Billings Center. All are urged to attend.

Anything Grows

Attn Potters.

The PLANT EVANGELISM PROGRAM in the Living Learning Center consists of six students from various backgrounds who basically are into growing and selling plants. Next week, (Nov. 1, 1:00-5:00 to be specific) PEP is sponsoring a plant and pottery exhibition to be held in the L/L fireplace lounge. A wide variety of plants and pots will be for sale at very reasonable prices. Any independent potters wishing to sell their pottery please contact PEP at x4266 and ask for Dave or Tim, or stop by L-250 Living Learning Center.

Roundhouse Features Resnick

ROUNDHOUSE will be featuring Bob Resnick this Friday, October 24 at 8 p.m. in the Round Room (downstairs in Billings Center). Bob Resnick is a UVM graduate, well known in Vermont for his combination of fine country music and sharp wit. There will be several guest artists and the Den will be open.

Entertainment is free, in a relaxed coffeehouse atmosphere. A good time is guaranteed for all!

Leash Law Goes Into Effect

Campus dog lovers (and owners) should note the Burlington Board of Aldermen has passed a leash law requiring all dogs not on their own property to be on a leash.

The ordinance takes effect in 21 days from its October 14 passage, and it is reported the Aldermen have directed strict enforcement by Burlington Police.

Attention Accountants!

The accounting program in the University of Vermont department of business administration has been registered by the State of New York for the next five years.

The effect of this registration is that students completing the UVM curriculum will meet the education requirements for admission to the New York State examination in certified public accounting.

Thus a student who is graduated from the UVM accounting program will be able to sit for the Certified Public Accountant examination in New York without the necessity of having his or her program of study evaluated, which sometimes can result in required further study before qualifying for the CPA examinations.

Horse Club Clinic

The University of Vermont Horse Club will be sponsoring its second Polo Clinic on Saturday, November 1 at the Spear Street Farm. Mr. Hilly from Waitsfield, Vermont will be the visiting instructor. The first Polo Clinic, held last year, was a great success, and hopes are that it will be even better this year. Anyone who is interested can come and watch or play.

The Horse Club will be sponsoring a clinic for its members this Sunday with Jimmy Gornall. Mr. Gornall is an active eventer, and is the owner of St. Finnbar, who was chosen Horse of the Year for 1975. The clinic will be lasting all day.

Tickets are on sale Oct. 20-24 from 1-4 p.m. at Billings for a Friday dance at Wing-Davis-Wilks featuring the "Davis Brothers Garage" - live music. Tickets also on sale during dinner hours at the dining halls. Admission is $2.50, beer is free, and there are no ticket sales at the door. Oct. 24, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at W-D-W. Details from Hank Meyer, ext. 3443.

A reminder that Lane Series Tickets are still on sale, and available from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, telephone 656-3418.

At Fleming Museum through November 9th: "Vermont Photography '75", a juried exhibition of work by Vermont Photographers. Through Spring of '76, "Collectors and Collections," which highlights the collections of six donors to the Museum, and "Traditional Africa," both in the second floor galleries.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23

First day of a two-day Workshop sponsored by Radiologic Technology Dept. on Automatic Radiographic Film Processors; co-sponsored with Kodak.

2 p.m., Personal Communications Group for Quiet People, an opportunity for quiet people to come together and share concerns, interests, problems, joys. To be held at the UVM Counseling and Testing Center every Thursday. For more information, drop by the Center, or call ext. 3440.

3 p.m., Mathematical Sciences Seminar, Dr. Bill Fellinger, UVM computer science program, "A Fuzzy System Modelling Language," 229 Votey Bldg.

4:30 p.m., Senate meeting at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg.

7 p.m., orientation meeting and social hour for students interested in the possibility of spending the academic year '76-'77 in one of the four Nordic countries, at the Center for Area and International Studies, 479 Main St. Questions? Call Louise Beckerle, Ext. 4062.

7:30 p.m., The American Actress Series (SA Films) presents "Random Harvest" (1942) starring Greer Garson, Ronald Coleman, and Susan Peters. B-106 Cook, admission is free.

7:30 p.m. UVM Church Street Center Study Group "What Should Our Schools Be Doing?" Free. For further information, ext. 4221.

7:30 p.m., slide lecture by the Rev. Dan Daley, "The Ideal Woman in Medieval Art," Fleming Museum Auditorium Room 102; free. Sponsored by Medieval/Renaissance Program.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 24

12 noon, Open Lunch hour with the Counseling Center staff. A time for all friends, old and new, to join for informal visiting, exchange of ideas and getting acquainted.

1-4 p.m., UVM apples are on sale at Horticulture Research Center, off Shelburne Road.

2:10 p.m., Physics Colloquium, Prof. A.D. Crowell, "Dispersion-Induced Dipoles." Cook A-402.

3:15 p.m., Psychology Colloquium, "Catecholamine Function and Voluntary Consumption of Alcohol and Morphine," Dr. Zalman Amit, Sir George Williams University, Montreal, Quebec. 314 John Dewey Hall.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., Lane Film Society Series presents Charlie Chaplin in "City Lights," Benedict Auditorium, Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. Tickets cost $1, and are available at the Lane Office, 234 Waterman; telephone 656-3418, or at the door.

7:30 and 10 p.m., The Biggies Series (SA Films) presents "Alfredo Alfredo" (1973) starring Dustin Hoffman and Stefania Sandrelli. B-106 Cook. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., UVM Folk Dance Club meets at Southwick Ballroom, Instruction for all levels. Further information from Ben Bergstein at 863-6686.

8 p.m., UVM Church Street Center will host "Evenings with Vermont Authors." UVM's professor David Huddle, from Essex, Vermont, will be the author present. No charge.

9 p.m. to 1 a.m., dance at Wing-Davis-Wilks featuring the "Davis Brothers Garage" band; ticket information at the top of the calendar. Sponsored by residents of W-D-W.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 25

10 a.m. to 3 p.m., UVM Church Street Center has a special activity, "Creating the Future." Fun but serious exposure to future planning.

7:30 p.m., The S.A. Film Mini-Series presents "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" (1933), starring Bette Davis and Spencer Tracy; and "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?" (1963), with Bette Davis and Joan Crawford. B-106 Cook. Admission is free.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 26

No calendar events listed.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 27

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center "Career Planning Awareness" program with Bill McNeil. Open to anyone with questions regarding occupational selection, choice of major, career planning. Admission free at 146 S. Williams St.

7 p.m., Lambda Rising "The Politics of Gay Liberation." Come listen to Gay Speakers and ask questions in M-A-T lounge. It's free and open to everyone.

7:30-9:30 p.m., UVM Church Street Center has one study group, "Small Is Beautiful" - A Community Seminar. No charge.

8 p.m., SA Speakers Bureau presents the National Lampoon Show, at Patrick Gym. Tickets are $3.50 General Admission, $2.50 with UVM Student ID; on sale at the Bookstore.

8 p.m., Living/Learning Center activities committee presents Karl Hess, former White House staff member, who will speak on "The Neighborhood vs. The Nation." At L/L Commons, fireplace Lounge. Free, refreshments served.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 28

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Study Skills workshop with Alice Outwater. Open to anyone with questions, problems or concerns about study habits. At the Center (146 S. Williams St.). Free.

4-5:30 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal group of students, staff, townspeople, and professors who get together to speak in Spanish about anything of interest; E-380 Living/Learning. A high level of speaking ability is not required. Open to all who are interested. Sponsored by El Club Hispanico.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance Program lectures, Prof. John Engroff, History, on medieval and Renaissance Science. 216 Commons Living/Learning. Everyone is welcome.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization meets to share healing experiences, Harris Hall recreation room. More information from Holly Aspden, ext. 3156.

7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., SA and Department of English Shakespeare Film Series presents "Richard III" (Great Britain, 1955), starring Sir Laurence Olivier, John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson, Cedric Hardwicke, Clair Bloome, and Pamela Brown. 101 Votey. $1 donation.

7 p.m., Tuesday night drawing group, figure drawing. Second floor Williams Hall. $1 at the door to pay the model.

7:30 p.m., SA Films, the British Cinema, presents "Privilege" (1967), starring Paul Jones, Jean Shrimpton, and Mark London. B-106 Cook. Free.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a free "Relaxation and Meditation" program with Nancy Koch, a chance to learn some creative ways of dealing with daily tension and stress. At the Center, 146 S. Williams.

4 p.m., seminar for faculty and graduate students, given by Prof. Gene Laber, business administration, on the subject of peak-load pricing policies, 333 Votey Bldg. Story this issue.

3:30 p.m., International Club: General Meeting and Coffee Hour at the Area and International Studies Building, 479 Main St. The Club especially welcomes foreign students and American students who have an interest in travel abroad, or who have just returned from an overseas experience and would like to share it with others.

7 p.m., the department of German and Russian will show the German Feature Film, "Wallenstein" (1962). Sound in German.

7:30 p.m., Film "Away With All Tests," about health care in China, at the First Unitarian Church, 141 Pearl St. Sponsors: Depts. of Epidemiology and Environmental Health, Sociology, Vermont Women's Health Center, and Chinese-American Friendship Association. Repeats on Thursday, 12 noon.

8 p.m., UVM Church Street Center Study Groups "Politics Aren't Dirty;" "How to Run for Office." No charge. Information, ext. 4221.

8 p.m., Writer's Workshop, Gladys Colburn will read her poetry, Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30

12:15 p.m., Mechanical Engineering Seminar, "Properties of Unidirectionally Solidified Metals;" Mrs. Delcie Durham, Votey Bldg., Room 231. Everyone is welcome.

OVP Still Needs Plenty Of Help

Wanted - People to work with juvenile offenders and with some older people on parole. Activities involved would include taking trips, providing transportation, tutoring, and sports activities.

Wanted - People to work in the area of consumer fraud. Volunteers would be responsible for handling consumer complaints by telephone and walk-in. There is also the chance to participate in preliminary investigative work for staff attorneys.

Wanted - Person interested in finance and business operations to be involved in the total operations of the business office of an agency that works for the social welfare of children.

Wanted - People interested in establishing a one-to-one relationship with an elderly person. Activities are decided upon by the individuals involved.

Wanted - People willing to help patients at a convalescent center by doing their shopping.

Information on all of the above positions is available at the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, Ext. 2062. Various other positions are also available.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
40 Church St Burlington
Essex Jct Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far out reading

DOMINO'S PIZZA
FREE DELIVERY
864-7444
Mon - Thurs 4:30 to 1 AM
Fri & Sat 4:30 to 2 PM
Sun 4:30 to 12:00
SUPPER SPECIAL ANY DAY 4.30-8.00 pm.
$1.00 OFF LARGE PIZZA (except plain)
NAME
ADDRESS
1 COUPON PER PIZZA

ANNOUNCEMENT
CALIFORNIA'S LARGEST LAW SCHOOL
WESTERN STATE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF LAW
OF ORANGE COUNTY
AN ACCREDITED LAW SCHOOL
OFFERS A PROGRAM OF FULL-TIME LAW STUDY TO BEGIN IN JANUARY
- IN EITHER 2½ or 3 YEARS of FULL-TIME law study (15-16 classroom hours per week); or
- IN EITHER 3½ or 4 YEARS of PART-TIME day, evening, or weekend law study (3 classes per week, 3-4 hours per class);
- You can earn your JURIS DOCTOR (J.D.) degree and qualify to take the CALIFORNIA BAR EXAMINATION.

WRITE OR PHONE FOR CATALOGUE
Dept.
1111 North State College
Fullerton, CA 92631
(714) 993-7600
APPLY NOW FOR DAY, EVENING, OR WEEKEND CLASSES BEGINNING JANUARY 19, 1976
SIMILAR PROGRAMS AVAILABLE AT COORDINATE CAMPUS IN SAN DIEGO INSURED LOANS FOR FEDERALLY INSURED STUDENT LOANS APPROVED FOR VETERANS

Career Pla

Week of November 3 - 7

Westinghouse Electric Corp., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15221 - seeks candidates for employment in Engineering, Manufacturing, Technical Marketing and Field Engineering.

Northeastern University Graduate School of Business, Boston, Ma. 02115 - information interviews on graduate programs.

Camp, Dresser & McKee, Boston, Ma. 02108 - Civil

Audubon Socie To Di

The Green Mountain Audubon Society will sponsor a panel discussion to explore the Richelieu Dam controversy. The event, free and open to the public, will be held on Monday, October 27 at 8:00 p.m. in the Marsh Life Science Auditorium on the University of Vermont campus.

Charles Ross, member of the International Joint Commission, will moderate the panel consisting of William Cowles, Co-Chairman, Lake Champlain Committee; Carl Reidel, Director, Enviornmental Program at the University of Vermont; and Bernard Beaupre, Canadian representative of the

St. Anseln

A Couple of Short Reminders...

Bring your soda and bee bottles to St. Anselm's...Offer ing for UNICEF this week a 6:30 p.m. Sunday Service anything you can give will hel alot...Mouthpiece on Thursday from 7:30 - 9:00 p.m. We ha a wonderfully excitin discussion last week. Come joi us this time...We're using a ne liturgy for Compline. Com spend a few quiet momen here at 10 p.m. on Wednesday

Prayer Meeting? A time f Christians to come together pray, sing and help strengthe each others faith. Christiani calls us to recognize th people are equal; th cooperation is essential; a that non-violence is necessa We live in a culture wh stresses Competition; lim cooperation, condones viole and urges us to become be than everyone else. Come j with other Christians to sh your struggle to be a Christ Bring your joys as well as y troubles and doubts and w share them with each other God. Tuesdays at 8 p.m.

PROTESTANT/EPISCOP MINISTRY

Schedule of Events

SUNDAY

11:30 a.m. - Holy Euch (Episcopal)

6:30 p.m. - Service of Word and Commu

Go home save yourself offer a wide travel plans w groups and in The Liber home and a besides, with one low price. 3 plans, too- days for $149 Good everyw Canada.

Career Planning and Placement

Week of November 3 – 7

Westinghouse Electric Corp., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15221 – seeks candidates for employment in Engineering, Manufacturing, Technical Marketing and Field Engineering.

Northeastern University Graduate School of Business, Boston, Ma. 02115 – information interviews on graduate programs.

Camp, Dresser & McKee, Boston, Ma. 02108 – Civil Engineering positions.

Ciba-Geigy, Merrimack, N.H. – position openings for Field Sales Representatives for Agricultural Division.

Smith, Batchelder, & Rugg, Hanover, N.H. 03755 – seeks staff accountants.

Reynolds Metals Co., Messena, N.Y. 13662 – offers interviews to Mechanical and electrical engineers.

Sign up for these interviews in the Placement Office, October 27, 28, 29.

Special Focus Workshops continue with Series No. 3 "Researching Employment Literature," or "How to identify and use resource material about jobs in the field of your interest." October 27 and 29 from 6:30 – 8:30. Pre-registration for these sessions is requested. Telephone 3450 or register in person, 109 South Prospect Street.

Oriental Art Sale At Billings

A special exhibition and sale of Original Oriental Art will be presented on Friday, November 14, 1975 at Billings Center, Marsh Lounge from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Marsen Ltd. of Baltimore, Maryland specializes in exhibiting for sale a collection of Original Oriental Art totaling approximately 500 pieces from Japan, China, India, Tibet, Nepal and Thailand. The oldest prints date back to the 18th and 19th Century and include Chinese woodcuts, Indian miniature paintings and manuscripts and master works by such artists as Hiroshige, Kuniyoshi, and Kunisada. The modern pieces consist of a large group of original woodcuts, etchings, lithographs, serigraphs and mezzotints created by such world renowned contemporaries as Saito, Azechi, Mori, Katsuda, and Maki. A representative will be present to answer questions about the work, artists, and the various graphic techniques employed. Prints are shown in open portfolios in an informal atmosphere and you are invited to browse through this fascinating and well-described collection. The price range is wide and there is a treasure to be found for most everyone's budget.

Marson Ltd. specializes in arranging exhibitions and sales of Original Oriental Art at colleges, universities and museums throughout the United States.

The Exchange

by Alice D. Outwater

THE EXCHANGE is a good way of bringing many of the problems that face all the University community into the open. One letter this week asks for 'Urban Amenities' on campus. The writer wants a huge indoor sidewalk cafe. This is surely a fine thought. I can visualize waiters with coffee, cakes, and apertifs and a string band playing in the background. It would add much to campus life! Unfortunately the writer also asked for more money for the Fleming Museum – and that just snapped me out of thoughts of Paris and Venice and back to the old bugaboo of money which, of course is where things will stand for quite a while. The writer suggested taking it from the Medical School, which may be a possibility, but don't let the Governor hear of it!

"What to do with bottles after a thirst quencher is a problem. Throwing them away increases pollution and in no way helps ones finances. One can carry it around all day, take it to some room where it sits until years end." Could a volunteer organization have a container near the machines and arrange for them to be emptied with the proceeds going to charity? If this were done, then a charity would gain and pollution would be reduced. Anyone interested?

It is nice to hear that the flowers are so appreciated. Many of us look at them each morning to reassure ourselves that the first killing frost has not arrived, so summer lingers for a few moments more. Kudos to Jack Treyithick and your hardworking Lane Committee you've arranged for many fine films and concerts. And still some great ones to come.

Audubon Society To Discuss Dam

The Green Mountain Audubon Society will sponsor a panel discussion to explore the Richelieu Dam controversy. The event, free and open to the public, will be held on Monday, October 27 at 8:00 p.m. in the Marsh Life Science Auditorium on the University of Vermont campus.

Charles Ross, member of the International Joint Commission, will moderate the panel consisting of William Cowles, Co-Chairman, Lake Champlain Committee; Carl Reidel, Director, Enviornmental Program at the University of Vermont; and Bernard Beaupre, Canadian representative of the International Joint Commission studying the proposed dam.

The panalists will open with a short presentation stating their concerns and this will be followed by questions and opinions from members of the audience.

Regulation of the level of Lake Champlain is a complicated problem for it not only involves decisions by the United States and Canada but it also pits the conservationists and sportsmen against the powerful real estate interests. Many opinions exist relating to the effect on fish and wildlife should the Richelieu Dam become a reality.

Spend Christmas In Munich

During the long intersession this winter the Dept. of German and Russian will be sponsoring a two week cultural seminar in Munich, Germany. The program is designed to familiarize students, with a "working knowledge" of German, with the culture and civilization of contemporary Germany. The program revolves around an extensive itinerary which can lead to three hours of credit at UVM. However, students and/or faculty who are not interested in participating in the full itinerary but wish to take advantage of the considerable savings on flight, hotel, and tours are invited to sign up as well.

Due to the fact that group rates will be in effect, you will be able to take advantage of a tour at a fraction of the normal fare. For the very low price of approximately $468 (OPEC oil increases may cause air-fare adjustments) we can offer you round trip flight Montreal-Munich, hotel transfers, room in a second class hotel throughout your stay, breakfast daily, guided tours of several museums, and a one day side-trip to Salzburg, Austria.

For further information contact Prof. Roy Allen as soon as possible in the Dept. of German and Russian, in person or call 656-3430.

University Extension Service

The University of Vermont Extension Service of Chittenden County will sponsor three presentations on Thursday evening, October 23, in rooms C 102 and C 103 of the Essex Junction Educational Center. From 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Mrs. Kay Thompson will demonstrate and discuss "Projects That Can Be Completed in One Meeting" for volunteers who work with young people in clothing and textiles programs. These projects will be for youngsters from the ages of nine through adolescence. Also from 6:30 to 7:30, another resource person from the University Extension Office of Information will teach the art of poster-making for exhibits, displays, community events, etc. Beginning at 7:30 Mrs. Kay Strassbury, University of Vermont Clothing and Crafts Specialist, will present a program entitled "It Isn't Nice to Fool Mother Nature, Or Is It?" She will do a demonstration-lecture on using natural materials for color, design, and texture in clothing, crafts, and home decorating. Following this she will discuss and demonstrate the various uses of leather-like and other synthetic fabrics. The program is free and open to all, regardless of race, color, or national origin. For more information contact Eric Nichos or Wendy Soliday at 878-8381.

Career Day A Success

On October 14, the Department of Business Administration, in conjunction with the office of Career Planning and Placement held its first annual Business Career Day. The program allowed over 350 students to talk in small discussion groups with representatives from eleven different career fields. It began at 9:30 a.m. and sessions followed at 10:30, 11:30, and 1:30. Each session presented the following career fields: accounting, law, retail management, hotel/restaurant management, service industries, sales/marketing, bank management, industrial management/junior executive development, insurance and financial planning, and advertising. Also Larry Simmons and Dave Kelley from Career Planning and Placement held sessions on interviewing, resume preparation, and the services their office provides.

Students' comments were very positive. One Senior in the Business Department said, "I wish this had been done last year. The information I gained will certainly be of benefit when I seek my first position with a company." Richard Crimmins, the Program Developer and Coordinator, said, "The reactions of our students were overwhelmingly good. We certainly look forward to an even better program next year."

St. Anselm's Chapel

A Couple of Short Reminders...

Bring your soda and beer bottles to St. Anselm's...Offering for UNICEF this week at 6:30 p.m. Sunday Service – anything you can give will help alot...Mouthpiece on Thursday from 7:30 – 9:00 p.m. We had a wonderfully exciting discussion last week. Come join us this time...We're using a new liturgy for Compline. Come spend a few quiet moments here at 10 p.m. on Wednesday.

Prayer Meeting? A time for Christians to come together to pray, sing and help strengthen each others faith. Christianity calls us to recognize that people are equal; that cooperation is essential; and that non-violence is necessary. We live in a culture which stresses Competition; limits cooperation, condones violence and urges us to become better than everyone else. Come join with other Christians to share your struggle to be a Christian. Bring your joys as well as your troubles and doubts and we'll share them with each other and God. Tuesdays at 8 p.m.

PROTESTANT/EPISCOPAL MINISTRY

Schedule of Events

SUNDAY

11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

6:30 p.m. – Service of the Word and Communion (Protestant) with supper following

MONDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

8:00 p.m. – Prayer and Share – informal worship

TUESDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

8:30 p.m. – For Men Only – informal discussions of Christian beliefs and faith for men who want to be more serious about their religion but find formal worship meaningless.

10:00 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal)

WEDNESDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

10:00 p.m. – Compline – a brief service of prayers and songs to end the day.

THURSDAY

8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

4:00-5:30 p.m. – Wine and Cheese

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

7:30-9:00 p.m. – Mouthpiece – a high class bull session

9:30 p.m. – Compline at McAuley Hall

FRIDAY

7:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer

5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer

Chaplains: Nancy Allen, Geoffrey Schmitt X3882 – St. Anselm's Chapel (Redstone Campus)

Business Seminar

Professor Gene Laber from the Department of Business Administration will conduct a seminar on peak-load pricing. Dr. Laber has been working on this subject through a National Science Foundation Grant for the last two years. Despite a rather long history in the economic literature, concepts of peak-load pricing are only now beginning to be implemented in electric utilities in the United States. The purpose of this seminar is to examine the rationale for peak-load pricing, to discuss methods of implementing peak-pricing schemes, and to assess some of the problems and costs involved in making a transition to peak-load pricing. The seminar will be held on October 29 at 4:00 p.m. in 333 Votey.

Baha'i Films

The Baha'i community of Burlington will be showing two films over the weekend. The first film And His Name Shall Be One, produced by CBS for television, reports the basic tenants of the Baha'i Faith as revealed by its prophet-founder Baha'u'-llah against a background of the Baha'i Shrines in the Holy Land followed by an interview with the Baha'i U.N. representative. The other film, A New Wind, shows Baha'i communities around the world.

Both films will be shown Friday, October 24 at 8 p.m. in room 431 Waterman Building; Saturday, October 25 8 p.m. and Sunday, October 26 at 2 p.m. in the Fireplace Lounge, Living/Learning Center, UVM..

Auctioneer Wanted

UVM Art Club needs someone with any experience in Auctioneering to run an auction on Tuesday, October 28, at 7:30-10:00; If interested call Art Department Office 656-2014 during the day or 862-7849 in the evening.

Pafunda Memorial Services

There will be a memorial service for Dan Pafunda, a senior forestry major who died in a motorcycle accident October 11. The service will be Friday, October 24 at 5:30 p.m. at the Newman Center on Redstone campus. All teachers, friends and acquaintances welcome.

Shoosh!

The skiers attending the second Ski Club meeting were treated to a showing of the K2 Demonstration team film and the Dick Barrymore production, Winter Heat. Both films are well known for their exciting freestyle skiing and were throughly enjoyed by those present.

Prior to the films, more plans for the fourth annual Ski Show were made. The show will be Saturday afternoon, November 8, in the Living/Learning Commons. The show will feature displays by many local ski shops and ski areas, continuous film showings, and equipment clinics for those interested in learning more about their equipment. Both Nordic and Alpine skiing will be represented.

There will also be a "swap shop" where all types of equipment can be bought and sold. So if you are in need of equipment, or have equipment you would like to sell, this is an ideal opportunity.

The Ski Club is an SA-organization which wants to provide a way for skiers to get together, learn more about the sport, and have a good time. There is also a racing contingent which will be attending Eastern races and several club races and "ski days" are planned for the season. So if you like to ski, or think you would like to; plan to attend the show, and get ready to "Boogie."

Poetry Reading

Gladys Colburn, wife of UVM Emeritus Art Professor Francis Colburn, will read her poetry Wednesday (October 29) at 8 p.m. in Dewey Lounge, Old Mill at the University of Vermont in a free public program sponsored by the English Department's Writers Workshop.

Alpha Zeta

Alpha Zeta Meeting will be held at 7:00 on October 29 in Room 17 of Hills Building.

Go home.

Go home on Allegheny. And save yourself some money. We offer a wide variety of discount travel plans with big savings for groups and individuals.

The Liberty Fare. You can go home and a lot of other places besides, with unlimited travel at one low price. You get a choice of 3 plans, too—7 days for $129, 14 days for $149 and 21 days for $179. Good everywhere we fly, except Canada.

Group 10. Save up to 33⅓% roundtrip (up to 20% one way). Groups of 10 or more save when they purchase tickets 48 hours in advance and take off together. And you can each return separately, if you like. Good everywhere we fly.

Group 4-9. Save up to 20% roundtrip. Groups of 4 to 9 save when you make reservations 48 hours in advance and fly together to and from selected cities. Stay at least 3 but no more than 30 days.

Leave before noon on weekdays—anytime on weekends.

Weekend. Save up to 25% on your roundtrip ticket when you go and return on a Saturday or Sunday.

For complete information on all of our money-saving discount travel plans and flight reservations, see your Travel Agent or call your local Allegheny Airlines reservations number. And get ready to go home or anywhere else.

ALLEGHENY.

America's 6th largest passenger-carrying airline.

(9507)

Right on your campus, right in your home town, right in your face.

The NATIONAL LAMPOON SHOW

With all its fun, frivolity, and asinine comments, combining the mammoth production of a Busby Berkeley epic, the sly wit of a Noel Coward bedroom comedy, and the sophisticated commentary on contemporary life of a Henny Youngman commentary on contemporary life....All this in one unprecedented, unplanned, unbelievable revue.

To see it...you've got to be there!

Sponsored by SA Speakers

OCT. 27, 1975 8 P.M.

PATRICK GYMNASIUM

TICKETS - $3.50 GEN'L ADM.
$2.50 with UVM student I.D.
Tickets at UVM Bookstore

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Randy Jansen '77 ..... Editor-in-Chief
David Ryan '77 ..... Assistant Editor
Mark Valle '76 ..... Managing Editor
John MacDonald '78 ..... News Editor
Sue Perkins '78 ..... Feature Editor
Sari Bodi '76 ..... Arts & Entertainment Editor
Norm Robinson '77 ..... Sports Editor
Amy Weinstock '78 ..... Copy Editor
Deborah Powell '76 ..... Advertising Manager

The Sexist Classroom

Many people have heard the controversy about sexism and sexist language. Occasionally, classroom discussions will focus on it, peers will refer to it, and it is discussed in some literature. Yet nothing is done to remedy the situation.

Some people feel that the remedy is to change all the 'he's to 'one's. But this is an awkward switch. Besides it is not the issue. The English language is masculine and we will not move away from that for some time. What is the issue is the constant reinforcement of stereotype roles. Many texts and professors refer to typists as 'she' and engineers as 'he'. Clearly this is not the fault of the language we have inherited, but it is the fault of the individual choosing the words. If we accept the pronoun 'he' as universal, then refer to the typists by using 'he', not 'she'.

In addition to the use of pronouns, the sexes are specifically role cast in University texts. For example, in my Economics text, a man (wage-earner) buys a box of candy to pacify his wife. Another man is ashamed during the depression that he has lost his job and that the wife must work; the family involved hides this fact from the children. Yes, women do have different behavioral trends than men. Whether these differences are innate or learned is debatable. It is fine to refer to these behavioral trends, but I doubt that there are any statistics supporting the incidence of need in wives to be 'pacified' by a box of candy.

Professors further propagate sexism. In my experience, these professors tend to be male. They are either not aware of sexism or they disregard the problem. I (and I speak for other women), am offended by professors who demean women. Professors must learn to curb sexism. Sexist professors should realize that they lose tremendous amounts of respect in the eyes of their students. Some men may be able to laugh it off, or joke about it, but women can't. It is not a joke to women.

As I listen to a professor demean women, I realize that his philosophies are radically different than mine. Therefore, I question the way he perceives the subject he is teaching. His use of sexism teaches me not to trust his judgment because I am unsure of his perception.

The problem is not unsurmountable. We all must become aware of sexism. Efforts must be made to annihilate the disease of sexism. Professors should avoid sexist texts and adopt alternative texts and other instructional devices. In the classroom, students should protest the sexist comments of professors and students.

There is no reason why any student should be humiliated in the classroom because of sex, especially if the University expects to maintain quality education.

S.J.P.

Enforce 'No Dog' Rule

To the Editor:

In reference to Gary R. Schoenknecht and Diana Gill's letter in the October 16th Cynic, I too am tired of the long lines at the den, slow service and the stock answer – "We're all out of bagels" or "We're all out of pastrami." I eat at least six meals a week at the den: occasionally I need variety and like to order from the grill although I often take advantage of the pre-wrapped sandwiches.

Also, as much as I love dogs, I really dislike eating when there are animals running around in the den or in other dining halls on campus. Isn't there a law prohibiting animals in restaurants and/or dining halls? A food inspector would surely leap at the chance to tell Saga managers of such a thing!

From my experience working with the public in a dining room at a resort for several summers, I've learned the necessity for prompt, friendly service in a pleasant atmosphere geared to the needs of the customer. This same policy applies to the preparedness, service and atmosphere at the Den and at other dining halls on campus.

To conclude, Saga managers should enforce the "no-dog" rule in dining halls and in the case of the den, re-evaluate the efficiency and quality of the output.

Margo Shapiro

letters to the editor

Seek Correspondence

Dear Editor:

We are writing in hopes that you may be able to help us. We are presently incarcerated at the Marion Correctional Institute in Ohio.

We are seeking any correspondence and help we can get. When I speak of We it is in terms of my brother and I. We are fairly well versed in most subjects. We are Black, and we will answer all letters regardless of age, race, or sex.

We ask you to print our letter in your campus paper in hopes that we will attract someone that may be concerned because we feel forgotten as human beings.

In any event, we would like to thank you in advance for your time and consideration and we are hoping that we have some brothers and sisters who care.

Thank you,
Edward Simpson 132-481
Paul Simpson 133-762
P.O. Box 57
Marion, Ohio 43302

Wallet Stolen

To the Editor:

This letter is addressed to whomever saw fit to remove my wallet from my purse (not to mention the small change from my jacket pocket) when it was left alone briefly in my office on the third floor of Old Mill on Monday, October 13th.

It is going to cost me $5.00 to replace my University I.D., $2.00 to replace my driver's license, 50 cents to get a new withdrawal card from the Teamsters Union, as well as 50 cents in postage stamps, three hours of time spent writing letters and making phone calls, and countless squabbles with clerks and bank tellers over my inability to verify my existence. I also live with the possibility of getting nailed any day for driving without a license.

It was a large red wallet with a flap on either side, one for cash and one for a checkbook. Thank God I never had the presence of mind to transfer my checks to my wallet. If anyone should come across my identity lying in the gutter or behind a bush, I would be grateful to have it back.

As for the $2.44 that the thief made off with, I have all I can do to limit my remarks to publishable language. Those were mighty expensive hamburgers that some jerk ate at my expense.

Mary Jane Norris

A Day in the Life

To the Editor:

Our present educational system is said to be at its height; computerized, mechanized, and ruled by the genius of man. However, man does have his faults. Why can't our educational system have its faults? The system does have its faults, but they are often overlooked due to a process known as the "run-around."

Such a happening occurred to me. I found myself drowning in a course that was totally beyond my scope. Through careful consideration and advice I decided to go to the head of the department, Mr. Hansine, to obtain permission to drop down to a lower level. I approached Mr. Hansine and soon found myself in his office. I felt like I was in a courtroom pleading my case to a biased judge. I explained my situation, and Mr. Hansine seemed to take in every word. Then he brought forth a piece of computerized paper. The paper contained the academic record of my whole high school career. He studied it carefully and then proceeded to set up an unpenetrable barrier. The barrier consisted of the simple phrase, "Your high school record shows that you are qualified for that particular course and you should be able to handle yourself according to your qualifications." A sudden feeling of confusion and hopelessness came over me. My whole explanation had been ignored! The man-made system had once again proved itself superior, and I, a member of the populace that had created that system, became the loser. Disheartedly, I returned to the class. After two more lectures I resolved that unless I gained freedom from the class I would be driven into madness, the madness resulting from lack of comprehension. (With insanity slowly enveloping my brain cells, I decided to get out before I was driven over the brink of insanity.) I made another appointment with Mr. Hansine, only this time I would be prepared to break down his barrier. I was not going to allow a no-feeling data-stuffed computer to block me. I would try to break down Mr. Hansine's barrier by telling him in simple terms to "fuck the record," for they don't tell the whole story; they only tell the grade status, not the status of the class or the teacher.

My next experience with the professor of "run-around" occurred at eleven o'clock on a Tuesday morning. As the time approached for round-two, I slowly began to slip into a realm of discouragement due to the fear that this reconfrontation would end in the same manner as my first experience. I soon found myself in Mr. Hansine's office once again. I spent approximately five minutes in his office and we both went through the same routine. However, this time there was one difference; he suggested that I go see my advisor. I decided to take his advice; except instead of running all over campus, I gave him a call. My advisor, in turn, told me to go see the assistant dean. Finally, after a game of "pass the buck", I got, not only results, but also permission to drop down to a lower level. I left the dean's office in highly elated spirits and bountiful in pride, for it had occurred to me that I had beat the system and avoided the "computerized shaft", thus showing that if you strive for something hard enough, no obstacle is unbeatable, not even an unfeeling computer.

Rick Priem

Three Coins

I'm just a poor, lonesome hobo
Had a world awhile to roam,
Oh Lord, now I'm dying
So it's time to guide me home.
I'm lookin' for that old boxcar
That an angel said I'd know,
Travelin' time is a-comin'
One more look, now I'll go.

There's a doorway just up ahead,
So close to heaven, I can't lose;
But there's a sign on the entrance,
"How's the time to pay your dues."
I ain't got nothin' to pass your gate,
Didn't know there'd be a toll,
Spent my life ridin' freight cars,
Dreams can't pay to rest my soul.

Heaven's just for rich men
So I'll walk on down the line,
Three coins that I'm lookin',
Keeps me from my peace of mind.
Who's that callin' down the highway,
A restless Angel, come rescue me,
I was knockin' on Satan's doorway,
Gates of Heaven are always free.

The Empire Kid

Cynic's Budget

To the Editor:

Could you please publish, for the information of the students, a breakdown of the Cynic's budget? This would include such items as funding from S.A., the disbursement of advertising revenues, etc.

Thank you.

Rob Roy MacGregor

Thanks

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the Den for putting up the sign "No Dogs Allowed" on their door this past Friday.

It's reassuring to know that some of us are being heard.

Diana Gill

Ariel Delayed

To the Editor:

A lot of students have been asking us where the Ariel for 1975 is already. All we can say is that it's coming. There were some problems that held up production, but we anticipate that it will arrive sometime during the first two weeks of December.

You're probably wondering what the problems were that caused the delay. They can all be summed up very simply: lack of student involvement! There was just too much to do and not enough people to do it.

Over the past few years, the yearbook has been virtually a one man project. It is extremely difficult for one person to put together a 300 page book, and go to school at the same time. As a result, the previous books had to be completed during the summer. This caused a delay in the arrival of the book.

We are trying to avoid the same problem with Ariel 1976. So far our efforts have met with only limited success. If you would like to see Ariel 1976 arrive on time, may we make one simple suggestion: get involved! Come and see us in (lower) Billings or call us at 656-2056.

Thank you
Wynn Gold
Tom Smith
Co-Editors
Ariel 1976

Slanted News

To the Editor:

I was disturbed to read in last week's Cynic the article by Steve Brown lauding the Burlington Free Press. For starters, the article is nothing but an advertisement that has been dressed up and called an article. Secondly, perhaps more disturbing, is the condescending attitude Mr. Brown took in his interpretation of William Hyvonen's remarks about the small likelihood of successful competition. This is a direct allusion to the Burlington addition of the Times-Argus and is not only inaccurate but does not belong in an article of this type. It's called slanting the news.

The Free Press used this paper as a tool with which to strike out against the competition. Mr. Hyvonen should have used a little more care when talking to a reporter, and Mr. Brown should've recognized the slant for what it was.

I think the Free Press will be able to get along without free advertising, and the Cynic doesn't need a reputation of editorializing.

Glenn Hovland

WCAX-TV Deprives Vermont

To the Editor:

The Vermont Public-Interest Research Group has criticized the refusal of station WCAX-TV in Burlington to broadcast a CBS documentary entitled "The American Way of Cancer". Joining VPIRG were Vermont's Occupational Health Director John Froines and the Columbia Broadcasting System news headquarters in New York City.

VPIRG director Whitsy Bluestein said "The decision of Vermont's only television station to broadcast a 'cops and robbers' show instead of this cancer documentary is extremely unfortunate. By censoring the program in its entirety, WCAX-TV is depriving Vermonters of a chance to consider the findings of nationally prominent scientists and health experts." The show was replaced by a rerun of the Mod Squad.

Bluestein added that this is a question of responsible Broadcasting. "While Vermonters and people around the country are now realizing that cancer is an environmental disease," Bluestein said, "WCAX apparently is of the belief that 'what we don't know won't hurt us'."

WCAX Executive Vice President Peter Martin cancelled the show because he believes that the show was "slipshod" and lacking in "Professionalism." Martin had sent a telegram to CBS saying that he did not plan to air the show because "this very serious subject was treated in a superficial and sensational manner."

Reacting to Martin's refusal, William Leonard, senior vice president and director of public affairs for CBS in New York issued this statement: "Mr. Martin feels that he knows more about this subject than our producers, correspondents and researchers. It is his station and he has the perfect right to keep material of which he does not approve off the air – a right he has exercised before and will probably do again."

Vermont's Occupational Health Director John Froines also called the decision by Martin "unfortunate". Froines said that by the use of certain chemicals the public is being massacred to death by cancer "20 years from now." Froines noted that the National Cancer Institute pinpointed Vermont as an area high in instances of lung and bladder cancer.

VPIRG

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

NEWS: Steve Wells, Scott Curtis, Charles Kreutzer.
FEATURE: Appleton King, Paul Cain, Randy Gellerman, Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Mary Partridge
ARTS: Elaine Boyle, Cathy Brown, Martha Hess, Tricia John, Barbara MacPadane, Jane Santana, Kaye Tetro.
Cartoons – Matthew Miller up "Fine" – Kenny Mirman
"I Ate with Perkstein" – Tommy Powell
COLUMNISTS: Ken Markowitz, Peter Cobb, Gary Chilson, Larry Selden.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Sarah Clay, John Lunde, Barb Terchis, Linda Mansfield, Martha Hess, Louise Beinke.
SPORTS: Debi Bloom, Rita Bruce, Randy Briggs, Pat Taves, Chris Brown, Scott Curtis.
ADVERTISING: Steve Brown Susan Ross Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenk.

Opinions expressed in editorials, columns, or cartoons in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published weekly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 656-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

The SAT Tests, Who Tests The Testers?

by Peter Cobb

No institution has greater control over the future of millions of college students than the Education Testing Service. Originators of the Student Appttitude Test (SAT) the ETS acts as the nation's gatekeeper, guarding the entrance doors of the country's colleges and universities. The ETS also tests applicants for graduate school and in turn decides who will be our doctors, lawyers and scientists. Students who do well on these tests, get into the college of their choice, students who don't, don't.

HOW GOOD ARE THE TESTS?

According to the ETS officials themselves, a sixty point spread between two students is statistically insignificant. On any given day, there is a one-in-three chance that one's score can range between 10-20 points up or down. The problem however, is that even though ETS admits that a good score might depend on whether the student has had a good night's sleep and a complete breakfast, many colleges will accept a student scoring 600 but not one scoring 540. The two students, according to ETS, may have the same "aptitude."

Another problem with the tests is that even though ETS claims that students cannot study for them, students who cram through prescribed coaching schools or pre-test booklets, generally score higher than students who do not prepare for the tests. Practice can make a significant difference in determining one's aptitude.

Benesh Hoffman, author of The Tyranny of Testing, criticizes the tests format, saying that the "Multiple-choice tests penalize the deep student, dampen creativity, foster intellectual dishonesty, and undermine the very foundations of education." Hoffman feels that the situation is serious enough to warrant a national investigation.

WHO OR WHAT IS THE ETS?

The Educational Testing Service is a Princeton, New Jersey-based multi-million dollar operation, which operates a multitude of tests ranging from CIA agents to auto mechanics. Their work is not limited to tests and research. They supply colleges with names of high school seniors with the qualities the school is looking for and supply students with a list of colleges they can get into. All this for a modest fee of course. The ETS also runs the Higher Education Admission Law Service which provides a special newsletter to students worried about passing their law boards and graduate record exams.

Contracts with College Boards account for some 24 million in yearly income. According to Mark Green, an anti-trust lawyer, the ETS-College Boards relationship is an illegal restraint of trade under the anti-trust laws.

Theoretically ETS is responsible to an independant board of directors made up of a cross section of American educators and community leaders. In reality however, ETS is accountable to no outside agencies. ETS makes its own self-evaluations and decides what information to make public for evaluation by others. Students have no influence over their tests nor do the colleges that use the tests results.

WHO TESTS THE TESTERS?

Unfortunately no one tests the testers. New York Public Interest Research Group however has recently set up an Educational Testing Service Complaint Center. The purpose of the center is to compile data concerning type and volume of complaints. Students who believe that they have been victimized by ETS can fill out complaint forms and mail them to VPIRG and we will forward your complaint. New York PIRG will not try to solve individual complaints, but will compile data concerning the type and volume of complaints to establish patterns or error. Follow-up, if complaints merit it, will include litigation and legislative action.

Looking For Louise On A Cold Windy Day

by Gregory Katz

My eyes opened up. There was a light layer of crust on them. I turned over and rubbed them. I had just finished telling Teddy Kennedy that I believed in orange juice. Where was I? In bed. With Ingrid. Where was Teddy? We were sitting in the bar at some airport, a big supersonic airport. Model jumbo jets hung from the roof of the bar. Outside the door was a big red tube leading to the terminal. I was sipping vodka and grapefruit juice. We were discussing cold remedies. "Well Teddy, I've always felt that o.j. was the key. I firmly believe it heals the throat without hurting the stomach." There was something hard between my legs. I rolled over on my left side and looked at Ingrid. Sleeping deeply, snoring. Ingrid, her body wracked with dumb diseases. Ingrid who couldn't stand me now. Somehow asleep I remembered her as loving me. I wanted to jam my prick between her cheeks and send myself through her. I wanted to roll her over and climb up there, and have it be right. No way though. I reached my arm out over her and cupped my right hand around her breast. I closed my eyes.

In the morning we could hardly talk. She was feverish again, or so she said. I got up and made her some fried eggs and toast. I didn't feel bitter now; I wanted things to work out.

After practice, I went off in my Chevy and drove down to Dublin, Vt., to see my sister. I wanted to get out of the city, away from all this confusion. Ingrid gave me two bucks for gas, which was enough to get there and back. My Chevy was wonderful, a big old Impala convertible. The most maroon car ever made. It was a '65 with 86,000 miles, and it loved the highway. I pulled the top down in the autumn sunlight. The big blue sky was shining, the leaves were turning their crazy colors. I left the city behind (doing at least 75 mph) then I pulled off the Interstate and took a dirt road that winded down to Dublin. I knew all the roads: four years of cruising did the trick. Some people went slow on dirt roads, figuring it was safer and easier on the suspension. Not me. I liked to hottail it. I would jam that car up end down, over potholes, swerving away from rocks and fallen trees, skidding around corners. It was sort of like skiing. All that space and air coming at you, and reacting so fast. I figured it was good for the car-kept it tough.

After about eighteen miles, the dirt road intersected with Route 110. I turned left and pulled up at Cathy's. Her blue Toyota was in the driveway. I parked and walked up to the house. It was a funny house. It was your typical old time Vermont house-clapboard, center hall, woodstoves, exposed beams. Except that the living room was painted a bright and brilliant purple. It reflected light back at you, and made the rustic woodstoves look like curios from Mars.

Cathy was sitting in the kitchen brewing coffee. She looked up and came over to hug me. It was good.

"How are you, you creep? You haven't come to see me in two months. What's wrong?" she asked me.

"Everything." I could feel myself crack a little, tears forming in my throat. "Ingrid is sick, we can't get along. Burlington stinks, I'm flat broke.."

"Sit down, Greg, have some coffee."

I sat down in the chair. It was an orange padded swivel chair. What was it doing in the kitchen? Cathy started talking about her vacation on Block Island. She had cut all her hair off one night down there. Now it was like a skinhead, just smooth little burrs all over her head. She looked like a monk, a very sexy monk. Her big forehead was glistening under the light, and her bright green leotard clung to her. "I just got tired of my hair one night, I went out on the beach and cut it all off, and then used a razor on what was left. The next morning I went swimming and felt the water on my scalp. And people don't know if I'm a man, a woman, or a being from outer space." She had a point. If she weren't my sister Cathy, she could have been Eck-17 reporting from Jupiter.

We got around to talking about everything that had gone wrong for me; Cathy was a good listener, she understood, she was ten years older than me and had been through volumes of shit herself, and she cared. I told her the whole sordid story: the jealousies, the misunderstandings, the pain. I told her we both wanted it to work, and didn't know how. I told her about my hamburgers, the way I felt, the bile, that feeling of death, the disintegration, the emptiness.

Cathy didn't say much about it, but I knew she was taking it all in. Then she asked me how my summer had been.

"Summer was loose. I had this good feeling that I was big, that I was filled with love. It was like opening up. I was able to help people, to give. It seemed to me that most people were spending their lives innoculating themselves, setting up their lives to be so ordered, so planned, that they wouldn't be upset or threatened by crisis. People were hiding, they were building a little world so limited and protected that nothing could go wrong. It was like hedging a bet, they were so set in their ways."

"What about you?"

"I was different. I didn't cling to a structure. I clung to myself, to a feeling that the world was good, that people were good, that I could be vulnerable and out in the open. Living day by day. I wasn't afraid, I wasn't marking off lines as to what was mine, and what space was mine. And it seemed like if I fell, that was o.k. You have to be untogether at times, you have to freak out, to lose it, to break down. Being untogether is part of being a person, part of having hopes and dreams."

"So this is the laboratory proof of your theory. You lost it. You're coming apart right in front of my eyes. I can see pain and weakness come surging through you. If you believe in your theory then you have to deal with it, and you will learn from it. It's real enough to hurt you to the core. It's real enough to do something about."

"But do you think I'm wrong?"

"No, you're just you. Following your path. You're right, you're vulnerable cause you don't hide. But if you glorify that, if you turn your pain into something special and enviable then you'll turn into another lie, a sad and desperate lie. You can steal food and get drunk all you want, you can drive forty miles to tell you troubles to someone, but if you can't change then you're stuck, just like everyone you're putting down."

"Yeah I can see that. But pain is so physical for me, it gets in my gut and I can't move, I can't reach out, can't crap, can't play ball."

"Then give up. Take valium every night if that's what you want. Don't come on with this little-boy-lost shit. Nobody's sticking a needle in you."

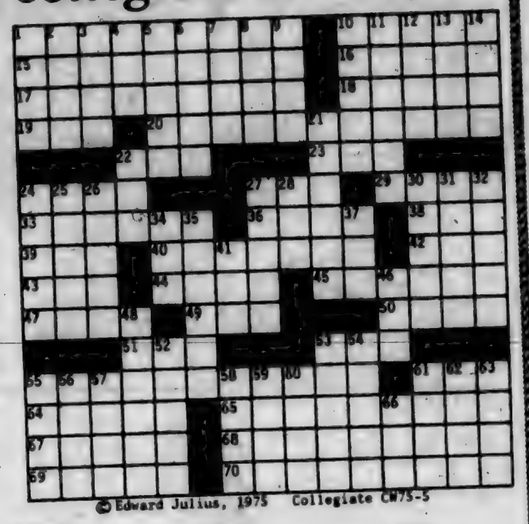
Cathy had a point, that's for sure. My life was in Burlington. I had to clean it out, to be somewhere. Make my home a real home. These things matter, they take their toll. There was no point in being half-wherever-I-was. The sun shone in through the window. It bounced off the mirror on top of the stove and hit me in the eye. "Do you wanna go for a walk, Cath?"

"No, I've got work to do. You go on if you want though."

(continued on page eleven)

collegiate crossword

LAST WEEK'S ANSWER



© Edward Julius, 1975 Collegiate CW75-5

ACROSS

1 Verdi opera
10 —— opera
15 Solitary confinement
16 Writer of children's stories
17 That which lessens pain
18 TV's Mr. Grant
19 Compass direction
20 Final try (3 wds.)
22 Forerunner of the CIA
23 Exploit
24 Verdi opera
27 Ma: Fr.
29 Black birds
33 Laughed loudly
36 Feminine suffix
38 Flightless bird
39 Hotel
40 Comic opera "—— of Penzance"
42 Name in Ray Bolger song
43 Lend a helping hand
44 Image
45 Flash floods
47 Simon ——
49 Piano part
50 La Boheme's heroine
51 Hawaiian dish
53 Sports official, for short
55 Daredevil (2 wds.)
61 Practice: Scot.
64 Caustic
65 Those who join the army
67 Part of LSU
68 Kin
69 Actor Sidney ——
70 Servers at afternoon gatherings (2 wds.)

DOWN

1 Ready for eating
2 "No man —— island"
3 Author Vidal
4 Corrida cheer
5 Nigeria's capital
6 College and jacket
7 Flat or spare
8 Work like Tillie
9 Brazilian weight
10 Covers with paint
11 Drove out
12 Certain skirt, for short
13 The same: Lat.
14 Part of c/o
21 Instrumental compositions
22 Paddle
24 Opera highlights
25 Ancient Greek district
26 "——" Dee Meredith
27 Labor leader
28 Baseball hall-of-famer
30 Fine violin
31 "Little ——"
32 Answer to "Says who?"
34 Prefix: over
35 Child actor —— Moore
37 Clairvoyance
41 Richard ——
46 Rock music equipment
48 Pixie
52 More mature
53 Eastern Church member
54 Popular Washington hostess
55 Like Lou Brock
56 Prefix: without
57 Soviet sea
58 Spanish muralist
59 Large knife
60 Wide-mouthed jar
61 College subject (abbr.)
62 Descartes
63 Initials on some ships
66 Country of "Lost Horizon" (abbr.)

Second Day In The Mountains

Thrust skyward like a cork in a painted ocean storm,
Surrounded by great ground swells of the earth's crust
Following like geological whales nosing through the purple landscape
With no scale to betray their enormity.
Sweeping up from the valley floors
Thick folds of stained green carpeting blanket the massive slopes,
The lush pile, already threadbare along the upper reaches,
Is worn completely bare along the summit ridges,
Quietly over the heights curls an uncontaminated caress,
An unadulterated whisper of a soft wind half forgotten –
Such scenic splendor should inspire a flow of words
Rich in descriptive beauty;
But confronted with the essence that has long eluded their symbolic grasp,
The words cringe behind the barricade of conventional knowledge
Where they can cleverly describe each other.

The joke we play on ourselves and call time,
Having laughed, is stalled.
The minutes have ceased their relentless gnawing at the hours.
The hours satiated sit idly by unmoving.
The great rational pendulum by which We tick away our lives, by which
We measure the thin slices of experience
That we shave from our being –
Hangs motionless.

Abruptly, the metallic sound of iron clanking
Intrudes into the encompassing stillness.
Off in the distance, a wisp of black coal smoke
Dirties the purity of the sky.
Civilization creeping toward the Washington summit,
The grotesque cog railway inching upward
Laden with the fat, overstuffed, overdressed, complacent droves
From middle-class Suburbia.
The commercial assault a mere burlesque,
But who can smile at such sadness.
Mercifully, the grey shrouds trailing from the swift clouds passing Blot out the ugly intrusion.
All is serene.
The wind sweeps clean over the bare rocks and the mist fills up the ravine.
Quietness. Not quite nothingness.

Yet somewhere in the world beyond the mist
You scream out silently
As the clock behind you on the wall,
Chrome clean, mockingly echoes its reminder across the ante room
Of imitation marble and meaningless veneer panelling,
Promising an endless series of time clusters,
Arranged, however, in a deceitful circle that always Returns you to yourself.
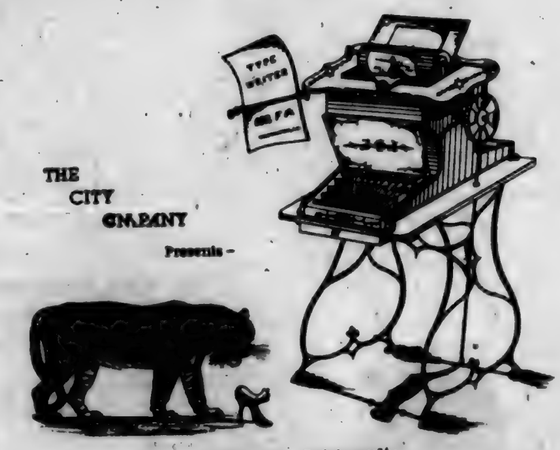
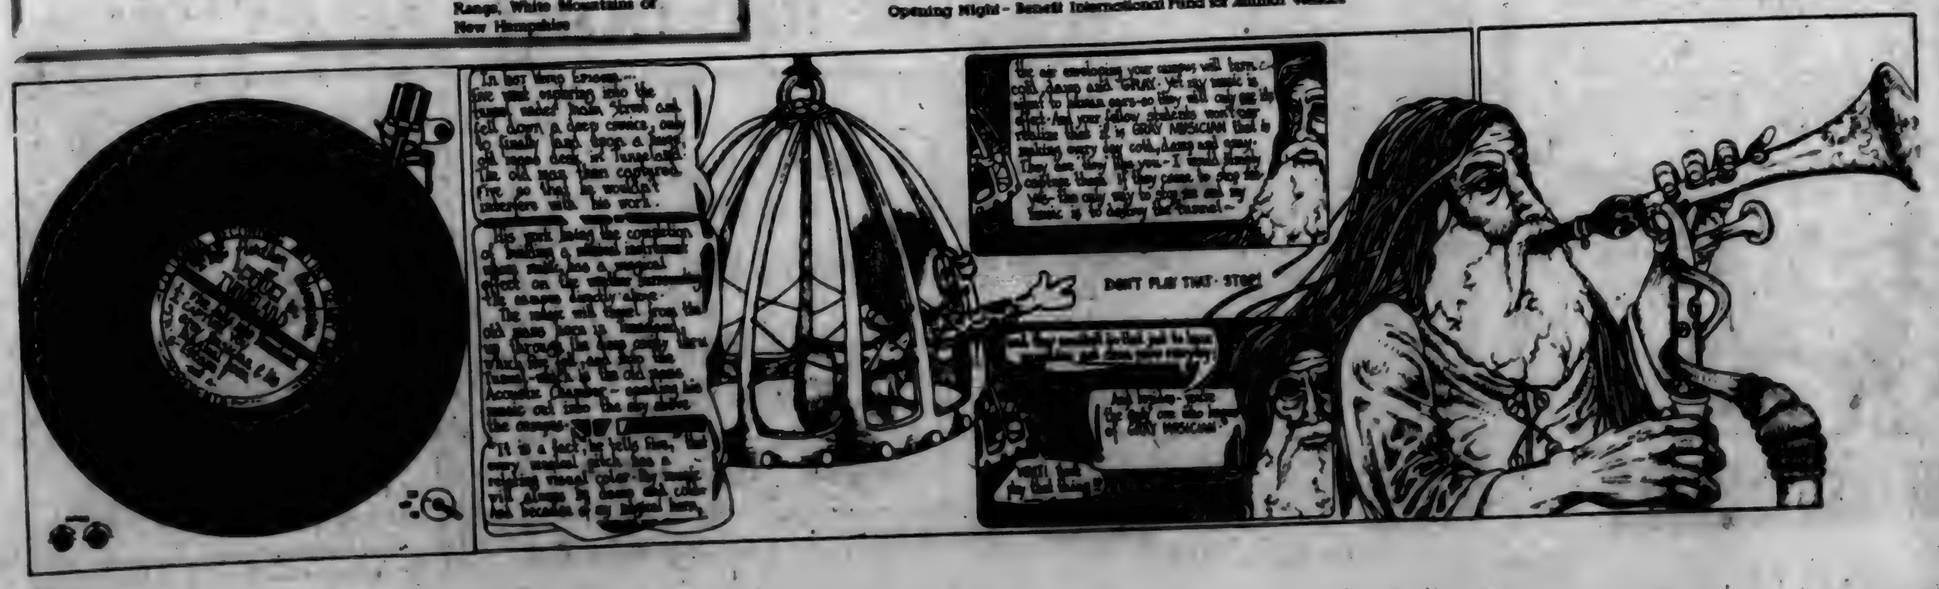
Alas, would that I could save you from the dragon,
Fair maid,
But the rust on the roads rusts the armor.
White charger have I none – and how absurd!
Because though I did, ride him I would not know how.

RAN
Gulfside Trail, Presidential Range, White Mountains of New Hampshire



THE CITY COMPANY
Presents –

Murray Schisgal's
THE TYPISTS & THE TIGER
Burlington CITY HALL Auditorium/ October 23 - 27
Tickets: $3.00 (Reserved Seats) Curtain: 8:00 P.M.
CITY HALL Box Office: 863-5773
Opening Night - Benefit International Fund for Animal Welfare



ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Space Odyssey:

Kolisch Convinces Spaceman

by Paul Price

"Whatcha wanna do tonight Spaceman?"

"I dunno. Ya wanna catch the hypnotist up at Ira Allen?"

"Yeah... hope he's better than the one they had last year – he was trying to convince one of his subjects that he was a donkey, but the guy held up a mirror so the hypnotist made an ass out of himself."

On Saturday, October 18, "World's Fastest Hypnotist" Dr. John Kolisch appeared at Ira Allen Chapel to demonstrate amazing feats of E.S.P., the power of suggestion, various states of hypnosis, and other examples of derring-do. Dr. Kolisch has appeared once before at UVM, and it was on the basis of raves from some people who were held spellbound that I decided to attend.

"Hypnotist – bullshit and bojive – it's all done with mirrors – he pays the subjects to cooperate – nothing but a fake!"

"I dunno...It was all very convincing...Like when he was able to determine how much change a lad had in his pocket without seeing it...and when he could describe the way a girl looked and what she was wearing when he was double-blindfolded – How do you fake that?"

"I'm tellin' ya Spaceman, it's all a lot of hooey!"

"But what about when he described an object taken from the audience in this way – "you celebrate every time you use this object" and it turned out to be a joint?"

"Easy – he could smell it, it was probably lit."

Kolisch was blindfolded with two silver dollars held in place by adhesive tape, and then blindfolded again with a black mask. He proceeded to identify a pen, a brown cap, a joint, as well as other objects. But that was peanuts compared to the second half of the show. Once Kolisch had un-blinded himself, he called for volunteers from the audience to participate as subjects in the hypnosis part of the show. It reminded me quite a bit of the Charge of the Light Brigade. I was stationed close to the stage and missed certain death by inches, as about a hundred feet trampled by. Out of about 60 or 70 volunteers, he finally settled down to working with about 17 people. Interspersed with entertainment was a heavy rap about how hypnotism can be used for valid medical purposes, how you can't make some one do something which is against their will under the hypnotic state.

Even though someone won't do something against their will, it does not mean that they will not do something out of the ordinary and out of character. For example, one gentleman was absolutely convinced he was Jack Benny, mannerisms included. Only he told a fairly risque joke, which had most of the audience falling off their seats. In fact, the audience seemed more spellbound than the subjects. The show was four hours long, but few left before it ended, and without an intermission it's a real tribute to Kolisch's talent and ability to hold the audience's attention for so long.

One girl was able to do a passable Carly Simon imitation, but when she was brought out of her state, she stated that she would never sing in front of an audience. One gent gyrated his pelvis and turned into Elvis. Another subject demonstrated Kung-Fu technique. One woman could not recognize her husband, no matter how much he insisted he really was. One of the evening's highlights was when Kolisch had all his subjects convinced they could see through clothing, hence see the bare truth via a pair of lenseless "X-Ray glasses." This was his finale, and at midnight the show ended, leaving this reviewer with a sore stomach from laughing so hard. True die-hard skeptics were invited to stay and talk with Kolisch, but not this one – I left convinced.

Lusty Lysistrata, By Zeus!

Karen Trott, Brooke Gladstone smirk at Sara O'Neil's frustration.

by Martha Hess

On Thursday, October 16, the long-awaited Lysistrata opened at the Royall Tyler Theatre. It being the first student production of the season, theatre-goers were anxious to see what dramatic heights UVM would hit this year. After the opening night excitement, however, the crowds failed to die and the play was praised by most. How did the UVM theatre department manage to stage Aristophanes' difficult comedy and do so in such a way as to please an audience far removed from the Greek audience of the 5th century B.C.? Sunday evening's performance was this reviewer's opportunity to discover the answers.

Concerning a young woman of Athens, Lysistrata, who gathers together the forces of Grecian womanhood to attempt to stop the Pelopennisian Wars, the play is especially timely today when women are once again calling upon their reserves of strength to change the ills of society. Unlike feminists today, however, Lysistrata and her followers do not mind being considered "sex objects." Quite to the contrary, their sexuality is their greatest weapon. It is Lysistrata's scheme that the women of Greece abstain from love-making until their husbands are so desperate from need that they would willingly draw up a treaty among themselves to effect peace on the Pelopennisian peninsula. Taking the Acropolis by force and closeting themselves there for a week, the women succeed in their object. Their lustful husbands, sporting fantastic erections, arrive at the site to ravish their women, but, teased and tormented mercilessly, find themselves so frustrated that they agree to a treaty so that their wives will relieve their anxiety. At the end of the play, both parties have, figuratively speaking, scored a hole in one. Obviously, then, the play is rather bawdy and, for this reason also, appeals to today's audience. One wonders if Lysistrata would have proved such a crowd-pleaser in Victorian England, for this modern version leaves no holds barred.

This version, utilizing a translation by Donald Sutherland, seems to have tempered somewhat with the intent of Aristophanes' text. Lysistrata's cry in the production here "We must refrain from – the prick" is certainly more literal than the declaration in another translation to abstain "from all touch of baubled love," but it does drive home the point, so to speak. In some cases, however, one cannot help but wonder if the subtlety and emotion of more conservative translations is not more pleasing. Today's Lysistrata encourages her followers not to respond if their husbands try to take them "by force." A translation by Jack Lindsay of the same passage, however, "Yield then, but with a sluggish, cold indifference, there's no pleasure for them if they rasp it in," conveys more of the urgency of the situation as well as being more intellectually pleasing. Although Lysistrata is primarily a comedy, it can be assumed that Aristophanes took his subject matter seriously, a fact which was virtually ignored in this production. The matter of the Pelopennisian Wars was to the playwright a matter of the utmost concern. One pertinent scene, however, in which Lysistrata draws a metaphor between the care taken in the women's wearing and the way in which men should apply equal care in the making of peaceful policy-making was well-delivered and in keeping with the more serious side of Aristophanes' play.

The behavior of the Chorus also was altered in the modern version. The Chorus had little feeling for the chant-like quality of the ancient Greek chorus. Perhaps to reflect some of the melodic character of the choric tradition, certain of the chorus' passages were set to music by James Kowal, nicely played on the recorder by Sally Faye and Susan Bess Reit, and choreographed in the tradition of a vaudeville chorus line. Despite this unusual and delightful touch, the words were often indistinguishable and their purpose to the play defeated. But Lysistrata is not a musical, and the Chorus was not chosen for its singing ability, but for its ability to act, and it performed well its function of providing the play with continuity and cohesiveness.

The chorus of men, former army officers well past their prime, and their counterpart, a chorus of grey-haired old ladies, provided an interesting parallel to the conflicts between the armies of Greece and Lysistrata's faction of militant women. Indulging in verbal tongue-lashing and even physical abuse, the two chorus' battle each other throughout the play until at the end the female Chorus wins. They do so not through their sexuality as did Lysistrata, but through their maternal instincts to mother the men. Very well acted by Vince Rossano, Gary Nickse, David Aune, Darri E. Johnson, Melanie Donovan, and Julie Carmen, the Chorus provided a constant source of amusement for the audience, as well as giving their characters believable and touchingly human attributes.

Other members of the cast gave equally good performances. Karen Trott was particularly well-cast as Lysistrata, the strong-willed Athenian ring-leader. Alternating between soft-voiced sarcasm and excited rhetoric, her performance was a highlight of the evening. Brooke Gladstone's portrayal of Kalonike, the "whore next-door", was consistently amusing, and she did justice to her role as a woman of the world. Libet Hansen, as Harmony, had few lines but a difficult role to play as she wiggled and writhed her way through a striptease and various seductive poses for the fascination of the male cast members and, may I add, the audience as well. Myrrhina's teasing of her husband delighted the audience if not the man and was well-done by Sara O'Neil. Dawn Conley as Lampito did an equally good job as an athletic young girl most accurately characterized as a "jock." Most amusing of the lovers and soldiers were Paul Ugalde, as the inept Athenian commissioner who was continually frustrated in both his political and sexual advances, and Daniel Cournoyer, who played Myrrhina's husband Cinesias with hilarious desperation.

Finally, well-deserved credit must be given to scene designer Karen E. Eisler and costume designer Jeffrey Blum. The bright colors used in the set and costuming added to the gaity of the production, and the revealing character of the women's garments supplemented the liscentious nature of the play itself. Furthermore, the authenticity of the costuming and set design put the play in its proper historical context, out of which it would not be nearly as entertaining.

Lysistrata was, then, a very good play, a success for director Susan Selig and her entire cast and stage crew.

Coming Attractions:

Good Grief Charlie Brown

The musical version of Charles Schultz's comic strip, Charlie Brown, will be presented at the Billings Apse, November 6-9. Soufcot say that Chuck's arm is in great shape and he was heard to say "Good Grief" at Snoopy's request for a supper dish in the dugout. Lucy has been crabby to everybody and Linus' thumb is sore, but it looks like the Little League Selection Committee has confirmed that the UVM Governing Board will play host to the Series from November 6th through the 9th in the Billings Apse. Tickets for the little BIG one can be reserved in Billings starting October 27th, $2.00 gen. adm., $1.00 with student ID. Take a break and see just one more game at the Billings Apse. November 6-9 at 8 p.m. You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown. For information, call 656-2095.

The Typists And The Tiger

Murray Schisgal's award winning Broadway comedies The Typists and the Tiger will be presented in Burlington's City Hall Auditorium on October 23 and the production will run until October 27. Tickets are available now at the City Hall Box Office.

To obtain tickets, call the Box Office at 863-3773 and reserve your seats. All tickets are $3.00 and are reserved seats. If you reserve, please be sure to pick the tickets up at least one half hour before curtain on the night of performance. For those who want to buy at the Box Office, it is located on the main floor just outside the Auditorium in the City Hall.

Pride And Prejudice

The Royall Tyler Theatre will present a new adaptation of Jane Austin's classical novel, Pride and Prejudice, from the 19th through the 22nd of November. The production is adapted and directed by Nancy Haynes, Assistant Professor of Communications and Theatre. Other productions directed by Miss Haynes include The White Devil, by John Webster, Christopher Fry's The Lady's Not for Burning and Cymbeline for the 1974 Champlain Shakespeare Festival.

The play, a social comedy set in the romantic period, is the story of the love affairs of five daughters in the Bennett family. Nadine Maleski will play the part of Elizabeth Bennett and Peter Kurth will play the arrogant Mr. Darcy, the central characters in this comedy of flirtations. The cast also includes Vincent Rossano, Susan Selig, Karen Trott, Sara O'Neil and Paul Ugalde. The production is running at the Royall Tyler November 19-22. For information, call 656-2095 or stop in at the Royall Tyler.

The Davis Brothers

So remember, the date October 24, Friday night, from 9 to 1 in Simpson's dining hall. W.D.W. will sponsor the party to top all parties – the Davis Brothers. Tickets will be sold at selected Dining Halls during the evening meal, at the W.D.W. ma. desk every night starting on October 13 and at Billings from 1–4 on October 20–24. No tickets will be sold at the door – so buy your tickets early and avoid the rush. All this – the best band, the best party, the best time – be there! For any questions or any information, call Hank Meyer, room 204 Wilks, x3443.

Error

Janis Ian will not appear tonight with Jessie Colin Young. The Cynic was given incorrect information and regrets causing any inconvenience.

NOT SINCE LOVE STORY...

The true story of Jill Kinmont. The American Olympic ski contender whose tragic fall took everything but her life. And who found the courage to live through the love of one very special man.

EVES AT 7 & 9:00 PM

"THE OTHER SIDE OF THE MOUNTAIN"

PG

1975's WILDEST, MOST IRREVERENT MOVIE!

STOP IT... YOU'LL GO BLIND!!!

TOPS THE BELLY LAUGHS OF "GROOVE TUBE"

7:10 & 9:10 PM

YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!

FINAL WEEK!

BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 2

PHONE 862-8070 ANYTIME

Sherlock Holmes—his limits: Knows nothing of common gardening; well up in belladonna, opium, and poisons generally. Plays the violin well.

STARTS FRIDAY!

Evenings at 7:15 & 9:15

Bargain Dollar Matinees Sat & Sun at 2 PM

THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES

merrill's SHOWCASE 1&2

Williston Rd. opposite McDonald's 863-6424

"Remember Baker"

Rock Jazz Band

Fri & Sat

H.H. prices 4 to 6 Mon thru Fri

Open for lunch 11:00 Dinner 5:00

the TAJMAHAL

115 College Street

Burlington

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE

Retail Outlet

FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND LIQUORS & IMPORTED WINES

AT GREAT SAVINGS

(At the rear of Frank's Texaco)

THE RED DOG

under new mangement

Sundance till Saturday

$1.00 COVER

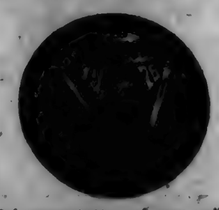
Sunday - Folk Night

Tuesday - Disco Night - 30 cent Drafts

Thursday - Ladies Night

Josten's

PREMIERE SHOWING



A special presentation of your college ring.

Oct 27 & 31

Mon & Fri 10 - 3

Wart and th

by Tricia John

On Tuesday night, October 14, 216 Commons in Living/Learning was the scene for the Living literature program of L/LC. They presented their Oral Interpretation Showcase II entitled Storyhour. The program consisted of six well-presented oral interpretations from various writers.

All performers were well-prepared. The first interpretation was given by Keith Gaylord, who did the introduction to Under Milkwood, a play by Dylan Thomas. This was provocative verse beckoning the audience to immerse their minds in the imagery of night. His next selection was "After Visiting the Tomb of Napoleon," a poem of Robert G. Ingersoll's. This poem was first a reminiscence of Napoleon's glories as a leader, but turned bitter as he recalled the destruction and sorrow he brought to so many. Both efforts at Thomas and Ingersoll were vivid and intense. Keith succeeded in first involving the audience in Under Milkwood, and then in the next poem speak as if there was no one in the room.

Yvette Knight followed Keith with her selection Stevie, a short story by John Steptoe. The story concerned Robert, a little boy of about seven, faced with the dilemma of taking care of his four year old guest Stevie. Robert learns patience, control and politeness and realizes he is sad when Stevie finally goes away. Stevie being more of a companion than a nuisance. Yvette did a marvelous job with the dialogue and successfully conveyed the importance of the little boy's problems with "little Stevie."

Perhaps most comical was David Godkin's reading from

Lane Seri

Good seats are still available for two pop shows which appear early next month on the University's Lane Series. "Return to Forever," featuring Chick Corea on the keyboards, on November 7, and guitarist-vocalist Leo Kottke on November 13. These tickets ($3.50, $5.50 and $6.50) are on sale in the Lane Office, 23 Waterman.

For the information of those who have postponed securing tickets to the Lane concerts on a single concert basis, the Lane Office reports that tickets are available for the Don Cossack of Rostov, a Russian folk-dance company of 7 (Feb. 12); the Early Music Consort, in a program of Baroque and Renaissance music (March 16); the world-famed pianist Russian Vladimir Ashkenazy (Mar

BA

Acquire a Bartender Become a be

FUTUR

Only 3 mo Cla

For MARK G

Wart and the Badger

by Tricia John

On Tuesday night, October 14, 216 Commons in Living/Learning was the scene for the Living literature program of L/LC. They presented their Oral Interpretation Showcase II entitled Storyhour. The program consisted of six well-presented oral interpretations from various writers.

All performers were well-prepared. The first interpretation was given by Keith Gaylord, who did the introduction to Under Milkwood, a play by Dylan Thomas. This was provocative verse beckoning the audience to immerse their minds in the imagery of night. His next selection was "After Visiting the Tomb of Napoleon," a poem of Robert G. Ingersoll's. This poem was first a reminiscence of Napoleon's glories as a leader, but turned bitter as he recalled the destruction and sorrow he brought to so many. Both efforts at Thomas and Ingersoll were vivid and intense. Keith succeeded in first involving the audience in Under Milkwood, and then in the next poem speak as if there was no one in the room.

Yvette Knight followed Keith with her selection Stevie, a short story by John Steptoe. The story concerned Robert, a little boy of about seven, faced with the dilemma of taking care of his four year old guest Stevie. Robert learns patience, control and politeness and realizes he is sad when Stevie finally goes away, Stevie being more of a companion than a nuisance. Yvette did a marvelous job with the dialogue and successfully conveyed the importance of the little boy's problems with "little Stevie."

Perhaps most comical was David Godkin's reading from T.H. White's Once and Future King. The episode David chose was the meeting of young King Arthur ("Wart") and Merlin's animal friend the badger. Timid at first, the badger eventually begins to read his doctoral dissertation based on the all important question of whether the chicken or the egg came first. David presented the badger as a charming eccentric, who at first is wary of reading such a ridiculous paper to Wart, but gradually enjoys it thoroughly. David's reading was spontaneous and lively.

"The Merry Month of May" by O. Henry was the next reading by Jamie Williams. This short story concerned the Coolson household, comprised of the invalid Mr. Coolson, his "frigid" daughter, and the spunky servant to Mr. Coolson. The delightful dichotomy of the servant's lust for the warmth and brightness of spring and the cold dreariness of the Coolsons is the amusing subject to this story. Jamie did an effective, lively interpretation. Her dialogue was excellent in showing the major differences between the maid and the Coolsons.

Finally was Jennifer Cover's dramatic interpretation of two episodes from James Baldwin's Go Tell It on the Mountain. The first episode concerned the beginning of the passionate nine-day affair of preacher Gabriel and Esther, who produced a son from it. Second was Gabriel's confession to his wife Deborah eighteen years later. The dialogue was compassionate and bittersweet, and Jennifer did a remarkable performance conveying the sadness and emptiness of these two alienated people.

The next showcase is scheduled for October 30 and promises to be as entertaining an experience as this one. All are welcome to come.

Don't Bother Me Dated

by Jonathon Lief

The problem with seeing anything as badly dated as the musical Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope (presented by the Lane Series in Memorial Auditorium on Monday, October 13), is that while its particular message of Black Consciousness may be a decade too old to cause much of a stir today, at some point in the recent past its validity went unchallenged. It's as if I were denigrating someone's benign yet slightly senile grandmother for still kicking around, when she should know enough to stop interfering in her children's lives. Of course, senility in a person or in a play is usually impossible to correct, but at least a play can be carried off by its production and talent. In this case, both were for the most part either weak and timorous or overblown and dull.

Written by Micki Grant and directed by Vinette Carroll, Don't Bother Me is a collage of vignettes and songs loosely revolving around the idea of "the New Black Man", proud and defiant while still tender and humorous. But I've seen as much defiance in an "Up With People" special on television, and the humor was either cripplingly self-conscious or obviously updated to the 1975 political scene to hide some of the wrinkles. There were parodies of the Steppin' Fetchit stereotypes that would have made Shirley Temple snicker, and cracks about Gerald Ford that were embarrassingly irrelevent to the main concept of the play. A predictably facetious women's lib song called "Show Me That Special Gene" was not only trite, but had no identifiably black element in it at all.

On the other hand, the play's attempts to communicate something serious about Blacks in America were reminiscent of Hollywood films depicting the plight of the nation during the Depression; full of courage and nobility while rarely capturing the essence of what life was really like. The title song was sardonic and funny and much better than any number of marches or hymns filled with self-praise, like the horrendous "They Keep Comin'," in which the entire cast of twelve marched in place and simply called out the names of famous Blacks. Apparently intended to be stirring, it had me stirring in my seat until intermission.

The production and choreography during most of the play were strangely unexciting. The set consisted of two ladders on either side of the stage, and the actors either sat near or climbed up them. No more scenery or props were necessary, but to add interest to this bare design and to compensate for the lack of continuity in the play, sharper movement and more clearly defined moods for each scene were called for. At times the actors simply seemed to sidle on stage, and it was hard to tell what type of number they were going to do.

I think a major problem facing any theater production in the Lane Serious (besides the obvious one of the Auditorium's acoustics) is that what we see in Burlington are road companies, and while some of them are excellent, by and large they suffer from lack of outstanding talent and lack of sleep. This one was certainly no exception but there were notable bright spots in the cast. Sheila Ellis sang "Billie Holiday Blues" and "My Love's So Good" beautifully, and maintained a refreshing sense of humor about her character. Charlene Woodard and Clifton Derricks sang a neo-Motown love song called "Thank Heaven for You" that was more telling than any of the supposedly profound hymns to Blackness. Elaine Holloman put a lot into her songs, but her role as company matriarch was a little too reminiscent of a cross between Hattie McDaniel and Odetta.

Don't Bother Me may have dragged, and even crashed, at times, but it picked up midway through the second act with the gospel tune "Good Vibrations." Although the cast had to go out into the audience to ensure its participation, they succeeded in bringing everyone to his feet for a few minutes. The following "Prayer" and "Sermon" were noisy and lively, and they demonstrated what the musical should have been made of. The energy put into these three numbers was the key ingredient lacking throughout the rest of the evening. Had this level been attained over the whole production, no one would have cared how behind the times the message was, because the energy involved would have spoken for itself.

It may be typical of some reactions to the play that as I watched Elaine Holloman dance her heavy weight across the stage, an elderly white woman turned to me and said, "That's all she's ever done. She's never worked hard. Not out in a hayfield like I have."

Rhapsody to Romeo

by Tricia John

Last Saturday night, the Flynn Theatre hosted the Vermont Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Efrain Guigui. People were seated, some of them munching on popcorn (tastelessly supplied by the Flynn) to hear performed Finlandia, Sibelius' most famous work, and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" during the first half.

"Finlandia" is the symphonic poem Sibelius wrote expressing his nationalism for his homeland. This piece was performed competantly, but lacking a certain motivation that Sibelius would have intended. The aggressive drive of his nationalistic spirit seemed not to be a major concern for this orchestra. The interpretation was first broad and sweeping, as it should be, but then gradually became slow and almost uneventful, inconsequential. Overall, the performance was satisfactory, but not as exciting as this writer's anticipations.

"Rhapsody in Blue" offered Jesus Maria Sanroma, a renowned musician, as pianist. This difficult piece was performed effectively; the orchestra making a good comeback from the Sibelius. Sanroma was excellent as were the other solo instrumentalists. Guigui conducted forcefully, coping with the limitations of Gershwin's orchestration. While Gershwin's aim in "Rhapsody in Blue" was to end any preconceived notions about strict rules of jazz rhythm, he creates his own limitations by orchestrating "Rhapsody" in such a way that the piano many times cannot be heard over a full orchestra. The effect is not due to a lack of judgment on the conductor's part, but problems in the piece as a whole. Despite such shortcomings, the piece was played well, and especially outstanding was Sanroma, whose cadenzas flowed easily and forcefully.

After intermission a change in program was inaudibly announced. In memory of the founder of the Vermont Symphony, Alan Carter, "Elegy" by Lionel Novak was played. The work featured Maureen Gallagher, violist, and David Cobb, string bass. The piece was tense, exciting, filled with moving pianissimo passages of almost chilling dissonance. The soloists did a remarkable job in conveying the subtle tone of this work. The string orchestra were at their best for this. The inclusion of Novak's "Elegy" was a delightful surprise and perhaps the most interesting part of the entire concert.

Back to the program, and the classics, was the next selection. Mozart's Serenade No. 6 in D Major, K.239 was performed by the string orchestra and the Buffalo String Quartet (now in residence at Johnson State). The serenade was played capably by both the quartet and the orchestra producing a gay spontaneous effect. Good acoustic balance between strings and quartet was also achieved.

Last was the familiar "Romeo and Juliet Overture-Fantasy" by Tchaikovsky. It began perfectly — simple, mysterious, and soft. Tremendous balance between woodwinds was accomplished. Generally, all was going well. But then, during the introduction to Romeo's famous love, strings lost the correct tempo, and from that point on it seemed like a race to see who would finish first, or last, whatever. The brass stayed continuously muffled, and Guigui desparately tried to retain the perfection of the first opening moments. The passionate, vivid moments of this overture were gone; the fate of Romeo and Juliet seemed also to be the fate of this performance.

Nevertheless, the concert featured pieces done very well, the Novak "Elegy" being the most exciting. The most appalling element to this concert was the audience itself. Little applause was given to the Unknown (unrecognized) "Elegy" which was perhaps the most well performed piece of the concert. People actually bought the popcorn supplied in the lobby and ate it during the concert. Several people chatted well into the beginnings of several of the pieces. Candy was being opened during a pianissimo solo passage in the "Elegy". Such noises greatly reduce the listener's enjoyment as well as the concentration of those performing.

ETV: Quality British Shows

by Eloise M. Boyle

Once again, the Public Broadcasting System offers an outstanding entertainment package, the highlights of which are as follows.

On Sundays at 9:00 Masterpiece Theatre returns. The first presentation, which began on Oct. 5, is a six-part drama, "Shoulder to Shoulder". This series explores the turn of the century battle of British women to obtain the right to vote.

Notorious Woman begins on November 16. It is the story of the life and various loves of George Sand, the French writer of the 19th century.

The immensely popular series Upstairs, Downstairs returns with 13 new episodes about servants and masters. This particular season of Upstairs, Downstairs focuses on World War I Britain. Scheduled air time: January 4.

Cakes and Ale, a warm and entertaining story about a beautiful and lively barmaid written by Somerset Maugham, begins on April 4 and lasts for three weeks.

The final Masterpiece Theatre series of this season is "Sunset Song". Set in Scotland, "Sunset Song" describes the rural life in this rocky country just prior to WWI.

A new series, Classic Theatre — The Humanities in Drama premiered on September 17. Each Thursday at 9:00, a masterpiece of drama will be presented.

On oct. 23, for example, "She Stoops to Conquer," a comedy classic by Oliver Goldsmith, airs. It's the story of a bashful young man out to win the heart of a young lady.

The following week, Oct. 30, Voltaire's sharp satire of human foolishness and greed, "Candide," is presented.

"The Three Sisters," a play by Anton Chekov, is scheduled for Dec. 4. This presentation brings together some of the top talents of Britain.

Dec. 18 marks the end of Classic Theatre for this season. On this date, George Bern Shaw's classic, "Mrs. War Profession," will be shown. Tune in to find out why a mother turned to prostitution.

"Jenny" is the story of Lady Randolph Churchill. Her exciting life, both as wife and political advisor to her husband, and as a tool used by her son Winston to gain political power himself, is vividly and excellently portrayed in this six-part series. There are still three episodes to go, and each is well worth watching. Lee Remick is very good as Jenny, who ages from 18 to 67 in the series. The show is on Wednesdays at 9:00.

The best-produced, highest quality programs on television are, for the most part, BBC productions. In this, the year of the Bicentennial, one wonders just how independent of Great Britain we are.

Lane Series Tickets

Good seats are still available two pop shows which appear early next month on University's Lane Series: "Return to Forever," featuring Chick Corea on the keyboards, November 7, and guitarist-vocalist Leo Kottke on November 13. These tickets ($3.50, $5.50 and $6.50) are on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman.

For the information of those who have postponed securing tickets to the Lane concerts on a single concert basis, the Lane Office reports that tickets are available for the Don Cossacks of Rostov, a Russian folk-dance company of 75 (Feb. 12); the Early Music Consort, in a program of Baroque and Renaissance music (March 16); the world-famed pianist Russian Vladimir Ashkenazy (March 26), and the Amadeus Quartet (May 8).

Marcel Marceau (March 31) is sold out, as well as the London Symphony (March 10) — except a very few "limited view seats" on the side balconies (at $3.50).

Tickets have now been placed on sale for the three "extras" which the Lane Series is presenting this fall: the Friends of the Lane Series benefit performance of Preservation Hall Jazz Band (Nov. 19); The Hartford Ballet and the Vermont Symphony Orchestra in Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker" ballet (Dec. 6); and the two performances of the six Bartok quartets by the Concord String Quartet (Dec 8 and Dec 10). The Concord ensemble will also be on campus for a workshop on Dec. 9.

WE'RE THE GREATEST
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Oct. 20-26 (DynOmite) Triads
Oct. 27-Nov. 2 Hot Flash
Nov. 3-9 Brahmin
Nov. 10-16 Outrage
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 8-9 Mon. — Thurs.

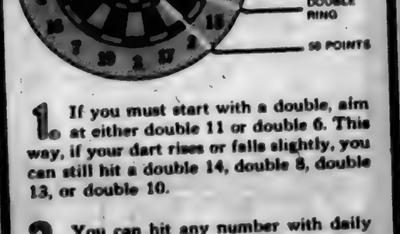
Learn to BARTEND
for only $15!

Acquire all the skills of a Professional Bartender at a price you can afford!
Become a better host and a connoisseur of liquors and liquers.
FUTURE SESSIONS TO BE HELD.....
Nov.4-7 Nov. 18-21 Dec. 9-12
Only 3 more course offerings.
Classes fill quickly- so don't wait till dec.
For more information call
MARK GALLAGHER evenings at 879-7561

SA CONCERTS presents
THE NEW RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE

NOV. 7
8:00 p.m. UVM
Tickets
uvm students $4.00 gen public $5.00
UVM student tickets UVM BOOKSTORE 8 am 18 starting Oct 20
BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOM starting Oct 22
VERMONT BOOKSTORE
MIDDLEBURY, VT.
GENERAL ADMISSION TICKETS GO ON SALE TODAY

Budweiser PRESENTS HOW TO WIN AT "Tournament" Darts



1. If you must start with a double, aim at either double 11 or double 6. This way, if your dart rises or falls slightly, you can still hit a double 14, double 8, double 13, or double 10.
2. You can hit any number with daily practice, but if you're a bit rusty, try aiming in the middle of sectors 8, 16, 7, 19. These 4 yield the highest average score.
3. Since a double (or bull's-eye) is necessary to finish, try to keep your score even and end with double 16. This is the only number that splits evenly 5 times. So if you miss double 16 and hit 16, you can still end with double 8. If you miss double 8 and hit 8, you can still end with double 4. And so on.
AND THEN . . . PRACTICE UP WHERE YOU SEE THIS SIGN.
BUDWEISER! ON TAP
ANHEUSER-BUSCH, INC. • ST. LOUIS

Photo Exhibit Seeks Entrants

Akron, Ohio, September 30, 1975–Not content with its acclaim for unique architectural design and spacious appointments, The University of Akron's Edwin J. Thomas Performing Arts Hall continues to remain in the spotlight, with a national photography exhibition planned.

The Edwin J. Thomas Performing Arts Hall Association, a civic group formed to support Akron U's new hall and the arts, will sponsor the event. It will be a competitive, juried, photographic exhibition to commemorate the country's Bicentennial by joining the photographic art with music, the dance and drama.

Entries are invited from photographers nationwide for submission by February, 1976, and exhibition is scheduled for April, 1976, in the 26,000 square feet of the lobbies of the hall. College and university students are particularly welcome to compete.

Substantial prizes will be awarded winners in various categories and the grand "show of show" prize will be a fully paid Caribbean cruise for two.

Plans call for three categories: black and white prints, color prints, and color slides. There will be a $3 entry fee for each entry of one to three prints or slides.

Edwin J. Thomas Hall premiered to gala, black-tie audiences in the fall of 1973. It has since hosted such world-famous artists as the Leningrad Philharmonic, Marcel Marceau, Goldovsky Opera Company, the Cleveland Orchestra, Victor Borge, Robert Goulet, Count Basie, Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians and Duke Ellington.

Irving J. Olson, widely known Akron businessman and amateur photographer of renown, is chairman of a blue-ribbon photography competition committee, charged with finalizing all contest details and the selection of a judging panel.

Judges will be Arthur Rothstein, associate editor of Parade Magazine; Arthur Goldsmith, editorial director of Popular Photography, and Irving Desfor, Associated Press photo columnist.

Olson is the retired chairman of the board of Olson Electronics, but photography has been his avocation for many years and he has collected scores of first prizes, gold and silver medals, and over 300 other prizes.

Contest application blanks are available through the Edwin J. Thomas Performing Arts Hall, the University of Akron, Akron, Ohio 44325.

Senior Recital

SOPRANO JO ANN MAGUIRE will give her senior recital Friday evening (Oct. 24) in partial fulfillment of requirements for the Bachelor of Science degree in music education at the University of Vermont.

The concert will start at 8 p.m. in the recital hall of UVM's new music building on the Redstone campus. Miss Maguire will be accompanied by pianist Mark Heyman of Burlington.

During her studies at UVM, Miss Maguire, a native of Babylon, N.Y., has performed in several of the groups at the University including the University Choir, the Choral Union and the Madrigal Singers. She has also performed solo works and appeared in ensembles in area churches.

Among the selections to be performed will be the motet "Exsultate, Jubilate" by Mozart, German lieder by Franz Schubert, Johannes Brahms and Hugo Wolf; French art songs by Gabriel Faure and Hector Berlioz, and two contemporary pieces by Ned Rorem.

The recital is free and the public is invited to attend.

Now you can see "The Graduate" again or for the first time.

Saturday Cinema Toast

Seats $1 at door
Sat. Oct. 25 7:30 & 10:00
235 Marsh Life Sciences Building

Vienna Boys Choir To Perform In Springfield

The Vienna Boys Choir, one of the oldest musical organizations in the world, will open the University of Vermont Lane Series - Southeast Council on the Arts concert season in Springfield with a concert Tuesday, Oct. 28 at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Springfield High School.

The 22-member choir will offer a program in three parts: sacred songs, the comic opera "Hansel and Gretel" by Humperdinck, and Austrian folk songs.

The choir is one of the oldest music ensembles in the world, dating back 477 years to 1498 when the Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I ordered the organization of a boys choir to participate in liturgical music at the Court Chapel in Vienna.

Since 1924 the choir has toured regularly to every corner of the world and is now on its 32nd tour of North America. The boys are between the ages of eight and fourteen, and each leaves the choir when his voice breaks. Their music director is Gerald Trabesinger.

Each year fewer than 100 boys, only ten percent of the applicants, are admitted to ting the choir, and then only after two years of training. Each boy is given an academic education in addition to his musical one and, when he leaves the choir, is aided by the institution in furthering his education.

Admissions to the Lane Extension Series in Springfield are $10 for the season and, for individual concerts, $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for students, except for this opening concert, for which all admissions are $3.50. Single concert admissions are available two weeks before each concert and at the door on the evening of the performance.

Admissions may be purchased by mail from the Southeast Council of the Arts, P.O. Box 392, Springfield, Vt. 05156. Checks should be made out to the Council and a stamped, self-addressed envelope enclosed.

Admissions are also available in Springfield at the Village Music Studio, the Chamber of Commerce, and Wheeler's Pharmacy; in Charlestown from Mrs. Howard Martensen on Main Street; in Chester at the Chester Drug Store; in Bellows Falls at Dexter's on the Square; in Claremont at Kimball's on Pleasant Street; and in Ludlow at the Plaza Pharmacy.

Record Review: Fox

Never heard synthesized bop, heh? Fox is it. Doo langs and shabooms to the tune of drums, bass, guitar and keyboards. Fox will be the sleeper of the year, no doubt, first album for both group and label, two vitals which don't contribute favorably toward hit status. Despite bad odds, Fox is an excellent first effort.

Up front is Roosha, the female lead singer, seemingly a lo-cal Bette Midler. Roosha is light, breathy, and adolescent, perfectly complementing the electronic foofaraw of Fox.

The music of Fox is a carefully blended brew of teen beat, rock, orchestral, and cosmic. Extensive use is made of bass, keyboard synthesizer, and vocal phasing. The material from Fox almost without exception, is strong, hummy, and memorable. Though similar claims are made every day we breathe, Fox is truly singular in style, novel in their presentation of material, and, in every respect, are completely different from anything else contemporary music has to offer. In addition to all these superlatives, they're also very good.

Producer Kenny Young leaves a mark here that is hard to forget. Fox is at once complex yet delightfully simple...the recording attains a textural presence that is at once multi-dimensional yet crisp and uncluttered.

Highlights include "The Juggler" (a superb, commercial pop song), "Imagine Me-Imagine You", "The Store", "Red Letter Day", and "Patient Tigers". This one's worth it!

'Mens's Lives' To Be Presented

Last May some four hundred Burlington people were fortunate enough to view the new film documentary Men's Lives, a study of growing up male in America. Since that time many have asked that the film be brought back for another showing, so we have scheduled to show the film again on Thursday night, October 30: 7:00-8:00-9:00 at the first Unitarian Church (top of Church Street). The film has recently won an academy award as best student documentary of the year. It has received enthusiastic acclaim from critics nationwide.

John Crittenden of the Bergen (N.J.) Record: "Growing up male in America is just as worrisome and wonderful as growing up female, and at last there's a film that deals with it. MEN'S LIVES delves deeper into the personality of the American male than any film I've seen. It reminds me of the very best feminist movie I've seen. We see a young guy who's crazy for cars. We've known him. Maybe we've been him. Perhaps it's the first time he's been asked why he is; what it gets him. We go to a party at a fraternity. Women are asked what the scene is like. They tell, and so do the men. We don't get rhetoric; we get that which has always been considered common sense. We get new thinking, new questioning. In confronting other real people we confront ourselves, and few films these days are as filled with real people as MEN'S LIVES.

We urge you all to come to see this film and to spread the word of its upcoming showing. Educators, parents, anyone concerned with the socialization process in this country and the effects of American masculinity on one and all. A donation will be appreciated to help pay for the cost of film rental and to benefit Shaker Mtn. School.

Chaplin Film Series: City Lights

The movie City Lights, long regarded as Charlie Chaplin's comedy masterpiece, will be unreeled Friday evening, October 24 at two showings, 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium.

This will be the third film in the Charlie Chaplin Classic Film Series presented by the Lane Series.

Although City Lights was released, in 1931, two years after talking pict. had taken over the American screen, Chaplin felt that sound would destroy the universal appeal of his little tramp character. He decided to make the film as a silent, his only concession to sound being the hauntingly beautiful score for the film.

Chaplin's studio, United Artists, had reservations about releasing a picture with only a synchronized score, and so Chaplin rented a theatre in New York and premiered the picture himself. The risk was more than justified. City Lights has proved to be one of Chaplin's greatest successes, earning over $5,000,000.

When Chaplin reissued the picture in 1950, one critic remarked that "the best film of the year is 20 years old," and the recent revivals have confirmed the film's appeal.

City Lights, written, produced, directed and scored by Charlie Chaplin, has been described as "a comedy romance in pantomime."

The story revolves around the little tramp's love for a blind girl (played by Virginia Cherrill), whom he finds selling flowers on a street corner. He permits her to think of him as being quite wealthy. And indeed he gets to sample the good life when he is befriended by a millionaire drunkard who is extravagantly generous when drinking but when sober cannot recognize his new friend. Vowing to obtain enough money to pay for an expensive eye operation for the blind girl, Charlie embarks on a number of ventures in pursuit of his goal. Eventually, by sheer accident, he succeeds.

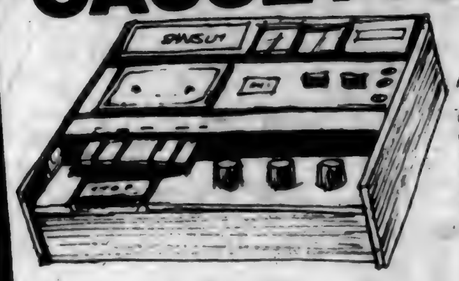
This kind of story could easily have sunk to the level of mawkish sentimentality, but Chaplin, knowing exactly when to introduce laughter into the tale, skill fully avoids the trap. The climax of City Lights, when the girl, having regained her sight, discovers the true state of her benefactor, remains one of the most moving and sublime moments in film history.

City Lights is, along with the much later Limelight, the most touching of all the Chaplin movies. Its many moments of rich humor are balanced by a strain of melancholy bordering on tragedy. To many it is the quintessence of Chaplin.

Tickets, $1.00 each, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and also at Marsh Life Sciences Building at the time of the performances. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

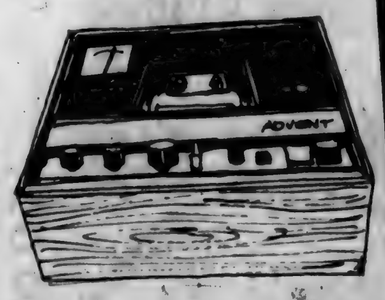
The next film in Charlie Chaplin Classic Films is Modern Times, October 31.

THE ART OF THE CASSETTE DECK...



AS SEEN ON T.V.
The Sansui SC 636 Cassette Deck incorporates several quality features normally found only on expensive machines... It has long-lasting magni-crystal ferrite heads, a center channel MIC input, a mechanically sturdy transport, 30-16 KHZ response, and a 58 JB signal to noise ratio, Dolby noise reduction and adjustable bias & eq.
ONLY $279.00 at Tech HIFI

A BEST BUY
The Advent 201 is generally recognized as a "Best Buy" in cassette decks, because it's 62JB signal to noise ratio and 20 to 16 KHZ response flat within 2 JB rival the better reel to reel decks! The 201 is extremely easy to use, too... All controls are reinterlocked, and Advents unique metering system makes level setting a snap.
Just $339.00 with dust cover and accessories



STATE OF THE CASSETTE ART
The Tandberg TCD-310 is the quietest cassette deck on the market, with a guaranteed minimum signal to noise ratio of 66JB (I.E.C. A weighted)! This assures excellent results even in the most demanding LIVE recording, formerly possible. Only with the best reel to reel decks (come in and hear our live tapes). All this plus a 3-motor all solenoid, logic controlled transport makes the TCD-310 more than worth its $500 price.

NOW SHOWING AT
The logical place to buy your hifi.
tech hifi

When you ask for a "Frye boot" be sure you get a FRYE

AS SEEN IN PLAYBOY!
Nous parlons français à tous nos magasins.
GLADSTONE'S
The North Country's Largest Independent Shoe Chain
BURLINGTON 11 Upper Church St
WINDSOR 94 West Canal St
PLATTSBURGH Pyramid Mall
NEWPORT 50 Main St
ST. ALBANS 20 North Main St
RUTLAND Rutland Plaza
BENNINGTON 465 Main St
BARRE 124 North Main St

10% Discount on Repairs and Oil Changes for Students & Faculty With I.D.
The students car's best friend
TEXACO
CLOVERLEAF TEXACO
COMPLETE CAR CARE
1055 WILLISTON RD.
SO. BURLINGTON, VT.
ROAD SERVICE
862-2935

news

Greeks

We've all heard about the many parties and activities of the Greek system, but little is heard of its contribution to the community and various charities. Perhaps this is a good time of year to explain how the five sororities at UVM help the community.

With Halloween around the corner, many of the fraternities and sororities are having Halloween parties for handicapped children, orphans, or children in the hospital. Alpha Delta Pi and Sigma Phi are planning a party for the children at the Sara Holbrook Center which will include various treats and games such as apple bobbing. Alpha Chi and Fiji and Pi Phi and Sig Ep are both having parties with some children from the St. Joseph Center. Tri-Delt is making favors and trick-or-treat bags. Halloween night they will split up into small groups and distribute the goodies

SAC Tackle

Student Advisory Committee are
The Student Advisory to Committee of the Arts and on Sciences College under the Co
the student at the University of fre Vermont. The committee, as Co an advisory body to Dean dis
Weiger, is responsible for fa communicating to students re information that has to do ds with administrative and Qu academic procedure and policy no in the college. Specific th problems brought to the co committee by students, re faculty, or the Dean are ac addressed.

Each department within the college selects two representatives to the committee. These representatives may sit in on department meetings with the approval of the chairman and may express their views on department decisions that will affect a student's education.

Representatives of the Student Advisory Committee

GSU Provi

In October 1974 the Gay Student Union became a Bona Fide Student Organization. Since that time many students have been talking openly about their sexuality and the oppression of laws, attitudes, and sex roles. The GSU is not the only voice. Many others find sex roles and attitudes about sex prevalent in our society oppressing to human development. The GSU wishes to thank those who are getting sexuality out of the closet. It is about time.

One of the services that the GSU provides is a speaker's bureau. The speakers are not paid for their time and energy. The history, political science, sociology, education, human development, and counseling departments as well as the medical school have invited GSU speakers to their classes.

The Pr
the Yea
It's in th
R
Look into the A
4-year, 3-year, or 2-
Whichever you select,
mission as an Air Forc position with responsib financial rewards and
The courses there positions ahead. Pooki or as a missile launch
matics...sciences...o
Look out for yo programs on campus.
UVM Students are eligible
of Aerospace Studies at St.
Call 656-2800, ext. 281
Put it all tog

news

Greeks Contribute To The Community

We've all heard about the many parties and activities of the Greek system, but little is heard of its contribution to the community and various charities. Perhaps this is a good time of year to explain how the five sororities at UVM help the community.

With Halloween around the corner, many of the fraternities and sororities are having Halloween parties for handicapped children, orphans, or children in the hospital. Alpha Delta Pi and Sigma Phi are planning a party for the children at the Sara Holbrook Center which will include various treats and games such as apple bobbing. Alpha Chi and Phi Mu and Pi Phi and Sig Ep are both having parties with some children from the St. Joseph Center. Tri-Delt is making favors and trick-or-treat bags. Halloween night they will split up into small groups and distribute the goodies to the hospitals and to the Sara Holbrook Children.

In addition to similar activities throughout the year, the sororities also support various philanthropies. Alpha Delta Pi supports speech and hearing and does heart fund drives; Alpha Chi, cerebral palsy and cystic fibrosis. The Tri Delts give to cancer research for children, are waitressing at the RSVP banquet (for senior citizens), and put on a clothing drive. Theta supports Logopedics, a national charity for handicapped children and Brandon "Toys for Tots." The Pi Phi philanthropy is the Arrow Mount School. In addition to these most of the sororities donate to the blood drive.

As you can see, not only does the Greek system have a lot to offer you, it offers a great deal to the community.

Alpha Chi in action

Honor Code On The Decline

by Anthony Schmitz

(CPS)—The stakes are high. The outcome of a test may decide whether students will find themselves safe in a medical or law school or out pounding the pavements for a job.

That pressure—causing students both to cheat for high grades and to keep quiet about the cheating of others—is jeopardizing the future of honor codes at several colleges around the country.

At Stanford, a "breakdown of ordinary standards of honesty" sparked a re-evaluation of the school's honor code.

Johns Hopkins University ended its 62-year-old honor code when a poll revealed 70% of its students had witnessed incidences of cheating and done nothing to stop them.

After 50 students were put on probation at the University of Florida at Gainesville for bribing janitors to help them secure advance copies of tests, administrators claimed a "revitalization" of the code was necessary.

And at the University of Virginia, where the only penalty for conviction of an honor code offense is permanent expulsion, a poll is scheduled for November to determine the future of their code.

Administrators at these schools blame pressure for high grades and a reluctance to "rat" on other students for the crumbling honor codes that ask students to police themselves against cheating and plagiarism. And the offenders, they claim, are frequently excellent students rather than "survival cases" who need to cheat to get by.

Stanford's Ombudsman John Goheen said in a report to the school's president that "law and medicine, particularly, are attracting very large numbers of students, many more than these professional schools can accommodate. The resulting competition for admission to a professional school is intense."

One of the results of pressure and competition has been more cheating and less student cooperation in enforcing the code, Goheen asserted.

Last spring, 12 cases of honor code violations were reported at Stanford. Ten of the twelve students were found to have "consistently high grades and were compulsive about high grades." Five of the students were suspended for violation of the code, which requires students "both within and without the University (to) maintain such respect for order, morality, personal honor and the rights of others as demanded of good citizens."

While Stanford is questioning the value of its code, Johns Hopkins scrapped its honor system this fall in the face of charges that it had become a "farce" and a "disgrace".

Where formerly tests were not proctored, they will be now. Alternate seating will be required during exams and a definition of plagiarism will be set.

Johns Hopkins President Steven Muller said he regretted ending the honor system, but claimed it was necessary since "for some time there have been allegations of pretty consistent cheating. People were saying the honor system was a farce..."

At the University of Florida, the "honor code has been on the decline for a long time because students aren't willing to testify against other students," according to Rob Denson, director of student judicial affairs.

Although the Florida honor code stipulates that tests not be proctored, instructors recently have begun proctoring tests since "many don't feel the honor code is a deterrent," Denson said.

In spite of a case of test-stealing involving "hundreds of students" last spring, Denson said he believes the honor code should be "revitalized" rather than abandoned. "If we leave it in writing it's good PR," Denson said, "and after Watergate people are more in tune with a code of honor."

Meanwhile at the University of Virginia discussion centers on whether students still support the code.

Ken Humphries, a student member of the honor committee, said that most of the dissatisfaction with the code has been over its "single sanction" provision, which mandates that there be no punishment other than permanent expulsion.

While a poll is scheduled for November to determine student support, the student-run committee continues to decide cheating cases. Already this fall one student has been dismissed for plagiarism, while another case is on the docket for early October.

SAC Tackles Academic Problems

Student Advisory Committee

The Student Advisory Committee of the Arts and Sciences College under the the student at the University of Vermont. The committee, as an advisory body to Dean Weiger, is responsible for communicating to students information that has to do with administrative and academic procedure and policy in the college. Specific problems brought to the committee by students, faculty, or the Dean are addressed.

Each department within the college selects two representatives to the committee. These representatives may sit in on department meetings with the approval of the chairman and may express their views on department decisions that will affect a student's education.

Representatives of the Student Advisory Committee are elected from the committee to serve with full voting power on four standing faculty committees. The Curriculum Committee has four members from the Student Advisory Committee meeting weekly to discuss and recommend for faculty approval the renaming, renumbering and proposing or dropping of particular courses. Questions of a more general nature under consideration are the recognition of a minor course of study or a double major.

The Academic Standings Committee has two members from SAC dealing with individual student petitions to change enrollments in courses after the traditional add/drop period of the beginning of the semester. Policy of the college in determining the academic performance to be expected from students is of prime consideration.

The committee on Honors and Individual Studies consists of two students along with five faculty members. They are responsible for approving or rejecting a student's proposal for a College Honors program, an individually designed major, or an Off-Campus Education and Research Semester.

Four students from SAC serve on the Admissions Committee dealing with borderline admissions cases and general criteria for admissions.

This Tuesday, October 28th at 4:30 p.m. the full Student Advisory Committee will be meeting in Memorial Lounge to air problems of concern to students. All are urged to bring academic problems to the attention of the committee. SAC also has a box upstairs in Billings at the Student Association Office for those who are unable to attend but have grievances.

To Drink Or Not To Drink

by Cynthia Crossen

(CPS)—While the specter of alcoholism is haunting more college campuses these days, many universities are relaxing their rules prohibiting drinking in residence halls and campus bars.

In recent months, universities in at least four states have edged toward or approved limited drinking on campus. One of the arguments frequently given for liberalized on-campus drinking policies is that drinking in dorm rooms is so wide-spread that it might as well be legal.

In fact, one out of every 20 college students is a problem drinker according to statistics of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. And almost half the college students surveyed recently by a Chicago-based advertising agency said they bought carry-out liquor at least once a month.

That liquor can now be consumed in the privacy of a student's own dorm room at Oregon State University where students 21 years and older were given permission to drink in their rooms last summer. The new rule at Oregon State forbids drinking in public places like lounges or dining halls.

The Oregon policy also forbids drunkenness. But enforcement efforts are not likely to be rigorous. The University is counting on the "living groups," not the University administration, to keep track of who's drinking and how much.

The right to drink in a dorm room hasn't been as easily won at other schools. Students at Marshall University in Huntington, WV are battling the University administration just for the privilege of drinking 3.2 beer on campus. According to West Virginia law, 3.2 beer is not intoxicating.

Marshall students have been pushing for 3.2 beer on campus since 1969. Until last spring, it was up to the University president to decide whether students could drink on campus. For a few months this summer, liquor was prohibited on all West Virginia campuses, but the Marshall University president has the final say once again and students have "some hope of approval."

The tactics that students have used to win the right to drink on campus have varied from school to school. The Nebraska Wesleyan's Board of Governors approved a student senate recommendation to allow dorm drinking in a matter of months. The Wesleyan board reaffirmed its opposition to liquor in the dormitories but said its use was up to the "judgment and social responsibility of students."

The action at Nebraska Wesleyan convinced students at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln to take another stab at liberalizing drinking policies there. But student association president Jim Say said "there is almost no hope of getting approval through the regents," and a proposal to the state legislature would probably be more effective.

Students at other schools are working for the sale of liquor on campus as well. Arizona State University student association president Craig Tribken this fall launched a campaign calling for the sale of wine and beer on campus. Students of legal drinking age at Arizona State are already permitted to drink in their residence halls.

"The stigmatizing of alcohol off campus gives it (drinking in general) an unhealthy atmosphere," Tribken said. "I think people should be able to elect whether or not to drink. This is an important factor in creating adults."

Tribken said advocates of on-campus liquor sales may be able to convince the state legislature to rescind its law against selling liquor near a school building but the board of regents would be more difficult to convince. But "the arguments are so heavily in favor of the sale of alcohol on campus that the regents may be swayed," he added.

Lane Series Needs Director

A search is now underway within the university community for a part-time Director of the George Bishop Lane Series, to succeed Dr. Jack Trevithick, Executive Director, who will retire on July 1, 1976. Individuals currently associated with the vita sheet indicating the applicant's qualifications should accompany the letter of application.

The person filling this position will be responsible for administering the Lane Committee's decisions, and for developing and administering a six-figure budget. The person must also be knowledgeable in the arts, in the field of concert management, and must be able to coordinate the activities of the Lane Series with appropriate academic programs and departments.

The Series has been directed by Dr. Trevithick since its beginning in 1955, and under his leadership has become the center of cultural life in the University, as well as the Burlington, community. Each year it has brought performers of international reputation, representing the great variety of the performing arts, to this area.

GSU Provides Speaker's Bureau

In October 1974 the Gay Student Union became a Bona Fide Student Organization. Since that time many students have been talking openly about their sexuality and the oppression of laws, attitudes, and sex roles. The GSU is not the only voice. Many others find sex roles and attitudes about sex prevalent in our society oppressing to human development. The GSU wishes to thank those who are getting sexuality out of the closet. It is about time.

One of the services that the GSU provides is a speaker's bureau. The speakers are not paid for their time and energy. The history, political science, sociology, education, human development, and counseling departments as well as the medical school have invited GSU speakers to their classes.

The GSU is especially grateful to Armand Grams whose course in Human Development attracts 250 students a semester.

The GSU wishes to expand its educational outreach base. At the present we cannot. So we invite anyone interested in discussing sexuality in a non-sexist, wholistic manner to attend our speaking engagements. We hope that providing a schedule of the GSU's speaking engagements will allow more people to come together and air their needs, fears, and hopes.

October 23

11:30-1 p.m. Development of Human Sexuality–Converse Hall Attic.

1:40-2:50 Cultures and Personality, Sociology—401 Waterman

3-4:30 Development of Human Sexuality—Converse Hall Attic

October 27

7-9 p.m. – Symposium on the Gay Issue--Marsh-Austin--Tupper Lounge.

October 28

10:50-12:05 Sociology–333 Votey

12:15-1:30 – Alternatives to the Nuclear Family - 115 Commons Living/Learning.

October 29

9-11 a.m. – Development of Human Sexuality - Torri Hall Lounge.

The Program of the Year isn't on TV. It's in the Air Force ROTC.

Look into the Air Force ROTC. And there are 4-year, 3-year, or 2-year programs to choose from. Whichever you select, you'll leave college with a commission as an Air Force officer. With opportunities for a position with responsibility...challenge...and, of course, financial rewards and security.

The courses themselves prepare you for leadership positions ahead. Positions as a member of an aircrew... or as a missile launch officer...positions using mathematics...science...engineering.

Look out for yourself. Look into the Air Force ROTC programs on campus.

UVM Students are eligible to enroll at St. Michael's. Contact the Dept. of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's (Call 655-2000, ext. 261)

Put it all together in Air Force ROTC.

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

McDonald's BREAKFAST

FEATURING

SCRAMBLED EGGS & SAUSAGE... $.95
2 Grade A Eggs • Country Pork Sausage • Toasted English Muffin

HOTCAKES & SAUSAGE ..... $.90
2 Golden Brown Hotcakes • Country Pork Sausage • Syrup • Butter

EGG McMUFFIN® ..... $.75
Canadian Bacon • Cheese • Fried Egg On A Toasted English Muffin

DANISH PASTRY ..... $.35
ENGLISH MUFFIN ..... $.25
CITRUS CUP ..... $.35
JUICE ..... $.25
Orange • Tomato • Grapefruit
COFFEE Regular ..... $.15
Large ..... $.25
MILK ..... $.20

Your Along Dotted Line

FREE COFFEE

First Cup Free With Any Purchase

Present this card at McDonald's. This special offer entitles you to a regular size cup of delicious, hot coffee to start your day off right with our compliments.

Redeemable only at McDONALD'S® In So. Burlington

This Offer Good From 10-3-75 thru 10-31-75

Between the hours of 7am-11am

CASH REDEMPTION VALUE ONE TENTH CENT

FREE FREE

Eastland Opposes Marijuana Decriminalization

by Allan Rabinowitz

If the cannibis epidemic continues to spread we may find ourselves saddled with a large population of sensoriums."

Senator James Eastland (CPS) — At first glance it would seem that the country is not far from reaching a national policy of decriminalizing marijuana.

But it may take longer than expected.

There are several obstacles to federal legislation to decriminalize marijuana although six states have already passed such legislation on their own, and a presidential task force recently recommended that enforcement of pot laws be given low priority.

One of the major obstacles, said Keith Stroup, chairman of the National Organization to Reform Marijuana Laws (NORML) is Senator James Eastland (D-MS). Eastland is a staunch opponent of marijuana decriminalization and chairman of the Judiciary Committee, through which any marijuana bill must pass before it reaches the Senate floor. In addition, Eastland is chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security, which issued a report last year spelling out the details of a marijuana "epidemic."

There are good reasons to oppose the decriminalization of marijuana, according to Dave Martin, chief analyst for the Eastland subcommittee and coordinator for the hearings from which Eastland's report stemmed. Marijuana, said Martin, can make a person "anti-motivational" or "dysfunctional."

"If you have a drug," said Martin, "that causes people to drop out of school and society, if you have something that enhances any psychological weakness a person may have to begin with; if you have a drug that makes a person amotivational, then you must consider a person who uses this drug as the bearer of a contagious germ. And society has a vested interest in protecting itself against it."

Martin claimed that neither he nor Eastland recommended putting "youthful first offenders" behind bars, but insisted that possession of pot should remain a misdemeanor, since a "criminal record and probation provide a mighty powerful deterrent." Marijuana decriminalization generally implies that no criminal records will be kept on minor marijuana arrests.

Eastland's subcommittee has scheduled a second set of marijuana hearings for November in which the latest scientific research will be examined. Martin said, "I'm not totally against decriminalization. I just want to take a go-slow attitude."

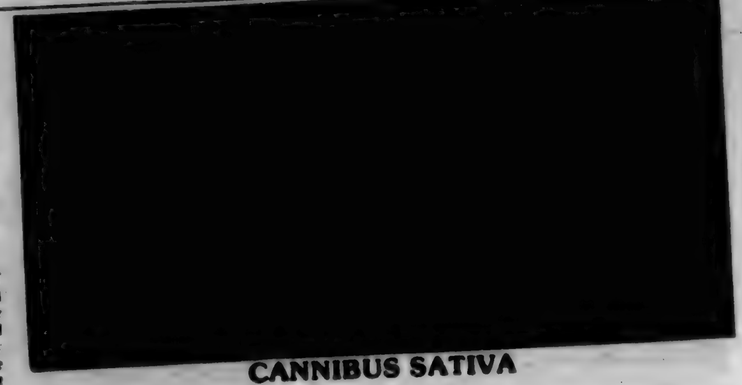
Several marijuana reform bills are in Congress now. There is a senate bill which must pass through Eastland's Judiciary Committee. Stroup of NORML is pessimistic about whether that bill can "be forced through" the committee. A bill in the House is caught in "the same kind of bottleneck," Stroup said.

The House bill must go through the Subcommittee on Health and Environment. The chairman of that committee, Paul Rogers (D-FL), is "sitting on the bill until after the '76 elections," Stroup said. Rogers could not be reached for comment.

Another marijuana reform measure is proposed to amend the controversial Criminal Justice Reform Act, which calls for a massive overhaul of the US Criminal Code. If that bill is passed without a decriminalization amendment, possession of pot could be punished with a 30-day jail sentence and or fine of up to $10,000.

But that controversial bill is moving very slowly. Stroup does not see any hope of a federal decriminalization measure in the near future.

Although more states are moving toward marijuana decriminalization—the District of Columbia is on the verge of approving such a measure and Minnesota is not far behind—overall Federal marijuana reform is currently bottled up. "We feel a little weak," said Stroup, "we can't demand anything."



CANNIBUS SATIVA

A Look At Marijuana Usage

Reprinted from the Drug Abuse Council

Among adult Americans, age eighteen and over, eighteen % report having at least tried marijuana, with 8% of them currently using marijuana, according to a recent national survey. Among teen-agers, age 12-17, 14% say that they have tried marijuana and 5% say that they are current users.

The survey, commissioned by the independent Drug Abuse Council, is part of its continuing effort to assess national drug policies and practices. The survey was conducted in October 1974 by Opinion Research Corporation of Princeton, New Jersey. It asked a nationwide cross section of 2,133 adults and 505 teen-agers about their marijuana usage and their attitudes toward our marijuana laws.

The difference in adult usage divides sharply among age groupings, with almost one-half of those 18-25 reporting that they have ever tried marijuana, while only 3 percent of those over 50 reporting that they have ever tried marijuana. Significant variations in marijuana usage are also shown according to city size and region of the country.

Marijuana usage among teen-agers increases sharply with age, with 23 percent of 16-17 year olds saying that they have ever used marijuana and 10 percent currently using.

Professionals rank high among all adult occupational categories in reporting having ever used marijuana (28 percent), with 14 percent of all professionals currently using marijuana.

Of those adults declaring a political affiliation, a significantly greater percentage of independents have ever used and currently use marijuana than either Democrats or Republicans.

The National commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse estimated in 1971 that 24 million Americans had tried marijuana, with 8 million of them using it regularly. The Drug Abuse Council survey, taken three years later, would indicate that 29 million Americans have tried marijuana, with over 12 million of them using it regularly.

The national survey consisted of several questions asked as part of a longer, regularly scheduled survey of public opinion on a variety of issues. All interviews were conducted in the homes of respondents and each respondent was guaranteed anonymity as required by the Code of Ethics of the American Association for Public Opinion Research.

Of national surveys on marijuana, this is the first to seek the public's opinion on a variety of changes in existing by the U.S. Congress. Respondents were given a choice of five alternatives, all regarding sale and/or possession of small amounts of marijuana and use in private, while 40 percent believe that the marijuana laws should be made tougher than they now are for possession of small amounts. Only 13 percent favor retention of the present laws and 8 percent have no opinion.

The division is sharp among those who have ever used marijuana and those who have never used marijuana. Of those who have used marijuana, 82 percent favor reducing criminal penalties. Of those who have never used marijuana, 30 percent favor reducing criminal penalties.

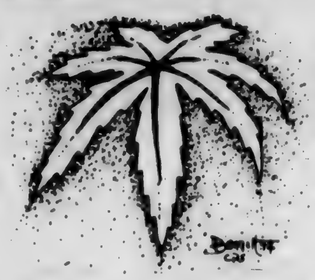
TEENAGE MARIJUANA USAGE

Total Teenagers (by age)	Have ever used %	Currently use %
12-13	5	1
14-15	14	4
16-17	23	10

Two out of every three adults who report that they currently use marijuana do so about once a week or less. The remaining one-third of current users do so a few times a week or more.

ADULT MARIJUANA USAGE

Total adults (by age)	Have ever used %	Currently use %
18-25	49	25
26-34	26	9
35-39	15	6
40-49	9	5
50-59	3	1
60 or over	3	1
City Size
Less than 50,000	10	4
50,000 - 249,999	12	5
250,000 - 499,999	10	5
500,000 - 999,999	19	12
1 million and over	25	11
Region
Northeast	22	10
North Central	13	6
South	14	6
West	27	10



POLITICAL AFFILIATION

	Have ever used %	Currently use %
Independents	24	10
Democrats	15	7
Republicans	10	3

FREQUENCY OF MARIJUANA USE

	Current users %
Once a month or less	31
Two or three times a month	19
About once a week	17
A few times a week	15
About once a day	7
More than once a day	11

ATTITUDES TOWARD MARIJUANA LAWS

	Law remain as is %	Possession of small amounts subject to a civil fine %	Possession of small amounts legal %	Sale & possession of small amounts legal %	Tougher penalties %
Total adults	13	10	13	16	40
(by age)
18-25	11	10	28	28	19
26-34	11	12	18	23	29
35-39	17	13	10	11	41
40-49	15	10	11	12	44
50-59	9	10	7	11	54
60 & over	15	9	4	7	54
(by usage)
Have used	6	9	33	40	8
Currently use	–	5	33	54	5
Never used	15	11	8	11	47

MICHELIN XM+S STEEL-BELTED RADIALS

If you're not satisfied with the brand of snow tires you've been riding on, buy a set of Michelin 'Xm+s' steel-belted radials. The 'Xm+s' is designed to deliver accurate steering control, precise handling and sure road-grip mile-after-mile.

MICHELIN Xm+s steel-belted radial tires for mud and snow make a big difference in the way your car handles and stops in both light and hard-packed snow. For superior road-grip and traction, let Michelin 'Xm+s' take you thru winter.

Winter driving got you in a spin? Experience a confident feeling with a set of Michelin 'Xm+s' steel-belted radial snow tires. Michelins are designed to stop sure and grip tough to help pull you thru both light and hard-packed snow. Let Michelin 'Xm+s' take you thru winter.

REILLY TIRE COMPANY

We Will Mount and Balance Your Winter Tires for $5.00

864-0133

Easily accessible to Campus

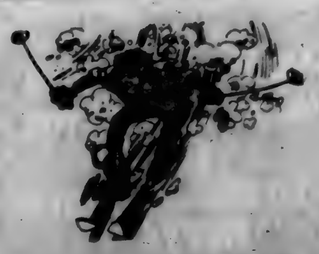
RING DAY

"Your college ring is a once-in-a lifetime purchase. Let me help you select the one most perfect style and gemstone just right for you."

Oct 21 & 31
10 - 3
10% off all gold rings these two days only

ArtCarved College Rings by John Roberts

BOOTS:
Hanson
K-2
Nordica
Raichle



SKI BOTTOM REFINISHING - $6.95
(24 Hour Service)

Yaluga Sports

SKIS:
Kastle
Rossignol
K-2

Looking F

(continued from page five)

I started off climbing the hill behi path that wound through a pine grov sky right on top of the trees. The woods, where the leaves were bright fall was taking over. "Cathy's funn once seen her walk back here."
Vermont so they could ramble thr could breathe the air and feel close didn't care much. She made no pre cows, no garden, not even a dog or MacGraw-Hill in New York City, a work on. It was almost like she liv was really Vermont. She was busy a by drinking hard and finding a man her life to any one man or thing t free up here in the woods, free to having the world close her in, or room. I think maybe she painted startle people, get them uncomfo their act and into something differ things up. And here in the countr people would come over and be back-to-the-land that when they visiting with a magazine article or didn't like to be bored.

At the top of the hill there was understand why it was at the to sense. Anyway I sat on the edge reflections of the leaves made. I t
July, about jumping off of big r water of the agrge. About Ingrid and then us running home, her and sweaty. Well it was fall now, no helicopter waiting to take me

I ambled back down, kicking faster and faster. I kept think getting things organized to a coherence. Cathy was right complain. When I got to her hou and headed back to the city. Th Cath. She didn't care about say that kind of shit. She would lo was gone.

During the drive back I ma slowly. This voice inside said " you ever decide you had to Well that's what I was trying t though. She sort of purred al power in reserve, just waiting to

I went straight home when I
Ingrid that I had figured thing again. I went in the house and
At first I figured that she w have left some kind of note.
There was a note: "Greg, I later. Ingrid". What the fuck d

Onc

A

Looking For Louise On A Cold Windy Day

(continued from page five)

I started off climbing the hill behind the house. There was a path that wound through a pine grove where you could see the sky right on top of the trees. Then the path led to the real woods, where the leaves were bright gold and red-greens, and fall was taking over. "Cathy's funny," I thought, "I've never once seen her walk back here." Most people moved to Vermont so they could ramble through the woods, so they could breathe the air and feel close to something. But Cathy didn't care much. She made no pretense of being a farmer: no cows, no garden, not even a dog or two. She was an editor for MacGraw-Hill in New York City, and they sent her things to work on. It was almost like she lived in Manhattan, except it was really Vermont. She was busy all the time, and she relaxed by drinking hard and finding a man. She didn't like to commit her life to any one man or thing though, and I think she felt free up here in the woods, free to live her own way without having the world close her in, or brand her. And that purple room. I think maybe she painted it that way because it would startle people, get them uncomfortable, and get them out of their act and into something different. She believed in shaking things up. And here in the country that was good, otherwise people would come over and be so goddamn mellow and back-to-the-land that when they left you felt you had been visiting with a magazine article or else Rip Van Winkle. Cathy didn't like to be bored.

At the top of the hill there was a little pool of water. I never understand why it was at the top of the hill. It didn't make sense. Anyway I sat on the edge and looked at the colors the reflections of the leaves made. I thought about the hot days in July, about jumping off of big rocks and landing in the cool water of the gorge. About Ingrid jumping in on a cloudy day, and then us running home, her all goosepimply and me dry and sweaty. Well it was fall now: I had to accept it. There was no helicopter waiting to take me to Jamaica.

I ambled back down, kicking stones and watching them go faster and faster. I kept thinking about Burlington, about getting things organized to a slight degree of minimal coherence. Cathy was right – I really had no right to complain. When I got to her house, I just hopped in the Chevy and headed back to the city. That was one thing I liked about Cath. She didn't care about saying goodbye or being polite or that kind of shit. She would look out the window and know I was gone.

During the drive back I made a conscious effort to drive slowly. This voice inside said "slow down, take it easy". Did you ever decide you had to make things easy for yourself? Well that's what I was trying to do. My Chevy loved going 55 though. She sort of purred along, with this great feeling of power in reserve, just waiting to let go.

I went straight home when I got to the city. I wanted to tell Ingrid that I had figured things out for myself, that I was o.k. again. I went in the house and ran up the stairs. She was gone.

At first I figured that she was in the hospital. But she would have left some kind of note. I went down to the kitchen. There was a note: "Greg, I used your toothpaste. See you later. Ingrid". What the fuck did that mean?

I sat down on the couch. I couldn't believe she was out of the house. It was the first time in three weeks. I figured it was some guy. Some kind of rendez-vous planned in advance. Why the toothpaste?

My mind was spinning like mad. I could feel my stomach tighten up. She said she was coming back. All I could do was wait. I ran a hot bath, hot enough to scale off my outer layer of skin. I was sick of it anyway. I got in and winced. I let the water singe me, and let my head rest in the steam. I stuck my head under water and pretended I was someone else. I wasn't.

She came in around 11:30. She stunk of garlic and gin. She got into bed beside me.

"How do you feel?" I asked, playing it cool.

"Good," she said, "Very, very good." Then she was asleep.

I got up to pack. I started slinging all my loose clothes into my green duffel bag. I remember doing the same thing out in New Mexico when Stephanie kicked me out. She sat in the room watching me pack it all into the bag. I had asked her, "Don't you think it's kind of sad, the way I'm always throwing my life into duffel bags and moving around so much?"

"No," she had said, "Not really."

LENNIE'S ON THE PIKE
MOSE ALLISON
Thurs thru Sun

Tobacco smoke ascends slowly to the ceiling,
The rattling of beer mugs grows softer,
And conversations fade into whispers.
Mose is on.

Lennie speaks with triumph then raises his arms.
The assembly claps vigorously,
And hoots arise from derelicts at the bar.

Mose replies with three nodding bows.
His fingers hover above the keys
Before they begin their flights across the board.

The bass thumps. The wooden stick striking the tight hide Cuts the air. The cymbals make it shimmer.
Softly hands slap thighs and shoes tap the floor.
Softly, because Mose is on.

His chin drops and he squirms on the bench.
With increasing speed his fingers dive and rise.
A hum wells from his chest and flows out his mouth.

This White priest of Jazz shakes and the dark sound descends
Into his believers, blood shot eyes open wide and dilate.
Shoulders pulse and heads sway.

Young teachers, jazzmen and derelicts
Part their lips as he begins his dejected song.
They all are one,
When Mose is on.

–SCOTT CURTIS

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by H. Spencer Turner, M.D.
Director, The Ohio State University Health Service
1875 Millikin Rd.
Columbus, Ohio 43210

QUESTION: I have had chest pains for seven years, since I was 14. I have seen four doctors since then. One was a well-known cardiologist. Every one of them found a strange sound in my chest but after I had x-rays and EKG's they all said the pain was my imagination. The result was a prescription of pills. The cardiologist said I had a venous hum and that this was normal for a young man. The pain is always on my upper left side from the center of my chest to my armpit. It usually occurs while walking and it seems to be most common in the summer months. Also, I experience shortness of breath after exerting myself unrelated to the pain I have from walking.

Please tell me what a venous hum is and why I must live with this terrible pain.

ANSWER: A venous hum is a normal sound heard in young people and is produced by the high rate of flow of blood through veins leading to the heart. It is not a diagnosis and it is not pathological. Why you have the pain you describe is more difficult to answer.

Non-specific chest pains are common among young people, frequently including some pain on exertion. Problems usually develop when the person has heard bad stories about chest pains or has a history of someone in the family having heart trouble. Once the idea that the pain is pathological becomes imbedded, the person's awareness of the pain is heightened. This becomes a vicious cycle and reassurance becomes almost impossible. Considering the thorough evaluation you have received from several doctors, it might be time to acknowledge that while the pain is real, the basis for it is prodominantly emotional. Exploration with a skilled psychotherapist and some attempts to modify your response to these normal sensations would be preferable to using medication and would have a higher likelihood of being successful.

••••••••••••

QUESTION: A little over two months ago I shaved off my pubic hair because a friend of mine told me that it would grow back heavier. However, to this day I am practically bald. Is there anything I can do to get the hair to grow back? (This letter was written by a woman.)

ANSWER: A little over two months ago I cautioned people about shaving pubic hair. Sorry you missed it. The hair will grow back, slowly, as you have already observed. You cannot speed up the process. You will also have a lot of itching. And, when it finally does grow back in, it will be no heavier than it was before.

The amount of pubic hair a woman has is highly variable and so is the reaction to it. In some cultures, shaving off the pubic hair is believed to be more sexually alluring. Until recently, the appearance of pubic hair in photographs or movies defined them as pornography. Trimming excess hair with scissors can facilitate hygiene.

••••••••••••

QUESTION: Are condoms safe to use alone as a good form of birth control if used properly?

ANSWER: Condoms are a convenient, easily used and readily available form of birth control that are highly effective when used properly. Such proper use consists of putting them on before intercourse begins rather than fooling around first and risking either premature ejaculation or some leakage of semen. Preejaculation secretions can contain adequate numbers of sperm to produce pregnancy. Following intercourse, while withdrawing, the condom should be held on the penis to keep it from slipping off.

On rare occasions condoms can break, especially with vigorous and athletic intercourse, but this is less likely using a lubricated type than with a dry type. There are rigorous quality control standards imposed upon condom manufactures and defective condoms are extremely rare. Do not fill them with water to test them. It is unnecessary and weakens them. A new condom should be used each time intercourse occurs.

For a lot more certain birth control than with the condom alone, the woman can also use contraceptive foam. Both contraceptive foam and condoms are available in drug stores without a prescription. Contraceptive foam can be found on self service counters but in some states (Michigan included) one must ask the pharmacist for condoms since public display of these items is not permitted. Condoms come in a lubricated and non-lubricated variety. There are dry lubricated ones (silicone powder) and ones lubricated with a water soluble substance. The wet lubricated or dry lubricated ones are the preferred type. They also come with and without reservoir tips. Either type is fine and both should be placed on with a little added space left up front to leave room for the ejaculate.

Three nationally sold brands are Ramses, Shieks and Trojans. They come three to a pack or a dozen at a time, being much cheaper by the dozen. There are super deluxe ones which are made out of animal intestines but these are very expensive and are recommended only for well-to-do connoisseurs. One size fits all though some people find one brand more comfortable than another.

••••••••••••

Boutilier's ART CENTER
112 Church Street BURLINGTON, VERMONT
ARTIST & DRAFTING SUPPLIES • BOOKBINDING MATERIALS
PAPERS • CARDBOARDS • SCHOOL SUPPLIES • CRAFT MATERIALS
CUSTOM PICTURE FRAMING
VT.'S LARGEST ART STORE

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181
10% OFF WITH UVM ID.

Once again we are featuring A&M records
These 3 are on sale for 3.93 !!!
A&M records carry quality performers and give quality sound.

According to last year's VPIRG survey –
Upstairs Record Shop had the lowest prices in the city
AND WE STILL DO!!!

44 CHURCH ST THE UPSTAIRS RECORD SHOP

FREE posters and FREE singles with the purchase of our albums.

FEATURE

Resources at Outreach Program

by Lee Garte

With the rise in women's studies, many groups are forming on the UVM campus in support of women and their changing role in society. In the Living/Learning Center, Amy Sklar is directing the Women's Outreach Program which is designed to encourage women in this cause. In a personal interview, Ms. Sklar discussed the purpose of the program, its goals and objectives, and the activities it has sponsored.

"We propose to establish a residential resource and learning center for UVM women. The program's importance lies in the need for awareness by women, in a supportive environment, of the changing role of women in society," stated Ms. Sklar.

The program involves fifteen members. They are UVM students ranging from sophomores to seniors with varied majors. Their faculty sponsor is Mary Beth Lawton from the Early Childhood Development Department. Because it is an "outreach" program, the members are also concerned with other women on the campus and in the community. They want to establish themselves in a way which will encourage other women to become involved in the various activities they will sponsor.

The Outreach Program members are presently involved in interpersonal activities. One of these activities entails consciousness-raising groups which are held regularly every week and are led by Amy Sklar and Janet Ballentyne. Ms. Sklar also holds a program meeting approximately every two weeks. A third regular activity of the program is a self-defense course directed by two former members of "Women Against Rape" (Abby Hale and Faye Speed). The women in the program are learning to be "more assertive and, in certain situations where their mental or physical space is threatened, to be more aggressive," said Ms. Sklar.

Women's Outreach wants to make women more aware of the alternative lifestyles open to them. A midwife from the Chicago area spoke to the women of the program. This was a very successful event. Ms. Sklar said it was a very interesting talk. She feels that the women in the program gained a lot from it. "We want women to be aware that they can have careers if they want to. We hope to have more speakers of this sort and will hold them open to anyone who is interested."

The program has many tentative plans to help establish itself as a women's student center and to involve other women. A cocktail party and dinner with women professors of women's courses on campus is planned. There will be an open house for all women interested in learning about the Outreach Program. The members are also in the process of obtaining a feminist section in the Living/Learning Center library, and they will chose the various books to be included in it. Eventually, the program hopes to open up its consciousness-raising sessions to women outside the program and will engage additional women to lead these groups.

Ms. Sklar is very enthusiastic about the program and its future. "Everyone grows and develops at a different pace," she said. "But I believe that eventually each woman in the program will become fully aware of herself, which will help her in her changing role in society."

UVM's Non-Traditional Students

by Debbie Bancroft

Women are not a small portion of Continuing Education students. In this Fall 1975 Semester, 51 percent of CE students are female. Continuing Education students are often referred to as non-traditional students. Their reasons for enrolling through the Continuing Education program are as varied as the courses that are offered.

Women from all walks of life are enrolled through this program. Some have just graduated from high school and are taking a few courses while holding a part-time or full-time job. They are either working toward their degree on a part-time basis or simply earning a few extra credits before applying for admission as a full-time student. Others have graduated from a two-year college and are presently taking courses to further their education and experience or to earn a higher degree. Some women have their BA or BS degree and are presently working toward their masters or are taking courses for recertification.

Even more non-traditional are the women who are coming back to school after being out for ten years, fifteen, or more. Many of them are mothers whose children are now grown, are away at college, or have left home. Left with extra time on their hands, many women are deciding now to come back to school to finish their education or to take some additional courses to prepare themselves to go back to work.

There are also students who take courses just for fun. Many of these students are senior citizens who can audit courses free of tuition charges.

There is no one description that would fit every woman enrolled in CE. Their interests and backgrounds are too varied for that. Female students are enrolled in nearly every course offered. They range in age from 17 to 70+. The non-traditional female student is exactly that — non-traditional.

For information about UVM's Continuing Education programs, stop by Grasse Mount or give us a call at 656-2085.

Society's Changing View of Sororities

by Ruth Feldman

Sororities are members of the University community. This particular community has been subject to the scrupulous eye of prospective students, their peers and parents. Each sorority is only one small part of the University, which in turn is inevitably affected by the total society and its health.

In past years sororities, like other organizations on campus, have had to make changes in order to "keep up with the times." However, these changes within sororities were made on the local level. In other words, each group on their respective campuses throughout the United States tries to keep abreast with its particular University.

A sorority meets the needs of those who want the sorority. You may then say, "Why doesn't a sorority meet everyone's needs?" The answer is, "because it is a selective society and we choose those women who meet our needs." Selectivity is important so as to insure that the needs of the sorority as a whole, as well as those needs of each individual sister, are most fully accommodated. Sororities are based on tradition. Despite changes within society, each chapter is bound to its corresponding chapters throughout the nation by these traditions.

Why is it, then, that there is a sudden upsurge in sorority (Greek) affiliation? The system is built upon the same "ancient rituals" as it always was. These rituals have not been sacrificed, despite the changing types of people who have joined. Sororities offer a bond which unites individuals in a common group and the group is growing.

One can point to the overall attitude of the country for a partial answer. The radical sixties and very early seventies saw the Greek system struggling simply because it wasn't "the thing to do." But increased apathy on campus has channeled those people who are looking for a "cause," toward the Greek System. It seems the Greeks are slowly getting back on their feet.

Many students enter a school that has a Greek system with all the preconceived notions they've been fed by their peers. Many students come here with no idea of ever joining a sorority. However, the barrier is slowly being broken down. The Greeks are working towards presenting a positive picture to the community which can do nothing but help. Even within the system, we are in the process of strengthening by avoiding labels which have segregated houses, and crucified our public relations.

The key word is "change." It takes two to start a fight and in this case it takes two to make peace.

Legal Aspects and Conviction Procedures of Rape

by Ivs Kravitz

All women are rape candidates whether they know it or not. Therefore it is important that all women be familiar with the legal aspects of rape.

A woman is not required to report a rape. Not all rape victims want to prosecute, although it is important to at least report the crime. Rape is an act of violence and a violation of the woman's privacy and right to control her body. Reporting the crime helps in several ways: 1) It gives the police information which may point out the method by which the rapist enacted the crime (modus operandi). This helps police to find and apprehend the rapist. 2) It is statistically important in order to show number of rapes committed and thereby prove the need for rape prevention measures. Reporting a crime doesn't mean a woman must prosecute. If she does decide to prosecute, it is important to have reported the rape to the police as soon as possible after the crime occurs.

A rape victim should not change her clothes or wash until after the medical exam. Evidence of the rape may be lost if she does, making prosecution very hard.

Women Against Rape (W.A.R.) members are not lawyers and cannot give legal advice. To do so would be a crime. If a woman needs a lawyer, one should be called. There is a basic procedure a woman goes through after reporting a rape to the police. Even if the police are not called, she should see a doctor. First the victim will talk to a uniformed police officer, who will take the basic factual information about the rape. The woman doesn't have to answer any questions, but if she thinks she might want to prosecute, she should be cooperative. The purpose of this interview is to establish time, place, circumstances, and to get a description of the rapist. This is a short interview and the victim should not answer questions about her past or her morality.

The police will take the woman to the emergency room at the hospital or to the doctor she requests. She will be asked to give a more in-depth statement to a detective. The Burlington police will try to send a woman detective. The detective will take any evidence found in the medical exam. This includes a woman's clothes, vaginal smear for sperm, hairs and skin from under her fingernails and any evidence deemed important. These can be linked to a suspect or can be proof that force was involved. For this reason a woman should not wash or change her clothes before the exam, and she should, if possible, bring a change of clothes to the doctor's.

Several days later, if she has decided to prosecute, she will have to give a formal sworn statement (deposition) to the police. The state's attorney or her own lawyer should be with her. This will be used as evidence at the trial. A copy of this deposition will be available to her.

Later, she may be asked to give a deposition to the defense attorney. The accused rapist can be present when this is done. She should have a lawyer present who can advise her, again either her own or the state's lawyer. She should not answer questions about her past sexual life or her morality. The defense attorney can try to get a court subpoena to force her to answer these types of questions, but judges seem to be reluctant to order these questions answered.

Present Vermont Law (13 V.S.A. 3201-3202) defines rape as carnal knowledge of a woman by force and against her will. It is punishable by up to 20 years imprisonment or a $2,000 fine or both. Rape between spouses is not recognized by law. The new Vermont law has been passed by the House and will go to the Senate during the coming term. Some of the changes are as follows:

1. Corroboration will no longer be required.
2. Rape will be recognized between spouses if they are living apart.
3. Rape will no longer be limited to genital contact, it will include oral and anal intercourse.
4. Except in extraordinary circumstances (decided by the judge) the past sexual history of the victim is not to be brought into the trial except if it is between the victim and the accused rapist.
5. There will be provisions to protect mentally incapacitated women.
6. Statutory rape will be classified by degrees according to the age of the victim and rapist. The WAR hotline number is: 863-1386.

What to do if Raped

Tell the first person you see what happened. This person can be valuable testimony as to your mental and physical condition.

Leave everything intact. Do not destroy evidence by changing clothes, bathing, or in any way altering the scene of the crime. Hairs, lint, and traces of blood are evidence and can be linked to the rapist to affirm the attack.

In Burlington, contact Women Against Rape (W.A.R.) 863-1386.

Get to a hospital, notify the police. Recount in your mind each detail so that you can speak clearly and accurately.

What Can Women Do?

1. Prepare ourselves psychologically and physically to deal with attack.
2. Familiarize ourselves with defense and preventative techniques and with the law.
3. Report all assaults, as minor as they may seem.
4. Talk to other women about rape. Think through and discuss with other people what you would do if attacked.
5. Share experiences. Many women have had experiences and are willing to discuss them.
6. Memorize the phone number of the local police and
7. Pass this article and other articles on to friends.
8. Be aware of changes in the law.
9. Rehearse your course of action in a dangerous situation. Be prepared.
10. Wear a whistle.
11. If followed, ring a doorbell of a lighted house as though it were your destination.
12. Insist that strangers (such as repair persons) show proper identification.
13. Secure locks on outside doors.
14. Chain doors so that you can open them slightly to see who your visitor is. Insist that visitors identify themselves.
15. Scream if attacked and respond to others' screams for help.

Rape Myths (confirmed by studies):

1. That the rapist is otherwise sexually unfulfilled.
2. That rapists are pathologically sick.
3. That most rapes occur in dark alleys, or in hitchhiking situations.
4. That rapists are usually a stranger to the victim.
5. That the highest percentage of rapes are committed by black men against white women.
6. That the raped woman was at fault.
7. That a woman cannot be raped by her husband. (Note: the law upholds this. Husbands legally are entitled to sexual services by their wives upon their demand.)
8. That rape is impossible without consent.
9. That women enjoy and encourage rape.

yarn cellar
For the Bulky Sweater look.
Reynolds
Icelandic Tweed 2.00 Ball
Lopi 2.00 Ball
The Yarn Cellar
86 Church St.

CAREERS?
YOU CAN'T DO IT ALL YOUR WAY !
FR. OMER DUFAULT, CONSULTANT FOR CHURCH RELATED CAREERS
89 PEARL ST., BOX 936, BURLINGTON VT. 05401
862-2636

Texas Instruments
SR-16
$59.95

University Store

MAZEL'S
Family Shoe Store
194 North St. Burlington
dunham
CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS®

Also Available In A 9" Boot For Men And Women
Tyroleans . . . the hiking, biking, camping, mountaineering or anywhere boots . . . You'll find 'em at Mazel's in Men's & Ladies' styles . . . Comfort from first step to last . . . the boots for all outdoors and all seasons.

Si

Copyright Off Our Backs, 1975

Nevertheless, the war goes on in South Vietnam (and Indochina) and stopping it is a priority for those who suffer from it. Famine and disease is rampant in Saigon. Thieu will not let the people leave the concentration camps (alias "refugee camps") to tend their land and so this once rice-exporting country is forced to import rice. But 80% of Thieu's economy (which is 90% funded by US tax dollars) goes to his military machine, which is used more to repress than defend the people. And there are still over 200,000 Vietnamese citizens in his prisons, half of whom are women. When Holly Near was in DC for the Peace Assembly (commemorating the second anniversary of the signing of the Peace Agreements) on January 27th, she told a very moving story about the sisterhood of women in prison:

A woman who was a former political prisoner came over to talk to me. She was a poet and had not been very political but she and her husband had gotten involved in the anti-war movement. When finally they were arrested, he was very badly tortured. But because he took full responsibility for their work, she was not tortured, just held in prison.

She was put in a little tiny cell with two other women, where they had to squat all the time and take turns lying down. She was very upset that they were going to torture her, that she would have to give the names of friends, and she didn't want to get them into trouble. She kept asking this

SK
" THE FINES
SKIS BY Rossignol,
Dynamic,
Volkl, Yam
Northland up to 5
SKI BO
BY: Nord
Hanson, D
K2, Techn
Trappeur,
Caber, Ri
Henke
up to 6
USED SKI
Down
Ski
Pack

Sisterhood in Prison

Copyright Off Our Backs, 1975

Nevertheless, the war goes on in South Vietnam (and Indochina) and stopping it is a priority for those who suffer from it. Famine and disease is rampant in Saigon; Thieu will not let the people leave the concentration camps (alias "refugee camps") to tend their land and so this once rice-exporting country is forced to import rice. But 80% of Thieu's economy (which is 90% funded by US tax dollars) goes to his military machine, which is used more to repress than defend the people. And there are still over 200,000 Vietnamese citizens in his prisons, half of whom are women. When Holly Near was in DC for the Peace Assembly (commemorating the second anniversary of the signing of the Peace Agreements) on January 27th, she told a very moving story about the sisterhood of women in prison:

A woman who was a former political prisoner came over to talk to me. She was a poet and had not been very political but she and her husband had gotten involved in the anti-war movement. When finally they were arrested, he was very badly tortured. But because he took full responsibility for their work, she was not tortured, just held in prison.

She was put in a little tiny cell with two other women, where they had to squat all the time and take turns lying down. She was very upset that they were going to torture her, that she would have to give the names of friends, and she didn't want to get them into trouble. She kept asking this other woman in the cell: "How 'can I do this without hurting anybody? What are they going to do to me? Where is my husband?" She had no political experience and didn't know how to deal with all this. Out of the three women, the old one kept saying: "Shut up, don't cry. Be quiet, don't talk." They were in this cell for three months, which the poet felt were so miserable she would rather get out and be beaten than stay in the cell with this old woman who was so gold. The old woman would say: "If the police hear you crying, they'll know that they're winning. Crying is cowardice."

Finally she was moved to another cell where there were more women her age (she was 20). They would sing and have conversations; the guards would sometimes beat them for singing but they would just keep singing, a little more quietly. Later, she was moved again to a large cell with the old, cold woman. People would come in, very badly beaten, and the old woman would stay up all night and take care of them. But she never talked to anybody. She was very cold and distant. Nobody really liked her very much.

When one woman was brought in very badly beaten and everybody thought she was going to die, the 64 women in the cell organized and banged on the walls for a nurse to come. They broke the door down and went and got the nurse. The prisoner got better but the authorities came and said they wanted to punish the person who did it. They all said: "We all did it." This went on for a long time: "Who did it?" "We all did it." The authorities wanted to break the morale by having one person deal with it. Finally the old woman stood forward and said that they all did it but if they had to punish one person, she would go. So they took her and she was very severely beaten.

People felt great affection for her when she came back, but they still felt they couldn't share their inner joys with her. There still was something cold about her.

The others in the group started to hold classes. They didn't have any pencil or papers, but they would learn lessons orally. The old woman was a seamstress and couldn't read, so the poet started giving her special help. After a week she realized that this old woman was making incredible progress. She was a highly intelligent woman. But she would never join the group when they would sing. Sometimes people heard her singing on her own and they noticed she had a very fine voice, but she would never join with the group.

Before Christmas '68, some people came and distributed gifts in the prison. The old woman got some material, enough to make a bo, the traditional black shirt and pants of the Vietnamese peasant woman. Everybody decided that they wanted to have a party to celebrate the founding of the NLF and that they would wear their bos. The poet was the only one who didn't have one because she was from the city. She felt bad but never told anybody.

The celebration day came around and she went into this little side room to wash. The old woman came up to her and said, "Here try this on." She was much heavier than the old woman and said to her, "No, you should share it with someone else. It'll be much too tight for me." The old woman said, "No, no. Try it anyway." She put it on and it was a perfect fit. The poet went into the other room and danced around to show everyone how pretty it was. Then she went back into the other room to give it back to the old woman. But the old woman said, "No, it's yours." She had made this "little sister" the black bo out of the material. All the other women laughed and jumped up and down and said, "Yes, every night while you were sleeping she'd get up and measure you." She'd hand sewn this bo so the poet would have one to wear to the party.

The poet was really touched by her and found out that there had really been a lot of love that this old woman had felt for "little sister," even in the tiny cell. She found out later that the reason the old woman would not talk to her there was because the third woman in the cell was an agent, but there had been no way to let her know.

Yes, I can!

Women Around The World

by Mary Partridge

ANGOLIA – Women here have traditionally done a large share of the farming, and they sell what they themselves cultivate. A black Angolian woman teacher said, "Black women here have more power than European women. Because they can sell the products they grow, African women have their own economic base. White women aren't that independent."

Portuguese imperialists in Angolia have recently decided that in some areas they are going to have men take over the agricultural work using modern farming equipment and practices, and the women are going to be taught to sew, clean and keep house.

The Portuguese believe that this change will have a "civilizing" effect on black men. "When women begin to want things, men must work to get them," one man said. "When women learn to sew and wash, they keep the men neat."

AUSTRIA – Women here are now demanding modernization of laws pertaining to the family. Under present laws, a man can prohibit his wife from working, and a husband has final authority over the children.

Although Austria has no form of address which corresponds to "Ms.", women here are increasingly being addressed as "Frau" rather than "Fraulein" even if they are single.

APPALACHIA, U.S. – The Appalachian Women's Rights Organization (AWRO) was founded this year in eastern Kentucky. Men are accepted as members mainly because Appalachian men have had a traditional reluctance to allow their wives to attend social gatherings without them.

One of the aims of AWRO is to establish sanctuaries where women and children can seek refuge from alcoholic husbands or fathers.

CHILE – Reasons that Chilean women want to get married:

To get away from home and be free	19%
Loneliness	14%
Fear of becoming an old maid	13%
Because she thought she was in love	13%
Parental pressure	12%
Because she was really in love	11%
To have and run her own home	7%
Because she needed support	6%
Because she wanted children	5%

Reasons that Chilean men want to get married:

To affirm his masculinity	27%
To father children, thus proving his virility	21%
To have a companion to help him in his home life	14%
For economic advantages and social prestige	14%
Sexual attraction	7%
Love	3%
Other reasons

BURMA – Respect for the rights of women is a tradition here as illustrated by the marriage customs. A married woman keeps her own name. All property is jointly owned by the couple. Divorce may be obtained by mutual consent of the partners. Children are not given either their father's or their mother's last name but are named according to their individual nature and character.

CUBA – Fidel Castro is working for the emancipation of Cuban women, to the consternation of the male population here. On March 8, 1975, a "family code" came into effect requiring men to help their wives with the housework.

Several months before this law was passed, a documentary film about the role of women was shown, and cries of "liar" and "homosexual" were heard in the theatre as a modern married couple appeared on the screen, and the man was shown washing dishes with his wife. The courageous applause of a few women in the audience was drowned out by male derision.

ENGLAND – In 1973, a charity called Woman's Aid was set up in London to assist the victims of wife-beating, a common occurrence here. Beatings not only take place in working-class homes but in the homes of professional men as well.

The government welfare in England maintains that if a woman leaves home on her own accord, she will not receive government aid.

KUWAIT – In cafes here, the lower level is occupied by men, while the upper level is reserved for families – that is, a woman with her husband. It is absolutely inconceivable that a woman would go to a cafe unaccompanied by a male.

Married women do not reveal their faces or their bodies in public: they are veiled and shrouded. Unmarried women for the most part wear Western clothes, but they go out only in the company of mothers, sisters or brothers. Marriages are prearranged.

PORTUGAL – A woman can't leave this country with her children unless she has the written permission of her husband. Nor can a mother authorize an urgent medical operation for her child.

If a man catches his wife committing adultery, he can kill her and expect to be acquitted. The same holds true for a man who catches his daughter, if she is under 21, in bed with a man. As for abortion, both the abortionist and the patient are liable to spend two to eight years in prison if caught.

SWITZERLAND – Women got the vote here in 1971.

USSR – One out of three judges here is a woman as opposed to one out of 50 in the U.S. Seven out of ten physicians are women. Over half of all civil and mechanical engineers and college and secondary school teachers are women.

All Soviet women have ready access to divorce and abortion, and both are free or nearly so. (An abortion without medical justification costs the equivalent of one day's pay.)

However, child care and domestic work are clearly up to the woman in Soviet society.

WORLDWIDE – Percent of illiterate women in the world – 1975:

North America	2%
Europe and the USSR	5%
Latin America	27%
Asia	57%
Africa	84%

Women in Film

by Kathleen A. Brown

Recently students in universities and high schools have begun examining the motion picture. At UVM we are fortunate to have a motion picture authority, Dr. Frank Manchel. He teaches "Development of the Motion Picture" and "Women in Film."

Because "Women in Film" is a seminar course the students and the professor share the responsibility for the material studied. The Student Association and Dr. Manchel collaborated in choosing the films for this course. Therefore, the viewing of the films is made available to all students. The 'American Actress Series' is shown every Thursday night at 7:30 in Cook. These films are the basis for Dr. Manchel's course.

Every year Dr. Manchel teaches a seminar course with a varying theme. Last year the theme was war films. The students in that course thought the study of how women were treated in films would be interesting and they suggested the seminar we have now.

A seminar is a fine educational experience because student participation is so important. Dr. Manchel has the course set up in such a way that it involved campus-wide co-operation. In addition to the S.A.'s help in getting the films, Dr. Manchel has asked faculty members, who are authorities in their fields, and have an interest in women to speak on course-related subjects. Dr. Gordon Lewis, professor of Sociology and Anthropology, was the first guest lecturer. He spoke on the image of women. In the following weeks Dr. Jan Folts, associate professor of Sociology, spoke on the concept of women as a minority group and Dr. Betty

(continued on page fourteen)

SKI SALE

" THE FINEST SELECTION OF SKI EQUIPMENT IN VERMONT "

SKIS BY: Rossignol, Kneissel, Dynamic, K2, Head, Volkl, Yamaha, Northland up to 50% OFF

SAVE 20% to 60%

SKI PARKAS BY: Profile, Saska, Roffee, Obermeyer, Tempco, White Stag, Slalom, Alpine Design, Beconta, C.B. Sports, Comfy up to 60% OFF

SKI BOOTS BY: Nordica, Lange, Hanson, Dolomite, K2, Technica, Trappeur, Koflach, Caber, Ricker, A&T, Henke up to 60% OFF

SKI SWEATERS BY: 'Sportif, Lido, Obermeyer, Iceland, Garland, Meister, White Stag, Demetre, Dean's of Scotland up to 50% OFF

USED SKI EQUIPMENT 76 PAIR SKIS 68 PAIR SKI BOOTS $5 and up

Downhill Ski Package

HEAD SKIS	$135.00
GEZE PLATE BINDINGS	54.00
BARRECRAFTER POLES	7.00
MOUNTING	5.00
ENGRAVING	2.00
	$204.00

$149.00 COMPLETE

ALPINE SHOP

Williston Road, So. Burlington Open Daily 9 A.M. to 9 P.M.

You've been there. Now you can help them.

They've got a long way to go. In a world that isn't easy. But with someone's help, they'll make it. What they need is a friend. Someone to act as confidant and guide. Perhaps, it could be you as a Salesian Priest or Brother.

The Salesians of St. John Bosco were founded in 1859 to serve youth. Unlike other orders whose apostolate has changed with varying conditions, the Salesians always have been — and will be, youth oriented. Today we're helping to prepare youngsters for the world that awaits them tomorrow. Not an easy task but one which we welcome.

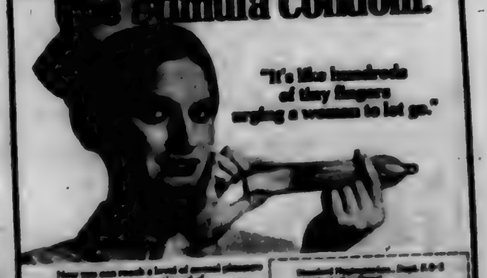
And how do we go about it? By following the precepts of our founder, Don Bosco. To crowd out evil with reason, religion and kindness with a method of play, learn and pray. We're trying to build better communities by helping to create better men.

As a Salesian, you are guaranteed the chance to help the young in a wide range of endeavor . . . as guidance counselors, technical and academic teachers, as coaches, psychologists . . . in boys clubs, summer camps . . . as missionaries. And you are given the kind of training you need to achieve your aims.

The Salesian family is a large one (we are the third largest order) but a warm one. A community with an enthusiastic family feeling where not only our talents are shared but our shortcomings, too. If you feel as we do, that service to youth can be an important mission in your life, we welcome your interest.

For more information about Salesian Priests and Brothers, mail this coupon to:
Father Joseph, S.D.B. Room B-316
Salesians OF ST. JOHN BOSCO
Filors Lane, West Haverstraw, N.Y. 10993
I am interested in the Priesthood ☐ Brotherhood ☐
Name _____ Age _____
Street Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
College Attending _____
Class of _____

The Stimula Condom.



Sisterhood in Prison

Copyright Off Our Backs, 1975.

Nevertheless, the war goes on in South Vietnam (and Indochina) and stopping it is a priority for those who suffer from it. Famine and disease is rampant in Saigon; Thieu will not let the people leave the concentration camps (alias "refugee camps") to tend their land and so this once rice-exporting country is forced to import rice. But 80% of Thieu's economy (which is 90% funded by US tax dollars) goes to his military machine, which is used more to repress than defend the people. And there are still over 200,000 Vietnamese citizens in his prisons, half of whom are women. When Holly Near was in DC for the Peace Assembly (commemorating the second anniversary of the signing of the Peace Agreements) on January 27th, she told a very moving story about the sisterhood of women in prison:

A woman who was a former political prisoner came over to talk to me. She was a poet and had not been very political but she and her husband had gotten involved in the anti-war movement. When finally they were arrested, he was very badly tortured. But because he took full responsibility for their work, she was not tortured, just held in prison.

She was put in a little tiny cell with two other women, where they had to squat all the time and take turns lying down. She was very upset that they were going to torture her, that she would have to give the names of friends, and she didn't want to get them into trouble. She kept asking this other woman in the cell: "How can I do this without hurting anybody? What are they going to do to me? Where is my husband?" She had no political experience and didn't know how to deal with all this. Out of the three women, the old one kept saying: "Shut up, don't cry. Be quiet, don't talk." They were in this cell for three months, which the poet felt were so miserable she would rather get out and be beaten than stay in the cell with this old woman who was so cold. The old woman would say: "If the police hear you crying, they'll know that they're winning. Crying is cowardice."

Finally she was moved to another cell where there were more women her age (she was 20). They would sing and have conversations; the guards would sometimes beat them for singing but they would just keep singing, a little more quietly. Later, she was moved again to a large cell with the old, cold woman. People would come in, very badly beaten, and the old woman would stay up all night and take care of them. But she never talked to anybody. She was very cold and distant. Nobody really liked her very much.

When one woman was brought in very badly beaten and everybody thought she was going to die, the 64 women in the cell organized and banged on the walls for a nurse to come. They broke the door down and went and got the nurse. The prisoner got better but the authorities came and said they wanted to punish the person who did it. They all said: "We all did it." This went on for a long time: "Who did it?" — "We all did it." The authorities wanted to break the morale by having one person deal with it. Finally the old woman stood forward and said that they all did it but if they had to punish one person, she would go. So they took her and she was very severely beaten.

People felt great affection for her when she came back, but they still felt they couldn't share their inner joys with her. There still was something cold about her.

The others in the group started to hold classes. They didn't have any pencil or papers, but they would learn lessons orally. The old woman was a seamstress and couldn't read, so the poet started giving her special help. After a week she realized that this old woman was making incredible progress. She was a highly intelligent woman. But she would never join the group when they would sing. Sometimes people heard her singing on her own and they noticed she had a very fine voice, but she would never join with the group.

Before Christmas '68, some people came and distributed gifts in the prison. The old woman got some material, enough to make a bo, the traditional black shirt and pants of the Vietnamese peasant woman. Everybody decided that they wanted to have a party to celebrate the founding of the NLF and that they would wear their bos. The poet was the only one who didn't have one because she was from the city. She felt bad but never told anybody.

The celebration day came around and she went into this little side room to wash. The old woman came up to her and said, "Here try this on." She was much heavier than the old woman and said to her, "No, you should share it with someone else. It'll be much too tight for me." The old woman said, "No, no. Try it anyway." She put it on and it was a perfect fit. The poet went into the other room and danced around to show everyone how pretty it was. Then she went back into the other room to give it back to the old woman. But the old woman said, "No, it's yours." She had made this "little sister" the black bo out of the material. All the other women laughed and jumped up and down and said, "Yes, every night while you were sleeping she'd get up and measure you." She'd hand sewn this bo so the poet would have one to wear to the party.

The poet was really touched by her and found out that there had really been a lot of love that this old woman had felt for "little sister," even in the tiny cell. She found out later that the reason the old woman would not talk to her there was because the third woman in the cell was an agent, but there had been no way to let her know.

Yes, I can!

Women Around The World

by Mary Partridge

ANGOLIA – Women here have traditionally done a large share of the farming, and they sell what they themselves cultivate. A black Angolian woman teacher said, "Black women here have more power than European women. Because they can sell the products they grow, African women have their own economic base. White women aren't that independent."

Portuguese imperialists in Angolia have recently decided that in some areas they are going to have men take over the agricultural work using modern farming equipment and practices, and the women are going to be taught to sew, clean and keep house.

The Portuguese believe that this change will have a "civilizing" effect on black men. "When women begin to want things, men must work to get them," one man said. "When women learn to sew and wash, they keep the men near."

AUSTRIA – Women here are now demanding modernization of laws pertaining to the family. Under present laws, a man can prohibit his wife from working, and a husband has final authority over the children.

Although Austria has no form of address which corresponds to "Ms.", women here are increasingly being addressed as "Frau" rather than "Fraulein" even if they are single.

APPALACHIA, U.S. – The Appalachian Women's Rights Organization (AWRO) was founded this year in eastern Kentucky. Men are accepted as members mainly because Appalachian men have had a traditional reluctance to allow their wives to attend social gatherings without them.

One of the aims of AWRO is to establish sanctuaries where women and children can seek refuge from alcoholic husbands or fathers.

CHILE – Reasons that Chilean women want to get married:

To get away from home and be free	19%
Loneliness	14%
Fear of becoming an old maid	13%
Because she thought she was in love	13%
Parental pressure	12%
Because she was really in love	11%
To have and run her own home	7%
Because she needed support	6%
Because she wanted children	5%

Reasons that Chilean men want to get married:

To affirm his masculinity	27%
To father children, thus proving his virility	21%
To have a companion to help him in his home life	14%
For economic advantages and social prestige	14%
Sexual attraction	7%
Love	3%
Other reasons

BURMA – Respect for the rights of women is a tradition here as illustrated by the marriage customs. A married woman keeps her own name. All property is jointly owned by the couple. Divorce may be obtained by mutual consent of the partners. Children are not given either their father's or their mother's last name but are named according to their individual nature and character.

CUBA – Fidel Castro is working for the emancipation of Cuban women, to the consternation of the male population here. On March 8, 1975, a "family code" came into effect requiring men to help their wives with the housework.

Several months before this law was passed, a documentary film about the role of women was shown, and cries of "liar" and "homosexual" were heard in the theatre as a modern married couple appeared on the screen, and the man was shown washing dishes with his wife. The courageous applause of a few women in the audience was drowned out by male derision.

ENGLAND – In 1973, a charity called Women's Aid was set up in London to assist the victims of wife-beating, a common occurrence here. Beatings not only take place in working-class homes but in the homes of professional men as well.

The government welfare in England maintains that if a woman leaves home on her own accord, she will not receive government aid.

KUWAIT – In cafes here, the lower level is occupied by men, while the upper level is reserved for families – that is, a woman with her husband. It is absolutely inconceivable that a woman would go to a cafe unaccompanied by a male.

Married women do not reveal their faces or their bodies in public: they are veiled and shrouded. Unmarried women for the most part wear Western clothes, but they go out only in the company of mothers, sisters or brothers. Marriages are prearranged.

PORTUGAL – A woman can't leave this country with her children unless she has the written permission of her husband. Nor can a mother authorize an urgent medical operation for her child.

If a man catches his wife committing adultery, he can kill her and expect to be acquitted. The same holds true for a man who catches his daughter, if she is under 21, in bed with a man. As for abortion, both the abortionist and the patient are liable to spend two to eight years in prison if caught.

SWITZERLAND – Women got the vote here in 1971.

USSR – One out of three judges here is a woman as opposed to one out of 50 in the U.S. Seven out of ten physicians are women. Over half of all civil and mechanical engineers and college and secondary school teachers are women.

All Soviet women have ready access to divorce and abortion, and both are free or nearly so. (An abortion without medical justification costs the equivalent of one day's pay.)

However, child care and domestic work are clearly up to the woman in Soviet society.

WORLDWIDE – Percent of illiterate women in the world – 1975:

North America	2%
Europe and the USSR	5%
Latin America	27%
Asia	57%
Africa	84%

Women in Film

by Kathleen A. Brown

Recently students in universities and high schools have begun examining the motion picture. At UVM we are fortunate to have a motion picture authority, Dr. Frank Manchel. He teaches "Development of the Motion Picture" and "Women in Film."

Because "Women in Film" is a seminar course the students and the professor share the responsibility for the material studied. The Student Association and Dr. Manchel collaborated in choosing the films for this course. Therefore, the viewing of the films is made available to all students. The 'American Actress Series' is shown every Thursday night at 7:30 in Cook. These films are the basis for Dr. Manchel's course.

Every year Dr. Manchel teaches a seminar course with a varying theme. Last year the theme was war films. The students in that course thought the study of how women were treated in films would be interesting and they suggested the seminar we have now.

A seminar is a fine educational experience because student participation is so important. Dr. Manchel has the course set up in such a way that it involved campus-wide co-operation. In addition to the S.A.'s help in getting the films, Dr. Manchel has asked faculty members, who are authorities in their fields, and have an interest in women to speak on course-related subjects. Dr. Gordon Lewis, professor of Sociology and Anthropology, was the first guest lecturer. He spoke on the image of women. In the following weeks Dr. Jan Folta, associate professor of Sociology, spoke on the concept of women as a minority group and Dr. Betty

(continued on page fourteen)

SKI SALE

" THE FINEST SELECTION OF SKI EQUIPMENT IN VERMONT "

SKIS BY: Rossignol, Kneissel, Dynamic, K2, Head, Volkl, Yamaha, Northland up to 50% OFF

SAVE 20% to 60%

SKI PARKAS BY: Profile, Saska, Roffee, Obermeyer, Tempco, White Stag, Slalom, Alpine Design, Beconta, C.B. Sports, Comfy up to 60% OFF

SKI BOOTS BY: Nordica, Lange, Hanson, Dolomite, K2, Technica, Trappeur, Koflach, Caber, Ricker, A&T, Henke up to 60% OFF

SKI SWEATERS BY: 'Sportif, Lido, Obermeyer, Iceland, Garland, Meister, White Stag, Demetre, Dean's of Scotland up to 50% OFF

USED SKI EQUIPMENT 76 PAIR SKIS 68 PAIR SKI BOOTS $5 and up

Downhill Ski Package

HEAD SKIS	$135.00
GEZE PLATE BINDINGS	54.00
BARRECRAFTER POLES	7.00
MOUNTING	5.00
ENGRAVING	2.00
	$204.00

$149.00 COMPLETE

ALPINE SHOP

Williston Road, So. Burlington Open Daily 9 A.M. to 9 P.M.

You've been there. Now you can help them.

They've got a long way to go. In a world that isn't easy. But with someone's help, they'll make it. What they need is a friend. Someone to act as confidant and guide. Perhaps, it could be you as a Salesian Priest or Brother.

The Salesians of St. John Bosco were founded in 1859 to serve youth. Unlike other orders whose apostolate has changed with varying conditions, the Salesians always have been – and will be, youth oriented. Today we're helping to prepare youngsters for the world that awaits them tomorrow. Not an easy task but one which we welcome.

And how do we go about it? By following the precepts of our founder, Don Bosco. To crowd out evil with reason, religion and kindness with a method of play, learn and pray. We're trying to build better communities by helping to create better men.

As a Salesian, you are guaranteed the chance to help the young in a wide range of endeavor . . . as guidance counselors, technical and academic teachers, as coaches, psychologists . . . in boys clubs, summer camps . . . as missionaries. And you are given the kind of training you need to achieve your aims.

The Salesian family is a large one (we are the third largest order) but a warm one. A community with an enthusiastic family feeling where not only our talents are shared but our shortcomings, too. If you feel as we do, that service to youth can be an important mission in your life, we welcome your interest.

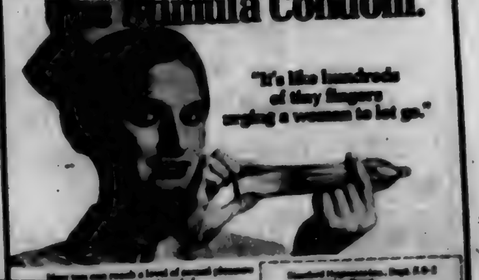
For more information about Salesian Priests and Brothers, mail this coupon to:
Father Joseph, S.D.B. Room S-314

Salesians OF ST. JOHN BOSCO
Filors Lane, West Haverstraw, N.Y. 10993

I am interested in the Priesthood ☐ Brotherhood ☐

Name _____ Age _____
Street Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
College Attending _____
Class of _____

The Stimula' Condom.



Army Eases Restrictions

by Merry T. Johnson

Women in all aspects of society are beginning to reach towards new career opportunities and personal achievement goals. Increasing numbers of women in the civilian world have the desire to be more than just a housewife. Many working women feel that the jobs offered to them are still very limited in scope. Despite education and skill equivalent to their male counterpart's, females are still too often the victims of employer discrimination.

The Army has recently made many advancements toward eliminating sex discrimination. In the past three years, the number of women in the active Army has almost tripled. Restrictions on the career fields which women can enter have been cut back to a minimum. Today, the only branches in which women are not allowed to serve are the combat arms. A woman officer may request any other branch and be directly assigned to the branch of her choice. Previously, all women were first commissioned in the Women's Army Corps and then detailed to a branch choice. The abolishment of this practice serves to impress that there is no reason for distinction of women as a unit separate from men as both are equally capable.

The opening of ROTC to women in universities across the nation is another move the Army has made against discrimination. Women may now participate in ROTC programs which used to be open to men only, and be commissioned as officers in the United States Army upon graduation from college. Women are eligible to compete for full four, three, two or one year scholarships. Each scholarship pays full tuition, books, laboratory fees, and other educational expenses plus a $100 tax-free monthly subsistence allowance. Women in ROTC are still a relatively new concept, however the numbers are increasing rapidly. This year marked the first year in which women attended advanced camp, a six week camp between a student's junior and senior years for all students in the four year ROTC program. It was also the first year for women to attend basic camp, a camp for students wishing to participate in ROTC their final two years of college. UVM currently has twenty-three women participating in the opportunities which the ROTC program offers. The admission of women to West Point and other military service academies has been approved and these schools will also soon have their first co-ed classes if they do not already.

As commissioned officers in the Army, women receive the equal pay and promotion opportunities granted to men. They also receive the same benefits such as a housing allowance, travel opportunities, post privileges, including the use of post exchanges, recreational facilities, and membership in officers' clubs, as well as many additional benefits. Today, in a world in which women are using their intellectual and leadership capabilities in many careers just beginning to open for them; the Army is giving them a chance.

Sgt. Major Permorms In ROTC Phys Ed Test

Margaret Sangar Advocated Birth Control

by Sally Matson

Because she believed in freedom, Margaret Sanger, birth control pioneer, went to jail six times. She believed that women, especially impoverished women, should have the freedom to gain control over their lives. She felt that, family planning was a basic human right to be implemented by universally accessible birth control services. Margaret Sanger opened the first birth control clinic in the United States in 1916. As a result of her pioneering efforts and society's growing interest in the population movement, the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, Inc., was established by 1961.

Through the years, the aspirations of Margaret Sanger have evolved into a massive wordwide movement geared toward unrestricted knowledge and availability of contraception and birth planning for women.

But the struggle has not yet ended. For thousands of women in the United States alone, birth planning continues to remain out of reach. For many, often reality constitutes an unending barrage of unplanned and unwanted pregnancies. Why, in a progressive society, are many women still threatened by unwanted pregnancies? The answers are as varied as the women themselves.

In Vermont, one of the primary reasons is the lack of education available to low-income women. Most are brought up unaware and without knowledge of preventive health care. Because of this, birth planning is a foreign concept and having babies constitutes the norm. Many of the women still believe that producing children is their sole function. Thus they may feel that preventing the natural process of conception will render them useless to their husbands and to society. The root of this problem lies largely in the women's perception of themselves. As "reproducing machines" these women have function and form in a predominately male-oriented society. Without the ability to bear children, their existence as people may appear to be threatened. And sadly, for many women, babies are the only aspect of their lives which are new and perfect; for a time...

A second obstacle to educational family planning is misinformation. Some women are wary of medical institutions or facilities, and usually do not understand what will happen to them during their examinations. Thus, a woman may approach a gynecological clinic hesitantly and have her fears and doubts reinforced by a physician who neglects to thoroughly explain the process which constitute a pelvic examination. As Lee Rainwater found in his survey for And the Poor get Children low-income women have an ingrained modesty about their bodies and don't like physicals or pelvics from anyone or for any reason. If they receive unpersonalized and harried treatment from a physician, the chances that they will return to a clinic are minimized.

Another concern is a financial one. Most women do not realize that many family planning clinics, such as Planned Parenthood of Vermont, offer free or reduced services to financially restricted patients. Some feel that their pride is at stake if they accept such services without "paying their own way."

There are many factors involved in a woman's decision to move toward or away from contraception and birth planning services. But in the final analysis all reasons seem to dissolve into one major concept: women choose to exercise power over their own bodies thus attain some measure of control over their lives. The reality is that many do not have this control.

For the adolescent, sexuality and contraception are experienced very differently. Young people are becoming increasingly responsible at earlier ages in our fast growing technological society. And many are becoming sexually active at the onset of puberty. Because they are developing and maturing, both physiologically and socially at younger ages, adolescents need information and guidance with respect to their own sexuality and the choices available to them concerning contraception. The situation that counselors, teachers, and parents must confront is the sexually active teenager. How this situation is dealt with can make the difference between a guilt-ridden unprotected young woman and a responsible, self-actualized woman.

The key to sexual and social adjustment of adolescents lies largely in the hands of open-minded empathetic adults who are willing to discuss sexuality and interpersonal relationships without making moral or value judgments about young people.

At Planned Parenthood, women from a variety of social, economic, and personal environments are provided health care and contraceptive services. These services are available to all women regardless of their economic status. Fees are based on a sliding financial scale according to need. Planned Parenthood strives to reach all women who desire counseling and contraception in hopes that they will exercise responsibility for themselves and will become the determiners of their own lives.

Specifically, the centers provide birth control counselling and information, pregnancy testing, the sale of non-prescription contraceptives, as well as referral for pregnancy, infertility treatment, social services and non-contraceptive medical problems. Education of the community is also one of Planned Parenthood of Vermont's most important functions. On a personal level, if people do not know about contraception and accept its importance, they will not use it. On the level of society at large, an understanding of the importance of easy, informed access to contraception is necessary if state and federal bodies are to get the proper direction from the electorate.

In 1974, Planned Parenthood of Vermont saw 8000 patients, up from 5000 in 1972. The need for family planning services in the state will continue to grow because there is a potential surge of population growth. Over half of Vermont's population is either within the prime child-bearing years (ages 14-29), or approaching these years (ages 1-14). In the future Planned Parenthood of Vermont will seek to provide more comprehensive family planning services by assisting in making available both simple voluntary sterilization procedure for men and women and routine abortion procedures as a back-up for contraceptive failure.

The need for continued accessibility to contraception is imperative to the physical and emotional well being of the women of Vermont. It is time that we, as women/people, strive with continued determination to become responsible for our bodies, ourselves.

Volunteers sell copies of the Birth Control Review, Margaret Sanger's pioneering publication that first appeared in 1917.

Women's Movement Alive in Burlington

On the surface the Women's movement may not seem too active in Burlington. But in the past few years many Women's organizations have sprouted.

On the UVM campus in 1973, the Women's Caucus was established. Comprised mostly of staff and faculty or wives, their objective is to make women more aware of women in the community, to consolidate efforts, and establish feminine unity. This year, the Student's Women's Caucus is brand new. Although not yet a big organization, its office in Billings Student Center houses a powerhouse of yet to come student influence.

Just last year the nationwide organization of Women Against Rape (W.A.R.) established a chapter in Burlington. Currently they are working to educate women on violence. They assist in providing legal and medical assistance in the event of attack. They also have been instrumental in spawning changes in social attitudes concerning violence toward women. Their hotline number is 863-1386.

The Vermont Women's Health Center, which up until last year was located in Colchester, is another vital women's resource. They provide excellent health services of varying kinds to women for nominal fees. They also provide counseling on health matters.

Burlington has its own chapter of National Organization for Women (NOW). This nationwide organization is broad-funded. It works to unite women and to activate social reform. NOW hosts a variety of task forces such as educational task forces, pay discrimination task forces, and other social change forces.

(continued on page fifteen)

ViewsFrom A Young Woman

by Betsy Perkins

I am a fourteen year old sophomore in a public high school; I have noticed the difference in treatment among sexes in school. Most of the girls don't notice these things, but because I am a girl interested in the women's movement that is taking place, I do.

First of all, most of the sports in high school are male-oriented. A month ago our high school became one of the first schools in our area to have a girls' football team. A lot of girls thought this was great, but of course there was no tackling, just flags. They have no uniforms because the budget doesn't allow them. Instead, the money was spent on buses to go to the boys' football team's away games. The few girls that did go out for football are now considered to be tomboys and are called unfeminine. Football is not played in girls' gym classes either. One day I asked our gym teacher while we were playing crab soccer in the gym (a girls' sport) why we never played football. She replied "Football is a boys' sport. Do you want to be a boy?" Girls are required to wear gymsuits, white socks, and sneakers. They are marked down if they are not dressed this way. Boys are not.

Another sport, soccer, was just formed at our school and because of the regulations for Chapter 622, which became effective September 1, 1975, girls must be given the opportunity to join any and all teams that are open to boys. Consequently, some girls joined. After a week, all but one girl left, after one day her mother made her quit because she was the only girl. Even though Rule 622 helps, there is still more emphasis placed on boys' sports. We have to pay fifty cents admission to see a boys' basketball or football game, but no admission charges are required for a girls' basketball or football game. There are many more spectators filling the bleachers at boys' basketball games, but maybe 20 people will show up for the girls' games.

Second of all, the teachers in our school are preferential to male characters over female characters in various subjects. Many teachers reinforce stereotype roles. They channel the girls into different social roles than they do the boys. I hadn't noticed the difference between how the sexes were treated until my male history teacher made a bad remark in class one day. We were watching a film strip on European Leaders when he turned to a frame that had the pictures of two women and three men. He explained about the three men and then turned the frame. I raised my hand and asked who the women were. He replied, "Oh, just a couple of dames. Women aren't very important when it comes to history anyway." I was disgusted. I began to notice it in other classes as well. In English, our teacher would pick out books such as Little Women, The Hobbit, and A Tree Grows in Brooklyn for the girls to read and books like Patton, 2001: A Space Odyssey, and True Grit for the boys.

In the seventh grade, girls are required to take Home Economics. Did they ever realize that they may want to be carpenters? They may have thought of that, but still a girl cannot take shop until the 11th grade. It is usually expected that girls do better than boys in school work, and usually expected that boys fool around in class. If girls fool around, they are considered to be loud and cheap. I wish our schools could learn to be less male-oriented altogether. Then maybe the women could have equally as good a chance of being someone important as men do.

Women In Film

(continued from page thirteen)

Boller, professor of Education, spoke on the education of women. Upcoming guest lecturers are Professor Kaye Felt and Dr. Virginia Clark. The course entails discussions of various perceptions of women which is important for a complete understanding of the roles women have had in films.

A seminar course, such as "Women in Film," enables students to exchange intellectual pursuits as they work on projects together and individually. Because of this exchange students get to know each other which helps to establish a warm classroom atmosphere. Dr. Manchel is pleased with the class and he feels it's one which students don't want to miss. The attendance record agrees: about 98% of the class is usually present. It is too bad that more attendance records can't say the same, but perhaps this is because not many classes are like the film seminar course.

D-O-W-N-H-I-L-L—E-D-G-E—
C-E-L-E-B-R-A-T-E-S

SATURDAY
OCT. 25th
10am - 5pm

81 - 85 MAIN STREET
(next to the Ski Rack)

With door prizes and company reps and all sorts of good stuff
We're gonna have drawing★ every hour starting starting at 10AM

Just look at some of THESE PRIZES

Alpine Design Parts
Look Grand Prix Binding
C.B. Sport Warm-up Pants
Besser Competition Bindings
Salomon Team Bags and Frisbees
Burt Binding
Kneisel Double Short Ski Bags
Marker M-4 FD Binding

and if you want to know about equipment and apparel just look at these company reps who will be on hand

Olin, Dynastar, Besser, Kneisel,
Alpine Design, Kastle, Nordica, Look
Scott, Salomon, Lange, Burt, Marker,
C.B. Sport, Hot Gear

We want you to have the "Edge" this winter Come on Down, register for our door prizes, talk with some knowledgable people about ski equipment and apparel and just have a good time

COFFEE, CIDER AND DOUGHNUTS
WILL BE SERVED
★No Purchase necessary
One prize per person - not necessary to be present

10% STUDENT DISCOUNT
TO ALL AREA HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE STUDENTS

NOTICIAS DE CUERVO

Recipe #.00008

YELLOW SNOW:

1. Fill a glass with nice, clean snow. (White only, please.)
2. Add Cuervo Gold Especial.
3. See it turn yellow?
4. Put a straw in and drink.
5. If snow is unavailable, use crushed ice. Or, forget the snow, and just put a straw in the bottle. Or forget the straw and just pour some Gold in a glass. Or just have some water. Must we make all these decisions for you?

JOSE CUERVO® TEQUILA IS PROOF
IMPORTED AND BOTTLED BY W.A. TARRANT CO., INC., HARTFORD, CONN.

STEADY PART TIME AND SUMMER INCOME
AT CUTCO SALES & SALES MANAGEMENT

–EXCELLENT TRAINING & EDUCATION
–$3–7000 & INCOMES TO STUDENTS WHO QUALIFY
–EXPERIENCE NOT REQUIRED; CAR IS

Write: Cutco
Box 682
Burlington, Vermont

Karl

Karl Hess is a man with a vision of a better society, one in which science and technology would be shaped more directly and humanely to the community's needs. Unlike most visionaries, he is actively concerned with putting ideas into practice. In a disused warehouse in part of Washington's urban ghetto, he and his colleagues are trying to develop a number of "soft" technologies with which people in the neighborhood can feed, heat, and transport themselves on a community basis.

Community technology (Hess's project's name) offers at least one small alternative path for those who, while working at high skills of science, question the current corporate organization and deployment of those resources. It enables scientists, engineers, technicians and craftspeople to re-think the roles of their skills and talents while actively, scientifically, testing the material possibilities of new ways of work.

The purposes of Community Technology, according to its own description, are "to de-mystify technology, to challenge all the claimed economies of scale and to push as far as possible practical demonstrations of high technology in the direct service of human needs and imagination in an urban community."

Community Technology is attempting to develop some of the techniques envisioned in

Movement Alive

(continued from page four)

These forces are responsible for reversing legislation discriminatory to women, halting much of the derogation of women, and rescinding other negative pressures on women.

In addition to women's organizations there are a wide assortment of national and local non-feminist-oriented women's groups. There are even sorority houses associated with The University of Vermont. Each provides an unprecedented service to the women of consolidating their energies. The sororities not only sponsor activities but also actively participate in much needed social service projects. They are an integral part of University life as are the other aforementioned organizations.

Cynic

The CYNIC Photography Co
1. The con
University of V will be consider themselves by t
2. The pic
following esteem subjects. The c any picture no
and landscapes.
3. All pho will be approxi
to the num photographer
4. The pic
the Vermont C
the photograp
5. The V
the photograp
signed by th photograph.
7. Picture
Photography
any other p
Cynic.
8. Photo and competiti
9. Judges
10. All
Cynic office
Billings Cente
11. The telephone nu on the back with a title.
12. De

PLA

Karl Hess

Karl Hess is a man with a vision of a better society, one in which science and technology would be shaped more directly and humanely to the community's needs. Unlike most visionaries, he is actively concerned with putting ideas into practice. In a disused warehouse in part of Washington's urban ghetto, he and his colleagues are trying to develop a number of "soft" technologies with which people in the neighborhood can feed, heat, and transport themselves on a community basis.

Community technology (Hess's project's name) offers at least one small alternative path for those who, while working at high skills or science, question the current corporate organization and deployment of those resources. It enables scientists, engineers, technicians and craftspeople to re-think the roles of their skills and talents while actively, or scientifically, testing the material possibilities of new ways of work.

The purposes of Community Technology, according to its own description, are "to de-mystify technology, to challenge all of the claimed economies of scale, and to push as far as possible practical demonstrations of high technology in the direct service of human needs and imagination in an urban community."

Community Technology is attempting to develop some of the techniques envisioned in an urban utopia, with emphasis on rooftop gardening, basement fish farming, and solar heating.

"A lot of foundations actively dislike what we are doing because we are saying that people can take their lives absolutely into their own hands. Foundations resent that because it seems very anti-elitist. Elitists think that the great engine of progress, science and technology, can only be grasped by a very few hands."

Community self help is a tradition with deep roots in American history. An urban setting may prove difficult ground on which to implement it, but the tide of the times may be moving in favor of many of the things that Hess is trying to do. "It's like asking if there is going to be a flood, and building something that will float with it," Hess remarks. "People say you are a damn fool wasting your time, and maybe so. But that is a small investment."

Karl Hess served on the White House staff under Eisenhower and helped write two Republican national platforms in 1960 and 1964. He is the author of Dear America.

Come listen to Karl Hess on Monday night, October 27, at the Living/Learning Center Fireplace Lounge at 8:00 p.m. Refreshments will be served. Everyone is invited; free admission.

What Goes In:
Losing Weight Without Losing Your Mind

by Ginny Sickles and Cindy Theall
L/L Nutrition Program

How many times have you heard that the best way to lose weight is to eat a balanced diet and exercise? This is true but we both know that it is not easy to find the will power or time to do either.

Seventy-nine million of us, nearly half the United States population, are overweight. In metropolitan areas, one-third to one-half of all adults are obese. This makes quite an audience for the "Lose Weight Quick" promoters who constantly bombard us with advertisements on the latest ways to fight the Battle of the Bulge. Our most basic sense of logic should tell us that these quick deals are frauds but we believe them because we want to. We want to believe that it is possible to rid ourselves of all the excess weight without the torture of months of dieting. What we will end up losing is money, not weight, until we realize that dieting is a long-range effort.

Why do we eat the way we do and how does this cause the pounds to add up? Our work or academic schedule usually has us rushing in the morning. For a large majority of us, this means a quick cup of coffee for breakfast. This is like a trickle of gasoline for a high-powered car except that the car conks out. Our body starts breaking down its own reserves to see us through to lunch. Lunch for many of us is a quick meal sandwiched between classes, a "McDonald's" special from the Den or, worse yet, a bag of potato chips and a TAB. By dinnertime, you might be ravenous. At dinner you can sit and devour catsup-covered meatloaf and then wind up the day with a Domino's large cheese pizza at midnight. You console yourself with the fact that you haven't eaten much all day, why not? In actuality, you are probably eating as many calories as you would have eaten at three solid meals. You are also causing your body undue stress by not eating breakfast. Evidence indicates that calories eaten in the evening are not utilized by the body as energy as efficiently as if they were broken up over the course of a day.

For those of us who are just slightly overweight, we look at dieting in a skeptical manner. We do not want undue suffering but we do want to fit into that bikini without looking like an over-the-hill belly dancer. We try skipping breakfast and lunch, eating just grapefruit for two weeks, go the low carbohydrate or low fat route or eat all we want and spend $50 and let Elaine Powers reposition the curves. Some of us lose weight after two weeks only to be replaced in two days. This is what nutritionist Jean Mayer calls the "Rhythm Method of Girth Control," lose a little, gain a little more. Most of us, however, end up feeling lousy, our skin breaks out and the bulges remain.

Why don't these methods work? As soon as we rescind our grapefruit regimen and start eating normally (probably a little abnormally since that three-layer chocolate cake looks mighty good after two weeeks of grapefruit), the pounds go right back on. Often we are not losing fat at all; we are losing muscle and body fluids. Besides, none of us enjoys giving up foods we like and we find it difficult to stick to diets which work on this principle. On the other hand, don't let anyone fool you with the "eat all you want and lose weight" deal either since the $10 you spend for the secret method will be the major loss.

If you are serious about losing weight, consult a dietician and physician. Successful dieting includes exercise and you need to know the shape you are in before you can be the shape you want. A good diet should take into consideration what you enjoy and concentrate on reducing amounts of food rather than eliminating food groups or entire meals.

Much of the heartache of dieting and what seems to be pointless exercising is our physical and emotional discomfort. Perhaps one of the first steps toward a more physically fit body is to love ourselves. Our society has given many of us the attitude that the body is bad, and that intellect and spirit are good.

We cannot separate, though, body, spirit and intellect. We must treat our body with respect so that our mind will function at capacity. If our body build is nowhere near that of a lanky fashion model, why should we literally consume ourselves physically and mentally with an obsession of 32-22-32 as beauty? On the other hand, we must care enough about our body to realize that obesity is a health hazard for men and women alike. Proper dieting and exercise can be a successful means of controlling the fat crisis 99 per cent of the time. But like anything that is worthwhile, it takes time. In our rushed world, we need to step off the train long enough to look at ourselves in the mirror and ask ourselves to take the time to care about ourselves now. Physical measurements are only relative to the inner satisfaction of living with them. The vital statistics should read 36 per cent physically fit, 24 per cent satisfaction with exercise and eating patterns, 36 per cent love for one's body, and a little nonconformity to make a 100 percent individual. Dieting cannot be one great heroic effort which will make everything right. Your past lifestyle has put you where you are, so that reducing successfully will only come about when you realize it is a physical and mental change whose reward can be life itself.

Rules For Ariel
1976 Cover Contest

The cover for ARIEL 1976 will be chosen from those designs submitted by students in the ARIEL 1976 COVER CONTEST. Entries should meet the following criteria:

1. Entrants must be members of the Student Association of the University of Vermont.
2. The entry must be 9 inches by 12 inches or some proportion thereof, larger than 9 inches by 12 inches.
3. The entrants are free to choose whatever colors they would like. Colors chosen for final use will be made in consultation with the editors of ARIEL 1976.
4. The artwork should be submitted on heavy stock paper.
5. The artwork need not mention ARIEL 1976.
6. Entries must be clearly marked on the reverse side with the entrant's name, address, and phone number.
7. The deadline for all entries is December 1, 1975.
8. All entries should be brought to the ARIEL office in lower Billings or left in the ARIEL mailbox at the Student Activities desk.
9. Credit will be given for the cover design in ARIEL 1976.
10. Judges will include the editorial staff of ARIEL 1976 and their decision will be final.
11. Artwork will be returned upon request only.
12. The prize for the winning design will be $25.00 and the winning artwork will become the property of ARIEL 1976.

All questions should be directed to the ARIEL office in Billings Center. Phone: 656-2036.

NRC Awards

The National Research Council (NRC) announces the Research Associateship Programs for 1976. These programs provide scientists and engineers with opportunities for postdoctoral research on problems in many fields of Atmospheric and Earth Sciences, Chemistry, Engineering, Environmental Sciences, Life Sciences, Mathematics, Physics, and Space Sciences.

The NRC administers the Research Associateship Programs on behalf of and in cooperation with selected federal research organizations, which have laboratories at about 80 geographic locations in the United States.

Appointments are awarded on a competitive basis. The competition is open to recent recipients of the doctorate and in some cases to senior investigators. Some are open to non-U.S. citizens also.

Approximately 250 to 300 new awards will be made in 1974. Stipends (subject to income tax) will range from $15,000 upwards. Grants will be provided for family relocation and for professional travel during tenure.

Postmark deadline for applications is January 15, 1976. Awards will be announced in April.

Further information concerning application materials and specific opportunities for research is available from the Associateship Office, JH 606-P, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20418.

Men's Liberation
Movement Alive

(continued from page fourteen)

These forces are responsible for reversing legislation discriminatory to women, for halting much of media's derogation of women, and for rescinding other negative pressures on women.

In addition to these women's organizations there are a wide assortment of both national and local non-feminist-oriented women's groups. There are several sorority houses associated with The University of Vermont. Each provides an unprecedented service to many women of consolidating female energies. The sororities not only sponsor activities but they also actively participate in much needed social welfare projects. They are an integral part of University life as are the other aforementioned organizations.

If a whole year is devoted to women, why not devote a whole year to men? Women speak of oppression. They tell of legal injustices, biological handicaps and social inequities. But men are oppressed too, and often they don't realize it. Men are taught from infancy not to cry, to be strong, to be aggressive, to mow the lawn, to be mechanical, to be involved in sports, to orient themselves toward a career goal so that they can ultimately support a wife and several kids. Is this what all men want? What a disheartening thought to know that a man's hard-earned income will be discretionally spent by a woman at home on several kids with little or no say-so from the man? Husbands are legally bound to protect and support their wife. They must provide her bed and board. A portion of his inheritance is automatically bequeathed to her. If divorced, he has less chance of child custody and he must pay alimony.

How awful that a man can not cry without the threat of suffering public humiliation! It's sheer myth that men are emotionless and heartless beings. If people accepted the truth that men are emotionally equal to women, men would be a lot better off.

Why must a man be the family breadwinner? Often, a man is needlessly oppressed if he is anything but rich. Success and success, of course, is measured by the size of the paycheck which is rapidly disseminated amongst several other people.

Imagine the horror of the draft. Before it was eliminated, each man's chances of having to go to war were doubled because women, half the population, were automatically disqualified by sex.

Suppose the male baby did live. If while he was a youngster he wanted to bake brownies so that he could eat them, he couldn't because of the degrading feminine associations.

Then, after a brownie-less phase, he's subject to a surge of acne. A higher balance of male hormones have been linked to acne break-outs and he can't cover them with make-up, as can his feminine counterparts. And despite his acne, he has to ask the girls to dance at the school dances, and if there's one he particularly likes, he has to pay her way which means not only emptying the garbage to make enough money, but he has to rake the leaves.

It's fairly obvious that men need liberating too. So why not an International Men's Year so that men can improve their status? – but better yet, why not International People's Year?

Cynic Annual Photo and Writing Contest

The CYNIC announces the Fifth Annual CYNIC Photography Contest. The rules are as follows:

1. The contest is open to all students of the University of Vermont who are amateurs. (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking pictures.)
2. The pictures will be divided into the three following categories: faces, landscaping, and other subjects. The category of other subjects will include any picture not included in the categories of faces and landscapes.
3. All photographs will be black and white and will be approximately 8 X 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.
4. The picture submitted will be the property of the Vermont Cynic, which will have the consent of the photographer to publish them in the newspaper.
5. The Vermont Cynic has the right to request the photographer to submit a subject release form signed by those people who may appear in the photograph.
7. Pictures entered in the Fifth Annual Cynic Photography Contest could not have been entered in any other photography contest sponsored by the Cynic.
8. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition by a board of judges.
9. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
10. All photographs should be placed in the Cynic office or in the Cynic box at the main desk in Billings Center.
11. The photographer's name, address, and telephone number should be lightly printed in pencil on the back of each photograph submitted, along with a title, if any.
12. Deadline for entries will be November 27, 1975.
13. One winner will be chosen from each category and the winners will be announced in the December 12 issue of the Cynic.
14. The winner in each category will receive $25.00.
15. All questions should be referred directly to the Cynic Office.

Deadline: Thursday, Nov. 27, Noon

RULES

1. Three categories - short story, essay and poetry.
2. All UVM students, full and part time, may enter.
3. All entries must be typed, double spaced.
4. All entries to be handed in to Cynic office with name and address on separate paper.
5. Limit of 15 pages on short story, 7 pages for essay.
6. Judges will be announced in next week's issue.
7. Winners will be announced in the December 12 issue.
8. First prize in each category: $25.00.

Editor's Note: If anyone did not receive a prize from last semester's contest, please contact Nancy Jansen at the Cynic Office as soon as possible.

••• CLASSIFIED •••

Job opportunity – dancer needed at Joe Barry's on Williston Rd. 4–7 p.m. Excellent pay. Contact Joe Barry's or the Cynic offices.

For Sale: Hanson Exhibition Ski Boots Used 1 year. Shell no. 2 Fits size 5½–8. Will throw in $15 rewaxing for free. $95.00 Call Don at 863–9881 or 864–6312.

For Sale: 1 pair Chippews boots – excellent condition. $18.00 Fits women's sizes 8–8½. Also 1 pair sling back Earth shoes fits women's sizes 7½–8 Excellent condition. $16.00 Call 862–5388.

Wanted: Supplies for a playskool program: carpeting, curtains, cushions, children's tables and chairs, bookshelves, children's books and records, Marilyn, 658-0712

Snow Tires for Sale – 13-inch Pirelli's Excellent Condition. Price Negotiable. Call Richard 862–3913

For Sale: Sony Cassette Tape Recorder. Runs on batteries, also with cord and microphones – in very good condition. Can record a lecture from the back of a large lecture hall. $45.00 call Nancy –4284.

1 pr. Nordica Astrals size 5, new bladders, never been foamed $35.00. 1 "Hoshbar" down sleeping bag. Worth over $100.00 new, will sell for $50.00, call 434-3297 after 6:00 p.m. Gail English, Box 336, Richmond, Vermont.

For Sale: Head H R P never been used or mounted 207 cm. $85.00 call after 6 p.m. 864–4320 Will.

Lost – White scrimshaw piece with black ship engraving. Between Library and Terrill Hall 10–16 night. Great personal value. Call Catherine 862–0219.

Extra Income – great opportunity to earn those extra $ – all training provided, part or full time, work your own hours. For appointment, contact Laura Nielsen, 656-2037.

For Sale: Salomon 502's – $35.00. Atomic Expert skis, good condition – $65; 195 cm beat ST-650's, – $15; 2 pairs Look Nevatic SS bindings, $35; Dolomite Sintesi Comp boots, fits 9-10, good condition, $60; Salomon 40 toes, $10. All prices negotiable, call ext. 2289. Ask for Robert in 337, evenings.

Wanted Roommate – male or female $33 a month, own bedroom, stop by at 53 N. Champlain and ask for Tom or Ruben.

For Sale: Onitsuka Tiger X-C shoes, used once, New: $25.00, – now: $20.00. American size 9, call 863-3623.

For Sale: 1 pair skis, Rossi 102's, used twice, drilled for Marker M-4's, Racing stock, 207 cm, New $180, now $80. 1 G.E. Clock Radio, 1 year old, needs repairs New $35, now $5. 1 Gerry Down Parka, blue, very warm. Excellent condition. New $80.00 now $40.00 Call Dave Gates 864-9768.

Stereo Components – 20–50% off list. Major Brands. – All Guaranteed Call day at 862–9172 Representative of K+L Sound Services.

PLATINUM ITALIC SET

Contains a fountain pen, five Italic nibs, and instruction manual, all for only $5.00... At art material & pen shops, college book stores... or send check to Pinnacle Corp., 132 West 22 St., N.Y., N.Y. 10011 Add 50 cents for handling.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.

SPECIALIST IN FOREIGN CAR REPAIR

ENGINE REBUILDING - TIRES - STEAM CLEANING - UNDERCOATING - ALIGNMENT - DYNA BALANCING

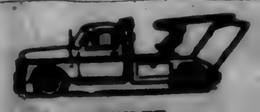
560X15 SNOW TIRES
29.95 ! inc. fet & mtng
Fits most VW Bugs & Saab V4
862-7686
878-8607
ROUTE 2 WILLISTON, VT.

FUEL INJECTION ANALYZER

WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS

COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

INCLUDING THE FINEST IN RADIAL TIRES



SHOCK FREE WHEEL SERVICE

MILLS & GREER

The first space age skate
LANGE

Cooper Squash Rackets by Bancroft
Spalding
Saranac Handball Gloves
Voit Rackets and Balls

MY STICK IS TITAN

Lange Hockey Skates
Hyde Figure Skates

adidas

Wilson Adidas Superstar Basketball Shoes

Rugby Shirts In Many Colors
Hooded Sweatshirts with Zippers

Tiger, Nike, Adidas, & Puma Running Shoes

MILLS & GREER
East On Williston Rd. Across From Howard Johnsons

L'etranger

by Angelo Di Censo

People behave very strangely when they meet someone that is coming toward them. Some people become very uncomfortable and try not to look at the person that is coming toward them. Yet, other people seem to enjoy contact with others and will usually smile or say hello to someone they meet. These varied and strange reactions are accompanied by certain modes of dress, modes of walking, and the general manner in which a person carries himself.

A person is approaching me with eyes down, fixed to the ground. His books are neatly stacked under his right arm, the largest on the bottom, with smaller books on top of it. I can see the muscles of his hand strained and tight around his books. The strain is apparent in his walk for his knees hardly bend as he walks toward me. He raises his head, sees me, and quickly fixes his eyes to the ground almost afraid to look. I can see the tension building in this person by the way he begins to clutch his books, by the increased stiffness of his walk, by the quick movements of his downcast eyes. He passes by me and I notice the wrinkled muscles above his eyes, the tightly drawn mouth and stiff neck. He gave no sign, except for one, that there was a person, a human being next to him a second ago. As he passes me he quickly looks down at my feet. The danger had passed; the possible contact with another person was successfully avoided. What is gained by avoiding people except for mental anguish?

Another person is approaching me with her head held high. She has long blond hair that is being blown around in all directions by the wind. Using both hands, she carries her books in front of herself, taking full advantage of her arms. Her steps are long and sort of awkward and it seems that each step she takes is different from her previous step. I see no tension in her walk nor in her facial expressions. She sees me from a distance and I notice a slight smile on her face. As we approach each other, she looks at me with a curious expression, a very happy expression. Her smile, which is a true and happy smile, seems to increase as she approaches me. Finally we meet each other, I say hello, and she greets me with a laughing hello that seems to say, "Yes I know you could say hello because I understand what you are thinking." I walk away from this person feeling great. (She would probably say the same thing.) It was not difficult for this person to walk by me, there was no anguish, only a cheerful feeling.

If all the people that walk with their heads down, eyes fixed to the ground and muscles tense, were forced to become aware of their approach to others, we might have a lot of people laughing at themselves. Too many people are holding themselves back; keeping themselves tense and closed, instead of being like the cheerful blond haired girl. There is a certain joy gained from coming in contact with others and I see little purpose in avoiding another human being. Tomorrow, or the next day, take a walk on the UVM campus, and notice the reactions of people you encounter. See the needless tension in some people and the great openness in others. See the rigid muscles, the stiff walks and unhappy faces. For God's sake, say hello to the next person you meet.

Internship In Brooklyn

Each semester Congresswoman Holtzman invited 3 students to work full-time in her District office in Brooklyn on case work, community issues and research in addition to other office responsibilities.

Our experience indicates that this semester program is more satisfactory to students than one lasting a month or six weeks or only a few days a week. The semester program can be combined with a summer internship, if the student wishes.

Because our office receives so many applications for internships, it is helpful if we hear from students applying for the spring semester as early in the fall as possible. We require a personal interview, if feasible, either in New York or Washington to help us evaluate each application.

Students can apply for a semester by sending a letter and a resume to Ms. Marilyn Shapiro, Administrative Assistant, Office of Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, 1027 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

People's Lib

by Kim Hagen

Assertive training is teaching people to defend their points of view. It teaches people to take their lives into their own hands instead of being swayed by what others want them to do. It's learning to keep personal and psychological space so as to develop the importance of being an individual.

Don't be trapped by sexist stereotyping. Because this society is a generation nurtured by television, we have fallen prey to media's stereotype brainwashing which reinforces sex roles. Between the dillemma of Lois Lane to the sick motherliness of June Lockhart and Debbie Reynolds, women have been taught what personality to affect while around males, rather than learning to behave as independent, mind-possessing individuals. Likewise, males have been coerced to imitate some machismo such as Clark Kent or Clint Eastwood. Stereotyping has told us that if a man does not have the upper hand with a female, it means that either the man is a coward or strictly a "mama's boy." Now, how can people work together to undo the damage of almost twenty years of T.V. brainwashing? It is a question which all people must confront because we are all affected by this brainwashing.

What we have to do is start asserting ourselves as human beings. We must learn to speak what we feel, think and opine, and not be thrown by other's anger or rejection of our statements. That's their problem. If what you think makes sense to you, then you have the right to stand your ground. You don't always have to be rational or fair, so long as you accept the responsibility for the consequences of your actions. Be persistent and demanding, but be careful: don't be over-aggressive to the point of hostility. It turns others off fast. Be forthright in expressing your views. The emphasis is on your expectations, not the other's motives.

Several universities and counseling centers are now offering courses in assertive training. Many are geared toward both sexes but predominantly they are geared toward women. This is because traditionally women have held unassertive roles. The Women's Liberation movement has created new roles for women, but it has not done a good job in perfecting within women the skills needed to enact these roles. Assertive training courses focus on role-playing.

Homework assignments are to be assertive in real life situations; saying 'no' to your friends if they want you to accompany them to a bar when you just don't want to do that; telling your boss that you feel you deserve a raise because another worker has a higher salary and you do the same amount of work, if not more.

This is the essence of assertive training. Although many of these training courses have been formed and sponsored by the Women's Liberation movement, they have been recognized as invaluable courses by the field of psychology. Assertive training is vital instruction for all people, necessary to encourage individuality.

Plan Your Skiing Early

by Scott Curtis

The words "Vermont" and "skiing" are very closely related in the minds of many Northeasterners. Therefore a substantial number of high school youths choose to enroll in UVM with the vision of skiing at will throughout the snowy winters.

But the past few years have shown that even the snow isn't reliable. But, even if there were powder from November to May, skiing for UVM students would still be a complicated matter. To get the most out of skiing without going broke, one needs a lot of forsthought, planning and luck.

There are six major skiing areas within an hour's ride from Burlington. These areas are Bolton, Stowe, Smuggler's Notch, Sugarbush, Glen Ellen and Mad River Glen. There are a variety of lift ticket plans and some choices of transportation.

Smuggler's Notch consists of three mountains: Morse, Sterling and Madonna. Each offers beginning, intermediate, and expert skiing. Smuggler's Notch offers special student plans. Their $10 'Bash Badge' gives one $5 weekday skiing and $8 weekend skiing, and half price lessons and rentals. They also have parties and specials for badge holders. In addition they have weekend bus plans. The badge is available until November 1. Smuggler's also offers students a complete season's pass for $165 versus the usual price of $250.

UVM offers one good method of getting on the slopes at Smuggler's. Through the Physical Education Department, any student can sign up for one afternoon per week of ski lessons and skiing for one credit. The course will run for nine weeks starting next semester. Two busses leave here at 12:30 and return around six. This provides nine afternoons of skiing for about $54. ($36 bus ticket plus $2 for each lift ticket.)

Bolton Valley is the area nearest Burlington. It is less than a half-hour away. It is the smallest of the six mountains. Bolton offers a $10 discount pass which entitles one to $5 weekday and $7.50 weekend skiing. Bolton has limited night skiing which is $2.50 with a pass. They also offer students a $75 midweek pass and a full season pass for $125. There is no deadline to purchase any of these plans.

Mad River Glen is about 45 minutes from Burlington. It is a tough mountain and not recommended for beginners. The inexpensive way to ski Mad River is to buy their midweek pass early. This pass entitles unlimited midweek skiing and $8 weekend skiing. The pass costs $70 until Oct. 15, $80 until Dec. 1, and $90 dollars thereafter. Transportation can often be arranged with others as many UVM students opt for this plan.

Glen Ellen and Sugarbush are in the vicinity of Mad River. Glen Ellen has the largest vertical drop of all the mountains in the Burlington area. They offer a season's pass for $225, and a weekday pass for $100, with 5% discounts until Nov. 15. They offer no student specials. Sugarbush is the distinguished mountain of the area. Its season rate is $285, and no midweek pass is offered. Its daily rate is $12, with one dollar off for those who have student ID's.

Stowe, of course, is the most exciting mountain around. It offers the toughest and most varied expert skiing. A full season's pass is $325, the midweek, $175. Every good skier should plan at least one trip to Stowe.

In sum, one can do a lot of fine skiing from UVM. Yet most mountains will get you for about $12 for each day on their slopes. So, to ski without going broke, one must plan classes, vacations, purchase of tickets, and transportation months in advance.

Harriers Defeat UMass, UNH

On Saturday, October 18th, the UVM Cross-Country team defeated the University of Massachusetts and the University of New Hampshire, 37-38-49, in Durham, New Hampshire.

Although UMass, who was ranked fifth in the nation last year, did not run at full strength, this victory means a lot to the Cats as they prepare for the Yankee Conference and New England Championship Meets. This was the first time UVM has beaten the Minutemen from Massachusetts since the coaching days of Archie T. Post.

The meet was run in the midst of a rainstorm that flooded the whole Eastern seaboard last weekend. Almost one quarter of the 4.7 mile course was covered with water, and the rest was very muddy as the Cats warmed up.

The runners stayed in a pretty tight group until after the first mile and a half since no one wanted to burn out and be slowed down later by the mud and water. At this point, 1974 Yankee Conference Champion, George Reed of New Hampshire, John Sheer of UMass, and Lynn Capen of Vermont set the pace and led the pack throughout the race. Considering the closeness of the score, each UVM runner played an essential role in the victory. Head Coach Bill Nedde was impressed with the "shoulder to shoulder running" displayed by the Cats, as each runner came across the finish ahead of his man.

The Catamounts will host the University of Maine on Archie Post Field at 11:00 a.m. on Saturday October 25, in their next competition.

RESULTS:
(1) Reed, UNH – 25:11; (2) Capen, UVM – 25:27; (3) Sheer, Mass – 25:38; (4) Paraccione, Mass – 25:40; (5) Milligan, UVM – 25:45; (6) Weith, UVM – 25:48; (7) Staples, Mass – 25:49; (8) Madden, UNH – 25:53; (9) Driscoll, Mass – 25:55; (10) Crossman, UNH – 26:07; (11) Russell, UVM – 26:14; (12) Stoehr, UVM – 26:16.
OTHER UVM FINISHERS:
(16) Elliot – 26:32; (21) Raner – 27:09; (25) Caplin – 28:59.

Phys. Ed. Registration

Physical Education Registration is to be held in Patrick Gym on Monday October 27 and Tuesday, October 28.

1. Select activity of your choice from printed class schedule.
2. Report to Patrick at the time and day the class is scheduled to meet. Monday-Wednesday, come on Monday; Tuesday-Thursday, come on Tuesday.
3. Classes meeting one day per week, Monday, Wednesday or Friday, report on Monday; Tuesday or Thursday classes, come on Tuesday.
4. Evening classes, 6:30, Monday or Wednesday, come on Monday. Tuesday or Thursday classes, come on Tuesday.
5. Physical Education major classes are open to all students, but majors have priority.

Americans Favor System Overhaul

(CPS) - A majority of Americans favor major changes in our economic system, including employee ownership and control of U.S. companies, according to a nation-wide poll conducted by the People's Bicentennial Commission.

Among the results are the following:

33% of the public believes that the capitalist system is on the decline;

57% agree that both the Democrat and Republican parties favor big business;

58% believe that big business dominates the actions of our public officials, while 25% believe that public officials dominate the actions of America's major corporations;

66% favor employee ownership and control of U.S. companies;

74% favor putting local consumers on the boards of businesses operating in their areas.

The results indicate that Americans are much more willing to experiment with the economy than most politicians think.

Winter Sports Luncheon

A pre-season winter sport's booster luncheon, designed to introduce coaches of each of the men's athletic teams, has been scheduled for November 12th at the Marsh Dining Hall on campus beginning at noon. Coaches of hockey, basketball, ski, swim, and indoor track will give brief presentations of their programs and there will be a question and answer period which will follow.

Cost of the buffet luncheon is $3.00 per person, but interested UVM students may use their Saga coupons. Reservations are appreciated. Call Dick Whittier, Director of Sports Information, 109 So. Prospect Street, 656-2005.

Women's X-Country

While most of the students of UVM celebrated last Friday tipping a few at F.A.D.C., the Women's Cross-Country Team travelled to New Hampshire to compete in a tri-meet with Dartmouth and the University of Massachusetts. The women took second place, edged out by a strong bunch of UMass runners, with Dartmouth in third.

As usual, Captain Carol Degan blazed the 3 mile course in record time, 18:21, to take first place. Next for the Cats was Jeannie Crane placing third with a time of 18:56. One minute behind was Kathryn Glenney in 5th place, followed by the UMass pack. Bev Howell finished next for UVM, with Jane Griffith coming in next as fifth woman. Other UVM finishers included Pam Weiss, Bizzy Kellam, Diana Potter, Maureen Horan and Joan Griffin. Martha Hoffman, out with a sprain, was missed by all.

The race was held on the golf course, and there was no varied terrain. Rather, the runners had only to content with long hills, irate golfers, and hefty huskies.

The final score was tallied with UMass in first with 27 points, UVM second with 37, and Dartmouth third with 75. The UVM runners were a little disappointed with their first defeat of the season, but have hopes of looking "lean and mean" when they come up against Williams this Wednesday. Since Williams previously defeated UMass, it could be a real challenge to the runners.

WRUV Sports

WRUV-AM will be broadcasting Saturday's University of Maine-UVM Soccer game. Due to the success of the 1975 Soccer Cats WRUV feels that this Yankee Conference game is extremely important to the Cats in their quest for the Conference title. The broadcast begins at 12:45 Saturday with the pre-game show, from Centennial Field.

Middlebury

The rival match against Middlebury College did not turn out as Vermont's women's tennis team had hoped. With their season's experience behind them, Vermont took to the courts with hopes to revenge their earlier 5-2 loss to Middlebury. An injury to a UVM player, resulting in a defaulted match, gave the overall win to Middlebury by the difference of 4-3.

Vermont's number one, two, and four singles veterans Bloom, Mullen, and Hanafee failed to withstand their tough Middlebury opponents. Bloom was defeated in a close three-set match, as Mullen and Hanafee were downed by narrow margins in both their two-set matches. Freshman Melaney Carbone split sets with her Middlebury opponent, and with only one game played in the third set, she succumbed to a slight knee injury, causing the defaulted match to Middlebury. With hopes that her injury is not serious, Carbone should be back in action for Tuesday's match with Colby-Sawyer (New Hampshire).

The strong freshman player, Sissy Steinbreder, came through with a decisive win in her number three singles match. Steinbreder joined the UVM women's tennis team this season with a solid game, which she has strengthened throughout the season. Her victory stood as the sole singles win for UVM.

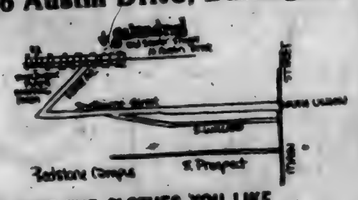
In the doubles tennis action, despite their hard-earned 3-set Vermont victories, the team of Jeany-Palmer and Stanton-Rich could not capture the overall win for UVM. The women's tennis team stands with a season's record of 3 wins and 3 losses. On Tuesday (Oct. 21) they play Colby-Sawyer College in the final match of the season. A combined team effort can secure this victory, leaving the UVM netters on the winning side of their 1975 season.

Coach Marilyn Chase will

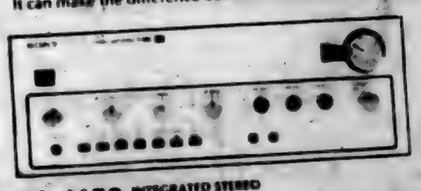
Syracuse University 1976
Spring Semester Abroad
FLORENCE
Italian, FineArts, History, Political Science
LONDON
English, Political Science, Drama, Art Communications
MADRID
Spanish, Language, & Literature, Economics, Anthropology
STRASBOURG
French Language & Literature, Religion, History
AMSTERDAM
History, Fine Arts, Anthropology, Dutch Culture, Sociology
"Applications Due Soon,,"
Information & Application
DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS ABROAD
335 Comstock Avenue
Syracuse, New York
13210
(Tel. 315-423-3471)

CAREER IN MINISTRY
...in HOLY CROSS, a religious community of men serving the community of man as teachers, counselors, parish priests, campus ministers, ministers of social concern and overseas missions.
for brochure write:
HOLY CROSS FATHERS
BOX C
835 Clinton Avenue
Bridgeport, Conn. 06604

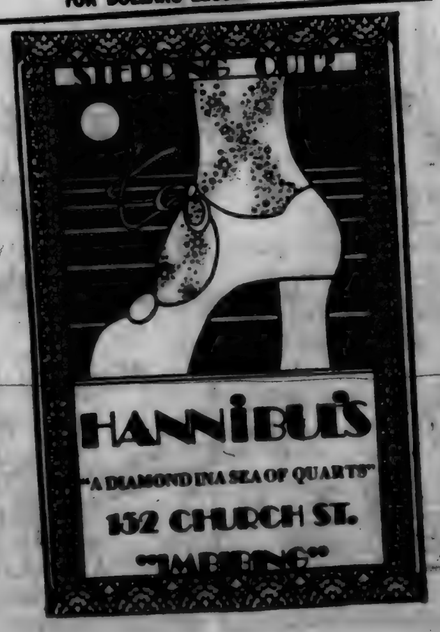
galandriel
Featuring Indian and Mexican Clothes at Discount Prices
Also beautiful Tapestries & Jewelry
Located in the Scooter Shoppe at 16 Austin Drive, Burlington.



WE HAVE THE CLOTHES YOU LIKE FOR DOLLARS LESS!!!

Watts the problem? A Sony amplifier is the answer.
When an amplifier starts to add things to the music that wasn't there, that's bad. Or when it can't handle high's or low's that's bad too. With a Sony integrated stereo amplifier you get it straight... nothing added or taken away until you decide to. And when you do, there's a full array of tone and balance controls to let you do just that. So know what you're getting out of your amplifier. Get a Sony integrated stereo amplifier. It can make the difference between music and noise.


TA-4650 INTEGRATED STEREO AMPLIFIER
- Newly developed true complementary vertical FET power amplifier stage, for the natural, high definition triode sound
- Direct coupled power amplifier stage
- Inputs for 2 phono sources, tuner, 2 aux. sources, 2 tape playback sources and external adaptor
- Preamp outputs and power amp inputs
- Direct coupled FET amplifiers in tone control and buffer stages
- Phono stage with newly developed LEC (low emitter concentration) transistors coupled directly to a low signal V-FET
- Tape monitor for 2 recorders and independent tape dubbing switch
- Precision volume control with muting switch
"IT'S A SONY"
CREATIVE SOUND
NEXT TO E-MART • S. BURLINGTON, VT.



SOCCER
UVM
VS
MAINE
Sat. 1 pm
WRUV-AM
580 am
91.1 cable fm

Fujicolor II 35 mm 36 ex. $1.95
Fujicolor II 110 12 ex. $1.15
Fujichrome R100 36 ex. $2.35
Come and See
the Fantastic ST901
LED Readout
Fully electronic speeds infinitly variable from 20 sec to 1/1000
115 S. Winooski
PhotoGarden PhotoGarden PhotoGarden PhotoGarden PhotoGarden PhotoGarden PhotoGarden PhotoGarden PhotoGarden

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal

ly

g and $8 weekend skiing.
pass costs $70 until Oct.
$80 until Dec. 1, and $90
lare thereafter.
portation can often be ged with others so many d students opt for this en Ellen and Sugarbush in the vicinity of Mad

r. Glen Ellen has the st vertical drop of all the ntains in the Burlington
. They offer a season's pass
$225, and a weekday pass
$100, with 5% discounts il Nov. 15. They offer no ent specials. Sugarbush is distinguished mountain of area. Its season rate is 5, and no midweek pass is ered. Its daily rate is $12, h one dollar off for those o have student ID's.
Stowe, of course, is the most ating mountain around. It ers the toughest and most ed expert skiing. A full son's pass is $325, the dweek, $175. Every good er should plan at least one p to Stowe.
In sum, one can do a lot of e skiing from UVM. Yet ost mountains will get you r about $12 for each day on eir slopes. So, to ski without ing broke, one must plan ases, vacations, purchase of kets, and transportation
onths in advance.

ictory. Head Coach Bill Nedde as impressed with the
'shoulder to shoulder running"
displayed by the Cats, as each runner came across the finish head of his man.
The Catamounts will host the University of Maine on Archie Post Field at 11:00 a.m. on Saturday October 25, in their next competition.
RESULTS:
(1) Reed, UNH – 25:11; (2)
Capen, UVM – 25:27; (3)
Shoer, Mass – 25:38; (4)
Paraccione, Mass – 25:40; (5)
Milligan, UVM – 25:45; (6)
Weith, UVM – 25:48; (7)
Staples, Mass – 25:49; (8)
Madden, UNH – 25:53; (9)
Driscoll, Mass – 25:55; (10)
Crossman, UNH – 26:07; (11)
Russell, UVM – 26:14; (12)
Stoehr, UVM – 26:16.
OTHER UVM FINISHERS:
(16) Elliot – 26:32; (21)
Raner – 27:09; (25) Caplin – 28:59.

ts Luncheon

question and answer period which will follow.

Cost of the buffet luncheon is $3.00 per person, but interested UVM students may use their Sage coupons. Reservations are appreciated. Call Dick Whittier, Director of Sports Information, 109 So. Prospect Street, 656-2005.

X-Country

finished next for UVM, with Jane Griffith coming in next as fifth woman. Other UVM finishers included Pam Weiss, Bizzy Kellam, Diana Potter, Maureen Horan and Joan Griffin. Martha Hoffman, out with a sprain, was missed by all.

The race was held on the golf course, and there was no varied terrain. Rather, the runners had only to contend with long hills, irate golfers, and hefty huskies.

The final score was tallied with UMass in first with 27 points, UVM second with 37, and Dartmouth third with 75. The UVM runners were a little disappointed with their first defeat of the season, but have hopes of looking "lean and mean" when they come up against Williams this Wednesday. Since Williams previously defeated UMass, it could be a real challenge to the runners.

white stag
speedo
Men's & Ladies
RACING SUITS
The Royal
96 Church St.
Downtown Burlington
Open Daily 9:30 'til 5:30 P.M.
Wednesday 'til 9 P.M.

Middlebury Edges UVM Women

The rival match against Middlebury College did not turn out as Vermont's women's tennis team had hoped. With their season's experience behind them, Vermont took to the courts with hopes to avenge their earlier 5-2 loss to Middlebury. An injury to a UVM player, resulting in a defaulted match, gave the overall win to Middlebury by the difference of 4-3.

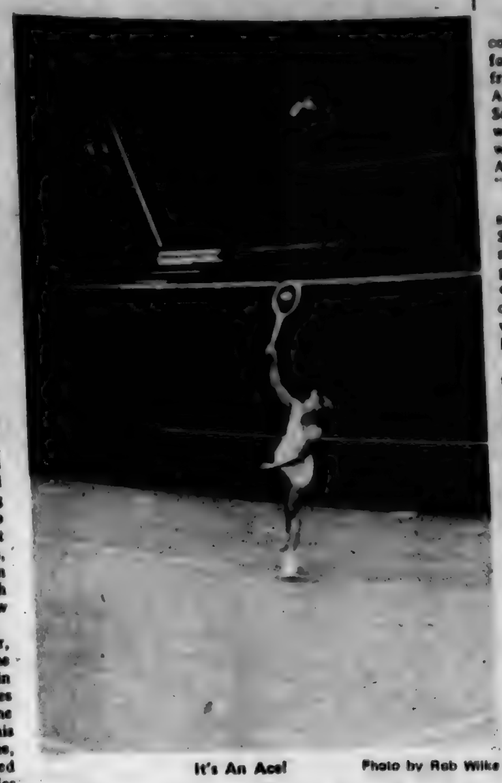
Vermont's number one, two, and four singles veterans Bloom, Mullen, and Hanafee failed to withstand their tough Middlebury opponents. Bloom was defeated in a close three-set match, as Mullen and Hanafee were downed by narrow margins in both their two-set matches. Freshman Melissa Carbone split sets with her Middlebury opponent, and with only one game played in the third set, she succumbed to a slight knee injury, causing the defaulted match to Middlebury. With hopes that her injury is not serious, Carbone should be back in action for Tuesday's match with Colby-Sawyer (New Hampshire).

The strong freshman player, Sissy Steinbreder, came through with a decisive win in her number three singles match. Steinbreder joined the UVM women's tennis team this season with a solid game, which she has strengthened throughout the season. Her victory stood as the sole singles win for UVM.

In the doubles tennis action, despite their hard-earned 3-set Vermont victories, the team of Jenny-Palmer and Stanton-Rich could not capture the overall win for UVM. The women's tennis team stands with a season's record of 3 wins and 3 losses. On Tuesday (Oct. 21) they play Colby-Sawyer College in the final match of the season. A combined team effort can secure this victory, leaving the UVM netters on the winning side of their 1975 season.

Coach Marilyn Chase will be taking her top six tennis players to UMass in two weeks for the Northeast Collegiate Tennis Tournament. With their official season ending on Tuesday (Oct. 21st), the tennis players will continue practicing hard for the Northeast Tournament. This annual collegiate tournament is played on an individual basis, rather than by team competition. Representing UVM in singles will be Debi Bloom and Nancy Mullen. Doubles competitors are Sue Jenny, Alec Palmer, Brownie Richards, and Mary Dee. These players will be working out on indoor courts in the Burlington area, considering that the Gutterson indoor courts will soon be covered with ice.

Results on the Middlebury Match:
SINGLES:
Lent over Bloom (UVM) 4-6, 6-4, 6-4; McNealus over Mullen (UVM) 6-3, 6-4; Steinbreder (UVM) over Lyche 6-0, 6-3; Clagett over Hanafee (UVM) 7-5, 6-3; Lincoln over Carbine (UVM) default.
DOUBLES:
Jenny/Palmer (UVM) over Madeira/Moore 6-2, 5-7, 6-1; Stanton/Rich (UVM) over Taylor/Moore 6-4, 2-6, 6-2.



It's An Ace! Photo by Rob Wilke

Thousands Of Students Converge On SSA Carnivals

What happens when 1000 college students get together for a week of skiing and fraternizing? Officials at Aspen, Colorado and Mount Snow, Vermont found out one week this past January. That was the week the Student Ski Association held two of its "Great Ski Carnivals".

"We honestly didn't expect so many people," admitted one SSA organizer. "A lot of students slept in cars in the parking lot the night before the carnival opened. Registration on the first day at Mount Snow was like trying to get into a Rollings Stones concert."

That didn't deter the students from skiing, racing, partying and mingling in two of the biggest college ski weeks ever held. "Judging from the number of phone calls we received afterward, inquiring as to the address of 'Mary Ellen in room 26', there were quite a few friendships made." One student happily discovered that she was sitting between John Denver and Spider Sabich at a cozy bar in Aspen.

After it was over, everybody agreed that the week had been a big success and SSA announced the same carnivals would be offered this January. In all this season over a dozen carnivals will be offered at major resorts in the East, Midwest and Rocky Mountains. Eastern carnivals last five days; Midwestern carnivals are usually held over weekends; Rocky Mountain carnivals last six days and seven nights. This winter SSA will also offer five day carnivals in the Midwest featuring skiing at a choice of up to five ski areas. For one low price students receive lodging (first class only, no dormitories), lift tickets and, at most carnivals, two full meals a day. There are also enough activities to keep even the most energetic collegian entertained for the whole week. "They have their choice of fun and serious races, Miller Beer parties, dances, night club shows, swimming, saunas—you name it."

At last January's carnivals hundreds of students took advantage of special discounts on ski lessons and equipment rentals. Lesson and equipment rentals, which are available at every carnival, make the carnivals ideal places for students who are learning to ski.

According to SSA Assistant Director Hilary Pender, "The popularity of our carnivals is in large part due to our removing the normal hassles associated with going skiing. We pick top ski resorts, the best lodges and take care of all the details. Students can come solo or with friends. SSA will find roommates for those wanting them. We will even arrange car pool transportation, charter busses or low cost flights through our official travel agency, Adventure Travel. Because of the large number of students, we can get very low rates from the ski areas and lodges and pass the savings on to the students."

Here is this season's schedule of SSA Great Ski Carnivals. Unless otherwise noted, prices include first class lodging, daily lift tickets, two meals per day and admission to all activities. Taxes and tips are extra. Transportation, if desired, is additional. Contact SSA for details.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN CARNIVALS: December 13-20, STEAMBOAT, Colorado, $109. (Condominiums, no meals included).

January 3-10, ASPEN, Colorado, $119. (5 days lift tickets, no meals).

March 13-20 and 20-27, STEAMBOAT, Colorado $119. (Condominiums, no meals).

EASTERN CARNIVALS: January 4-9, 11-16, 18-23, 25-31, MOUNT SNOW, Vermont, $89.

January 4-9, MOUNT WASHINGTON VALLEY AREAS, N.H. (Ski Wildcat, Mt. Cranmore, Attitash, Black Mountain, and Tyrol), $89.

March 14-19, 21-26, March 28-April 2, KILLINGTON, Vermont, $94.

March 21-26, SUGARLOAF, Maine, (Condominiums, meals $25 extra), $73.

MIDWESTERN CARNIVALS: December 19-21, MOUNT TELEMARK, Wisconsin, $48.50, taxes and tips included.

December 19-21, SCHUSS MOUNTAIN, Michigan, $41.50 complete.

January 4-9, MOUNT TELEMARK/ WHITECAP/-PORT MOUNTAIN/BIG PONDERHORN/ INDIANHEAD, Wisconsin/Michigan, $111, complete. Daily choice of areas.

January 4-9, SCHUSS MOUNTAIN/ CABERFAE/ CRYSTAL MOUNTAIN/TIMBERLEE/ SHANTY CREEK/BOYNE MOUNTAIN/BOYNE HIGHLANDS, Michigan, $103. Daily choice.

Jan. 23-25, SCHUSS MOUNTAIN/ TIMBERLEE, Michigan. $41.50 complete.

January 30-February 1, SUGAR HILLS/QUADNA MOUNTAIN, Minnesota. $41.50

February 20-22, BOYNE MOUNTAIN/BOYNE HIGHLANDS/WALLOON MOUNTAIN/ THUNDER MOUNTAIN, Michigan. $48 complete. Daily choice.

Ski clubs and non-students are welcome. A free 16 mm sound film is available showing last season's Aspen carnival. For reservations send a $20 deposit specifying carnival and dates to the nearest SSA office: STUDENT SKI ASSOCIATION, 233 No. Pleasant Street, Amherst, MA 01002 or 2438 No. Clark Street, Chicago, IL 60614.

This season's SSA carnivals and other student benefit programs are sponsored by the Miller Brewing Company.

'Wasted' Wins Intra. Football

The Wasted Football team –
(Standing l. to r): Fletcher Baltz, Chuck Lubbers, Bob Harner, Tom Thomas, Paul Ridge
(Kneeling l. to r): Roger Weig, Barry Gustin, Mark Soufleras, Dave Solomon

On October 17, Sigma Nu and Wasted met for the championship game of the University of Vermont intramural football program. When the dust cleared Wasted left the field with a rewarding 34-0 victory.

To reach the finals, both teams romped through undefeated seasons and decisive semi-final victories. Sigma Nu defeated Delta Psi, 24-6, and Wasted defeated Kappa Sig, 60-6. The championship game then matched the two unbeaten teams that have been intra-mural rivals for the past four years. The game started slowly for both teams as the defenses sparkled. The Wasted defensive secondary of Dave "A-rab" Solomon, Chuck "Bo-Man" Lubbers, Mark "Souf" Soufleras, and linebacker Tom "Towering T" Thomas finally ended the scoring drought by forcing a safety late in the first period. This brought Wasted's offense to life, and if it were not for some brilliant defensive goal line stands by Sigma Nu, Wasted would have had two consecutive scores. Sig Nu's luck, however, ran out late in the second period when Wasted scored its first touch-down. Wasted's quarterback, Towering T Thomas, drilled a quick pass out to Solomon, who alertly flipped the pigskin to Lubber who eluded two defenders and spiraled a bullit to Barry "Lightening" Gustin in the end zone. Roger "Wig" Weig placed a lofty kick through the uprights and the score became 10-0. Several plays later, the half ended with no change in the score.

The second half was marked by continuing Wasted pressure as Sigma Nu made several hearty attempts at a come-back But these attempts were to no avail as Wasted continued to tally touchdowns. The first was made possible from a 15-yard pinpoint loft from Towering T to Solomon in the end zone. Once again, "Wig" Weig booted through the extra points to make it Wasted, 18, Sig Nu, 0.

The next Wasted tally was made possible by a towering punt from the foot of "Behemath" Bob Harner. The punt combined with the fine Wasted defensive line then asserted itself when Lightening Gustin and Fletch "The Wedge" Balt forced the quarterback into Paul "The Rock" Ridge who made the tag for another Wasted safety. The third Wasted touchdown was made by the crafty engineering of Wasted Quarterback Thomas, as he fired the seed to the ever-present Solomon, who rifled a pass to Lubbers heavily covered in the end- zone. Weig's 2 point conversion made the score 28-0. The last score was a fluke, as "The Rock" Ridge was handed the ball by the tired and frustrated Sig Nu Quarterback Rocky Thompson on the last play of the game. The final score was 34-0.

This game was the culmination of the 4-year rivalry that has existed between Sig Nu and Wasted in one of UVM's finest intramural games 14-12. In the four years of Wasted's football existence they have won 27 out of 28 games and three championships. This year, Wasted's All-star defensive team, which has yielded only 8 touchdowns in 4 years, was augmented by the amiable "Souf" Soufleras and the fleet-footed "Bad JP" Patterson. This will be Wasted's last year in UVM intramurals so we'd like to leave the school with a little message: "All for one and one for all – We're Wasted."

Help Thief!

by Sally Guerette

It is a sad state of affairs when someone has to stoop to the stealing of soccer and field hockey goal nets. Both the women's soccer and field hockey teams' nets have been "ripped off" (soccer twice). To replace these nets runs in the vicinity of $100 a pair.

We would like to enlist your service to attempt to put an end to these outrageous acts of vandalism.

The sports activities are designed for your enrichment. The campus police can only do so much, so will you help us by observing and reporting any misuse or theft of YOUR equipment immediately.

These thefts, if they continue, could eliminate two varsity sport activities that serve over 50 students.

WE NEED YOU! WON'T YOU HELP?

Note:
(If anyone reading this has the nets or knows their whereabouts, please return – no questions asked.)

Unique Program Lowers Cost Of Skiing For Students

If you are in college, private school, high school or technical school, don't go skiing until you read this. The Student Ski Association has a unique program which will save you from $1 to $15 a day on ski lift tickets, lessons and equipment rentals at over 150 major ski resorts nationwide.

The program works like this: present your SSA Student Ski Card at a participating ski area's ticket window on a weekday and you'll get your day lift ticket for half the weekend price. The same goes for ski lessons and equipment rentals at the ski area. On weekends and holidays you'll save at least $1 on your lift ticket – at some areas as much as $5.50!

For example, a regular weekday lift ticket at KILLINGTON, VT. normally costs $11. With an SSA Student Ski Card a student will pay only $6— a $5.00 per day savings.

Here are some typical weekday lift ticket savings at major ski areas: Killington, VT. $5; Mount Snow, VT. $3.50; Waterville Valley, N.H. $3.00; Sugarloaf, Me. $4.75; Boyne Mtn., Mich $3.00; Indianhead, Mich. $3.50; Lutsen Minn. $4.50; Copper Mtn., Colo; $2.00; Squaw Valley Calif. $2.00.

Membership in the Student Ski Association costs $7 for the entire season. There is no limit to the number of times that the Student Ski Card may be used at any one area.

SSA also publishes POOR HOWARD'S COLLEGE GUIDE TO SKIING which contains technical information, such as number of lifts, trails, vertical drop, restaurants and other facilities, on every participating area. To save students money on lodging, Poor Howard's has a unique guide to low cost lodges near participating areas.

Every year SSA offers a potpourri of weekend and week-long ski "carnivals" and beach vacations. Each carnival is at a major ski resort like Aspen, Steamboat, Killington, Mt Snow, Sugarloaf or Boyne Mountain. Daytona Beach is a popular spring vacation destination offered by SSA to members who are looking for a change from the snow.

Priced to fit any student's budget, the "Great Ski Carnivals" include first class lodging, lift tickets and, on most trips, two meals a day. Discounts on lessons and equipment rentals make the carnivals popular with beginning skiers. There are activities scheduled every day, from dances and parties to both fun and serious ski races.

SSA even arranges transportation through low cost flights, chartered busses and car pools. Last season 700 students from 50 states attended SSA's annual Aspen carnival and 1,100 were at SSA's Mount Snow carnival during the same week!

Kim Chaffee, brother of US Olympic skiers Rick and Suzy Chaffee, and himself a former racer, founded the Student Ski Association in 1969, while a graduate student at Berkeley. More than 150,000 students have joined since then. Any student through graduate school is eligible.

This season's SSA student benefit programs and college ski carnivals are sponsored by the Miller Brewing Company.

For a $7 annual membership or for a FREE copy of the article "How to Ski On a Student's Budget" write the Student Ski Association, 233 No. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA 01002 or 2438 No. Clark St., Chicago, IL 60614.

Participating ski areas in Vermont are Killington, Mount Snow, Okemo (Ludlow), Pico Peak(Rutland), Glen Ellen (Waitsfield), Mad River Glen (Waitsfield), Burke Mountain (E. Burke), Round Top, Magic Mountain (Londonderry), Haystack (Wilmington), Hogback (Marlboro), Maple Valley (W. Dummerston).

Men's Paddle Tennis

The first Greater Burlington Men's Doubles Paddle Tennis Tournament was held at the Paddle Tennis Club on Saturday, October 11. With over 16 teams competing, Jon Dykema and Harlan Cutkaus overcame Ed Seibert and Mike Cronin to win 6-3, 6-4.

Christmas in South America – $237 Round trip – 12th Dec. 1975 – 11th Jan. '76. Contact Pamelia Rogers, International Center, St. Michaels College, Winooski, 05404. Evenings: 899-3590; Afternoons: 655-2000, ext. 357. Deadline – 10th November '75.

Capen Leads Harriers Over St. Lawrence

The up-and-coming University of Vermont cross-country team won its sixth straight meet as they downed St. Lawrence University by a score of 19-36 at A.T. Post Field. The Catamounts, led by Captain Lynn Capen's winning time of 22:01, captured five of the six positions to easily outdistance the Larries. Tom McGann finished in second place for St. Lawrence with a time of 22:21, but Vermont's depth was too much as they swept positions 3-6 to wrap up the impressive victory. Peter Weith was third for the Cats, as he ran his best race of the year with a 22:29 clocking. Dave Milligan finished fourth in 22:49, Howdy Russell fifth in 22:57, and Dave Elliott sixth in 23:07, as both Howdy and Dave turned in their fastest times ever on the 4.5 mile course. Rounding out the Vermont finishers were Dave Rameri, twelfth, Marty Black fourteenth, Pete Kaplan seventeenth, John Byerly eighteenth, and Jim Vogelman nineteenth.

In the words of Coach Bill Nedde, "It was by far the team's best performance of the year." The victory brought Vermont's record to 8-4 this season.

Brown Ties Dartmouth: Bateman Stars

The Brown University Tigers and Bob Bateman went up against the rugged Dartmouth defense this past Saturday, and fought to a 10-10 tie in Hanover.

Although a tie is like "kissing your sister", as the saying goes, Brown had to feel somewhat fortunate. If it had not been for a 65-yard scoring strike in the last eight minutes left, the Tigers would have been handed their first loss of the season.

Bateman, the ex-UVM football star, completed 17 of 34 passes for 209 yards and one TD. His touchdown pass was the one which saved Brown from defeat.

Charlie Watkins, the Brown flanker, delayed off the line, went under the Dartmouth defense, and Bateman hit him perfectly. Watkins put a fake on a Dartmouth linebacker, who slipped and let Watkins get outside and go down the sideline for the touchdown.

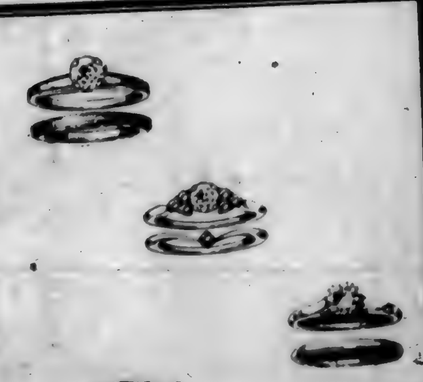
THIS WEEK IN SPORT

MENS
SOCCER
Oct. 25 vs. Maine (H) 1 p.m.
Oct. 29 vs. St. Mike's (A) 2 p.m.
CROSS–COUNTRY
Oct. 25 vs. Maine (H) 11:00
RUGBY
Oct. 25 vs. Sienna (H) 2:00

WOMENS
FIELD HOCKEY
Oct. 23 vs. Lyndon (A) 3:30
TENNIS
Oct. 24, 25, 26 – Northeast Regional Tournament (A)

Dakins Mountain Shop
227 Main Street
Backpacking
Mountaineering
X-C Skiing

CAMP 7
Just Add Cool Weather



A gift of diamonds is a beautiful tribute to the woman you love.
PRICES START UNDER $100.00
YOU ARE INVITED TO OPEN A PRESTON'S CHARGE ACCOUNT
E.J PRESTON & SON INC.
93 CHURCH STREET · BURLINGTON

sports

Women's Booters Undefeated

by Linda Purdy

UVM's Women's Soccer Team continued their winning streak and again beat Canada's Champlain Regional College, on Thursday of last week.

This young and exciting team ran the same course as they did against Castleton State College, scoring in the last minutes of the contest. Playing against a very rough team, UVM clearly dominated the entire game with nine shots on goal in the first half to Champlain Regional's two.

Despite the bitter cold and dampness, UVM came back in the second half to overpower their opponents with nine shots on goal to their zero. UVM's defensive line, consisting of Darlene Main, Beth O'Reilly, Barb Cochran, Mary Ellen Auger and goalie Kerra Desseau, did an excellent job throughout the game.

Right link, Gail DeBaron was the star of the show when, with two and one-half minutes left in the contest, she booted a penalty shot from outside of the circle right past Champlain's goalie to win the game for UVM, 1-0. UVM's women's soccer team is now undefeated with a record of 7-0.

Hilary English fights for control. Photo by Rob Wilke

UVM's soccer coach, Cathy Schiller, had this to say about the game. "Best game we've played. We had good passing, but we could not put the ball in the goal. These girls worked beautifully together."

Booters Beat UNH -Assured Of YanCon Tie

by destroying the University of New Hampshire, 4-0, the UVM soccer squad has run its record to 9-1 overall and 5-0 in the Yankee Conference. In addition, the results have assured the team of at least a share of the championship.

The Cats have not lost a game since an opening game defeat by Keene State, setting a school record which will increase with each successive win.

Vermont scored all their goals in the first half, with Sophomore sensation John Koerner leading the way with two goals and an assist.

Koerner's first goal came at the 14:14 mark when he won out in a scramble in front of the net and got the ball past UNH goaltender Phil Pierce.

Rick Whidden tallied UVM's second goal on an indirect kick as the ball bounced off Pierce's head and into the net. Carl Christensen got the assist.

Koerner got his other goal on a disputed penalty kick. Bruce Riedell, who replaced Pierce in the net, attempted to make the save, but the ball slipped through for the goal. UNH claimed that Riedell had made the initial save before the ball entered the net.

UVM's fourth and final goal came when Tim Beal slid across the goal mouth and converted a pass from Koerner.

Tim Beal -- a steady performer.

Once again Jim Taft had a perfect game, recording his third straight shutout, a school record. Taft made 13 saves to New Hampshire's 15.

It was another outstanding team performance for the title-bound Catamounts with only one roadblock left--the game with Maine. The Cats will meet the Black Bears this Saturday at Centennial Field with game time scheduled for 1:00. This could be the title clincher for the Cats, and it promises to be an exciting game.

Jim Taft -- the shut-out king.

Lacrosse Cats!

BY Tom Humphries

The UVM Lacrosse Club brought its unblemished 3-0 record against New England College this past Sunday and emerged somewhat scathed. The field conditions were very sloppy and so was most of the play. There were a few bright moments, such as stellar moves by Angus "the Masochist" Hodge and a combination play from Barry "behind the head" Dombro and Spike "alias Courtney" Jenkins. The Lacrosse Cats showed some ball control but had real trouble coming up with the ball in the muddy conditions. Co-captain Jeff Davis was observant in noting "it rained." That boy is too much!

The Fall program has been very successful, with all the Club members getting a lot of playing time. The experience gained this Fall will be invaluable in the development of a first class team in the Spring. The Club is holding informal workouts in the fieldhouse from 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays starting October 28th.

UVM Lacrosse Club raffle tickets are now on sale. At three for a buck and 25 great prizes, you can't lose. They are available from any UVM Lacrosse Club member and if we haven't got you yet, don't worry we will!

In a meeting Sunday, the team elected tri-captains for the Spring. They are Curt "the bona" Duane, Tom "Drugs" Keenan, and Tom "SLASHMAN" Humphries.

We'll see you in the Spring when the Big Sticks face an action packed schedule including Dartmouth, Harvard, Middlebury and many more. Want to buy a couple of raffle tickets, Drakes?

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

The sport's scene at UVM is having a transitional period. Soccer, tennis, rugby, etc., are completed or near completion. Hockey, basketball, track, and swimming are getting prepared for the upcoming season. Before winter sports take over, however, the fall sports warrant recoghition.

The tennis team won the Yankee Conference Championships, defending their title of last year, with Kirk Dice becoming the number one player. The rest of the squad must be commended also for fine performances.

The rugby and cross-country teams have enjoyed very good seasons as well, though not quite as much as tennis and soccer have. Cross-country gets little publicity and is relatively unknown although it has won seven meets in a row. Meanwhile rugby struggles to achieve varsity status. The squad has done a tremendous job this season, and, in the opinion of this writer, should be allowed the benefit of becoming a varsity sport.

What can one say about the soccer squad? Assured of at least a tie in the Yankee Conference, the booters have shattered the club record with nine wins and are still climbing. John Koerner, a potential All-American, needs just one more goal to tie the goals-scored record of 13 held by Peter Breen. He is also very close to the assist and total points records. Jim Taft has been superb in net for the booters.

Vermont has not seen a conference championship since 1969 and 1975 is as good a year as any to return it to the Burlington campus.

★★★★★★★

It has come to my attention that the University is doing, or attempting to do, something about the athletic facilities at the University. Several weeks ago I stated that UVM was not fulfilling the athletic needs of the students.

My opinion is still the same. They are not presently taking action but a committee of students, faculty, and the like, which is working on the problem hopes to improve the situation.

I apologize to them and to you, the readers, and I hope to report on their progress in the near future.

Sports enthusiasts are very much inconvenienced by the present facilities, but help is on the way. Let's hope it's soon.

Field Hockey Team Falls To Dartmouth

by Linda Purdy

Last Wednesday, UVM's Women's Field Hockey Team tackled Dartmouth's young and tough team. Although UVM did not come out winning, they did play a long and vigorous game against the Dartmouth team.

The Dartmouth team dominated the first half. They were led by Karen Sawyer who connected to score the first two goals for Dartmouth. After twenty minutes of play, she drove in both goals, two minutes apart. The third goal in the first half was again scored by Dartmouth, this time by Sandy Helve playing at left inner. The UVM team went scoreless through the first half, but Pam Titus, the goalie for UVM, put in a good game in the net, turning away six shots on goal.

UVM came back in the second half, clearly dominating the half with eleven shots on goal to Dartmouth's four. Twenty minutes into the half, Jean Fagins, left inner for UVM, scored, making the score 3-1. But, Dartmouth came back with another goal by Jane Kirstetter, left wing, with only seven minutes remaining in the game. UVM continued to hustle, but they were unable to score again. Dartmouth left with a 5-1 win.

The "B" team of UVM went up against Dartmouth's "B" team and tied 2-2. The women's next field hockey game is Thursday, October 23rd, with Lyndon State at Lyndon.

"UVM beats out Dartmouth." Photo by Rob Wilke

Ernesto Santini puts the "moves" on an opponent. Photo by Rob Wilke

Women's Athletics Enjoying Fine Seasons

by Linda Purdy

A wrap-up of UVM's women's athletics for the past week shows the soccer team coming out undefeated with a current record of 7-0. In their game against Champlain Regional College of Quebec, Canada, the UVM team captured the win with a goal by Gail LeBarron in the last three minutes of the game.

Friday, October 18, the Emma Willard Soccer Tourney was held in Troy, N.Y. Four teams participated in the tournament: UVM, Brown, Smith, and Emma Willard Preparatory School. Game one saw UVM facing Brown University, with UVM winning 3-0 from goals by Linda Del Bianco, Sue Durkey Paulding and Barb Pulling on a penalty kick. Kerra Desseau, the UVM goalie, saw action in all three games and had four saves in the first game.

Game Two, UVM vs. Emma Willard, was a great victory for UVM, with UVM winning 6-0. Again Linda Del Bianco, Barb Pulling and Sue Durkey Paulding, with two goals, scored and Anne Ainsworth and Diane Botch brought up the total to six.

The third game of UVM vs. Smith College was delayed in the first quarter with an injury on the field and called in the third quarter because of darkness. Coach Cathy Schiller called this "the best game of the tourney," and UVM again took the match 5-1. Hilary English was the powerhouse of this game with two goals for UVM; Barb Pulling and Sue Durkey Paulding each scored, proving to be the backbone of UVM's offensive line for the entire tourney. Darlene Main came through with a goal for UVM also, making it an overall victorious tournament for UVM women.

X-Country

There was a women's cross-country running tri-meet at Dartmouth with the University of Massachusetts. The University of Massachusetts won the overall meet with a score of 27 points, but UVM took second place over Dartmouth with a score of 37 points to Dartmouth's 75 points. The women's cross-country running team now has a record of 4-1.

NECTORS

Super Entertainment
Friday Saturday
& Sunday

SPECIALS
Mon.- Football Special $.60 Pitchers
Wed.- Sours & Collins Half Price
Thurs. - Dimie Nite 9-10

NECTORS
CAFETERIA/BUFFET

Smuggler's Notch Huge October Party

This Saturday 2pm-?

Bash Badge Holders Free

25 cent beers $2.00 cover for those without $1.00 mixed drinks
BUY ONE SATURDAY AND GET IN FREE

Tennis Courts, Swimming and Finnish Sauna open all day!!!

Boogie to "The Fort Ethan Allen Rock Band"

At 2pm compete against the clock in our pre-season conditioning course

Fall on your Face like everyone else!

START USING YOUR BADGE NOW FOR HEALTH, SAVINGS, AND PARTY!!!

LAST DAYS TO BUY THE SMUGGLER'S NOTCH BASH BADGE

Mon. Oct. 27th
Tues. Oct. 28th
Wed. Oct. 29th
Billings Center
9am-5pm

WILL NOT BE SOLD AT THE MOUNTAIN AFTER NOV. 1st.

Spend $18 Now and SAVE:
$5 on weekday ticket
$4 on weekend and holiday half price on rental equipment half price on ski lessons

For more info call 899-4089

BUY NOW OR FOREVER PAY FULL!!

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11322 IDAHO AVE., # 206
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474
Our research papers are sold for research purposes only.

VERMONT CYNIC

Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont

FOUNDED IN 1883

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 23

OCTOBER 30, 1975

calendar annoucements

English Majors

Having trouble translating the crucial black and white? "To be or not to be" an English major and/or "etc."? There is a new concept in gear at the English department: advising by and for students. We (Pat Fontaine and Elizabeth Hyde) would like to help you explore information about a major's problems and possibilities. Sign up to talk with us at the English Dept. office 320 Old Mill. Time and place of initial "UVM resource synopsis" in next week's issue, in time for course registration.

Greek Night

Greek Night at Marble Island featuring "The Aeon" from New York will take place Sunday, November 9th at 7:30 p.m. Cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, and dancing in a semi-formal atmosphere is the schedule. A donation of $6.00 for the Greek Orthodox Building Fund is requested.

Editors Wanted

The Vermont Cynic will be conducting elections for Editorial Board Positions on November 14. If you are interested in being an Editor for the coming year, come down to the Cynic office opposite the Den in Billings Center.

Medieval Festival

Remember the great Medieval/Renaissance Fair? This great one year tradition is in the process of becoming a two year tradition. For all those interested in taking part in this exciting festival, there will be an important preliminary meeting Thursday November 6 at 6:45 in one of the reserved L/L Ctr. dining rooms.

Plant And Pottery Sale

"Anything Grows" is going to be a plant and pottery sale that you shouldn't miss. Clausens Greenhouse in Colchester is supplying some plants and Bennington Potters, North is coming to offer a wide selection of pottery and macrame. In addition, independent potters will supply many of their creative works.

Everyone is welcome to come and create their own decorative arrangements with the assortments mentioned above. Mix and match to your heart's content! In addition, plant care items, such as atomizers, fertilizer, and potting soil will be available.

"Anything Grows" is being sponsored by the Plant Evangelism Program in the Living/Learning Center. Six students from various backgrounds but a common interest, growing plants, comprise the program. Many of their own plants will be for sale at bargain prices! So come early for the best selection. A percentage of the proceeds are to benefit UVM financial aid.

It's all happening Saturday, November 1 from 10 to 5 in the Fireplace Lounge in the Living/Learning Center. Everyone's welcome!

Student Conference

The Northeast Regional Conference on Student Organizing will take place on the afternoons October 31 – November 2 at Brown University. Students from campuses throughout the Northeast will meet to talk about Universities' policies, budgetary cuts, formulations, allocation of funds, tuition hikes, questions of student input, and faculty tenure.

There will be workshops and discussion groups with questions of student organizing tactics. Time will be allotted for students from their states to discuss problems of that particular state.

For further information, call Brown Student Caucus: 401 – 863-2230.

Give Blood Now

November blood drawings are scheduled for the following dorms. All blood drawings are at the Red Cross on Mansfield Avenue.

Monday November 3, 9–11 – Converse East, Slade, Robinson, Redstone.
Tuesday, November 4, 12–2 – Marsh Hall.
Wednesday, November 5, 9–11 – Austin 1, 2, 3.
Thursday, November 6, 12–2 – Austin 4; Tupper 1, 2.
Friday, November 7, 9–11 – Tupper 3, 4.
Monday, November 10, 9–11 – Harris 1,2.
Tuesday, November 11, 12–2 – Harris 3, 4.
Wednesday, November 12, 9–11 – Millis 1,2.
Thursday, November 13, 12–2 – Millis 3, 4.
Friday, November 14, 9–11 – Simpson.

Karate Demonstration

A demonstration of Uechi Karate, a unique Chinese-Okinawan martial art, will be held at the Southwick ballroom on Redstone Campus this Saturday, November 1 at 2 p.m.

The demonstration, presented by officials of the North American Uechi Karate Association, will be followed by a work-out session for area karate students.

The program is sponsored by University Uechi Karate Students under the direction of Robert Boyd. Mr. Boyd operates a professional karate school in the Burlington area.

Photos Needed

Photogarden is looking for photographs rejected from the Fleming Museum show to be used in our next exhibit. Please bring them to 115 S. Winooski Avenue or call Douglas Prior 656-2965 or Bob Gilbeau at 863-1256.

Philosophy Lecture

On Friday, October 31st in Room 403 Waterman, at 4:00 p.m., The John Dewey Philosophy Club is presenting a lecture by Professor Sylvain Bromberger, Department of Philosophy, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Professor Bromberger will discuss "Aspects of Explanation."

The lecture is free and all are invited.

Flick At Four

La Grande Bouffe will be shown today at 4:00 p.m. at Century Plaza (Dorset Street).

Tickets to this film are $1 and can be purchased at the door, in the main office of Pomeroy Hall, and they were available at a table in Billings Center on Wednesday from 12:15 – 2:00.

Next week – check next week's Cynic Announcement page.

Campus Rep

H. F. George Ashley, regional sales manager for Allegheny airlines, announced that Miss Rochelle Leeder has been appointed as the University of Vermont's campus representative for the airline.

Miss Leeder is a junior from Newtonville, Mass. who is working for a B.A. in Special and Elementary Education.

Miss Leeder will have the responsibility for promoting and selling Allegheny's services to the student body and faculty of the University of Vermont.

Miss Leeder resides at Living and Learning Center and may be contacted at 656-4082.

Volunteer Help Needed

Spanish tutor wanted – to work with resident of the Chittenden County Correctional Center.

Teacher's assistant wanted – to work in a traditional nursery school for 3 and 4 year olds.

Assistant Scoutmaster wanted – to meet weekly with troop of retarded and/or handicapped scouts

Big Brothers/Sisters – needed particularly for the many boys who are still waiting for a placement.

Newspaper people – needed for work on a community paper for the south end of Burlington.

Recreation leaders – to play with retarded children during the early evening hours. Experience helpful but not necessary.

Companion/Tutors – needed to work with 6th through 9th graders, 1 day a week.

Detailed information about all of the above positions is available at the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, 656-2062. There are also many other unlisted positions that are waiting to be filled. Reach Out!

A reminder that Lane Series tickets are still on sale, and available from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman; telephone 656-3418. This week the Lane Series will present Chick Corea in "Return to Forever," a jazz ensemble on November 7.

At Fleming Museum through November 9th: "Vermont Photography '75," a juried exhibition of work by Vermont Photographers. Through Spring of '76. "Collectors and Collections," which highlights the collections of six donors to the Museum, and "Traditional Africa," both in the second floor galleries.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30

12:15 p.m., Mechanical Engineering Seminar, "Properties of Unidirectionally Solidfied Metals"; Mrs. Delcie Durham, Votey Bldg., Room 231. Everyone is welcome.

3:10 p.m., Dept. of Mechanical Engineering has a lecture, "Session of Scientific Sleuthing," Dr. Wilfred Roth. B-106 Cook.

7:30 p.m., SA The American Actress Films presents "Mildred Pierce" (1945) starring Joan Crawford, Jack Carson, and Zachary Scott. B-106 Cook. Admission is free.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31

12 noon, Film "Away With All Tests" about health care in China. E-214 Given. Sponsors: Depts. of Epidemiology and Environmental Health, Sociology, Vt. Women's Health Center, and Chinese-American Friendship Association.

12 noon, Open Lunch hour with the Counseling Center staff. A time for all friends, old and new, to join for informal visiting, exchange of ideas, and getting acquainted.

1 p.m., the first day of a 2-day "Clinical Affiliation Conference in Radiologic Technology" sponsored by the Radiologic Technology Dept. 107 Rowell. For more information, call ext. 3455.

1–4 p.m., UVM apples are on sale at Horticulture Research Center, off Shelburne Road.

3:15 p.m., Psychology Colloquium, "Physiological Analyses of Memory Consolidation," Dr. Bruce S. Kapp, UVM. 314 John Dewey Hall. Members from other departments are welcome.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four" – Jennifer Cover und students-oral interpretation performance at the Royall Tyler Theatre.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., Lane Film Society Series presents Charlie Chaplin in "Modern Times." Benedict Auditorium, Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. Tickets cost $1, and are available from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman; tel. 656-3418.

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA Films The Biggies present "Faces" (1968), starring Lynn Carlin, Gena Rowland, and John Marly; and also "Shadows," starring Lelia Goldoni and Ben Carruthers. B-106 Cook. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., UVM Folk Dance Club meets at Southwick Ballroom. Instruction for all levels. Further information from Ben Bergstein at 863-6686.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 1

7 a.m., Second day of Clinical Affiliation Conference in Radiological Technology. 107 Rowell. (See 1 p.m. on Friday).

10 a.m. – 5 p.m., "Anything Grows" – plant and pottery sale. Living Learning Fireplace Lounge.

7:30 p.m. SA The Mini Series presents "Marked Woman" (1937), starring Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, and Isabell Jewell. B-106 Cook. Admission free.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m. "Saturday Cinema Toast" presents Steve McQueen and Jacqueline Bissett in "Bullitt" Admission is $1 at the door in 235 Marsh Life Science.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 2

7 p.m., The Way – Biblical Research and Teaching – Branch Fellowship meetings, open to all who desire to know the accuracy of God's Word, to be held in L/L B-161.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 3

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center "Career Planning Awareness" program with Bill McNeil. Open to anyone with questions regarding occupational selection, choice of major, career planning. Admission free at 146 S. Williams St.

4:30 p.m., Phi Beta Kappa meeting, election of new members, 527 Waterman.

8 p.m., "From Enemy to Ally: The Transformation of the German Army," a lecture by Lieutenant Colonel Karl Leiberich, German Liaison Officer to the United States Military Academy, West Point, New York. 413 Waterman. He will address faculty and students as part of the Dept. of Military Studies "Issues '76" Lecture Series.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 4

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Study Skills workshop with Alice Outwater at the Center, 146 S. Williams St. Open and free to anyone with questions, problems or concerns about study habits.

2 p.m., "Singular Values of Matrices, a Measure of Linear Independence," Dr. Robert Wright. B-203 Cook Bldg. Mathematical sciences seminar.

4–5:30 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal group of students, staff, townspeople, and professors who get together to speak in Spanish about anything of interest, E-380 Living/Learning. A high level of speaking ability is not required. Open to all who are interested. Sponsored by El Club Hispanico.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization meets to share healing experiences, Harris Hall recreation room. More information from Holly Aspden, ext. 3156.

7 p.m., Tuesday night drawing group, figure drawing. Second floor, Williams Hall. $1 donation at the door to pay the model.

7:30 p.m., Colloquium from the Psychology Dept., "Impact of Legislation in Health Insurance on the Practice of Psychology," Dr. Herbert Dorkin, Langley Porter Neuropsychological Institute, 212 John Dewey Hall. Members from other departments are welcome.

7:30 p.m., SA Films, the British Cinema Series, presents "How I Won the War" (1967), starring John Lennon and Michael Crawford. 106 Cook. Free.

7:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance Program-Slide lecture by the Rev. Dan Deley. "The Sibyl in Renaissance Art." Fleming Museum Auditorium, room 102.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 5

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a free "Relaxation and Meditation" program with Nancy Koch, a chance to learn some creative ways of dealing with daily tension and stress. At the Center, 146 S. Williams.

3:30 p.m., International Club: General Meeting and Coffee Hour at the Area and International Studies Building, 479 Main St. The Club especially welcomes foreign students and American students who have an interest in travel or study abroad, or who have just returned from an overseas experience and would like to share it with others."

4:30 p.m., Senate Meeting at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building.

4:30 p.m., Psychology Club "Shoot-the-breeze" session with first year psychology graduate students, 132 JDH. All invited for wine and cheese.

4:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance Program lectures: Prof. Stan Yarian, Religion, on the Platonism of Ficino and Pico. 216 Commons L/L. Anyone wishing to attend the lecture is welcome.

7:30 p.m., Board of Trustees meets at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg. to consider the election of a president.

8 p.m., "African Art in its Cultural Context," Fleming Museum public lecture by Tamara Northern, Curator of Ethnographic Art at Dartmouth College. In the Marble Court.

8 p.m., English Dept. lecture series, second speaker, New York Review of Books critic Elizabeth Hardwick. B-106 Cook.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6

8:30 a.m., Board of Trustees meets at the Faculty Lounge, fifth floor, Waterman Bldg., to consider election of a president.

12:15 p.m., Mechanical Engineering Seminar, "Building Design for Disaster Control," Prof. A.F. Tuthill, 231 Votey Bldg. Everyone is welcome.

New Direction For Psychology Club

At the last meeting of the Psychology Club, on Friday, October 25, certain objectives and future plans were discussed. The first thing we want to make clear is that we were very disappointed in the meeting held for psychology majors two weeks ago. It was extremely discouraging and we want you to understand that the Psychology Club will be moving in different directions. One of our major objectives is to develop closer ties between the students, faculty and graduate students in the Psychology Department. Aside from the planned colloquiums we are leaning towards more informal, social gatherings, probably on a bi-monthly basis. Our first "Shoot-the-breeze" session has been planned for Wednesday, November 5th at 4:30 in room 132 JDH. Four or five first year psychology grad students will be there to discuss anything ranging from undergraduate to graduate study. All are invited and urged to attend. Wine and cheese will be served.

The Psychology Club meets on Mondays at 4:00 in room 342 JDH. Everyone is welcome. So come and bring yourself and some ideas.

Living Lit At L/L

Living Literature's Showcases of October 31 has been postponed until November 6 and for November 11 it has been postponed until November 18 Time, 7:30 – 9:00. Place: 216 Commons, L/L Center. Refreshments.

Matched for Matrimony

Three exciting and precisely matched engagement sets from our large and varied selection.

Illustrations slightly enlarged

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1849

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

Go home.

Go home on Allegheny. And save yourself some money. We offer a wide variety of discount travel plans with big savings for groups and individuals.

The Liberty Fare. You can go home and a lot of other places besides, with unlimited travel at one low price. You get a choice of 3 plans, too—7 days for $129, 14 days for $149 and 21 days for $179. Good everywhere we fly, except Canada.

Group 10. Save up to 33⅓% roundtrip (up to 20% one way). Groups of 10 or more save when they purchase tickets 48 hours in advance and take off together. And you can each return separately, if you like. Good everywhere we fly.

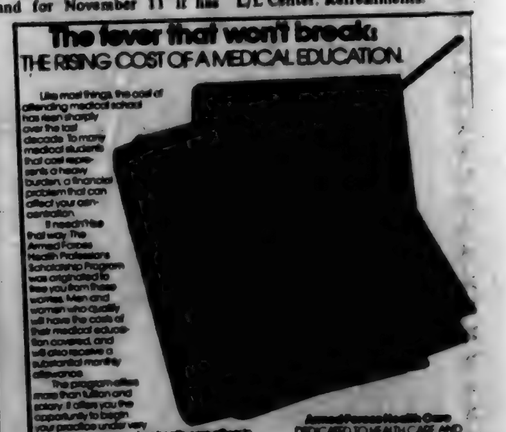
Group 4-9. Save up to 20% roundtrip. Groups of 4 to 9 save when you make reservations 48 hours in advance and fly together to and from selected cities. Stay at least 3 but no more than 30 days. Leave before noon on weekdays—anytime on weekends.

Weekend. Save up to 25% on your roundtrip ticket when you go and return on a Saturday or Sunday.

For complete information on all of our money-saving discount travel plans and flight reservations, see your Travel Agent or call your local Allegheny Airlines reservations number. And get ready to go home or anywhere else.

ALLEGHENY.
America's 6th largest passenger-carrying airline.

The fever that won't break:
THE RISING COST OF A MEDICAL EDUCATION



Like most things, the cost of attending medical school has risen sharply over the last decade. To many medical students that cost represents a heavy burden, a financial problem that can affect your concentration.

It needn't be that way. The Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarship Program was originated to free you from these worries. Men and women who qualify will have the costs of their medical education covered, and will also receive a substantial monthly allowance.

The program offers more than tuition and salary. It offers you the opportunity to begin your practice under very favorable conditions. As a health care officer in the military branch of your choice, you'll find yourself with responsibilities fully in keeping with your training, and with the time and opportunity to observe a full spectrum of medical specialties.

When you decide on the specialty you will pursue, you may find yourself taking those graduate medical studies at one of our many large and modern medical centers. If so, you can count on that training being second to none. Both the clinical and research work being done at these state-of-the-art Army, Navy and Air Force hospitals is of major significance in medical progress.

It's a long road, but the first step is simple. Just send in the coupon. The details we send you next, maybe the most important step of your life.

Armed Forces Health Care
DEDICATED TO HEALTH CARE AND THE PEOPLE WHO PRACTICE IT

Wicker To

The Trustees of the Richard R. Warner Memorial Speakers Fund are pleased to announce that Tom Wicker, author and columnist for the New York Times, will be delivering the first address in an annual series at the Roy L. Patrick Gymnasium at the University of Vermont on Wednesday, November 12, 1975 at 8:00 p.m. All are invited to attend. There will be no charge for admission and no tickets will be required.

Tom Wicker, a native of North Carolina, joined the New York Times in 1960, covering the White House, the Capitol, and national politics. In 1964, he became Chief of the Washington Bureau, and since 1966 has been a regular columnist. He has also authored eight novels, many articles, and three non-fiction books. His most recent book, A Time To Die, grows out of his

St. Anselm's

SUNDAY
11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal); 6:30 p.m. – Service of the Word and Communion (Protestant) with supper following.
MONDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer.
TUESDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 8:00 p.m. – Prayer 'n Share; 10:00 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal).
WEDNESDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 10:00 p.m. – Compline – a brief service of prayers and songs to end the day.
THURSDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 4:00 – 5:30 p.m. – Wine and Cheese; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 7:30 – 9:00 p.m. – Mouthpiece.
FRIDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer. 7:00 p.m. – Gather to collect for UNICEF, All-Hallow's Eve Service, and party.

Chaplains: Nancy Allen and Geoffrey Schmitt, x3882, St. Anselm's Chapel (Redstone Campus).

Wicker To Speak

The Trustees of the Richard B. Warner Memorial Speakers Fund are pleased to announce that Tom Wicker, author and columnist for the New York Times, will be delivering the first address in an annual series at the Roy L. Patrick Gymnasium at the University of Vermont on Wednesday, November 12, 1975 at 8:00 p.m. All are invited to attend. There will be no charge for admission and no tickets will be required.

Tom Wicker, a native of North Carolina, joined the New York Times in 1960, covering the White House, the Capitol, and national politics. In 1964, he became Chief of the Washington Bureau, and since 1966 has been a regular columnist. He has also authored eight novels, many articles, and three non-fiction books. His most recent book, A Time To Die, grows out of his role as a member of an "Observers Committee" at the Attica Correction Facility in 1971.

Richard Warner, Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Vermont, died at the age of 41 in September, 1974. Dick joined UVM in 1967, and before entering academic life, had served for eleven years in the Bureau of the Budget as a budget examiner and management analyst. Professor Alan Wertheimer, Chairman of the Fund, noted that "Dick's family, friends, and colleagues established the Speaker's Fund to keep his memory alive. The purpose of the fund is to continue Dick's commitment to democracy and social justice by bringing to this community those who, like Dick, have made those goals paramount in their lives."

St. Anselm's Chapel

SUNDAY
11:30 a.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal); 6:30 p.m. – Service of the Word and Communion (Protestant) with supper following.
MONDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer.
TUESDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 8:00 p.m. – Prayer 'n Share; 10:00 p.m. – Holy Eucharist (Episcopal).
WEDNESDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 10:00 p.m. – Compline – a brief service of prayers and songs to end the day.
THURSDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 4:00 – 5:30 p.m. – Wine and Cheese; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer; 7:30 – 9:00 p.m. – Mouthpiece.
FRIDAY
8:15 a.m. – Morning Prayer; 5:15 p.m. – Evening Prayer. 7:00 p.m. – Gather to collect for UNICEF, All-Hallow's Eve Service, and party.

Chaplains: Nancy Allen and Geoffrey Schmitt, x3882, St. Anselm's Chapel (Redstone Campus).

Highlights of the week – Thursday at 4:00 p.m., stop by for some wine and cheese. Take a break from studying and generally rushing around and relax for a while... Also on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. "Mouthpiece" will be discussing the Karen Quinlan case (the 21 year old girl who has been in a coma for nearly 6 months): Should her parents be allowed to pull the plug on the respirator? When and how long do you prolong life? And who decides – the parents, the jury, the doctor, the clergyperson? etc. etc. Stop by if you're in the mood to listen to or participate in a lively discussion... Friday, 7 p.m. – we'll meet at St. Anselm's to collect in the dorms for UNICEF – followed by an All-Hallow's Eve Service and a party... Sunday – the offering at the 6:30 service will be given to UNICEF. It's the Festival of All Saints – look forward to a special time of worship at the 6:30 service... Coming up – a day away at Weston Priory, tentatively Saturday, November 15.

Protestant Episcopal Ministry – Schedule of Events

Job Interviews

This is for recruiting period no. 5 – the week of November 10 – 14. Sign up for these interviews in the Placement Office, November 3, 4, and 5.

Haskins and Sells, Boston, Mass. 02109 – seeking candidates for employment as Staff Accountants

Beth Israel Hospital, Boston, Mass. – staff nursing positions.

Boston University School of Management, Boston, Mass. 02215 – information interviews on varied MBA programs

General Electric Company, Burlington, Vermont 05401 – positions in Engineering, Manufacturing, finance oriented.

Katherine Gibbs School, Boston, Mass. – Post graduate programs in Business and Secretarial Science

U.S. Gypsum, Lisbon Falls, Me. – Positions open in Personnel and Forestry

Syracuse University Graduate School of Business and Management, Syracuse, N.Y. 13210 – Offers information interviews on their graduate programs to all majors.

Fleming Museum

On Wednesday evening, November 5, the Robert Hull Fleming Museum, UVM, presents the third in its fall series of free public lectures. "African Art in its Cultural Context" is the topic of this slide-illustrated presentation.

The speaker will be Ms. Tamara Northern, Curator and Assistant Professor of Anthropology at Dartmouth College. Ms. Northern has long been involved with the study of African art: from 1962 – 1970 she was Curator at the Museum of Primitive Art in New York, and she was recently Guest-Curator at the University of Connecticut where she organized the travelling exhibition, "Beaded Art of Cameroon." She will begin Wednesday evening's talk with a basic outline of African art, then focus on political and cumulative art, underlining the talk with the question: "Is the African concept of art really different from our own?"

The talk will begin at 8 p.m. in the Marble Court of the Museum. The public is invited to attend and to view the related Fleming Museum exhibition, "Traditional Africa", currently on view in the Ethnographic Gallery.

Geography Forum

The Geography Forum is an informal club for people who are interested in Geography. It is designed to provide a means for members to meet and discuss common interests, plan excursions, and present guest speakers. Last week the program was a slideshow, presented by Anita Centofante, of the World Campus Afloat, a college on a ship. The students cruised around the African coast, to India, and on to the Far East. The World Campus Afloat is affiliated with Chapman College in California.

The next scheduled meeting of the Forum is Monday, November 3, at 7:30 p.m. in the Seminar Room of the Geography Department in Old Mill building. Any interested people are invited to come.

Outing Club

Steve Zagchowski will be showing slides on climbing the Mont Blanc Range in France. The Alpine Climbing trip was sponsored by the Outing Club a few years ago. The slides will be shown in 108 Terrill Hall (Home Economics Building) at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, November 5th.

Conciousness Symposium

AMHERST, Mass. – The "Psychology of Consciousness," a weekend symposium November 15 and 16, in Boston, will be sponsored by the Institute for the Study of Human Knowledge in cooperation with the University of Massachusette-Amherst Division of Continuing Education.

Eastern traditions and Western technology and research will come together for an interdisciplinary approach to the study of subjects such as altered states of consciousness, perception, cognition, personality theory, and neurophysiological changes in the brain and nervous system.

Philosophy, psychology, physiology, epistemology, and parapsychology will be explored by specialists. The symposium, at the Plaza Hotel in Boston, is expected to be of interest to psychologists, doctors, therapists, scientists, teachers, clergy, and persons in the allied fields.

Speakers will include: Dr. Herbert Benson, associate professor of medicine, Harvard Medical School, and author of The Relaxation Response. Dr. Robert Ornstein, associate clinical professor of medical psychology at the University of California Medical Center, San Francisco, and author of The Psychology of Consciousness; Dr. David Galin, assistant professor in residence, Department of Psychiatry, Langley Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute, San Francisco; Richard L. Grossman, adjunct associate professor of humanities, and coordinator of the Humanistic Psychology Program at Hunter College; and Dr. Charles T. Tart, associate professor of psychology, University of California, Davis, and author of States of Consciousness.

Information and registration materials may be obtained from University Conference Services, 920 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass., 01002. Telephone (413) 545-2591.

Chick Corea

The next Lane Series concert is the jazz ensemble Return to Forever featuring keyboard artist Chick Corea, Nov. 7.

Ski Club Meeting

The Ski Club will have a meeting in the Living Learning Commons on Monday November 3 at 7 p.m. to finalize plans for the ski show. Anyone interested in working on the show is welcome to attend.

Women's Credit

(CPS) – October 28 is the day when women can apply for credit cards and not be denied because they are single, divorced, separated, female or expectant.

A new credit discrimination law goes into effect then which prohibits creditors from judging applicants on the basis of sex or marital status. Banks, credit card companies, department stores, gasoline companies and anyone who offers installment credit or loans won't be allowed to ask if an applicant is married or single. People victimized by sex or marital discrimination can sue for actual damages plus fines of up to $10,000.

Other aspects of the law, such as a married woman's right to set up her own accounts and obtain a personal credit rating don't take effect for almost three years. The Federal Reserve Board also removed its original requirement that reasons for denial of credit, when requested, must be given in writing.

The Exchange

by Alice D. Cutwater

We went through our mail this week and found this request: "Could you possibly get somebody to cut down the curbs where the paths are for wheelchairs and bikes?" I wish the correspondent had been more specific as to where, but we will pass this onto Ed Schneider X2000 – each year the University improves the facilities on campus to make life easier for those handicapped (note the ramps on various buildings, improved bathroom facilities, ground level doors with easy access, etc.)

We got a call from John Nininger and Dave Williams, the enthusiastic new president and v.p. of the Outing Club. They are eager to have everyone know about the new look they've given the organization. In fact the Club is fairly bristling with activity! They suggest: 'Instead of going to those Friday afternoon drinking gatherings, come and join some of our outdoor activities.' They were amazed that 80% of the UVM students said they came here because of location – 'now, come and enjoy the countryside with us!' If you are interested in Star Gazing, there will be trips to the Conservatory in Underhill where there are a 9" and 12" telescope; come for the day or weekend to look at the stars all night. Can your imagine anything more delightful on a frosty, cool night with the moon out? There will be back-packing trips to the White and Green Mountains, the Adirondacks, Cross Country Skiing, Snowshoeing and Winter Camping to the Mt. Marcy area and other spots. Thirty people turned out for introductory rock climbing, of which they plan to do more. Over the winter there will be workshops in Kyaking (you can build your own), Biking – working on and repairing your own, Repairing and sewing personal or Outing Club equipment. All these will be held in their new-old building at 2 Colchester Annex (next to John Dewey Hall.) This group is really taking off and heartily welcomes novice as well as experienced outdoor fans to join them on their excursions. Come to their Wednesday 7:30 p.m. meetings in 108 Home Ed or look for their posting on the Billings Bulletin Board. Good luck John and Dave; you've got something good going! Keep the comments coming or call X2086.

VPIRG Meeting

VPIRG will meet Monday, November 3, at 5:00 p.m. in conference room C, Billings. Meetings are open to all interested students and take place every Monday, same time, same place.

Norway Slides

Dr. David K. Smith, professor of Economics from Middlebury College, will speak and show slides of Norway at the meeting of the Geographic Forum, rm. 110-A Old Mill on Monday, November 3 at 7:30 p.m. Free coffee. Everyone is welcome.

Bicentennial Bike Hike

Applications are beginning to come in from college students throughout the United States for the 1976 Cross Country College Bike Ride being held in Honor of the American Revolution Bicentennial. The ride is sponsored by Universities throughout the United States and will begin in Denver on June 20, 1976, and terminate on July 15, in Philadelphia and Washington, D.C.

According to Steve Danz, project coordinator, riders will stay at colleges and hostels along the route. The route itself will be along the Transamerica Bike Trail. Riders will participate in Bicentennial activities along the route. College students interested in joining the ride should write to bikecentennial, 805 Glenway Suite 227, Inglewood, Ca. 90302 for application and further information.

The Upstairs Record Shop

(upstairs, on Church St., across from Woolworths)

This Week We Are Featuring

Warner, Elektra, and Atlantic

These 8 LP's are on sale for $3.93
also available in 8 Track for $5.00

(Tom Waites not available in 8 Track at sale price)

These 8 LP's are on sale to thank you for your great response to our Cynic ads.
Your volumn helps us to keep our prices low!
KEEP ON COMIN'

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded in 1883

Randy Jensen '77 ..... Editor-in-Chief
David Ryan '77 ..... Assistant Editor
Mark Valle '76 ..... Managing Editor
John MacDonald '78 ..... News Editor
Sue Perkins '78 ..... Feature Editor
Sari Bodi '76 ..... Arts & Entertainment Editor
Norm Robinson '77 ..... Sports Editor
Amy Weinstock '78 ..... Copy Editor
Deborah Powell '76 ..... Advertising Manager

Dum Dums Want Dum Dums

The Burlington Police Commission voted unanimously recently to authorize the use of hollow-nosed bullets by Burlington Police. This action was subsequently scorned upon by the Vermont Civil Liberties Union and rightly so.

The hollow-nosed bullet is similar in construction to "dum-dum" bullets and is designed to "kill as quickly as possible." How advanced!

The affirmative vote was based upon a study by Training Officer, Roy P. Gates who recommended the hollow-nosed bullets because "they are more effective in terms of incapacitation." How humane!

Ira Farnsworth, a munitions manufacturer in Milton, Vt., describes the hollow-nosed bullet as having a hole in the tip which carries a piece of flesh into the body. The velocity of the flesh together with the expanding bullet head causes a large tearing wound which bleeds profusely. Hunters use it because it causes "massive bleeding and shock" upon contact with any part of the body tissue. How sick!

The fact is that any bullet which expands or doesn't have a solid tip is banned by the Geneva Convention. But regardless of this technicality, is it the purpose of our supposed protectors to wound, maim or kill?

A solid nosed bullet kills nicely as shown by the "justifiable homicide" of burglary suspect Luis Ponce Rodriguez last fall. Does this mean that hollow-nose bullets will kill more efficiently? How absurd!

All I can say is that giving the "dum dums" "dum dums" is dumb.

J.M.

Dog Owners

To the Editor:

After reading the letter to the Cynic last week concerning a disgruntled diner in the den, watching a dog devour his dinner, I decided it was my turn to express my views on dogs around this campus.

I don't hate dogs. I grew up with a basset hound and have the fondest of memories playing and listening to him howl away the hours through the night, much to the consternation of the neighbors. At that time I had no understanding of why it so upset an older lady down the road to hear Howard bark like hell through the night. Now I am beginning to understand.

Dogs are pets, and as pets, the owners are directly responsible for their well-being and their behavior. For the most part, dogs at UVM are relatively well-behaved, but do they really belong all over the campus, in the Cook Library, and left tied, howling outside of classrooms? I don't think so, and the more I see and hear dogs on campus, the more it pisses me off. If you want to own a dog, that's fine, but take the responsibility on yourself of assuring that others are not disrupted or bothered by your beast. Pets are a luxury. No one says, "Here take this dog and make him mind." It's a personal choice, and with that choice goes the acceptance of responsibility.

I think an important factor in making the decision to own a dog is the consideration of what environment the dog will be living in. Will he be happy? What responsibilities does owning a dog bring upon yourself?

A few people I know who own dogs can't understand why others bring their dogs to campus. They feel their dogs are much happier at home, and wouldn't have one here, or wouldn't have one at all, if they couldn't leave them home.

Do you see professors begging dogs to sit and be quiet in the classroom (as I have repeatedly heard students do in the Cook Library)? Have you ever walked into a store where everyone working there has brought his dog?

To top it off, I relate this episode which occurred in the Cook Library. At least 3 dogs were present in a library already crowded with students, and as they wandered around stumbling over my feet and making themselves at home, in came another student and his canine wonder. He yelps (the dog) as another dog approaches to start playing. The newly-arrived student was attempting to leash and quiet his dog but was unsuccessful due to the freedom of his dog's playmate. This owner politely asked the free hound's owner (who happens to own two dogs who are regular residents of Cook) to curb his beast. The jerk replied, "what's it to ya?" Speaks highly of him?

There is also another list of unresolved controversies that pet-owners are beginning to force as issues on campus. What about those who are allergic to animals? What about the increased cost of grounds maintenance (which is necessary. Don't I like seeing a dog take his daily dump on the way to the den?) What about a dog's real place at UVM?

To end this epistle, I'm becoming increasingly irritated at the irresponsibilities of a small but growing minority of students who own dogs. I for one, am reaching the end of my rope, and as a member of the Senate, would be happy to discuss solutions or suggestions concerning these problems.

T. Carney
RR 1
Charlotte, Vt.

letters to the editor

A Day in the Life GEOLOGY 52

To the Editor:

The story you are about to read is true but the names have been changed to protect the innocent.

Mr. Sex Hourton (the professor enters)

Mr. Hourton: Good morning class. Today we are going to talk about coal and oil. Did you know that West Virginia produces 152,500 tons of coal per year, and Kentucky produces 99,500 tons, and Pennsylvania produces 79,000 tons? Vermont doesn't produce any coal though. It is easy to see that coal is one of the most important energy sources in the world.

Another important source of energy is oil. We get oil by drilling for it. To drill a hole in the ground you attach a bit to a steel pipe that turns around and drills thru the rock. Howard Hughes made all of his money by inventing this process of a revolving bit. Without it we could not have all the oil we have today. The men who work on oil rigs have to be tough. They use bad language, but nothing that I've never heard before. Drilling for oil is an important but dangerous business. Here is a picture of an oil derrick. This is the top of the derrick, this is the bottom of the derrick. The middle of the derrick is called...Hey what are you guys talking for? ZZZing...A piece of chalk flies across the room almost hitting the people talking and shatters against the wall.

Narrator: I thought we were in college but this emotional display by Mr. Hourton took me back to 7th grade, when my English teacher threw a chair against the wall because someone was talking. Mr. Hourton's behavior in class was both undignified and uncalled for, and is certainly not the kind of behavior one would expect of a college professor.

I could see spending 30 minutes of a class on the trivia of oil well drilling if it were Oil Drilling 205, but to devote all of that time to trivia in Environmental Geology is inexcusable. The job of a college professor is to stimulate and excite his students enough so they won't even consider talking, not to bore them to the point of talking in class, and then throw chalk at them to get them to shut up. By doing this Mr. Hourton only points out his own weakness, a problem which should be solved by improving lecture content and not by throwing chalk.

Respectfully,
John Smith
Anydorm, UVM

EMS Underhanded

To the Editor:

I was in EMS (Eastern Mountain Sports) the other night, prepared to purchase a pair of cross-country skis which I had first noticed there last month. At that time, one of the salespersons had informed me that these $37.50 skis would be "on sale" some time in October. I was amazed to discover that when I went to their October "sale" the exact same pair of skis was now $47.50 ON SALE. Apparently EMS has a different definition of "on sale" than the rest of the world. I feel that this is a very underhanded trick, announcing that an item would be on sale in a few weeks and then actually raising the price.

With more and more UVM students becoming interested in mountaineering activities, I feel that alternatives to the high prices of EMS should be looked into, such as the many catalog outfits whose prices average 10% to 20% lower.

Elwood Johnston

Rude Merchant

To the Editor:

I would like to express my feelings on an incident that I was involved in last Thursday evening to the rest of the student body at UVM. This incident being with a most unfriendly sort of fellow who owns the small store a short distance down Colchester Avenue from the campus.

While waiting for a couple of friends to buy some merchandise, for which we had entered the store, I began to browse the store simply to (1) kill time waiting and (2) to see if I would like to buy an item, undecided at this point. Suddenly the sound of a booming voice comes from behind me saying "Would you wait at the front of the store instead of ripping me off?"

At first I was totally unbelieving that such a rude accusation could have been intended for myself. I next asked myself, with both outrage and dismay, "What sort of asshole would accuse a totally unknown prospective customer of such an offense of which I personally would not have remotely considered?"

My reply to his obviously insane accusation (which was witnessed by several other customers in the store, I might add) was "What right have you got to accuse just anyone in the store of "ripping you off?" With this his verbal accusations on me grew and I'm sure he suspected me even more so.

After realizing he could not pin any direct blame on me, he shouted with as much rage as before, "I lost $6,000.00 last year to rip-offs like you." I was quite frankly too insulted and baffled to reply to this utter lunacy. When he realized this, he left the scene by slamming the front door of the store in the face of some incoming customers. With his disappearance I'm sure everyone in the store decided to never return as a patron.

In short, my point is to inform the student body of the ignorance and lack of suitable human relations conveyed by a merchant in need of our economic support. Should our patronage be demonstrated at such an indifferent institution?

Be A Cool Kool Kat

To the Editor:

This is a follow-up to the previous issue's letter to the editor entitled "UVM's Doggy Business." It described how the starving Doberman consumed a ham sandwich, growling and spreading germs all over the Den. She went further to describe the serious obstructions dogs cause in pathways along with dog allergies, "terrorizing people," and so forth. All I can say is Oy Vey! Who is this Diana Gill anyway? Some people are too hung up. It's all in her head. Anyway, did you know, in our present garbage disposal crisis now at hand, the dog provides a valuable ecological function (dogs consume 217.47 million tons of Raw Garbage/year). Come on Djana, be a Kool Kat.

Hugo

Vegetarians

To the Editor:

American vegetarians – there are some misconceptions about the vegetarian movement. A vegetarian eats no meat or fish, believing that the eating of animals is killing us, or the animals, or the starving elsewhere, or all 3.

Meat has been named the number one cause of cancer, for many reasons. Carcinogenic female hormones are given to animals. Cancer causing sodium nitrate makes meat red in color. Dead flesh has many times more insecticide concentrated in it than fruits and vegetables because an animal concentrates DDT, dieldrin, chlordane, etc. in his tissues. The average meatester's heartbeat is 72 per minute, vs 58 for a vegetarian. The bacteria in meat (a dead animal) can number as high as 2 billion per ounce causing 97% of the food poisoning fatalities yearly.

Slaughterhouse suffering is hidden from us. In Madison, Wisc. 1100 pigs an hour are goaded onto conveyor belts with shocking rods. Vegetarians believe that it is wrong to cause suffering to and to kill other creatures for our appetites, that it is a form of human chauvinism. Animals cannot speak, but they suffer. The short high shrieks in a slaughterhouse give evidence of intensive suffering.

Meat comes from grain waste. 1 pound of meat results from 21 pounds of food given the animal. Dairy products require a loss to 2 to 4 pounds of grain per pound of diary. Fruit per acre has THIRTY TWO times the yield that animal protein has. 32 fruitarians can live on the same acreage as 1 heavy meateater.

Our organization is a non-profit group in which people work for $5 a week and room and board. We are looking for vegetarian activists. If you are interested in helping, or want further information or free vegetarian recipes, write American Vegetarians at Box 5424, Akron, Ohio 44313.

Sincerely,
D. Wilson
D. Jani,
N. Shriver
R. Karch

Help Mother Earth

To the Editor:

On one of my rare trips to the Den, I was appalled to see the amount of plastic, paper and styrofoam being used. Bringing our own mugs not only saves 5 cents on a cup of coffee or tea, but saves the environment from one more little ball of styrofoam remnant (have you ever tried to burn styrofoam? It just doesn't go away.) Bringing your own metal spoon will cut down the use of plastic, a costly, polluting industry. And if you're really into it, instead of using a paper napkin, (I like trees) use a bandana or handkerchief and wash in biodegradeable detergent. When you're through eating, a two-second trip to the garbage can with your trash will save someone else the work – we all work hard enough. Just a little thoughtfulness everyday could make life for Mother Earth and other people a lot nicer.

Lesles Newman '77

Patterson, Not Wright

To the Editor:

The Oktoberfest did indeed provide a festive spirit, as stated in the article by Sari Bodi in your October 16 issue, but credit should be given to Patterson Hall, not Wright Hall, for creating the "giant beer stain for the chugger's delight", for the dorm competition.

About twenty-five Patterson women gave their time and ideas to create our somewhat wobbly, but impressive structure!

Sincerely,
Dorm Government
Patterson Hall

Eco-Problem Solver

To the Editor:

I nearly got run over today as I stepped out of Old Mill. It was a leaf vacuum behind a big red tractor. That's right, it almost pulled me in as I stood in terror on the steps. It wasn't the driver's fault – he was following orders, I'm sure. When he saw me he backed the machine up politely and almost swallowed up a little dog that was tied to the tree behind him. Then the machine clanked and grumbled off around the lilacs, the dog climbed down out of the maple tree, and I crept timidly over to Lafayette Building. But my narrow escape has broadened my horizons. For example, my brush with disaster has opened my eyes to vacuums all over the campus, and indeed they are all over the campus. They vacuum up the leaves again and again, and while the wind blows, they spend the whole day working. As we all know, autumn leaves are ugly, and when they cover pretty green grass on the campus, it is a source of acute embarrassment to the University Administration. It is not natural to have an unkempt lawn. I guess this is why we have so many leaf vacuums at UVM. They cost only a few thousand dollars apiece, and in this age of prosperity, when money is still dirt-cheap, energy, what's a few thousand here and there if the humiliation of a leaf-littered lawn can be avoided?

Rumor has it that while money is still plentiful, a huge new vehicle is being purchased which will actually pluck the leaves from the trees before the ugly things drop to the ground.

When the new machine arrives, there is going to be a special exhibition on the UVM Green. It will be kind of a lawn equipment parade which students are required to attend. It will begin with a fleet of rotary lawn mowers which will part along University Place, followed by a hundred tractors pulling spikers and seeders, phosphate spreaders and raking machines. Then the new giant gang mower, with all its blades churning, will circumscribe a circle around the flagpole. Following a short speech by Astro-Turf, Co. of Texas, two huge tractors, each pulling a train of twenty big leaf vacuums, will grumble and roar across the Green and park, wagon-train style, around the fountain. And then the great moment will have arrived, the triumph of the day. The new Eco-Problem-Solver, produced by Amalgamated Oil Companies of America, will give proudly unto the green from Main Street, for a first public demonstration. And the crowds will watch in astonishment as the campus is once more plucked over by yet another huge and expensive contraption.

Yours truly,
A humble student who doesn't understand why.

Thanks Faculty Senate

To the Editor:

I would like to make comment on an article in last week's issue about the keg which happened to find its way into the library. When I read about the way the people responded to the smiles and relaxed atmosphere that the keg introduced (or dragged in with it), I was pretty surprised, a little shocked, and somewhat disgusted. First off, I was amazed that anyone could manage to smuggle a keg into the library successfully without the nosy ladies checking you out at the doors. It always made me feel ridiculous trying to prove that my textbooks really were my own without having that wonderful device known as the highschool hall pass. How did the keg pass clearance??

Secondly, I'm shocked that anyone would try to bring such a dreadful reputation to this University. Some of the virtuous youth who attend this school for reasons other than alcohol use the library as a haven for study and quiet. It's a lovely place to accomplish work without the distraction of one's roommate wandering in smashed with or without someone of the opposite sex. I find the library to be, for me, one of the very few centers of sanity remaining intact on this campus. I am personally insulted and feel that the students who brought the keg into the library cheapened the place.

And lastly, I am disgusted by the way this University tends to run. At practically every student function there is alcohol served, and no activity lasts very long without it. I'm disgusted that this school is so oriented. It has only been those functions that have had SOMETHING happening at them that hold any interest for me. After all, who hasn't experienced what it is like to drink or be tipsy or feel drunk before? I fail to see the attraction that ethyl alcohol holds for people who have gone to the library to accomplish work. It just seems pointless.

But the saddest thing of all is the way that no one gave credit where credit was due. I would like to thank the Faculty Senate for making the first move towards better relations between Faculty and the student population, especially the hard-coring, toolingup, booking segment. The faculty have begun to understand what it must be like pleading for one of their beauties. I think it is only polite and considerate to express my thanks here and now.

But next time—please, Madame, not Print.

Vin Tage

FRANKLY SPEAKING... by phil frank

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

NEWS: Charles Kountze, Steve Wells, Debby Richin, Scott Curtis, Steve Brown.
FEATURE: Mary Partridge, Kim Hagen, Angelo Di Censo, Kathleen Brown.
ARTS: Elaine Boyle, Martha Hess, Trish John, Elizabeth Hyde, Jonathan Lief, Barb MacFarlane, Paul Prior, Dawn McQuinnes, Jose Santana, Mark Serednick.
CARTOONS: Matthew Miller, "Five" – Kenny Mirman, "Life with Perkatoid" – Jamie Pond.
COLUMNISTS: Ken Markowitz, Peter Cobb, Gary Chilson, Larry Selden, Gregory Katz.
SPORTS: Debi Bloom, Rita Bruce, Randy Briggs, Chris Brown, Scott Curtis, Pat Tivos.
ADVERTISING: Steve Brown, Debbie Powell, Susan Rea.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shastk.
ASSISTANT COPY EDITORS: Martha Hess, Cathy Forge.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

Ranting, Ra

by Larry Selden

The first dream of a new moon is lunar cycle indicates a new direction.
your friends, though faceless, in your way out of the covers. The faces were seven dwarf masks. They would stop, say, "How ya doin'?" My hands nervou to keep the sweat from dripping into core burns in terror, I stumble for an do they know? I try to get a grip on for a slot to drop myself into. What what everyone says, so I say it. They They walk away, "Take care." "Sure, y crisis covered, but no sense of control.
the bridge of relevancy; there is no co
The gentle art of conversation is lost.
flame is extinguished.

I'm awake. The clock has stopped sheets. The clock means nothing. I glad I'm not a machine. Asleep but remember this is a rerun. The bed is th run.

Run amuck
Hit by the truck
Wasted drunk
Call the duck

Jumbled, my head feels light. Al pieces of grey matter take running pa ear. I think about running to the capture them. They are multiple and their own direction. They are sure t own. I am different. I scratch my em much replacement of a brain costs.
back, "Have a drink or three." In my thoughts and myself sitting uncomfortable; they jump into the salt to throw on my wounds.

The little jabbers are indifferent cuticles. They wrap their little ar chorus and sing bawdy drinking so
There is no subliminal togetherness t
I rage emptyheaded. "You are all
We have clashed too many times.

by Gregory K

It didn't take long to pack every bag into an old blue pillowcase.
into an old sports bag that Susan h yellow and said "Adidas" on the sid walked out the door. I threw all m
Chevy and sat down to think things
I wasn't really mad, or surprised over me. I didn't know where to g now it was past one and the bars that I had a half-pint or so of "Ple in the house, somewhere in the k felt strange walking back in. I to out. Ingrid was snoring. So long.

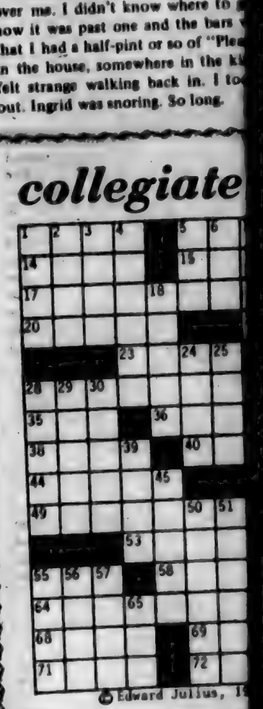
collegiate



© Edward Julius, 19

ACROSS

1 Certain auditors (abbr.)
5 Concise
10 Attire
14 Hawaiian dance
15 Daniel or Pat
16 Operatic solo
17 Dreiser's "An ——"
20 Anglo-——
21 Titles of respect
22 Type of tree
23 Bismarck's state (abbr.)

Ranting, Raving & Drooling
Over The Edge, Again

by Larry Seiden

The first dream of a new moon is very important. Every lunar cycle indicates a new direction. It is not unusual to see your friends, though faceless, in your dreams. I thrashed my way out of the covers. The faces were real, all were one of the seven dwarf masks. They would stop, stare, and predictably say, "How ya doin'?" My hands nervously rub together, trying to keep the sweat from dripping into puddles at my feet. My eyes burns in terror, I stumble for an answer like a thief. But do they know? I try to get a grip on myself. I scan the world for a slot to drop myself into. What can I say? "I dunno." It's what everyone says, so I say it. They look relieved; I just look. They walk away, "Take care." "Sure, you too," I say. Another crisis covered, but no sense of control. I have lost my way on the bridge of relevancy; there is no collaboration to move on. The gentle art of conversation is lost. The wires spark but the flame is extinguished.

I'm awake. The clock has stopped and I'm walking on the sheets. The clock means nothing. I can feel the darkness. I'm glad I'm not a machine. Asleep but alive. I've got the time to remember this is a rerun. The bed is the same but the mind has run

Run smack
Hit by the truck
Wasted drunk
Call the duck

Jumbled, my head feels light. Along my pillow my little pieces of grey matter take running parachute jumps out of my ear. I think about running to the kitchen to get a jar and capture them. They are multiple and are heading out each in their own direction. They are sure they can make it on their own. I am different. I scratch my empty head. I wonder how much replacement of a brain costs. Softly I ask them to come back, "Have a drink or three." In my voided mind I can see my thoughts and myself sitting on barstools. They are uncomfortable; they jump into the dish of peanuts, gathering salt to throw on my wounds.

The little jabbers are indifferent to me. They stab at my cuticles. They wrap their little arms around each other in chorus and sing bawdy drinking songs at me. We can't agree. There is no subliminal togetherness tonight.

I rage emptyheaded. "You are all dismissed as my character. We have clashed too many times. I think I can live without you."

They grin back, like so many sets of dentures on the dentist's shelf. I refuse and replant for the winter. I might have cerebrum sprouts by the spring.

In this dark dream the room is all mirrors. Mirrors that are out of focus. There is a fog horn in the corner; it is made out of fog. The leeches are playing hide and search with my comb. My little friends that were once part of my mind are in my corner working me over with a salt solution. It burns. They say I can win this one. How much fun can I have in one night?

Already-been-chewed humor is scorching the threads of my sanity. The needles of relief will have to be threaded by a scream. I try to jerk away from this nightmare, hoping I can make it to the sink and wash it down before I lose my gnarled covers.

Like Gulliver, they have tied me down. I must use a different tactic. "Hey, you know, you guys are all right. You know, I'm beginning to like you."

My friends have killed the lights. They scream into my ear. "You used, you know, too much, turkey." I am infuriated. How could I do this to myself. I lurch against the ties that bind us (Lurch eyed the situation.) I grab my sneakers and make a dash to the bathroom. They can be beaten away. I need strength, I thought, as I swayed from the sink to the porcelain throne in the corner. I was sure of victory, a certain moral one. I had to cleanse the demons. I tried to run, but they had tied my shoelaces to the one-ply toilet paper. Beaten again and restricted to a 1000 foot run in this water closet with the tide coming in.

Then I know that through it all there's you, loving me like rain. Now when I need it to fall around me, you're sleeping further away.

The tide comes in and soaks the toilet paper. I'm free to swim back to my bed. I lose one sneaker to the melee at the door. A small price to pay. My room is dark and motionless. The sweat of the fight has left it with a rank smell. I dread it like a haircut or worse. Why is Sunday always followed by Sunday night? If I could crawl out of this desolate corner and stop feeling my scalded head for new sprouts, then I could wait patiently for the lunar cycle to start again. These dreams without the benefits of sleep are caging me. The future will soon be past. Through it all there's you.

Skinned And Tacked To The Wall

by Putter '77

An animal; graceful, breathing, unpredictable, vibrating with life mysteriously centered somewhere within its skin, a skin like all of us find holding ourselves together; an animal whose individuality was colored by its own set of fears, quirks, passing sad moods, now reduced to its most superficial and least meaningful terms. Still bizarrely beautiful, but nothing more -- nothing more at all, the skin hangs from a wall in Billings, a bauble, a trapping, for individuals of another species -- individuals with minds so buzzed out that they still have not glimpsed the nature of the terrible things their species is doing to the rest of the world.

Skinned and tacked to the wall; it can't be helped, but there's a lot of it about. You, and me too? This gets close to the matter, and yet, it still seems far away. Why bother writing these words you all are going to buzz right through, as you are sucked through another day by the power of the great pistons of Cook Building, and other buildings on campus? Oh well, "better out than in," my grandma said, as she passed gas at the dinner table.

Consume, consume, consume... Pick up, throw away. Turn lights on and walk away. Take fifteen minute showers every day. Keep your heaters burning and the windows open. Consume consume consume... Have you ever seen South Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, etc., where coal is stripped; "mined" They call it? Beautiful farmland and woods raped, to get at the hotstuff underneath, so Freddie Middleclass can go to school in Vermont and consume consume consume... drowsily studying his books underneath a cat skin, strung out and tacked to the wall. The hi-fidelity first class travelling set strikes again, but it isn't enough! "More More More!" he shouts in his dream, "Gotta have it!" But poor Freddie doesn't know where to get it. So, consume consume consume...

"Time is money, money is time, gotta hurry can't be late, time is money, money is time!" he repeats, as he races across the bare ground that two weeks earlier had been grass that the maintenance people had planted so well -- with our money.

The University set up an energy conservation committee to help save the University -- and us -- moneys over the energy consumptive months of the winter, but if campus wide Freddies don't personally conserve well, the Rockies will soon be reduced to a rubble pile of tolings; and the tuition continues to rise uncontrollably.

And the cat skin hangs on, against some people's sensibilities. Styrofoam cups scream and yell "Waste, Waste, Waste!!!" from the heaping garbage cans of the Den. Freddies like to rip off the Den 'cause the Den rips off Freddies and everyone else, 'cause Freddies rip off the Den.

Freddies rip off Saga 'cause Saga rips Freddies and everyone else cause Freddies at every dining hall rip Saga off, throwing piles of food away, stealing dishes, stealing food, and on and on... The dorms are ripped apart by Frustrated Freddies who can't handle "it" in the right way.

And the skinned cat is still tacked on the wall. Freddie University, symbolized by a desiccated cat skin, lives on, contributing to the rape of the land, sea, air, water, mountains, and other species inseparable from us, perpetuating a lifestyle that is sick, schizoid, and self-destructive.

Lotta hot air, huh Freddies? Well turn around and whiff yourself. You're stinking up the only earth we have, defecating across sky and future, and blowing up the price of an already expensive commodity, an education, of which, I suspect, you don't even know what you're going to do with.

And the cat skin hangs on, testimony to our ineptness in house-breaking piddling Freddies.

May the skin hang forever, snarling, spitting, at the Freddies who have AND CONTINUE TO blindly run around spreading their hot air across the land, the precious land, our bread, our life, our love.

Freddies Freddies Freddies... I cry for us. Have you ever seen pictures of what's left of the ancient Mayan civilization, and the Egyptian civilization? Have you ever seen pictures of your parents and grandparents generations living through the Great Depression? Have you ever seen pictures of the World Wars, with bodies of people just like you and me covering a field, which only a short time before had been covered with livestock peacefully grazing?

Please Freddies, look at that cat skin and see what can happen to you, for you are not immortal. You know what they say Freddies? "You don't miss your water 'till your well runs dry."

Recycle when through

Looking For Louise on a Cold, Windy Day
Part 4

by Gregory Katz

It didn't take long to pack everything. I threw my sleeping bag into an old blue pillowcase. I threw my spikes and mitt into an old sports bag that Susan had given me. It was bright yellow and said "Adidas" on the side. It was ridiculous. Then I walked out the door. I threw all my bags into the trunk of the Chevy and sat down to think things over.

I wasn't really mad, or surprised. Some kind of calm came over me. I didn't know where to go, but it didn't matter. By now it was past one and the bars were all shut. I remembered that I had a half-pint or so of "Pleasant Moments Whiskey" up in the house, somewhere in the kitchen. I got up to get it. It felt strange walking back in. I took the whiskey and tiptoed out. Ingrid was snoring. So long.

I got in the Chevy and drove, lifting the whiskey up. I took the top down and steered with my knees. The whiskey was strong and sweet. It was a cool fall night, and the air shot in at me. I was good at steering with my knees, and I was good at drinking whiskey. We kept going, the Chevy glued to the middle of the road. The city fell back, we were heading out to the bay. Trees and houses flew by. I got tired of using my knees and gripped the wheel again. I kept the whiskey warm by squeezing it between my legs. Intersections kept coming up, and I let the car decide which way to go. I looked at the stars and smiled.

The car started to glide to the right, almost grazing a mailbox. I was getting sloppy. The pint was almost done. All of a sudden I just heaved it out of the car and let it sail...The turns kept coming faster and faster. Where was I? Then something orange started gleaming up ahead. I came closer and started to focus. It was Howard Johnson's shining up ahead. Oh fuck. I must be on Route 2, heading back to the dumb city. I remember a painting of Jeddyboy's "The Iron Cock of Howard Johnson's." It wasn't such a good painting. Well, I was back in the city. Should I go to HoJo's and have a drunken burger deluxe? No, gotta keep going. I turned left at the gym, and parked in the parking lot there. Mine was the only car in the whole damn lot. I pulled out my sleeping bag and spread it out on the back seat. I got naked and slipped into the bag. My drunken eyes looked up at the stars. Without my glasses on, they were all blurred. It wasn't too cold, not with all that whiskey sloshing around inside. Sleep came fast...

Morning was made out of mushrooms. They were floating in front of my eyes. I tried to pick them out. They were inside my lids.

Everything was grey. Cars were filling up in the parking lot. Innocent secretaries stared at me in my sleeping bag. They wondered why the police hadn't taken care of me.

I slid out of my bag, my cock hard and my balls hanging low for everyone to see. There was a tarantula in my eye. I got my pants on and stumbled out of the car. All I could see was cars and people walking by quickly.

I remembered last night. That girl, the bottle, the garlic. Oh fuck.

"Well," I thought to myself, "a true poet can type with his nose."And I haven't written a poem since ninth grade, except a few verses about "Ali, King of Heaven." Aside from typing with my nose or walking around with a hard-on all day, I didn't see much point to anything. I was hungry. Wanted my coffee fix. Wanted Lucinda to brew me fresh Jamaican coffee as she rambled around the kitchen in a blue komono. I wanted Ingrid to wrap her strong legs around me. I must stop thinking about these things.

Breakfast. I needed it. My eyes were aching, the sunlight hurt. I could go home and make coffee. And see Ingrid. And talk things out. I burped and forgot about it.

I got back in the heap and started her up. She still loved me at least. I cut off some turd in a Mustang on my way out of the lot. He had on a green tie with a drawing of two guys playing golf. I smiled as he yelled at me. My car was a bomb, a live maroon vehicle. The beer bottles lying in the back seat were weapons. I would cruise the city all day, raining destruction on those who defied me.

I stopped in front of Jeddyboy's. I left the keys in the car and walked in. The place was quiet. I walked around. Jeddy was asleep on a mattress by the bathroom. Brenda was next to him, fast asleep. I saw her breasts rise and fall as she breathed. The house was a shambles like usual, except it smelled of pot. I went into the main room to check things out with Buddha. There was a roach in his mouth. I figured Jeddy had had a long night.

I made some tea. I noticed that the top of the stove was caked with black and brown stuff. There was a pot of curried rice left on the rear burner. I grabbed a mouthful. The taste was pure curry and onions, hardly like rice at all. I heated it up. The tea started hissing. I sat at the table with all this good stuff.

Some hangovers are funny, they make you see that the world is truly cockeyed. Some just make you feel like a holy mess. I felt like a holy mess. I mean it was one thing to be broke, and have a lover and a home. And another thing to be alone but at least have some money for a room and food. But now it was just me and the Chevy. And all my absurd possessions. A fancy Pioneer stereo system that cost me $600 in better days. Could I take it from Louise and plug it into the Chevy's cigarette lighter? Could I build bookshelves in the back seat?

Whenever you move you lose things. Like when my parents sold the house I grew up in I never found my autograph collection. I had a good one: Sandy Koufax, Roberto, DiMaggio, and most of the early Mets: Kranepool, Stallard, Felix Mantilla. I really wanted to find them. But they were hidden somewhere. I found a stash of rubbers from when I had to hide them from my parents. Did rubbers last indefinitely? Who cares? I threw them out.

My tea tasted very good, all hot and steamy. I tried to sort out the day. I had to find some money, I had to go to practice, I had to find a place to live, and, I suppose, I had to get a job. I did not want to walk up to the first tall blond on Church Street and ask her if I could move in. I wasn't feeling quite jaunty enough, and you can't push that kind of thing. I remember Ellen in Boulder Colorado. She worked in a pool joint on the hill. When I took the cue from her I asked her out to dinner. She agreed. We went to Tico's, and over the eighth margarita she told me she was married and her husband would be coming home any minute expecting dinner. He must have starved. When I dropped her off at the pool joint in the morning she laughed and winked at me. I saw her once more, driving a van with three Great Danes and some guy with a big beard. Some husband. But now I was too out of it to consider such feats. So I needed a job.

Of course there were obstacles. I couldn't buy a paper to look at the ads. I didn't want work to interfere with my baseball. So I figured I could borrow some dough till someone came along and rented me. But that was a sleazy solution. I remembered that "get yourself together" pep talk from the day before. You know, drive slow and get things organized. Stand on your own two feet.

I walked over to Jeddy on the bed. "Jeddy," I said, waking him, "Give me a dime for the paper. I'm going to work."

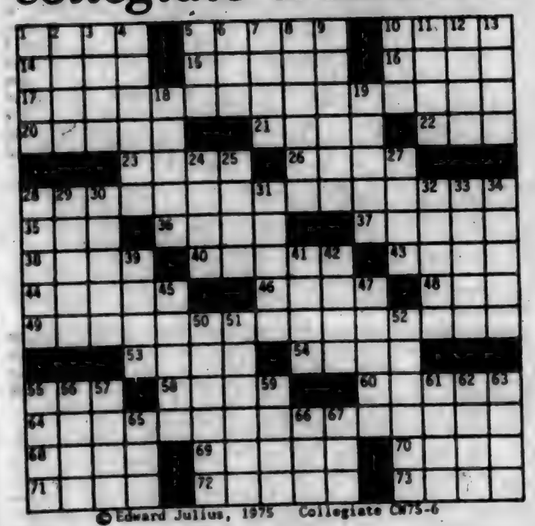
Jeddy grunted. "Katzy, no money. What are you kidding. Where's your uniform. Bad night, Buddha got stoned, couldn't see."

"I hung up my spikes J-Boy. I'm going to work, give me a dime."

"Money in pants," Jeddy pointed to some caked jeans by the bed. Brenda kept sleeping as I fished out a quarter. I was out the door and went to Hargreaves and bought the paper. I came back and sat down on Jeddy's floor. I read the sports first, then the stock report, then the headlines. Finally I

(continued on page thirteen)

collegiate crossword



© Edward Julius, 1975 Collegiate CW75-6

ACROSS

1 Certain auditors (abbr.)
5 Concise
10 Attire
14 Hawaiian dance
15 Daniel or Pat
16 Operatic solo
17 Dreiser's "An ——"
20 Anglo——
21 Titles of respect
22 Type of tree
23 Bismarck's state (abbr.)
25 Snubs
28 JFK and Lincoln, e.g. (2 wds.)
35 Mythical bird
36 Miss Alberghetti
37 Morocco's capital
38 Waters: Fr.
40 Weird
43 African country
44 Play part (2 wds.)
46 Bachelor pads (abbr.)
48 Golfer Sikes
49 LBJ's dream (3 wds.)
53 David's instrument
54 Judah's son
55 "Good Neighbor ——"
58 Palm drink
60 Attain
64 Book by Robert Canot (2 wds.)
68 Italian coin
69 Place of worship
70 Sow
71 Abound
72 Cuts
73 Facility

DOWN

1 Actor Laughton (abbr.)
2 Mountain lion
3 Gridder —— Karras
4 Lamour made it famous
5 British network
6 Brown Kiwi
7 Electrified particles
8 Complete
9 Mel or Jose
10 Joke
11 —— code
12 Disencumbers
13 Senator Birch ——
18 —— ink
19 Up and about
24 Complexion problem
25 "Citizen ——"
27 Shoal
28 Deal with
29 Kitchen pest
30 Severe
31 French revolutionist
32 Dwelling
33 Annoy (2 wds.)
34 Rocky
39 Sound of relief
41 —— facto
42 Kind of jacket
45 Native of Teheran
47 Frightening
50 Author Jong, et al.
51 Shock
52 Actually existing: Lat.
55 Sodium chloride
56 French friend
57 Nothing more than 59 Opposed to
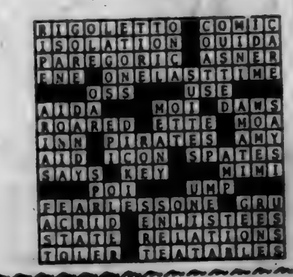
61 On an ocean voyage
62 Curved letters
63 R.L. Stevenson character
65 Drive into
66 Cereal grain
67 M.D.'s

LAST WEEK'S ANSWER



ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Chick Corea Returns Forever

The jazz ensemble Return to Forever, featuring Chick Corea on the keyboards, will perform on Friday, November 7 at 8 p.m., in Memorial Auditorium under the Lane Series auspices.

Corea's manager, Mark Hodosh of International Creative Management, describes Return to Forever as jazz-rock. Wrote Mr. Hodosh to the Lane Office, "Return to Forever has made a major contribution to American music because he was one of the first, and most successful, musicians to transcend the boundaries between jazz, rock, and even Latin music." Progressive jazz may also be used to label Corea's music.

In addition to Chick Corea on the keyboards (electric piano, synthesizers, organ and clavinet), the quartet includes Stanley Clarke on bass, Lenny White on drums, and Al Dimeola on guitar.

The group, which appeared at Middlebury College last year, has recently plummeted to fame on the basis of several albums, notably Inner Space, which appeared on October of this year and which the magazine High Fidelity chose as one of the best pop records reviewed over the last 12 months.

Inner Space (out by Atlantic) includes such hits as "Litha," "Tones for Joan's Bones," "Straight 8p and Down," "Inner Space," and "Trio for Flute, Bassoon, and Piano."

According to the High Fidelity reviewer, in Inner Space Corea "shows the vivid imagination and virtuoso ability that had secured him places in the bands of Herbie Mann, Stan Getz, and Miles Davis."

Return to Forever and Chick Corea have won many polls, attesting to the respect which Corea's fellow musicians have for him. 1973 Down Beat International Critics Poll, the 1973 Down Beat International Readers Poll, the 1973 Playboy Magazine All-Stars' Poll as best Instrumental Combo, the 1974 Jazz Forum Magazine Poll as Jazz Musician of the World, the 1974 Down Beat International Critics Poll, and the 1974 Down Beat Annual Readers Poll as Composer of the Year.

Speaking of his music, Chick Corea says that "we started Return to Forever with the idea of bringing good music to a lot of people. And in the process of developing as a band we changed from being art-for-art's sake musicians into musicians who want to contact and communicate with audiences. There's been a gradual transition, and this communication aspect has become more and more important."

Return to Forever has been able to concentrate on reaching out to audiences principally because the problems of technique, with which most bands must grapple, have been taken care of. Corea's development is a case in point. At first his reputation as a composer and keyboard virtuoso was confined to an elite circle of musicians. Miles Davis, Elvin Jones, Mongo Santamaria, Hervie Mann and Stan Getz employed his services as a pianist. Mahavishnu John McLaughlin, Larry Coryell and Gary Burton recorded his tunes. Circle, which Chick co-led with Anthony Braxton, Dave Holland, and Barry Altschul; astounded fans of rarefied improvisational music with its cooperative virtuosity and experimental daring.

But Return to Forever is special. Having satisfied their art-for-art's-sake ambitions and established their credentials as artists, Corea and his cohorts are now aiming their presentations toward the kind of listener who would rather participate in music than analyze it. "We're all writing music now that will communicate to audiences who aren't familiar with our way of playing," Chick says. "It's more composed than our earlier music and the rhythm is stabler, the beat more firmly stated. We want people to have fun with our music, dance to it, sing it and the most challenging part now is retaining our musical integrity while involving people and bringing them into rapport with us. Everybody in the band is composing and everybody is involved in constantly re-evaluating our goals, so that the music is always fresh and a real agreement between us."

The poet Neville Potter is almost a fifth member of Return to Forever even though the band plays only instrumental music. "Neville has a way, at least with our group, of creating something in imagery and words that we all very naturally latch onto," Chick explains. "Our compositions usually come from a place that doesn't have any visual images, just sounds, but the images that Neville writes in his poetry always fit our music, and us, very closely." Potter's "Where Have I Known You Before" was an inspiration for Return to Forever's album of the same name because, in Chick's words, "It speaks very easily, almost naively, about the fact that you're a spiritual being in the universe and have lived a lot of lifetimes. And the truth of that can be seen in peoples' reactions. Because if you say lies to people, they get a dull look in their eyes; but if you say the truth to them, they brighten."

Tickets for Chick Corea, $3.50, $5.50, and $6.50, are on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

Appearing next on the Lane Series is pop guitarist and vocalist Leo Kottke, Nov. 13, followed by Preservation Hall Jazz Band on November 19.

New Riders of the Purple Sage

The beginnings of the New Riders of the Purple Sage started taking shape in 1969, when John Dawson, who played acoustic guitar and was rapidly developing as a talented songwriter, got together with the Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia, who was then learning to play the pedal steel guitar. The two played in coffeehouses and small clubs for a while, and the music they made became the nucleus for a band – the New Riders of the Purple Sage.

That same year, David Nelson, expert in both country and rock guitar, joined the group on electric lead guitar, and to fill out the rhythm section, two members of the Grateful Dead sat in, Mickey Hart on drums and Phil Lesh on bass. The New Riders played every chance they got, in smoky clubs all over the San Francisco area, to whooping, footstomping crowds as their music got ever tighter and more dynamic. They played with the Dead on a number of gigs in 1970, including the trans-Canadian Festival Express with Janis Joplin, The Band, and other American and Canadian artists. Among the others were Ian and Sylvia, who had with them a brilliant, innovative pedal steel player named Buddy Cage. When Garcia's busy schedule made it increasingly difficult for him to play with the New Riders, the talented Cage was the perfect choice to fill the pedal steel spot; he moved from Toronto where he had been backing up Anne Murray, to California in the fall of 1971 to join the New Riders.

In December of 1970, Spencer Dryden, who had previously showed his impeccable drumming style with the Jefferson Airplane, had stepped in on drums. With the addition of Cage, the New Riders emerged as a fully independent unit, an excitingly creative band with a special brand of music – sweet country harmonies overlaid on pulsing rock rhythms.

The New Riders signed with Columbia Records in 1971, and their first record, New Riders of the Purple Sage, was released in September of that year, to widespread acclaim. In December they played a live radio broadcast with the Grateful Dead over WNER-FM in New York to an audience of several millions. In 1972 the pattern of their success continued to grow, with their first European tour followed in June by the release of their second album, Powerglide. They toured the United States extensively in response to increasing demand, and in November released their third album Gypsy Cowboy.

In May of 1973, the New Riders appeared on ABC's "In Concert" show to a nationwide television audience. Working hard on the road for much of the year, they took a brief time out to go into the studio, and the result was The Adventures of Panama Red, released in September, 1973, with Nashville producer, Norbert Putnam.

Early in 1974, Skip Battin, formerly with the Byrds, joined the band on bass, replacing Torbert. Although Battin arrived too late to appear on the group's first live album, Home, Home on the Road, produced by Jerry Garcia, he has helped to solidify the group. The five current members – Battin, Cage, Dawson, Dryden and Nelson – continue to keep up the busy touring schedule which has become one of the band's trademarks. The New Riders hold the house box office record at the Academy of Music in New York, and in August, 1974, the New Riders gave a free thank-you concert in Central Park on a Tuesday morning to 50,000 New York fans. After performing selected dates throughout the country, the New Riders returned to the studio where they recorded their sixth album, entitled Brujo, produced by Ed Freeman, bringing out new richness and dimension in their recorded sound. Upon release of the Lp, in October, 1974, the New Riders immediately embarked on another nationwide tour. Having long since emerged from the shadow of the Grateful Dead, the New Riders of the Purple Sage have succeeded in establishing themselves as one of the most popular bands in America.

Jesse Colin Young Feels at Home in Burlington

by Paul Prior

Burlington was treated to another evening of fine times and tunes from Jesse Colin Young and Co. this past Thursday at Memorial Auditorium. The hall was serene in comparison to last April when Memorial Auditorium was the site of a pushing and punching melee that resulted in someone crashing through a large window. Security was relatively heavy, with uniformed fire-marshalls strongly advising any would-be smokers to light up somewhere other than in the hall itself. The Jerry Corbett Band opened things up, with a pleasant and energetic set. Corbett, a former Youngblood (along with Jesse) drew from a variety of musical influences, including jazz, rock, and folk. He was assisted by excellent sidemen, particularly a bouncing-crome-domed bass player, who gestured and seemingly conducted the band. The bassist bumped and grinded as Corbett ran through songs from his new release Mellow Music Man. One of the set's highlights was a Youngblood tune, Solid Gone which utilized the horn player to the fullest degree. At the end of the set there was a short break, giving the stage crew time to switch instruments, and the audience time to maintain high consciousness, and, for some members, unconsciousness. Jesse and the band appeared and opened up with Songbird the title of his most recent LP. This blended well into a "Song for Juli." Young's selections were drawn mainly from his two latest albums, Songbird and Song for Juli. The songs included "Hesitation," "Ridgetop," "Evenin'," "T-Bone Shuffle," "Jambaylo," "People Let Your Love Shine," as well as some new material. Jesse even reached into his Youngblood material for "Get Together." His accompaniment was first-rate. The piano player boogied and woogied along on many of the songs, and was joined onstage by an excited young lass who had crawled up in front of him to dance. The horn player was exceptional—he was able to play flute, clarinet, sax, and several other instruments with equal talent, especially his clarinet solo on "Hesitation" and his flute solo on "Songbird." For Memorial Auditorium, the sound was quite good. Groups have a tendancy to play too loud for a hall that size, many times delicate passages (specifically acoustical work) are lost or distorted. What made the concert even more enjoyable was the obvious rapport established by Jesse Colin Young with his Vermont fans. He said shortly after the first few numbers that "...there are only about twelve cities we really feel at home in when we play – Burlington is one of them." As one could imagine, this got the biggest applause of the evening, the only thing to equal it was the ovation the band received at the end of the show. In all, it was a fine evening of music, one which allowed the audience to get involved. Hearing almost the entire crowd singing "Get Together" along with Jesse made this concert one to remember.

Pride and Prejudice

The second offering of the Fall semester at the Royall Tyler Theatre is Pride and Prejudice, adapted and directed by Nancy Haynes, one of the brightest and gayest of Jane Austen's novels.

Pride and Prejudice tells, in easy and effortless style, a humorous story of the English gentlefolk of the early nineteenth century. The action centers around Elizabeth Bennet, our warm and spirited middle-class heroine, and the haughty, aristocratic Darcy; her antagonistic lover. His pride prejudices Elizabeth against him, and it is the task of the plot to develop their hostility, make clear the folly of pride and their prejudice, and release them from both in an embrace. It is a veritable wedding dance.

Nadine Maleski and Peter Kurth will play the "lovers in spite of themselves." The cast also includes Vincent Rossano as the cynical Mr. Bennet, and Susan Selig as his frivolous wife. Karen Trott will appear as the gentle unassuming oldest daughter Jane, Sally Caldwell as the bookish Mary, and Sam O'Neil and Cathy Waugh as the wild and empy-headed youngest daughters, Lydia and Kitty. Dawn Cinley will play the Bennet's obedient servant, Hill.

In addition to the Bennet household, Dan Page will appear as Charles Bingley, Jane's agreeable suitor, and Paul Ugalde will play the pompous Rev. Collins. The cast also includes Brooke Gladstone, Dave Mainer, David Godkin, and Jan Backus. Through this engaging array of characters, Jane Austen gently parodies the social scene of the era.

Pride and Prejudice will run from November 19th through to the 22nd, and is a fitting tribute to the autumn season as well as a happy way to close the semester. For information, call 656-2094.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
ReLax Outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS
(At the rear of Frank's Texaco)

Get set for an evening of pure insanity!

That "Blazing Saddles" "Young Frankenstein" team MEL BROOKS & GENE WILDER are at it again in their most celebrated and hilarious movies!

A Mel Brooks Film RON MOODY
The Twelve Chairs
SHOWN ONCE AT 7:30
AND GENE WILDER
QUACKSER FORTUNE
SHOWN ONCE AT 9:15 PM
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-6070 ANYTIME!

NOT SINCE LOVE STORY...

The true story of Jill Kinmont.
The American Olympic ski contender whose tragic fall took everything but her life.
And who found the courage to live through the love of one very special man.
EVES AT 7 & 9:00 PM
"THE OTHER SIDE OF THE MOUNTAIN"
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-6070 ANYTIME!

NECTORS
Super Entertainment
Friday, Saturday & Sunday
SPECIALS
Mon.- Football Special $.60 Pitchers
Wed.- Sours & Collins Half Price
Thurs. - Dimie Nite 9-10
NECTORS
CAFETERIA/BUFFET

Chuck's

The only thing wrong with Charlie Brown is his insecurity, his clumsiness and his insecurity, his stupidity, his clumsiness and his stupidity... Well, when Charlie Brown opens on November 6th, he will look as clumsy as ever, going through the motions that have won him wishy-washy fame for 25 years. As Charles Schulz, creator of the comic strip, puts it, "Charlie Brown is the symbol of the insecurity and loser in us all. That's why we can look at him and laugh."

You're a Good Man Charlie Brown opens November 6th and will run through November 9th, with a matinee on the 8th. The musical will be directed by UVM Senior Ed Tracy, in the fine Staye Loose tradition founded by James Wimsatt B.A., ret. Aside from his many theatrical credits at UVM, Mr. Tracy has directed traffic for the Burlington Police Dept. and is currently involved with the construction of a chain of tunnels from downtown Burlington to Shelburne, with the students' safety in mind.

The cast includes Kevin Meconi as the wishy-washy loser, Sari Bodi and Jon Bourne as Lucy and Linus Van Pelt, Steve Freeman and Maria Papaioanou as Schroeder and Patty, and Peter Delorenzo as

Nader Zah

Nader Zaher will presented in concert at Allen Chapel, Saturday nigh November 1 at 8 p.m. He is sitarist of the finest quali with a unique style previously heard in the U This Afghanistan musici studied with the master teach in India, Vilait Kha considered unanimously as t best in this field.

Nader Zaher plays in a v different and genuine st than Ravi Shankar. Howe to a Westerner's ear, si

Chuck's Team Winds Up

The only thing wrong with Charlie Brown is his insecurity, his clumsiness and his insecurity, his stupidity, his clumsiness and his stupidity... Well, when Charlie Brown opens on November 6th, he will look as clumsy as ever, going through the motions that have won him wishy-washy fame for 25 years. As Charles Schultz, creator of the comic strip, puts it, "Charlie Brown is the symbol of the insecurity and loser in us all. That's why we can look at him and laugh."

You're a Good Man Charlie Brown opens November 6th and will run through November 9th, with a matinee on the 8th. The musical will be directed by UVM Senior Ed Tracy, in the fine Stays Loose tradition founded by James Wimsett B.A., ret. Aside from his many theatrical credits at UVM, Mr. Tracy has directed traffic for the Burlington Police Dept. and is currently involved with the construction of a chain of tunnels from downtown Burlington to Shelburne, with the students' safety in mind.

The cast includes Kevin Meconi as the wishy-washy loser, Sari Bodi and Jon Bourne as Lucy and Linus Van Pelt, Steve Freeman and Maria Papaioancu as Schroeder and Patty, and Peter Delorenzo as Snoopy.

It is advised that you reserve tickets early since seating is limited. The entire production has been carried out by students in all areas with sponsorship by the Billings Center Governing Board. You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown tickets are on sale now at Billings — $1.00 student I.D. and $2.00 general admission. For information call 656-4379.

Nader Zaher's Sensitive Sitar

Nader Zaher will be presented in concert at Ira Allen Chapel, Saturday night, November 1 at 8 p.m. He is a sitarist of the finest quality with a unique style not previously heard in the US. This Afghanistan musician studied with the master teacher in India, Vilait Khan, considered unanimously as the best in this field.

Nader Zaher plays in a very different and genuine style than Ravi Shankar. However, to a Westerner's ear, sitar music, which is very ancient esoteric knowledge, is still rather unfamiliar but strangely moving, directly reaching emotions through its magical vibrations.

Nader Zaher will be accompanied by an excellent tabla player from India. The musical dialogue of diverse improvisations between the two players seems endless. Marvelous syncopations and subtle cross-rhythms are characteristic of this music, which represents perhaps the most complex and elaborate organization of every possible succession of notes, diversions, and multiplication of rhythmic sequence.

This music will give you a beautiful surprise, for if you let yourself, you can transcent to a state of humility and concentration. It can not be listened to the same way as one listens to rock music. The subtle, sensitive, and exquisite aspects of the sitar assure that this rare concert is one that should not be missed.

Movie Review:

Dog Day Afternoon

by Elizabeth Hyde

"I'm a Catholic now, so I don't want anybody getting hurt." Not only is Sonny a Catholic; he's a bisexual bigamist (with one "darling wife Leon" and one "sweet wife Angie"), a Vietnam Vet, and, as his major role in the film, a would-be bankrobber.

Al Pacino as Sonny, accompanied by John Savale as Sal, attempts to rob the First Bank of Brooklyn on a hot summer afternoon. But the film immediately assumes a slapstick mood when everything goes wrong from the start. Their second accomplice chickens out. There is no money in the bank, just a mere handful of cash that doesn't begin to fill up the plastic garbage bag Sonny has brought. An insurance agent from across the street, his curiosity aroused by the smoke from the records Sonny tries to burn, begins to snoop around outside the door. By the time the police arrive, Sonny must do some hasty refiguring and he comes up with a fantastic scheme: he demands, as ransom for his hostages, a private jet ("One of them 747's with a piano and a cocktail lounge") to take them to Algeria. ("But Sonny," says Sal, "I never been up in a plane before.")

You don't quite know how or when it happens, but somewhere along the line Sonny manages to get an unwarranted amount of cooperation from his hostages – 7 wide-eyed Brooklyn bank tellers and one obese diabetic manager. Outside the bank, the crowd has taken on epic proportions. National guardsmen are dangling from fire escapes. NYPD arrives in busloads. The barbershop next door is set up as police headquarters. Again, you wonder at the strange reversal that has transpired, when the crowd cheers as Sonny appears on the sidewalk, joining in his chant: "Attica! Attica!" Or when Sonny is jumped from behind by the husband of one of the tellers, and the police are immediately at Sonny's defense, dragging his assaulter off into a police car. Or when the chief of police barks at his men to put their goddamn guns back into their holsters, and turns to Sonny who has a scrape on his forehead from the scuffle, and helps him wipe the trickle of blood off.

Sonny wants to see his wife before he heads out to Algeria, and in a while the police return to the scene with a whitewashed youth named Leon. Leon is having emotional difficulties because he is "a women inside a man's body," he confides to the policemen in the barbershop. Oh, for a sex change. He must be persuaded to talk with Sonny, but when he finally does, Leon can do nothing for him; they say their goodbyes over a bugged telephone. The crowd outside, of course, is quick to discover Sonny's bisexuality ("You mean this guy's a queer?" snickers one bystander.) and soon the Gay Libs have arrived with their banners proclaiming, "Sonny All The Way!"

Sal is always in the background as the silent but apprehensive accomplice, tightly clenching his gun at all times. Sonny, on the other hand, has a fine time showing one of the more courageous gum-chewing tellers how to handle a rifle, military-style, while the other women sit back and enjoy the pizza and Tab that Sonny has ordered for them. Sal isn't the most educated criminal; when Sonny asks him what country he would like to go to, he responds: "Wyoming."

He is an ex-con who would rather die than go back to prison. Sonny himself has his own ideas about death: "If somebody ever kills me, I hope they do it because they hate my guts, and not because it's their job." The irony, of course, is that you can't hate either Sonny or Sal, and if this ordeal is to end in their death, it would be a result of the policeman's duty, not because he hated either one of them.

The ending is unexpected; it even comes as a shock. Even though the comedy of the movie does leave you with the apprehension that something must happen to them, that they can't get away with it, the punch-in-the-mouth ending victimizes the audience as well. It's the kind of shock that stiffens your neck and clamps your eyes shut against your will.

The film apparently is based on an actual event that transpired in 1972; and it is heartening to know, as the epilogue indicates, that Leon is a woman now. At least there was one happy ending to that dog day afternoon.

Charlie Chaplin vs. the Machine

The movie Modern Times, Charlie Chaplin's comedy of man and machine, will be seen on Friday, October 31, at two showings, 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium, under the auspices of the Lane Series.

The 1936 film, which stars Charlie himself, was written, directed and scored by the famous actor of the silent era.

Modern Times, which has become perhaps the most popular of the Chaplin films, was an ideal vehicle for the little tramp's last real appearance on the screen. It is a perfect weaving of all the elements that make Chaplin the most-beloved performer in the world.

The film was Chaplin's last attempt at keeping the silent film tradition alive in the sound era. He did make use of voices emanating from radios and television sets and of some sound effects, and he composed a score for the film (as he had done for his earlier City Lights); but the tramp character maintained his silence except for a gibberish song he performs as a singing waiter.

Although firmly rooted in the depression period of the mid-thirties as a satire of mass production and its effects upon the lives of factory workers, Modern Times has taken on the aura of a timeless classic. Challenged only by Rene Clair's brilliant comedy A Nous la Liberte, the film remains the definitive cinema on the subject.

Actually, Modern Times is concerned with a good deal more than the theme of assembly lines. Such scenes as Charlie in the factory, Charlie in jail, Charlie as a night watchman, and Charlie as a singing waiter are the funniest in the whole gamut of the Chaplin films. Here may be seen the art of comedic pantomime at its very best.

Appearing with Chaplin in Modern Times is Paulette Goddard, who was his wife at the time. Her performance in this picture, and in Chaplin's next film, The Great Dictator (1940), brought her a great deal of attention, and she became one of the leading stars of the 1940's.

Tickets for Modern Times, $1.00 each, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium on the night of the movie. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

The next movie in the Charlie Chaplin Classic Films will be The Great Dictator, Nov. 14. There will be no film shown on Nov. 7 because of the appearance of Return to Forever, featuring Chick Corea, at Memorial Auditorium.

Split Coconut: Simply Smashing

by Ron Tepper

Split Coconut
Dave Mason
Columbia 33698

Dave Mason, since his early days with Traffic to the present, has been a very impressive part of the contemporary music scene. To his credits are hits such as Feelin' Alright?, Only You Know and I Know, and Baby Please, to name a few. Also to his credit is his fluidity on guitar which Eric Clapton once called "Simply Smashing!" It seems that with his new album, Dave Mason has found his true niche in rock music today.

Split Coconut by all standards must be considered a classic. Performances throughout the disc are flawless, the style unique and diverse. Mason starts off the album with funk (Mason was always "funky" in his own way.) In between he drifts in and out with some angelic licks. Although his lyrics are rather mundane, his style and music is all his own. David Crosby and Graham Nash harmonize with Mason on a few tracks. The remixing is first class, by Bruce Botnick (formally of Electra) and the production flawless. As with all Mason's albums, this album is an instant high. Traffic really misses his punch.

Split Split Coconut should reestablish Mason's reputation as one of the best. Very few performers have or possess the quality of class, but Mason is one of them. Hang in there Dave.

Oh, What a Mighty Time
New Riders of the Purple Sage
Columbia PC 33688.

This is perhaps the NRPS's most commercial piece of product to date, besides being one of the most diversified. The material runs the gamut from R.B. Greaves "Take a Letter Maria" to "La Bomba" to Dylan to some of their great original progressive country work. Overall, they seem more at ease and very laid back on this LP, and several cuts should break them through onto the AM air waves. Guest appearances by Sly and Jerry Garcia, are fine, but it's still the album's title cut with a full choir that gets into the blood.

Best Cuts: "Might Time," "Up Against the Wall," "Redneck," "Take a Letter Maria," "Little Old Lady," "On Top of Old Smoky."

Desperados To Be Seen At Southwick

Desperados, a touring multi-media film production about man challenging limits, will be shown at Southwick Gym on Monday, November 3 at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. Featuring spectacular sports/action, cartoon, and news footage, this 50-minute presentation takes you through a penetrating and, sometimes, humorous look at man's daring and drive to break through physical, social, and moral barriers around him.

Combining the visual magic of hundreds of dissolving slides with movie film and the sounds of top rock groups from Canada and America, Desperados examines the tendency in all of us to want to live by our own rules, limits, and authority. It appraises our desire to be free of restrictions and some of the difficulties in obtaining that kind of freedom.

Coordinated by a master computer, nine separate projectors simutaneously give the audience a full encounter with good entertainment and stimulating thought. Desperados was developed by Campus Fellowship in Pasadena, California and is touring throughout the United States and Canada presenting showings on major university, college and high school campuses and to civic organizations.

It will be shown Monday, November 3 at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. and is open to everyone. For more information call Bert Rich at 656-4374.

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

Fabulous prizes for best costume
Specials for all you tricksters
A great night, don't miss it!
147 MAIN ST.

WE'RE THE GREATEST
BEST LIVE ENTERTAINMENT IN THE NORTHEAST
Oct. 27-Nov. 2 Hot Flash
Nov. 3-9 Brahmin
Nov. 10-16 Outrage
Nov. 17-23 Better Days
10¢ Night Wednesday
THE SILVER KEG
HAPPY HOUR 5-9 Mon. – Thurs.

A Better Deal!
THE NEW RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE NRPS
Tickets
UVM BOOKSTORE
BAILEY'S MUSIC ROOM
VERMONT BOOKSTORE
MIDDLEBURY, VT.

Typists and the Tiger

by Martha Hess

The City Company, a new theatre group comprised of local residents of the Burlington area, began its first season October 23 with two one-act plays, The Typists and The Tiger.

The plays, by Broadway's Murray Schisgal, are actually more interesting than their titles would lead one to believe. Expecting a trite office comedy, this reviewer was pleasantly surprised by the provocative, fast-paced dialogue and highly emotional content of the plays. A discovery even more pleasant was the fine acting of Elizabeth Bernstein and Budd Whitebook.

The first play, The Typist, is a serio-comic portrayal of life as a typist in the advertising department of a third-rate firm manufacturing woolen knickers. The play, however, depicts more than the typical office-life frustrations: the nasty boss, the no-end-in-sight monotony of addressing advertising flyers. Instead it delves into the private lives of the typists to explain why they came to be the people they are.

Elizabeth Bernstein did an especially good job of portraying Sylvia, supervisor of "the whole department", a department consisting of only one employee besides herself. Escaping through profession, her basic feelings of inferiority instilled by parents who habitually considered her second to her sister Charlotte, Bernstein conveys with emotion and credibility the nervous, moody nature of the unfortunate spinster. The new employee in the office, Paul, played by Budd Whitebook, was not born of middle-class parents (as was Sylvia) but spent his childhood in poverty. His manifested the means of frustration bred of his circumstances in prideful ambition which was, however, self-destructive at the core. Not pretensious but plagued by problems of his own making, Paul, a law student taking night courses, was addicted to the bottle and shackled by his responsibilities to a young wife and family.

It is when the two characters interact, however, that the play becomes most interesting. The actors portray well the venomous rivalry between the two characters as well as the element of selfish indifference each feels toward the other as they indulge in amateur analysis. Although the tension underlying Paul's and Sylvia's sexual attraction was not as well-developed as it should have been, their love scenes were exciting to watch. Sylvia's bliss in the arms of Paul was well-complemented by her lover's immediate withdrawal and repugnance at her marriage suggestions.

The sequence of action in the play, seeming to occur in one eight hour work day, actually encompasses the life-times of the characters as they age but remain in the same positions. By the end of the play, the characters have undergone changes in mannerisms and habits of dress, subtly enacted by Bernstein and Whitebook, to indicate their advancing age. The attachment and attraction they feel for each other, however, is evident to the end.

